BLUE KEY
 During the last two or three weeks a multiplicity of campus organizations and honoraries have taken another year's quota of new members. These societies have in their constitutions some primary purpose or function that is peculiar to their organization and that is intended to benefit the school as a whole and the students as individuals.

The accomplishment of some of these groups is apparent, but that of others is not. The activities of a few seem to be limited to swingout and initiation. Yet there is never a dearth of petitions before the Student Council seeking recognition of some new club or honorary.

Blue Key, a service fraternity, composed of men that are elected because of their ability in functioning among their classmates and outstanding in their own society, have visibly failed to carry out the purpose for which they exist. Last spring the organization was converted from a senior into a junior honorary solely to escape from the lethargy that goes with a senior service organization without a concrete platform of ideals for which to strive.

A jitney dance and four semi-successful pep meetings constitute the efforts of Blue Key since it began to function last spring. No doubt these undertakings were well intended but the executive ability that should be a characteristic of such an honorary was not shown. We understand that there has not been even a regular meeting of Blue Key in three weeks. Certainly the members could find some constructive work to do if some application to the situation was made.

An opportunity was lost last Saturday after the Michigan game, when the initiative for celebration was left to whomever should wish to take it. As it happened it was the Student Council who sponsored a victory party. Another opportunity during the past basketball season went by the board in the phase of acting in the capacity of a glad hand committee to visiting basketball teams. They have been left largely to their own devices in the past. A suggested function is that of a welcoming committee for visitors from other colleges in athletic competition here or for high school students that so frequently appear on the campus in state meets.

Blue Key could do much in the enforcement of campus traditions, both among the upper and underclassmen. The character of the society, that of fraternity representation, would enable them to bring pressure to bear upon their own individual houses and enable them to have an organized assault upon offenders. An issue arose during the last couple of weeks where the need for some influence other than that of the second year men was strongly felt.

Certainly it seems that Blue Key, and other honoraries as well, could actually be of real service to the school.

SPARTAN SPIRIT CONQUORS
 We wish to call the attention of the student body to a letter which we have reprinted in part in a story in today's issue. That letter is from the Lansing Merchant's Association, and it is indeed a source of satisfaction to us that our college should draw such praise from the men of our neighboring city.

When we read their remarks concerning the spirit of the student body manifested following the Michigan game, we were reminded of that slogan which is known in the Varsity team rooms at the gym, "Spartan Spirit Conquors." We would like to see that slogan adopted by our student body as well as by our teams. The spirit has already been adopted.

We are grateful to the Lansing business men for their congratulations, and we hope that we can accept their praise modestly and continue our actions in a manner to merit recognition.

SANE INITIATIONS
 Some fraternity hell-weeks have recently been completed and others are in process, but from external appearances all are being conducted in a manner befitting the institution, the fraternities involved, and the requests of the dean's office.

On the whole we feel pleased with the outcome of the informal initiations. It is strongly evident that fraternity men on this campus are observing the change in the age from one of "rah-rah" to a conservatism that demands the respect of business men and people located outside of a college community.

For years the man of the practical world had little respect for the boy in college, other than that he was "a good lad." This feeling grew because of the carefree and noisy attitude cultivated at that time by the so-called collegiate crowd.

Colleges have changed decidedly, and with them the fraternities. One house on the campus that in the past has been most famed for its rough house initiations is giving the freshmen a workout on learning fraternity and house history. They claim that it not only breeds a better atmosphere in the house but is of more value to the freshmen and easier on the upperclassmen.

We hail the move as another step in the direction toward which fraternities need so badly to turn.—Daily Ilium.

A review of the fourth concert on the College Course
 By Robert Graham

If there is, in a concert, something done unusually well—something to which the tenor of the whole performance is pitched—that concert can be considered an artistic success. Judging thus, last night's performance was a double attainment, for there were two instruments played, and both of them played with rare and beautiful artistry. One was a cello, the other a full symphony orchestra. Which of these was better handled is hard (and useless) to say, since both were played by artists and masters. So long as artistry and mastery be great, the instrument is secondary, and an attempt at ranking is a hair-splitting and artificiality.

On his cello Alexander Schuster displayed artistry which was based primarily on sincerity. There was no desire for sentimental effect to mar his perfect turning of a phrase, and no lowering of the artistic plane of his whole interpretation to give vent to a passage which would excite by an obvious display of technical accomplishment. Yet there was something in abundance that was shown in the facility with which he mastered difficult passages, but better, there was a tone whose clarity, throughout the whole range of the instrument, was violin-like. It was mellow, yet without the coarse rumble which so often comes from even a well-playing cello. Particularly this was apparent when the delightful major allegretto theme of the Haydn D major concerto returned in minor to be repeated in all its flowing loveliness.

In the artistry of the dapper and energetic Mr. Verbruggen there is apparent an alert sensitiveness to every phrase, to every possible meaning or effect which the composer has written. Perhaps in the Beethoven Second Symphony there was slightly too much attention to detail, for one seemed just miss the fire and sweeping fervor which Beethoven, even in this, his first manner, can show. Yet there were rarer qualities than robust fervor in the performance of Beethoven. It was a masterful and polished interpretation, full of the charm which perfect handling, guided by a kinship in feeling with the composer, can give. The way Mr. Verbruggen handled his orchestra, bringing out every subtlety of tone, color, timing and shading perfectly every effect and finishing with exquisite perfection each musical expression was a revelation of complete dominance in a conductor.

In Weber's "Eurydice" overture and the "Dance of the Happy Spirits" of Ghuck there was apparent this same quality of sensitive appreciation of the composer's thought and the same fire and power in the presentation of it. In the Haydn concerto the orchestral background for the cello was gratifyingly unobtrusive in its support. And yet to all these many quiescent qualities there was added, in the Saint-Saens Symphonic Poem No. 2, an abundance of dash and excitement and brilliance. In the prelude to Wagner's "Meistersinger" there were more of the qualities impressed by a certain masculine sternness and power, so that Verbruggen proved himself authoritative and fiery as well as sensitive. And in the encore a Brahms Hungarian dance an unusual thing, alternately lumpy and exciting he so combined and contrasted his abilities as to convince, beyond all doubt, that he and his orchestra make one of the most sterling musical organizations in our nation.

J. Madaras came to the United States from Hungary in 1921, and attended four years at M. S. C. without getting a degree. Since that time he has been experimenting along various lines. This new invention has just been examined by a number of prominent engineers in the United States, and they have passed very favorable views in regard to it. It is predicted that within sixty days his invention will become known and advertised.

TREE-PLANTING PROGRAM COMMENCES ON CAMPUS

Under the direction of W. G. McKelvie, of Detroit, women have begun an extensive tree-planting project on the campus. Between 20 and 30 trees from six to fifteen and twenty feet in height are being secured from college woodlots and pasture fields, and are being removed to locations on the campus where they improve the landscape effect. In moving the trees, a circular trench is dug around the base of each, and when a tractor hitched to it, the tree with a large ball of frozen earth gives way.

TIRED SPARTAN QUINTET DROPS WEIRD CONTEST TO NOTRE DAME AT SOUTH BEND TUESDAY, 29-17

Michigan State Five Unable to Stop Speedy Irish; Roger Grove and Wayne Scott Chased From Game Early in Second Half.

Ben Van Alstyne's Michigan State varsity basketball team absorbed the worst beating that has been handed out to it in three years Tuesday night when Notre Dame university took the measure of the Spartans in a weird contest at South Bend, 29-17. The Spartans were held to four field goals during the entire game, which is a low scoring record for the Green and White in many a moon. The Ramblers garnered seven from the field but it was from the free throw stripe that the game was decided.

The game began with semblances of a repetition of previous games at South Bend between the Ramblers and the Green and White where over time games have been much in vogue. Den Hedred sank a free throw which was immediately matched by Notre Dame and the lead sea-sawed for a few moments until the copy of free throws began and then it was little less than a rout. During the course of the evening the Ramblers managed to sink 15 free throws, the result of 23 personal fouls being called against the Spartans.

Roger Grove and Wayne Scott, Spartan mainstays, were sent to the showers early as the result of fouling forward who scored six field goals against Captain Donovan of Notre Dame on the East Lansing court was withdrawn in the second half with three fouls against him, while Freds Den Herder had a like number. Hagga the other Spartan starter, managed to play a full game with only a pair of Referee Lane's alleged misdeeds against him. Donovan of Notre Dame was also ejected near the end of the game via the foul book.

McCarthy of Notre Dame led in the scoring with seven free throws out of eight attempts and two field goals to his credit. Roger Grove sank a brace of long-toms to lead the Spartan scoring. Booskoal and Hagga were credited with the other two field goals for State. State was decidedly off form and it is not surprising in view of the fact that Notre Dame was the fourth within a week, the third being the terrific struggle staged here last Saturday when the Michigan Wolverines were subdued in a sensational struggle. Tonight the Spartans will attempt to regain their midseason form against Hillsdale in the gymnasium and will close the season next Friday with a game with Marquette at Milwaukee. Marquette was beaten here earlier in the season.

TRACK TEAM TO BATTLE BISHOPS

Green and White Indoor Squad Have Chance to Beat Ohio Wesleyan

Michigan State's varsity indoor track outfit will have a chance to even up last year's defeat when they meet the Ohio Wesleyan track team in a dual meet which will be held here Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The count stands even as the third annual meet approaches, each team having won the previous meet on its home floor.

Ohio Wesleyan is reputed to have a well balanced squad this season with several men who are specialists in their events. Lombacher, dash man, is expected to make the Spartan sprinters mope all they have it to keep on the pace. Two star hurdlers, who can both do around six feet regularly, have been consistent point winners for their team, and are expected to equal or surpass the gym record.

For the Spartans, Brown should win the two mile event without much trouble. Russow, Yarger and Russell will exhibit their wares in the dashes and hurdles, and should cop off several points. Olsen looks good in the pole vault and Dill and Pflug are favored to outdistance their rivals in the shot put. Salimon and Wilson are expected to set a hot pace in the 440.

YOUNG FAVORS NITE FOOTBALL

New Gridiron Plan Under Consideration by M. S. C. Athletic Council.

Would night football, as introduced at the University of Detroit last year be practicable at Michigan State college? That is a question that is being considered by the athletic board.

When approached last night as to the possibilities of night football being inaugurated here in the near future, Ralph H. Young, director of athletics, were on record as being decidedly in favor of it.

It has been a decided money-maker for every team that has tried it, he stated. "Cincinnati has played football successfully at night before large crowds for the past five years. The majority of Marquette university's games last year were played at night, he stated. And an example close at hand is the success the University of Detroit has had in the past year with this type of play.

In listing a few of the advantages of playing football at night he brought out the fact that the first football days in the fall are invariably hot. By playing in the cool of the evening, the comfort of the players would be enhanced materially.

At some of the smaller games last fall less than 2000 people were present. This Mr. Young believes would be changed if games were played at a time when all could have an opportunity to witness them.

In rebutting the argument that night football games lack the color of day games, Young stated that a series of lights in the stands could make the crowd fully as visible as it would be in the daytime and that the possibilities for color in cheering and in color leading would be almost unlimited. Many startling and colorful effects can be produced by the use of flashlights, fireworks and floodlights, he asserted.

Returning to the practical side of night football, he stated that many night football games in the only financially successful sport at State, as in many other schools, basketball being a very fine proposition here this year for the first time in athletic history, it is no more than right that every effort should be made to popularize it as much as possible.

YEARLING CAGERS WIN OVER FENTON

Athletic Club Falls Before Felt's Quintet to Tune of 58-17.

Coach Carl Felt's track basketball team easily defeated the quintet from the Fenton Athletic club of Fenton, Mich. by the decisive count of 58-17 in a game played in the gymnasium Wednesday night. The game was a romp for the yearlings, who made points at will. The visitors were completely out- classed and the contest made them look as if they had never played together before.

Kerby, at center, and Waker and Holcomb at forwards, were the scoring luminaries of the evening, but Felt used several combinations, all of which functioned well.

The yearlings will get the biggest test of the season when they meet the crack track cage artists from Western State on Saturday afternoon. The teachers are reputed to be doing well on the court this year, and a tough struggle is anticipated.

The game will be played in the gym Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock. There will be no admission charge.

The Hillsdale game will be played in the gymnasium as the portable floor in Demonstration hall has been removed.
