Today's Campus

Concentration

H. B. Fields and his Friday morning history class really concentrate. Neither the traditional fire nor the water will disturb them. Proof of this was demonstrated last Friday when a real honest-to-goodness fire in the very next room failed to get a response from the studious students. In fact they didn't find out until the class was over that the waste-paper basket in the men's wash room had produced quite a blaze and a great deal of commotion. One of the students upon questioning did admit that he noticed there was a little more noise than usual in the hall, but he supposed it was just a class released early, leaving the building with enthusiasm.

Gums Up Works

Someone failed to notify Jimmy Hayes, gum distributor supreme, that some of the offices on campus have been changed around this year. The other evening he traipsed lightly up to the second floor of the Psychology building and stuck his head into what should have been an office. Jimmy withdrew it quickly and high-tailed it downstairs because he had found not men but mice—lots of squirmy, squeaking, little white mice.

No Smooching?

Because of many complaints received by Dean Elisabeth Conrad and housemothers of the various dormitories, the house council members of the dormitories took it upon themselves to eliminate the "smooching" occurring in the halls and living rooms. The girls have accepted the well-meant advice, and this week has seen a decrease in the number of offenders. "It seems so nice," one of the coeds said, "to be able to walk through the door after a date and not have to fight your way through to the sign-in sheet."

Chief Speaks

Michigan State News: I would like to take this opportunity to say that the College YMCA has my support in their campaign in cooperation with the Michigan State Police to fingerprint the faculty and members of the student body. I would also like to add that if it were made compulsory for all students to become fingerprinted, that it would be a good thing for all concerned. The use of these fingerprints cannot be fully appreciated by the average individual until their use actually strikes home in identifying someone near and dear to him. As there are laws governing the use of the U. S. Army's fingerprint files, there is also a law which prohibits the use of non-criminal fingerprint files for criminal investigation. Sincerely, H. E. HAUN, Chief of Police.

Die-Hard

Bill Ryan, Bubbles Armbruster and Bob Cunningham were in an East Lansing eating place Friday night when Bill became boastful of his ability to juggle. When he attempted to prove his prowess with glasses he did what often happens to even the best at the game. As he was being escorted out by two laughing waiters he was heard to remark, "Shucks, I didn't even try."

A film, "The Inside Story of Lubrication," will be shown by the Sweeney Vacuum Oil company at 8 p. m. today in room 111, Olds hall. The room will be open to all engineers.

Music Department Names Artists For Concert Season

Sergei Rachmaninoff, pianist and composer, will open the Michigan State college concert course next season, it was announced by Lewis Richards, head of the music department. Other artists on the list include Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, Marjorie Lawrence, soprano, Raya Garbousova, cellist, and Engel Lund, Danish contralto.

For the first time the college will offer a single concert course and a limited number of tickets will be sold to faculty members. Rachmaninoff, regarded as one of the finest living composers, will open the course in Peoples church on November 1. He has been called by critics, "one of the world's greatest pianists."

Efrem Zimbalist, who has made many Michigan appearances, will play here February 9. He will play a concerto with the orchestra as part of the program, and will present a recital in the latter half of the concert.

On January 19, Miss Garbousova, cellist, will have the same arrangement with the orchestra. She is ranked by many as "the greatest woman cellist" of the present age. Engel Lund, contralto, will present a concert quite unfamiliar to American concert audiences on March 9. It will be a program of folk songs of many lands. Her songs are referred to as a story book of many lands.

Marjorie Lawrence, leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will bring the concert season to a close on April 18. Her performance of the title role of Salome in February this year was met with ardent acclaim from New York critics.

A soloist for the third orchestra concert will be announced later.

Women Hear Foster Speak On Marriage

Merrill-Palmer Doctor Talks to Senior Coeds

Dr. Robert Foster of Merrill-Palmer outlined the major areas of marital adjustments and illustrated with excerpts from actual cases histories for the senior women's series of lectures on marriage last night in the Little Theater. As a graphic aid in pointing out the complexity of adjustments which must be accomplished in marriage, Doctor Foster handed out a chart showing the development of family relationships covering fifty years of married life. One of the adjustment problems discussed by the speaker was that of in-laws.

"Utilize the contributions which the in-laws might make," advised Doctor Foster.

Glee Club Sings To Governor

"How do you do, Governor Murphy, how do you do?" These words rendered in song by the Men's Glee club welcomed Governor Frank Murphy as he took over occupancy of the Halladay house on campus last night. Dressed in a riding habit, the Governor had just arrived from a canter when the Men's Glee club gathered before the house, which is the first one on Faculty row.

Following the singing of Sigismund Romberg's "Stout Hearted Men" and "How Do You Do," Director Fred Patton and Roger B. Wilcox, president of the club, were presented to the Governor and Miss Eleanor Bumgardner, first lady of the state. Governor Murphy then delivered a short speech, expressing his appreciation for the reception and his liking for the campus.

After singing the "Alma Mater" and "M. S. C. Shadows," the glee club departed and the Governor entered his dining room to enjoy his first supper in the new home.

State Rallies To Defeat Armour

Spartans Strike Back, Scoring Twice in Seventh to Win

Pushing across two runs in the seventh inning, the Spartan baseball team came from behind to edge out Armour Tech, 5-4, yesterday, for their thirteenth victory in 16 starts. The game, postponed on Saturday because of rain, turned out to be one of the best played here so far this season. Armour Tech placed a fast, scrappy team on the field, one which battled the Spartans every inch of the way.

What minstrel show? Penelope, you get dumber every day. I'd even go so far as to say you're a supergoon. Yup. Okay, okay, sit tight and I'll elucidate (two-bit word). Forest Lands Investigated

Data on the use and management of privately-owned forest lands in Michigan is being gathered by the forestry department of Michigan, according to Prof. P. A. Herbert, head of the forestry department. The investigation was suggested by President Roosevelt, who asked congress to authorize a congressional investigation of utilization of one-half billion acres of private forest lands in the United States.

little eighth dwarf, not a five-cent cigar, but a minstrel show. See? Ennnyyhoosoon, the other night they had tryouts for the end men. You know what end men are, I hope. I hope. You don't? I thought as much. Okay, here goes. End men are the guys what sit on either end of the stage and are all black and say funny things. Only these end men are going to be different. The things they say are funnier than the things that end men usually say. See?

Well, first we went into one room at Abbott hall and there was a bunch of guys there. And they were trying out for quartets, octets, and stuff. And were they having fun? Singing progressions and things. And don't ask me what a progression is, see? But the funniest thing was Ralph Rose singing bass. Yup.

Then we went into another room and there was another bunch of guys trying out for end men. That's what we went to see and so we stayed and listened, and more fun! I'd like to tell you some of the jokes, but I don't want to start laughing again, and besides I don't want to spoil the show for you.

First one fellow would say something and then another would answer him, then a third one would talk to the first one and the second would joke with a fourth. You don't get it? Well, Dopey, Sleep, Grumpy, etc., etc., and etc., I didn't think you would, but you will on June 3, at the band shell.

Shall We Put 'Sparty' on the Fees?

Two magazines in one. That is what "Sparty," mythical spirit behind the Spartan magazine, promises students for the coming year. In technical terms the Spartan will revert to its original serio-comic form. Literature and the arts as well as humor will find their way into print. Further, Sparty assures us that the type of humor included will be of such nature that no student will experience qualms of conscience when he mails a copy home to the folks. This extension of the Spartan's scope comes as an answer to repeated requests for a literary magazine on this campus. It is apparent that most of the student writing done at Michigan State is of a literary nature. Such writings, essays, short stories, and criticisms, are often good enough to be worth reading and deserve therefore to be printed. At present there are no campus publications which can print such articles, neither the State News nor the Wolverine having space available. To enable the Spartan to include literary writings, which often run into thousands of words as is the case with short stories, Sparty will have to jump the number of pages from 24 to 40. This increase in the size and scope of the magazine cannot, Sparty assures us, be brought about under the low subscription rate at which the Spartan sold last fall. Any paid subscriptions will, in the future, be sold at a straight rate of 10 cents an issue. So it is with a slight increase in price that Sparty asks that his publication be admitted to the student activity fees. Voting students themselves will decide the issue at the final all-college elections, May 24, when they vote for or against Sparty's proposition. If they vote yes, students will increase their fees by 35 cents a term, and will assure themselves and students yet to come subscriptions to a Spartan of more pages and wider scope than it has previously been.

A Chance to Worship Under Open Skies

Undaunted by Sunday morning rains that necessitated cancellation of the first open-air Campus Inspiration hour at which worshippers were to sit in front of the newly-completed band shell, sponsors of the worship service are planning another for next Sunday, and look forward to making a weekly presentation of this program. The program last Sunday was to have featured music by the A Cappella choir under the direction of William Kimmel, and a prelude by the Beaumont tower chimes. Although designed especially for college students, Y. M. C. A. members in charge of the service invite the faculty and East Lansing citizens to attend.

The objectives and advantages of these Campus Inspiration hours are explained here in the words of Arnold Cone, student advisor of the service:

"In these days people demand that everything have a practical value. Our colleges, of course, are a glaring example of this.

"Never has a purely inspirational and devotional service existed on this campus. But now that we have in the band shell a beautiful outdoor setting for such a service, the Y. M. C. A. offers the students of this campus a chance for a religious experience that has not been possible thus far.

"In starting such a thing, we assume that there are those who desire such experience. But we also believe that if any student comes once, he will come again. All week long he sits in classes and puzzles his mind about dry facts. He may even hear intellectual dissertations on philosophy and religion, but the Campus Inspiration hour will try to provide him with religious experience itself by arousing, not his intellect, but his emotions and imagination. This it will do through music and poetry.

"This Campus Inspiration hour is not just another fly-by-night organization. This is true because of its aim to satisfy a vital need of every human. Thus the Y. M. C. A. feels justified in asking the continued support of the entire campus for this project."

Quotable Quotes

—By Associated Collegiate Press "There is a style in educational jargon to which certain non-original souls adhere as slavishly as some women follow the changing style of hats. The style is to effect an institutional superiority inveighing against the education of the masses. It is a passing vogue. It cannot live long because it is fundamentally wrong." Boston university's Pres. Daniel L. Marsh votes against restricting college and university enrollments.

CAMPUS CARTOONS

IN THE ROUGH

By HARVEY HARRINGTON

To Stir... a tempest in a teapot, we will take issue with Columnist Pike, who scathed us for advocating boogie and hissing of advertising shown on the screen in local theatres. (And we might raise the red flag, and say that Pike is a tool of the money interests!)

Columnist Pike says that we get pictures a month or so after they hit the great white way, Sunday night we saw "Happy Landings" in a local opera house—a YEAR OR TWO since it hit the sticks.

As an analogy, Pike offered the case of radio advertising. "Do you buy and buy when the Camel commercial comes on the Benny Goodman program? No! You're smart little children and you know that you wouldn't have Goodman if it weren't for Camels."

Now let's ask Gaudin a couple of questions: How could broadcasting companies pay expenses if it weren't for commercial sponsorship of programs? How do theatres pay their expenses? They profess to pay for films and upkeep with what they get at the box.

And they don't get better programs because of added income from commercials, not because they have good pictures in good business, and they could not exist for long without them.

To which we might add that two bits is not a purely normal fee—it's for front row and side paired with down-town theatre which charge two bits to forty cents. It is no bargain, except for this fare, considering the picture we get.

You Remember... that carnival that just left Michigan avenue. Well, we have a tale of woe of a certain puzzled individual who displeased

Prisoners at Jackson Go Collegian

By NORM KENYON A new college publication, the Spectator, has just appeared and is making a bit of a stir around these parts. Published by the student body of the University of Southern Michigan at Jackson, the journal reflects the attitude of that institution's enrollees toward education and life in general. "Using as its slogan, 'Those who seek an easy ladder to wear the walls of education are not wanted here,' the Spectator directs a scathing editorial attack upon the lack of progressivism on the part of its faculty and governing body.

The "narrow-mindedness" has caused school officials to forbid circulation of the journal. "A lack," say the editors, "which detracts greatly from study here may cause our student body much embarrassment, wound, their pride needlessly, and necessitate constant apologies for their alma mater to the students of contemporary colleges."

Ever since the first college was built on the campus, continues the editorial, "prospective female students have been denied entrance, heartlessly turned away, no matter how well qualified they might be for study here. Lately, even those who have come armed with the most appropriate recommenda-

Librarian Lists Visitors Express Candid Opinions of Faculty Art

By MARY E. MACKENZIE

Wandering around in room 400, Morrill hall, one hears amusing and interesting comments on the displays of the Faculty Art Exhibit. Many are very worthwhile; others are humorous; and some arouse a faint contempt for the speaker. But they do offer a good insight to candid opinion of the exhibit. For instance, one lady visitor: "That picture by Miss Goetsch (Taxaco, Mexico) is most interesting, most unusual, and very original. But I like Scheele's 'The Restless Sea' the best."

Harvard Men Criticize Teachers

Harvard university graduates believe there is something wrong with the teaching and teachers at America's oldest university, and they propose that something be done about it.

In a student council report on the problems of teaching, they advocated that a special committee of students be appointed to sound out the opinions of undergraduates on the subject.

In making the proposal, the report pointed out that in many cases faculty members are unable to take the time to consider the point of view of the student in making up their minds on advancement or possible dismissal of teachers.

"The purpose behind establishing such a committee," the report states, would be to give the university a way of soundly out undergraduate opinion "scientifically."

In the opening part of the report, the committee went on to state that "the ideal of the university is to staff itself with men eager to take part in the advancement of knowledge, and at the same time eager to pass this knowledge on to their successors."

The Readers Speak

Dear Editor: The official uniform of the college R. O. T. C. calls for the use of an O. D. wool shirt at all times. While to the non-member of the military organization the above mentioned regulation means little or nothing, use of these shirts during the increasingly warm spring military seasons means discomfort which amounts to almost physical torture.

During days on which parades are to be held, basies are allowed to wear white shirts, thus mitigating somewhat the usual discomfort. Even with this attire, however, the men are usually wet with perspiration after an hour of ceaseless drill in the hot sun.

It may well be seen that an almost unbearable heat is experienced when the men go through the same, or harder, drill clad in the rough wool shirts which have been issued them. It is significant to note that at no time during the spring term do officers wear anything heavier than a light khaki shirt.

Neither the best efforts nor the good will of the basies is easily obtained when their minds are intent upon the heat and clamminess of their attire. It is obvious that only the most pronounced militarist could have anything but of will in his mind toward an organization which forces discomfort on him merely for the sake of gratification of an ill-advised spirit of regimentation.

We Must Wage Peace

Michigan Senators Oppose Super-Navy Both of Michigan's senators, Arthur H. Vandenberg and Prentiss Brown, voted against the Naval Expansion bill which passed the Senate last week. The burden which this authorization will ultimately place on the taxpayers has been officially estimated at $1,156,000,000, but this is generally recognized as a low figure. Each of the three battleships authorized will cost $70,000,000 or more. If the much discussed size of 45,000 tons is used, this cost will jump to $100,000,000.

Mothers Parade for Peace In Detroit last Sunday over five hundred mothers marched in the second annual parade opposing war. The parade was led by international delegations in costume. Over 21 organizations were affiliated with the committee sponsoring the parade.

Mitchell Addresses Alpha Zeta

"Cotton plantations and farm life in the south," a topic new and unfamiliar to most Michigan Aggies, was discussed by Dean F. T. Mitchell at the regular meeting of the Alpha Zeta fraternity recently.

According to Dean Mitchell, the farms of Michigan are mere gardens compared with the plantations of the south which cover, at the least, 2,900 acres, and the system of "share-cropping" which is almost universal in the cotton country was a new phase of agriculture to members of the fraternity.

This was the first meeting of the club since the election of the new officers in April. Jim Mitchell, a junior majoring in agricultural engineering and newly elected Chancellor, presided over the meeting.

Hostel Houses for Travelers Permit Cheap Touring

Do you have a yen to travel? How would you like to see America—and Europe—this summer for a total cost of less than a dollar a day? With the advent of American Youth Hostels in the United States, all this, and more, is within the realms of possibility.

In 1934 two Americans, Isabel and Monroe Smith, were invited by the International Conference of Youth Hostel associations, representing the 19 countries which together have 4,500 youth hostels in Europe, to bring the idea to America. Now, just four years later, there is a loop of 76 hostels running through the Green and White mountains in New England.

Already this year 18 hostels have been established in southern Michigan, and four more are scheduled for operation sometime during the summer.

The AYA (American Youth Hostels) plan of summer travel is simple. The applicant becomes a member of the association by the purchase of a $1.00 registration card, accepted by hostel throughout the world. A single bed, with blankets, is furnished for a total cost of twenty-five cents.

How does that sound to you? State students, looking for a cheap and entertaining way to spend the summer vacation? If you're interested drop over to the botany building and get in touch with Ralph Lewis, instructor in plant pathology. Besides giving you all the details you'll need to know, he'll tell you about his experiences when he hosteled through England.

The 200 fans who sat in a heavy rain for almost two hours Saturday to watch Michigan State's football team participate in the final session of Spring practice saw a short, chunky kid by the name of Alex Kolznak do some interesting things with the pigskin.

Real All-City

Because Detroit sport writers who picked the All-city teams in 1936 couldn't find a place for Kolznak, he came to State last fall unheralded.

State's newest freshman had never known when he had enough in high school.

Pick 'M' Until

Boys are Hitting

Fred Barrett, who serves up ice cream and drinks across the way, got himself into something he didn't expect when he offered to give Clyde Randall, Sammy Nuznov and Ray Dahlstrom a milk shake each time one collected a safe hit this season.

Yearlings Rout Prep Squad In Track

Michigan State track yearlings were not stopped by Saturday's rain and scored a 72-32 victory over the Saginaw high school for their second victory in as many starts.
