Boy Meets Flynn: Flynn Likes Boy: Boy Takes Trip

Every once in a while an exponent of the Horatio Alger idea, "Rags to riches," pops out from somewhere. This time it's from the Michigan State college campus.

This fall Dale McEnderfer, an Ithaca high school athlete, entered M. S. C., to combine studies and athletics. But the wanderlust got him.

A few weeks ago he and a friend, Harry French, decided to break the monotony of college life by drawing a name from a hatful of the most famous names in the country and then pursuing that person until they made his acquaintance.

McEnderfer drew the name of Errol Flynn, the movie star, and French drew Sally Rand. And they set out. It was some time after Mac arrived in California before he met Flynn.

For it seems that Flynn liked the boy's nerve and initiative and decided that he was just the person to take on his next jaunting trip. So McEnderfer will sail with Flynn on a two months' cruise shortly. And it all came from drawing a name from a hat.

"Boys' Town," perhaps the most talked about picture this season, will be in East Lansing soon, and before actually appearing, it beckons us to talk about it, too.

Its punch lies in the unusualness of the theme. "Boys' Town" is based on actual facts about a small community near Omaha where an experiment with homeless boys is being carried on. The village is completely under the direction of Father Flanagan, who welcomes bad and unwanted boys. Flanagan's method of reform concerns the development of a conscious conscience.

It is too bad that Flanagan couldn't educate the movie directors' consciences at the same time. For the story is a good one, it should be the strong point of the show. However, Hollywood likes Hollywood, and needs must put in some glamour. Emotion comes in this time through Mickey Rooney, whose role seems to have been tossed at, not into, the story. Rooney is a toughie, he cries beautifully and is reformed in true Horatio Alger fashion. A little less drama would have made the picture more convincing.

Notwithstanding this drawback, "Boys' Town" is still one of the most highly touted pictures this season. The story is unusual and interesting. Gene Reynolds does a very convincing bit as a lame boy, and the Spencer Tracy-Rooney combination is good. If you have not seen the show, then go and see with which set of movie critics you agree.

Earlier in the week Ginger Rogers and Doug Fairbanks, Jr. will be seen in "Having a Wonderful Time." The plot concerns a hard working girl who goes to Camp Karolitz for a vacation. She meets a college boy, who falls in love and after much trifling around decides to marry him. We are glad Ginger Rogers has a wonderful time.

One Student Believes Outside News Belongs In State News Columns

Editor, State News:—
Since the editorial policy of the State News is being discussed, why not make the matter a bit more general. Especially in a paper in which many college papers are at fault. Since these colleges are supposed to be educational, the best the college news organ can do is to reflect some of the world issues on its editorial page.

Since these papers have no national news to grand, they are about the only place where a student could get his world events in as enhanced a manner as possible. In this way, the State News could actually become an educational institution in at least one of its papers, and so become one of the best assets of the school.

As yet, the only aid the paper can give the student, regarding the kind of violence threatening the nation and East Lansing, is to devote several pages to local football and track news. The possibility for the pleasure is not so much whether or not we are to expose the love life of busy Mary and Joe College, but whether or not the State News is to indicate a valuable editorial policy in advance of many others.

Editor's Note:—According to newspaper theory, students should be more interested in a fast track story on this campus than in a hot item in the China Sea. Even so, Mr. Sayre's suggestion is a good one. Plans have been underway for months to get a United Press wire into the State News office. This will be done as soon as the paper requires sufficient funds to publish six pages regularly. With outside news in the columns, editorial comment will be in order.

Editor's Note:—Articles or letters on campus news should be sent to the Editor, State News, 420 Madison Ave., East Lansing, Mich. The editor reserves the right to edit articles and letters for clarity and brevity. No return will be made unless requested.

African Writer Asks Akron U For Diploma

AKRON, O.—(AP)—A South African journalist of no mean achievements has "invited" the University of Akron to confer upon him "an appropriate degree, perhaps in arts, literature, science (zoology preferred) or philosophy."
The journalist stands ready to remit $250 to $500 to cover registration and other fees, he said.
Accompanying the invitation were four of the author's manuscripts and two volumes of his letters, and he says he "has made hundreds of contributions to leading newspapers and magazines."
In fact the writer admits that "the only literary work I did a good deal of and I have gained other prominent awards."

Hutchins Offers Plan to Oust Football

Complaining that "in many American colleges it is possible for a boy to win twelve letters without learning to write one," Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, suggests in today's Saturday Evening Post that the best way to rid college football of over-emphasis is to have a ten-cent rate.
He would also give athletic directors some kind of academic position "so that their jobs depend on their ability as instructors and their character as men, and not on the gates they draw."
President Hutchins denies that college football is a moneymaker and cites, as an example, an institution "that was the country's most sensational football college." Last year, he says, when it was sold at auction and bought by bondholders, it was discovered that it was more than $72,000 a year behind its budget.
