SUBSCRIPTION—$2.50 THE SCHOOL YEAR

A PRAYER FOR TEACHERS

By GLENN FRANK, President of University of Wisconsin

O, Lord of Learning and of Learners, we are at best but blunderers in this godlike business of teaching.

Our shortcomings shame us, for we are not alone in paying the penalty for them; they have a sorry immortality in the maimed minds of those whom we, in our blunderings mislead.

We have been content to be merchants of dead yesterdays, when we should have been guides into unborn tomorrows.

We have put conformity to old customs above curiosity about new ideas.

We have thought more about our subject than about our object.

We have been peddlers of petty accuracies, when we should have been priests and prophets of abundant living.

We have schooled our students to be clever competitors in the world as it is, when we should have been helping them to become creative co-operators in the making of the world as it is to be.

We have regarded our schools as training camps for an existing society to the exclusion of making them working models of an evolving society.

We have counted knowledge more precious than wisdom.

We have tried to teach our students what to think instead of how to think.

We have thought it our business to furnish the minds of our students, when we should have been laboring to free their minds.

And we confess that we have fallen into these sins of the schoolroom because it has been the easiest way. It has been easier to tell our students about the motionless past that we can learn once for all than to join with them in trying to understand the moving present that must be studied afresh each morning.

From these sins of sloth may we be freed.

May we realize that it is important to know the past only that we may live wisely in the present.

Help us to be more interested in stimulating the builders of modern cathedrals than in retailing to students the glories of ancient temples.

Give us to see that a student's memory should be a tool as well as a treasure chest.

Help us to say "do" oftener than we say "don't".

May we so awaken interest that discipline will be less and less necessary.

Help us to realize that, in the deepest sense, we cannot teach anybody anything; that the best we can do is to help them to learn for themselves.

Save us from the blight of specialism; give us reverence for our materials, that we may master the facts of our particular fields, but help us to see that all facts are dead until they are related to the rest of knowledge and to the rest of life.

May we know how to "relate the coal scuttle to the universe".

Help us to see that education is, after all, but the adventure of trying to make ourselves at home in the modern world.

May we be shepherds of the spirit as well as masters of the mind.

Give us, O Lord of Learners, a sense of the divinity of our undertakings.

CROWDS! CROWDS!

Every year Michigan State college students have an unusual opportunity presented to them when Farmer's week comes. The occasion means more than a welcome interruption in classes to the student who actually makes the best out of his situation.

The many visitors to the campus present interesting individual studies in human nature. No doubt some of us have had intensely amusing situations presented to us. On asking one visitor his reason for coming to Farmer's week, we discovered that he didn't know yet. He hadn't quite gotten over the fact that no one in Lansing could tell him where the college is located. Another individual asked a student to tell him if his glass eye had turned around.

Studies in human nature of all types. Farmers who have succeeded, farmers who have failed. Men who have kept on learning after they left educational institutions and men who ceased to learn long before they had even finished their schooling. These mixed thousands who have been Michigan State's guests have each of them a lesson for us.

These visitors represent an older generation. We can learn much from them by observing them intently.

"Dumbdora's Brothers," a dialogue between Edwards and Lord, was very clever.

"Songs of Yesterday," sung by Beulah Watson, with chorus representing the girls of yesterday, were beautifully sung and won much favor with the audience.

The presentation of the shooting scene in Robert W. Service's poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," was another feature of the vaudeville. An oldtime bar was erected on the stage, which contained many bottles representing the drinks of yesterday, such as "20 year old rye," "Old Crow," "Corby," and French champagne and English ales.

War Relics Hold No Interest Now

There it stands—a grim relic of a mighty conflict fast being forgotten. Along with the little bronze tablet on the hill, it keeps guard "lest we forget."

Perhaps as you hurry by on your busy way you never give a glance, much less a thought, to the old cannon in front of the armory. Inconspicuous in its new coat of dull green paint, it scarcely attracts attention or invites one to ponder upon its history. Yet a few moments of such reflection would not be badly spent.

One wonders what this deadly machine of war has seen and heard since its journey from the factory, what vindictive hatred was involved in its making; who fired the first shot from it as it was wheeled to the field of battle? It probably took its share in the terrible work of slaughter and destruction. What tales it could tell of the dreadful scenes it witnessed, the shrieks of pain and the whine, drone and explosion of shells it heard! But how revolting, nauseating, horrible, they would be!

Then the time it changed hands and moved down its makers, the Germans, as relentlessly as it had their foes, the last view it had of the gray battlefield before its long sea journey. Stories of all this it could tell as well as brighter ones, perhaps. For there were young American heroes and pretty Red Cross nurses crossing on the same boat, without a doubt.

With others it arrived, was tagged and sent to end its days on the quiet campus of a middle western college. And here it is. A stern and forbidding reminder of the most horrible conflict in the world's history. And as it stands, sentinel-like amidst peaceful surroundings it gazes into the west, and no one will ever really know the visions it sees.

gerons Dan McGrew, while "Pie" Johnson acted the part of the "man from the creek." Harry Swanson was the "ragtime kid." Many clever quips were made concerning certain members of the faculty.

"Tripping Trios," a clever dance by the Gillis twins, and Margaret Hubbard, followed.

Next was the snappy military review by the co-ed chorus, dressed as soldiers, doing trick drills and formations.

A waltz number by Harry Swanson and Annie Laurie Walls was cleverly presented.

The chorus "I-Hop" presentation concluded the program. This act was a mimic of the "I-Hop" as it is alleged to be conducted at M. S. C. The music and songs in this number were original, being composed and written by members of the State Union.

The curtain descended just as the "Hop" was breaking up. Three more performances of the vaudeville will be given in Lansing. There will be one Friday night, Saturday afternoon and Saturday night. Tickets are on sale at the Gladmer theater.

State Union Scene of Billiard and Pool Tourney; Dean Bissell Enters.

A pool and billiard tournament is being staged in the Michigan State Union, under the direction of Don Haskins, and thus far progression has marked the affair in the three events.

The plan is to have internal competition among the students entered, and the same among the faculty entries, in straight pool (100 points), straight rail billiards, and in three cushion billiards. The student champion in each event will meet the faculty winner of each division in the championship draws for the trophies to be given.

One of the features of the contest is the entry into the limelight of the green covered tables, of Dean G. W. Bissell of the engineering school.

The basis of the tournament is one of elimination, and matches are carded for Tuesday and Thursday evenings starting at seven o'clock.

Alice Bates is spending a few days in Hastings and Detroit. Clara Louise Herman is at her home in Grand Rapids for the week-end.

GANGE WILL BE LAST NUMBER ION PROGRAM

As a baritone, Mr. Gange has the reputation of having the largest repertoire of anyone singing before the public. He has at his command 40 oratorical, nine operatic roles, 400 German songs, 200 French songs, and 1,250 British, Scotch and American songs and ballads. His programs are amazingly diversified, ranging from all Strauss or all Schubert concerts to ballad recitals.

Unlike the ordinary artist, Fraser Gange does not wear his hair unusually long, nor is he possessed of an immense wardrobe. He is what might be called a "regular fellow." He maintains that most people who look like singers live up to only the reputation of looking like one.

This number is brought here as a substitution for John Barclay, another baritone singer. The program is scheduled to start promptly at 8.

Master of Icebergs
—a new kind of college degree
MASTER all the intellectual icebergs you sight at college, and your degree will mean something.
The cold facts you learn, like $a^2 + b^2 = c^2$, are but the visible tops of these icebergs. Underneath, as with floating ice, lie the other eight-ninths.
Facts are of little importance till you see them in relation to their great underlying principles. The facts of mathematics strike deep into the other sciences. The facts of history strike deep into sociology, ethnology, geography.
That is why an engineer who learned Ohm's Law can develop a great telephone exchange and control its fascinating forces.
Viewed thus, the endless array of dry facts and dull figures that seem to crowd the years brighten and beckon with a challenge—to look deeper, ever deeper.

U. OF D. DISPLAYS PUNCH IN CLOSING MINUTES TO TRIM STATE FIVE 29-22

MICHIGAN STATE'S GARRISON'S FINISH CUT SHORT BY DETROITERS; DOWD CINCHES VICTORY FOR TITANS.

University of Detroit took its second cage game of the season from the Green and White in the State gym Tuesday night, 29-22, and incidentally turned Coach John Kobb's aspiring athletes back to their fifth consecutive defeat of the season.

The game was at times as exciting as any exhibition of basketball ever played here and was packed full of brilliant plays that were dimmed only by sloppy handling of the ball and poor passing at critical times that hurt the Green and White chances considerably.

After trailing the Detroiters at the half, 16-9, Michigan State made a brilliant comeback during the third period in which Fredericks, Drew and Smith found the basket for enough counters to bring the score up to 22-21 with the U. of D. still in the lead.

It looked at this stage as if the Staters had at last a basket ball game within their grasp but a sport by the Titans decided the issue against them.

France, flashy Red and White forward, was dismissed with his quota of personal fouls and Dowd, a substitute forward, took his place. Dowd immediately took up the task of containing the goal work where his teammate left off and after the Titans had closed a 29-22 victory and accumulated six points and left the team with a 29-22 victory. Dowd scored every one of his team's points after he was injured into the arena and proved to be the punch Detroit needed to win.

State's offense continued to function against the Detroiters but a more defense again proved to be the State's bagshot. Fredericks, Smith, Hackett and Drew had seemingly little difficulty in advancing the ball but failed to bring it to the goal at the crucial moment. Kobb's shots were missed and little ground was made by both the center, Dowd and the players ward of the defense. Kobb's shot was usually blocked and he had to be kept in check in for a job that

The spirit shown by Michigan State during its last basketball game in Lansing, The Kobb's cage every inch of the way and Detroit made it appear that the Titans had had a battle on its hands.

The New York Yankees will start their season tonight with the Detroit club as the best detachment of the National League. In this connection it is noted that the Yankees will start their season in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Michigan State's Lansing team is expected to have a hard time in the State championship game which will be held in St. Petersburg, Fla.
