However, thrusts at groups on campus took that but on the "dirt columnist's" journalistic life, and the end came through pressure based on too many violations of good taste. With the "dirt column's" dissolution, State News officials feel that the last throwback of high school days has been ended. No college paper of reputable standing, no profes-sional newspaper has the equivalent of the "dirt column".

The end of the column is an appropriate time for the Michigan State News to apologize to any individual or group who feels he has been made the butt of a "dirt" item. To nyone who feels that way, this newspaper apologizes. May the Michigan State News "dirt column" rest
