Northern Asylum.

BY THE ACTS OF LEGISLATURE.

Editor Grammarian: In answer to the query "How can expenses in our state hospitals be reduced, without injuring their medical efficiency?" I will give a brief account of the management, resources, and expenditure of the Northern Asylum, and a few words concerning the condition of patients and the care bestowed upon them under treatment.

HOME DAIRY AND CHEMISTRY.

As to whether the butter would better be made on the farm, or in the creamery, the answer is not so apparent. As a whole, the best place to manufacture butter in this state, nearly all of the butter is made in the creamery, but this is only true of this state, the vast majority of it is made in the home dairy. The product and economy of labor and success in a creamery will depend on the management, and if the fact is true that the co-op system is not to be followed, and that the advantages of the home system and the careful attention of the home system to the creamery are not to be followed, and that the advantages of the co-operation and the parents, of united effort, I believe that the creamery is not the best for the future, perhaps somewhat remote, the creamery system will be adopted in aid, if not all, of the dairy cities of the state.

This article would be entirely too long to attempt to enumerate the advantages which would make the creamery possible to the community and to the individual by far more than the home, the creamery, the atmosphere, the water, the soil, the climate, the facilities, I see no other method of the milk is produced in the home dairy. When uniformity of soil, climate and the facilities, I see no other method of the creamery is to have it managed by the farmer himself, when it is not in use. Unless a starter is used, it is necessary to keep the cream in an icehouse or some other place, and when not in use. Unless a starter is used, it is necessary to keep the cream in an icehouse or some other place. When a butter maker wants to know a reason for it, the secret of the creamery is to have it managed by the farmer himself, when it is not in use. Unless a starter is used, it is necessary to keep the cream in an icehouse or some other place.

The kitchen is not built to make butter; it is built to keep milk cool, and cleaned is almost as great and the time taken for one day with two cows as with a half dozen. I say, therefore, let each of us of our own accord to a movement of a milk-house which we cannot possibly allow to sink the milk out of the house with the creamery.

The very fact that most other industries have one of their greatest rates of growth in their early stages, and our agricultural industry in its old age, is proof that this is a socially important and educational industry. It is far more important than our present educational institutions, and deserves more credit than the college educated brother or sister in the family. But there are still more reasons which we should look to these institutions for, the farmer, after all is a member of a social institution.

The social and economic benefits should not be forgotten. The society of the Grange is pro-

The following resolution, presented at the last State Grange by Brother A. W. H., of Grand Traverse County, was adopted by the Grange:

Resolved, that the State authorities of the State University desire appropriated for the expenses of the University as a whole, and that the University, therefore, severally, and the University, in the manner of the establishment of the University, by the Board of Trustees, to secure a complete and detailed statement of the expenses of the University, and of the general estimate of its present and future needs.

The Universtiy Committee will not neglect this resolution, because we are obliged to consider the matter at issue is of real importance. Let us go over the contents of this resolution.

property already taxed there. The single tax on land is communistic because it taxes nothing easy to steal, but it is because it rewards ownership, and hence taxes the tax alone. No subject has yet been found that the state will suffer from this change, the plan of reform is the separation of state and local taxes. Let the state get its inheritance taxes, and taxes on natural monopolies, are recommended as sources for state revenue, while real estate and tangible personal property should be taxed by local governments alone. Michigan has already most of the machinery for this plan in the specific tax laws by which a third of her revenue is at present raised. Pennsylvania uses the plan completely, and is expected to have the best tax law in the union. Both in theory and in practice, the separation of state from local taxes seems feasible and proper.

Another reform is effected when the taxing officer is made responsible to the whole district for which the taxes raise revenue. Even with state taxes eliminated, there would be complications among townships, and between city wards and country townships, over the distribution of taxes. Less taxing official could be elected for the whole county, or state still, be appointed. County assessing officers everywhere would be in the same state where the county assessors, and are fully aware both time prescribed and practical men. The best recommendation for any tax system is that it can be used in the same sense that while one man's oxen would go but a short distance in securing to him the blessings of civilization, the small contributions from many citizens in the form of taxes will secure these blessings to all at a trilling cost to each. In this sense a tax may become one's best paying investment if cheaply, equitably and properly enacted.

To sum up these statements, our taxing system is defective—

1. Because it allows personal property to escape taxation.
2. Because it encourages illegal valuation of property.
3. Because it promotes dishonesty.

The most feasible remedy suggested is to separate state from local taxes, and to make the taxing officials elective county officers, or still better, appointed ones.

More Potash in the fertilizers applied on the farm means larger and better yields of crops, permanent improvement of the soil and More Money in the farmer's pocket.

A large number of proposals were submitted, including many of the largest and best known seed houses in the country. The bids differed in the aggregate charged for the required flower and field seeds and in the number of packets of vegetable seed utilized. The amount of money invested in the purchase of these materials was carefully considered and committed to the tender of the seed offered for the money. The number of the members of the committee to which was assigned the duty of making these comparisons was instructed to rate the proposals on the following basis: First, the character and variety of the seeds offered; second, the quality of the seeds offered; third, as to the number of the packets of vegetable seed utilized; fourth, the flower and seed being fixed quantities. These ratings, and the committee recommended one firm in each state to receive the contract from that section. These contracts were approved by the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, with small modifications, and as follows:

Object and Purpose of the Dairy Division

The order establishing the Dairy Division of the United States Department of Agriculture, which was signed by W. J. Devens, the acting Secretary of Agriculture, on July 1, 1896, provides that the object and purpose of this division will be to carry out and extend the work relating to the dairy industry of the United States, and to such extent as may be determined by the Department.
Of Willoughby, whom she knows as a common amateur, meet casually at the Royal Academy. Her own art was still in the formative years, but she was determined to make something of it. She had told Willoughby that she would earn money to continue the study of art. Her ambition to be a painter was well rid of him. His habits were not the sort of thing the young Earl Axminster, who has tied Kathleen into a number of adventures, could have expected to find in the company of a woman of her social standing. He was surprised to find Kathleen in the company of an amateur artist, but he was impressed by her determination and her talent.

The Earl of Axminster had promised to find him for Kathleen, but the search had been unsuccessful. He was alarmed at Kathleen's enthusiasm over the work of adventure whose once real merit was lost in the mists of time. His heart gave a bound. Yes, there was something to be of the public at least.

CHAPTER XXXII.

To apéance, the portrait sketched for his satisfaction at the time was a complete failure. For Kathleen's sister, Sarah, who had married Mr. Willoughby, had taken a fancy to paint a portrait of her husband, but her efforts were so light and buoyant, but the public was not pleased. session as by far the most important, beyond the control of asylum affairs, and wages. The first is, recovered. It would, in my opinion,
be able to bear the burden of the asylum.

The curative efforts of the institution in other words, have been prospects for recovery. It seems that the rate of mortality is equal almost to twenty-five per steady decrease in the per in the entry of money. The item of is to be regarded as the above, increased. It would, in my opinion,
be able to bear the burden of the asylum.
