Tonight, when for the last time as man ging editor of the Michigan State News I write the customary instructions "editorial-18 em-10 pt-hold in" at the top of a fresh piece of copy paper, I find myself confused by conflicting emotions. Not sentimentality I have jeered a ittle at the "swan songs" of past editors. but now I realize that like them, I cannot arobably more surprising to me than to many of those who so seriously objected, brought after the numbress of shock had vorn off, a sense of the immensity of the onsciousness of all my short task and a comings. But just as any other editor does, I began the task with plenty of revo lutionary ideas and high aspirations. And like all my predecessors, I have found that the machinery of reality turns more slowly that of ideas, and new worlds car aware than I how far short I have of the ideal I set then, but I new Withent the help of Larry Distel, the soothes the most harrassed soul, for his never-say-die spirit. I have watched Jerry with apprehension, almost holding my breath for fear he might snap under the strain of night after night without sleep, but he has come through, and I'm glad for him that he's finishing. For Jerry. my sincerest wish is that his ambition to own a newspaper, in a small town that he wants to make "the friendliest town in the country", will come true.

Of Beverly Smith, who as cc-ed editor has this year handled a man-sized job, L have only one complaint. Her complete unselfishness. She is one of those unbe lievable persons who puts the wolfare and wishes of everyone else before her own. In her four years on the State News she has never failed to come through. Her tact and thoughtfulness have been indispensable, in calming editorial wrath and shaping staff attitudes. Harder-working than any of her predecessors, she has set a record for all future coed editors to aim

Nobody on either the State News or Wol xerine staffs need be told about Ray Turner That he was favored unanimously by the Board of Publications for the State New editorship, is best indication of his ability A little man who never says anything Ray is not very impressive until you crack the shell and find out what he's thinking Ray has ideas, good ideas, and a quiet torcefulness that gets things done with little effort. Combining these qualities with an uncanny sense of composition (re sult of his camera work) Ray should make the State News a better paper than it has ever been. Ray told me once that nobody ever "griped" him . . . I wonder if he can still say that a year from now. I'm weshing him all the luck in the world.

George Maskin, whose fondness for b lines in larger-than-is-good-taste type ha brought him plenty of razzberries from hi conferees, has been the most efficient man on the staff. George never misses a dead line, and his efficient handling of the sport page has made the editorial burden lighter Though his intrepidity in dealing with ath letes and athletics has not always bee popular, his integrity is commendable. Of Walt and Seth and Vic, all of whom I watched, at first with great misgivings fearing that they would never learn ho to turn out a good story, down to the time when they have proved they have real stuff, I have great expectations. Surely the paper will improve under them if their growth as newspapermen continues

And to all the others, most of whom have worked hard pounding their beat and wracking their brains for featur stories, I offer my sincerest thanks. the seniors particularly, who have worked he sheer fun of it, expecting not no getting any of the honor and glory. As you know, the radio tower is atop the gold-en spire of the shop building, and is reached by a trap door through roof directly above the unfortunate Hayworth's desk. Saddy gain was the man fixing the lights. Perhaps that is the reason that it happened.
