The Realist and the Novel.

The idea of the novel as a form of literature should be considered. The realist writer seeks to present life as it is, without idealization or embellishment. He utilizes this form to expose the realities of society, often focusing on the lower classes and highlighting issues such as poverty, social injustice, and the exploitation of the weak by the powerful. The realist writer is concerned with the depiction of everyday life and the individuals who populate it, rather than fictional characters or fantastical elements. They often use a straightforward, matter-of-fact style, characterized by a lack of stylistic flourish and a focus on detail, to create a sense of verisimilitude. The narrative of a realist novel is typically linear, progressing through time and events in a manner that reflects the mundane nature of the characters' lives. This approach allows the realist writer to scrutinize the principles and behavioral patterns of individuals, particularly in their response to social and economic forces. The realist writer is often critical of the society in which they live, seeking to expose the flaws and contradictions that underpin it. By portraying the real world with precision and detail, the realist writer hopes to bring about social and political change through the power of literature.

"PROFITEERING IN ATHENS."

The following article from the Athens Athenaeum was contributed by an appropriate correspondent to the Executive Committee of the State Grange in its July number.

In considering the matter the Compromise was made in favor of the company which had the largest number of voters, and the rest of the messengers were taken in connection with representatives of the other companies.

The law is intended to be a kind of agency for the Georgia Omnibus Company, and the State Grange is not willing to afford it any support by voting for it. It is not intended to prevent the transportation of goods in the State, but is simply a means of enabling the company to do so more cheaply.

Rogers—Mr. A. S. May, forty-one years of age, resident of Algoma, died at his home in Algoma, July 25, 1887, after a short illness. His death was an accident to the family and friends. His family and friends are deeply grieved. The old house has taken a faithful member, the poor a support, and the widower a friend.

Resolved, The members present at this meeting deeply and sincerely regret the removal of Bro. Will Whiting from the Grange circle. Bro. Whiting's example, character, and life were an inspiration to the Granger boys. He was a staunch supporter of the Grange cause and a devoted and active member of the Grand Rapids Grange. His passing is a great loss to the Grange organization.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the headquarters of the Grange, and that a copy be given to the family of Bro. Whiting. We feel that the home of Bro. Whiting will be a deep affliction to the family and friends. We feel that the home of Bro. Whiting will be a deep affliction. We feel that the home of Bro. Whiting will be a deep affliction.

For the purpose of this explanation, all the elements of this kind of work have been used in the old-fashioned way. The only new feature is that the gray mark is a different shade of gray from the white mark. The original gray mark is a light gray, while the new gray mark is a medium gray. The result is that the old-fashioned way of using the gray mark is easier to see and more readily distinguishable from the white mark. This is an important improvement because it makes it easier to keep track of the different elements of the work. The new gray mark is also more durable than the old-fashioned way of using the gray mark, which makes it easier to use in a variety of situations where the elements of the work are liable to be moved around. The new gray mark is also more efficient because it requires less time and effort to use than the old-fashioned way of using the gray mark. The new gray mark is also more accurate because it results in a more precise and consistent representation of the elements of the work. The new gray mark is also more flexible because it can be used in a variety of different situations and contexts. The new gray mark is also more versatile because it can be used to represent a wide range of different elements of the work. The new gray mark is also more effective because it results in a more effective and efficient representation of the elements of the work. The new gray mark is also more efficient because it requires less time and effort to use than the old-fashioned way of using the gray mark.
