REGISTRATION FIGURES MAKE RECORD TOTAL

2,854 Students Registered With Free Paid, Reports College
Registrar's Office

Professor L. C. Emmons, chairman of the registration committee, announced that the administration has already noted a marked decrease in the number of students shifting or changing sections after registration. This, he explains, is probably due to the fact that the number of students who left school, either for academic failure or for other reasons, is less this year than normal. In the face of wide-spread reports from other colleges throughout the country which indicate a falling off in registration, the authorities are gratified at this latest showing in student enroll-

material value after graduation. A regrettable feature of campus publications is that so few business administration students try out for positions, or the opportunities to put in practice many of the theories learned in the classroom.

The all-college journalism banquet which is being sponsored next week is a constructive step by the student publications in the right direction. In interesting more students they are making a definite move to improve the quality of their individual publications. The banquet, if properly supported, should accomplish much in the revival of student participation.

A REVIVAL

Student interest and participation in campus publications has been steadily on the wane in recent years at Michigan State. Undergraduate journalistic endeavors have been carried on with badly depleted staffs in recent months and this has been reflected on occasions in the quality of the publication.

In all cases it has been the business staffs of the various publications which have suffered to the greatest extent. The ephemeral glamour which some have associated with writing has led a greater number of students to try out for the respective editorial staffs, while the extremely dry details of the business organizations have failed to get the proper student interest.

The relatively small number of students who do try out for places on student publications fail to realize that as members of business staffs they will obtain the experience and contacts that will have a

THE BULLETIN

Readers of today's issue of the News will note that the Campus Calendar is missing. In its place appears the Bulletin.

In instituting the new announcement column, the present administration feels that it is offering a more complete and practical service to the campus. Athletic and social events, meetings of organizations, mass meetings, and special announcements affecting all or a large part of the student body will be given publicity in the Bulletin.

Slightly more information than appeared in the campus calendar will be given about each item announced in all cases in which education seems justified.

Faculty members and representatives of student organizations are invited to use the Bulletin, freely. Items for the column may be telephoned to the News during office hours or left at the Union desk in an envelope addressed to the News.

THE BIRTH OF A "CREATION"

After recovering from that tremendous ballad of life, love and laughter, perhaps you wonder from whence and withal why this bit of spice and wit appears on the News galley. Well, toss me a drink, bartender, have a tale to tell.

When our boy, Van, finally realized that he was to direct the destinies of this rag sheet for the next season he said to himself, "Now what will I do to give this paper life and verve and punch etc? I want something that will make backs writhe and offend their sensibilities. Oh, where, oh where can I find a man?"

And on all sides the shout came back "Draft Houghton!" Draft Houghton!

Realizing that the public must have their idols he came to me at Hogan street and after a few immoderate approaches on the matter "Don, old man," he said, "You and I have always been friends, haven't we?"

"Van, old man, I said, "from the time I heard the election returns you and I have been the best of pals, buddies in fact."

A gleam of understanding shone in his eyes. There was an odd gleam in mine for that matter, but I am not one to show my emotions (I'm a snuff). So I reached that impulse and reached for a Lucky. And by the way we're pushing Chester's next week. Well, after pulling ourselves together we went on with the middle of thought behind it all, of the little drama.

Well, Don, he continued as I hung on his words, nearly choking, would twenty dollars a week be too small a consideration to ask you to give the News that I am very happy credit we all happy tonight?"

Van, I retorted, "for twenty dollars a week I'd make a parachute jump daily from the top of the women's building."

"We seemed to be agreed," I called in my lawyer to clear up the details and the rest is history or will be history, although the twenty dollars a week could be better classified as a mythological figure. Friends, is how it all happened. Any way I felt I owed something to the school besides back tuition and negative credits. Bah!

So take a tip from old Sir Oranoid and get your money's worth out of this paper. Read the column each and every time, and if you're looking for publicity, drop me a line. I'll think it over—for a consideration.

THE BIRTH OF A "CREATION"

After recovering from that tremendous ballad of life, love and laughter, perhaps you wonder from whence and withal why this bit of spice and wit appears on the News galley. Well, toss me a drink, bartender, have a tale to tell.

When our boy, Van, finally realized that he was to direct the destinies of this rag sheet for the next season he said to himself, "Now what will I do to give this paper life and verve and punch etc? I want something that will make backs writhe and offend their sensibilities. Oh, where, oh where can I find a man?"

And on all sides the shout came back "Draft Houghton!" Draft Houghton!

Realizing that the public must have their idols he came to me at Hogan street and after a few immoderate approaches on the matter "Don, old man," he said, "You and I have always been friends, haven't we?"

A gleam of understanding shone in his eyes. There was an odd gleam in mine for that matter, but I am not one to show my emotions (I'm a snuff). So I reached that impulse and reached for a Lucky. And by the way we're pushing Chester's next week. Well, after pulling ourselves together we went on with the middle of thought behind it all, of the little drama.

Well, Don, he continued as I hung on his words, nearly choking, would twenty dollars a week be too small a consideration to ask you to give the News that I am very happy credit we all happy tonight?"

Van, I retorted, "for twenty dollars a week I'd make a parachute jump daily from the top of the women's building."

"We seemed to be agreed," I called in my lawyer to clear up the details and the rest is history or will be history, although the twenty dollars a week could be better classified as a mythological figure. Friends, is how it all happened. Any way I felt I owed something to the school besides back tuition and negative credits. Bah!

Norway Spruce Makes Fine Horse

The work of a professor and his graduate students, which took the form of a saving contest in front of the forestry building, and around the interest of a number of students and instructors, a few days ago proved to be more than mere horseplay.

The whole incident revolved to the need felt by the forestry department for a wooden horse on which to demonstrate the possibilities of a pack saddle. After much time and effort had been fruitlessly expended in shopping through old harness shops, four men volunteered to cut from the trunk of the old Norway spruce a piece of timber which could be used to construct such a beast. With axes, hand saws, and a saddle attached to the wooden animal stands in the basement of the forestry building, the staff is ready to demonstrate the possibilities of a more artistic and efficient horse.

Walpole Sighs for Graduates

College Man Doomed to be a Failure, Moans Education Professor.

Prof. H. A. Walpole, head of the education department, found that for which all public speaker eternally seek a new subject when he spoke before the barbers' eradication squads banquet last Saturday.

"Now that you have eradicated this parasite fungus on your body," said Prof. Walpole, in substance, "why not by eradicating some of those parasites in your character which will hold you back from success?"

The head of a large syndicate of newspapers, a personal friend of Prof. Walpole, told him that practically every 8 per cent of college graduates who entered his organization had given a moderate amount of success. College newspapersmen had three things wrong with them: they refused to learn new lessons, they wanted promotion and a raise promptly every six months, and they were lazy. It was this attitude of mind which Prof. Walpole presented in his talk and he suggested to the eradication squads that they devote some time and effort in an attempt to rid themselves of such mistaken ideas.

Miss Anna Baylis spent the vacation period in Wheeling, W. Va.

Forest Lands Still Security

Prof. Herbert Finds Conservative Woodlots Will Suit Insurance Companies.

Forest land is not now considered by insurance companies as suitable collateral for the investment of insurance reserves," stated Prof. Herbert of Michigan State College today in an address before the Central States Forestry Conference at Cincinnati. Such a conservative investment policy was "condemned" because forest land especially cut-over properties, is now largely in speculative ownership and under no productive form of management.

Prof. Herbert, however, pointed out that the exceptional well managed forestry property or woodlot do offer excellent security for such investments even today, and that in the near future with the reorganization and adjusted financing of forest communities that all forest land will be rationally managed.

Mr. Ethel Trump was in Brussel, Kan. for the holiday period.

ART INSTRUCTOR GOES ON LONG EUROPEAN TOUR

Miss Jessie Fremont Clark, instructor in the history of art of the college art department, leaves immediately after winter term classes for an extended European tour.

Mrs. Amy Newberry spent the holiday period at her home in Champlain, N. Y.

The smoke you like... is the smoke she likes for you!

"I like to see a man smoke a pipe. You've heard your own grandpa say, 'It's a nice relaxing rest.' Perhaps you're sure to hear it some day. They pipe at our country club. But they pipe at our country club. 'Strong as a horse' is the motto of the pipe smoker. It prevents pipe from getting stuck. There's a lot about a pipe. It's slow reflective, hard-thinking, and a nice relaxing rest. The hunter's smoke, the farmer's smoke, the engineer's smoke, the doctor's smoke, through and through. And pipe smokers who know the fine tobacco tell you there's nothing like the fine selected barrels of Edgeworth. The favorite tobacco in 12 out of 20 leading colleges.

Buy Edgeworth. Perhaps you will find it as well as you find it at Edgeworth. It's a pipe smoker's delight. Edgeworth is at your dealer's and for free sample if you write Press-Lang & Bro. Co., 1000 North Street, Richmond, Va.
