THIS THING CALLED RUSHING

Now that the annual rush to the gold mines in search of men of fraternity calibre has been completed, it is well to sit back and look over the situation in a much calmer frame of mind than is possible during the hectic days of rushing week.

Yesterday morning nearly 200 freshmen stepped out on the campus with a pledge button on their coats. With few exceptions it was probably the button he had had his eye on since arriving on the campus and with just as few exceptions the man wearing it was the man the fraternity had had its eye on since—we won't venture when.

This appearance of pledge pins on the campus in a wholesale manner marked the culmination of one week of the most disagreeable and disgusting activity that is indulged in during the school year. Fraternities are outwardly satisfied at present and the pledges would have no other pin but it would be interesting to have the figures available of men who will sever relations with their respective houses before the school year is completed.

Freshmen have been treated as kings. Fraternity men have practically been at their beck and call for the last few days. Dinners have been freely given, theater parties have come out of the chapter treasuries in unlimited quantities and callouses have been worn on the brothers' hands from handshaking in no mean degree.

It is the emptiness, the insincerity, and yet the necessity of the whole thing that attracts us. The houses must be filled and the fraternities are entirely justified in going about looking for material to do it with at the earliest possible moment. There are rushing rules but what do they matter? It has been admitted by the president of the Inter-Fraternity Council that they cannot be enforced. What better judge could we have?

Anything that is only characterized by dire necessity, mud slinging, boasting of prominent men on campus in the several houses, and cut throat methods in rushing say nothing good for the institution of fraternity pledging.

But after all it said and done about the subject we still have 300 satisfied pledges, 19 houses with their pledge quota filled, and another rushing campaign over for the year. Perhaps we would be better off without rushing rules at all.

GET A SYSTEM—

Many freshmen have been heard to remark the last few days when quizzed as to how they were getting along, that they would be all right as soon as they became organized.

This becoming organized or getting a system, is an integral part of college life and on it depends to a great extent just how much and how well things are to be done.

With a system a man may do much. Delegate a certain time each day for study, for recreation, and for extra-curricular activities. Take away the time spent for eating, sleeping, and classes, and allot the remainder into fair proportions for the things that we are always putting off and yet know must be accomplished.

You may be laughed at by the "knowing ones" for apparently wasting good time in putting your schedule down on paper but give it a trial and try it out for a few days. You will find it is helpful even if not lived up to to the minute.

TRADITIONS

To you freshmen, newcomers on this campus, a few words may be said relative to certain traditions peculiar to this college. There are several unwritten laws which are universally understood by all students and are rarely broken. While the fracture of these traditions does not mean social ostracism, a flagrant disregard is decidedly frowned upon.

No one repeatedly breaks a law which he himself has helped make for the mutual benefit of his colleagues. Despite the fact that the campus traditions, the "laws" of this institution, were never actually legislated, they are nevertheless just as important and are so regarded.

Considering this question of traditions from another angle, it may be said that they are closely allied to the rules of etiquette. For the same reason that one does not leave the table until all have finished their meal, students do not, for example, smoke on the campus. It just isn't done. In both cases, common courtesy demands a wholesome respect for custom, whether it be social or collegiate.

Therefore, freshmen, while we don't presume to dictate what you shall or shall not do, it might be well to point out and suggest that it would not be amiss to thoroughly acquaint yourselves with the time-honored traditions of this campus.

If you want anything done well, do it yourself. Always laugh at your own jokes.

Somebody is always getting in the way of the man who is in the pursuit of happiness.

Confidence is seldom lost, but it is often sadly misplaced.

A COLLEGE STUDENT'S RELIGION

Some cynical person will probably think this article should copy the famous chapter on snakes in Ireland which consisted of six words: "There are no snakes in Ireland."

Although we are all of us inherently religious, curiously enough we place on this, as on other important topics of life, a sort of taboo which rather effectively stifles one side of our development. Perhaps it is the disproportionate acquisition of scientific and factual information as compared with religious growth which leads many to suppose the latter is but the refuge and solace of a few ancients who cling with feeble but enthusiastic grip to the "old-time religion."

This obviously ignores the fact that a man's religion, like his education, is not something massaged gradually into his proceeds from within him. In fact it is he—all of him—his reaction to life, or way of adjusting the universe to himself. Because historical religions often conceive the relation of the universe to man in ignorance of the educational growth by which man adjusts himself to the universe, we are wont to say that religion and science conflict, whereas the real conflict, is between ignorance and science.—U. of Denver Clarion.

WHEN DO WE STUDY?

A group of students were recently discussing the things they should like to do more than anything else after graduation from the university. One student said that given his choice, he would rather go back to school and take a few courses in things he could really learn something.

At present there are many courses that a student is compelled to take that are of no interest to him, and probably never will be. But the university requires these subjects in order to confer the all-important degree. But most students in these very courses feel that the time spent in classrooms and in preparation for lessons is merely wasted, and could be spent much more profitably.

It would take one a good four years to complete all the courses that the student felt would help him the most for future work, not including the years spent on requirements. It would indeed be an ideal college where a student could get his degree after taking four years of interesting work with no classes in compulsory subjects.—Oklahoma Daily.

FRATERNITY HAZING

The practice of subjecting candidates to rigorous physical ordeals as a part of fraternity initiations was met with disapproval by the national Inter-Fraternity conference at its recent meeting in New York.

"Rough House" practices are considered by some students to be expressions of college culture. Traditional pasts of college life they have been accompanied at times by accidents, sometimes of a serious nature. These accidents are considered by the general public as being typical of fraternities and even of college itself. It is certain, then, that sooner or later, hazing must be abolished.

The action condemning "rough tactics" was not taken by a council of deans or fraternity advisors, but by the students themselves, in council alone. Fraternity men are realizing, either consciously or unconsciously, that the objectionable practice must stop, and it would be better for the fraternities to make the move.

If the fraternities do not act, college authorities will and action taken by authorities will undoubtedly be more drastic than if the fraternities men take the initial move. Through it dubs a traditional right and practice the action concerning hazing is for the best of the fraternities and to be commended.

GREEN SPLASH BEGIN SEASON'S ACTIVITIES

Women's Honorary Swimming Society Announces Plans.

"Get in the swim" will soon be heard on the campus, the slogan of the coeds as well as of the freshmen men for the Green Splash, honorary swimming society, will begin its year's activities after the "rushing" days are over. One part of its program which will be especially interesting to many is a swim open to members of the faculty and to students every Monday afternoon from five to six o'clock. If a girl wishes to learn to swim, this will be a splendid time, or if any girl just wants a dip to refresh herself after a strenuous day, she too will be very welcome. Another open event will be a swimming party—a Splash—on Wednesday, October 16th.

The Green Splash holds its regular meetings every Wednesday evening from seven to nine. Fall term the Splashes will conduct life saving classes. Girls who have passed any kind of life saving or other swimming tests, or girls who can swim and would like to prepare for their senior life saving tests are invited to join this class.

Early in January, the tests for which the girls were trained the first term will be given. After the tests are passed, the rest of the term will be spent in forming swimming teams and having inter-class meets. At the close of the term, new members will be initiated into the Green Splash.

Spring term the girls will work on their master tests. Also plans for the annual pageant will be developed and all the preparations made.

Miss Clarissa Anderson, advisor, or Miss Dorothy Bowditch, president of the Green Splash, will be glad to furnish benefit of their scholarship fund during the summer months.

The Eta chapter, Phi Kappa Tau and Hermans were among the fraternities holding open houses following the Alma came on Saturday. The Gold Diggers played at the first named party with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Van Aalstine present as patrons. Major and Mrs. C. Thomas-Stable and Prof. and Mrs. M. M. McCool were guests at the Phi Tau party on the same evening with the Play Boys playing for the dancing. Ward Kelley's orchestra held sway at the Herman house with Prof. and Mrs. E. S. King and Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Gee as patrons.

About forty couples danced to the music furnished by Bruce Fayerweather's orchestra at the Primora open house. The affair was chaperoned by Prof. and Mrs. L. C. Emmons. Prof. and Mrs. M. M. Cory and Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Dicks. The Physicians entertained on the same evening also with many guests, including Dean and Mrs. Ward Collier and E. B. Hill.

Ken Carver's orchestra played at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon party while the Phi Kappa Tau held open house with Prof. and Mrs. L. N. Field acting as patrons. John Reber's orchestra made the music for the dancing at the Alpha Gamma Rho party on the same evening.

The second week of the fall term has begun with the fraternity rushing completed and the sororities still continuing their entertaining. Rushing will be concluded on Sunday night with pledging the following Saturday.

Influx of Yearlings Into Houses Cause Rules Revision

Half the freshmen on campus having now moved into fraternity houses the interfraternity council met the other night and decided that pledging should be on Monday. The struggle for those still at large, therefore, is pretty much at a fever height. Wild-eyed fraternity men, this week-end, fear about begging perfect strangers, if only they wear the green pot, to come to dinner at the chapter house. The life of a desirable freshman, until Monday, is pretty much a thimble of battles and sudden alarms, and many a man will wake up that morning in a perfectly strange house with a headache and a pledge button.

All week there hasn't been any getting near a fraternity house for the freshmen stationed across the front porch and in the living rooms, being subjected to high-powered rush talk by the brethren; but this week-end the streets will probably be impassable for blocks around each one.

Seniors exert themselves, with all the dash and aplomb acquired in four years here to be agreeable to the freshmen, forgetting how much scrubbing the house will take after a week or so spent in rushing and who does fraternity house scrubbing. Few freshmen, indeed, are wise enough to purchase the course of the yearling sage of last year, who pledged the fraternity with the least harm.

The night the pledge button is affixed

MANY SUMMER JOBS HELD BY ENG'R STAFF

Department Members Spend Vacation at Various Points in Country.

Members of the staff of the college engineering department were well scattered this summer in following their particular lines of interest, according to information recently received from the department. Prof. C. Newman after finishing up some of the special work in preparation for the fall term, spent most of the time in East Lansing. He took a trip to New York state for a short period.

H. W. Joyner has studied during the summer at Kenneth E. Hudson in musical decoration at Yale School of Fine Arts.

Prof. R. K. Steward, L. N. Field, C. N. Brattin and E. H. Stewart attended a session in June of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at Columbus, Ohio. This society has recently authorized a special section to deal with its problems in engineering teaching and there is much definite promise of a special summer school in 1930 for members who are interested in this field. The next annual meeting will be in June 1930, at McGill University.

W. H. Bliss was working with the Detroit Edison Co. with the apprentice engineers during the summer. Assoc. Prof. M. M. Cory pursued graduate work a portion of the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Cory took a trip over the coast if the time. Prof. C. L. Allen has been working as a civil engineer of East Lansing during the summer.

M. C. Peterson has been with the state department of health during the summer months. C. A. Miller has been with the state highway department this summer designing bridges. Assoc. Prof. C. M. Cade has spent his summer months in the state geological department. L. A. Smith has been with the Wolverine Engineering Co. this summer. Prof. R. K. Steward spent the summer months in the state of Maine.

Assoc. Prof. J. N. Fie was working up to the middle of summer on schedules for the college. Assoc. Prof. J. W. Stewart was in the state and spent the summer recuperating. He is now back on the job again. Assoc. Prof. C. E. Brattin spent during the summer for the Red Motor Car Co. in the drafting department doing special work. Messrs. Stewart, Carbanks and Robertson were employed by the state highway department during the summer.
