Mrs. Maurice Gonon to Be Assistant Counsellor

Today's Campus

... New Way Out

Dr. Richard Derson, a new history instructor, got caught sleeping over his books in Morrill hall. He tried all the doors and found that most of the windows were locked. Finding the time creeping up on him, he went to the men's rest room and crawled out the window. It appears he is none the worse for wear after his harrowing experience.

... Strictly Corn

Dick Mosher, East Lansing sophomore, eats in the Union cafeteria. At least a little two-year-old girl found out that he, and she, like corn-on-the-cob. Dick was standing next to the little child in line by the beverage counter when he looked down to find her sucking on his favorite piece of corn. Blushing, he withdrew it from her chubby hands.

Nye's Biography Gets Favorable News Reviews

Prof. Russel Nye's prize winning biography of George Bancroft, American historian and politician, recently off the press, has been favorably reviewed by the New York Times Book Review and the Detroit Free Press book section.

Howard M. Jones, dean of the graduate school of Harvard university, reviewer for the New York Times, termed Nye's book the first formal life of the neglected worthy, George Bancroft. His study of the character is declared to be no flippant survey of a quaint, forgotten figure, but a solid historical contribution.

Free Press Reviewer Frank B. Means could provide better biographical material than George Bancroft and few biographers could have made better use of the material.

Music Course In Therapy Proposed

New Program, Only One Of Its Kind, Lacks Final Approval

Instituting the first course of its kind in the world, the music department in cooperation with the psychology department has proposed a new course in musical therapy for the treatment of mental diseases, Prof. Roy Underwood announced yesterday. The new plan will have to be officially approved by the administrative board before it can be offered in the fall.

Professor Underwood, who is head of the music department, said that students who want to enter this new four year course must be interviewed and given musical and psychological tests before being admitted to the musical therapy program.

Sec., Psyc Required

In addition to required basic college courses, musical therapy majors will have to take 20 credits of work in the sociology department and 19 credits of psychology. One hundred and nine credits of music will be required.

One term of the four year course will be spent at Eloise hospital in Detroit. During that time they will be gaining practical experience while helping the 3800 mental cases.

Method Age Old

The use of musical therapy in the treatment of quasi-mental cases dates back to Biblical times when David used his harp to soothe King Saul's troubled nerves. Until four years ago when Dr. Ira Altschuler of Eloise hospital discovered again that music would soothe headaches and other mental pains, the study of musical therapy was forgotten. Since that time, the doctor has made 900 records of different kinds of music. He has found that every person requires an entirely different type of selection.

100 Will Complete Requirements For Degree at End of Summer

One hundred students will be eligible for degrees at the end of the summer session Sept. 1, but no commencement exercises will be held for them. Approximately 33 students completed undergraduate degree requirements at the end of the six week summer session, making the total of summer graduates 133.

Registration of new students and transfers for fall term, which begins Sept. 19, totals 1,116 admitted through Aug. 15, Registrar R. S. Linton announced yesterday. This is 101 more students than were admitted at that time last year, the total then being 1,015.

Women students registered outnumber men, 969 to 147, as compared with 816 women and 199 men total for last year's freshmen and transfers.

Enrollment by divisions or schools includes 34 students in Agriculture, 149 in Business and Public Service, 41 in Engineering, 257 in Home Economics, 457 in Science and Arts, 77 in Veterinary medicine and medical technology, and 101 in basic.

Total student enrollment for fall term, including upperclassmen and graduate students has not been estimated yet, but it is expected that the figure will reach well over 3,000 before registrations are completed.

Grid Talks Continue; Results Lacking

With daily scrimmages continuing at unabated pace, efforts to secure more games for the Spartan grid machine are meeting almost no success, Athletic Director Ralph H. Young announced yesterday.

Young said that negotiations for basketball games were proceeding fine and that the cage men will have a wide and varied schedule to face. Talks with several teams for football games was continuing with little result.

Elisabeth Conrad Granted Leave of Absence

New Assistant Has Two Children, Studied at Smith, Bryn Mawr

By BARB DENNISON

Mrs. Maurice Gonon, of Shelbourne Falls, Mass., will assume her duties as assistant counsellor for women at Sate Sept. 1, Dean of Students S. E. Crowe revealed early this week.

Mrs. Gonon until recently has been personnel director in the Kendell Mills in Walpole, Mass., but will move to East Lansing with her two children late this month.

ELISABETH CONRAD, counsellor for women, will take leave of absence from October to January 1945, but will resume her duties in January. She has made no definite plans for the time she will be away.

Record enrollment of women this year, which will necessitate more help in the offices of the counsellor for women, and the fact that Miss Conrad will be absent for some time and Mabel Petersen, housing supervisor, will be in the WAVES, has resulted in the addition of Mrs. Gonon to the staff.

THE WORK OF THE new assistant will be largely dealing with social affairs of the coeds in campus residences and acting as counsellor for AWS and various honorary groups. She will set up certain procedures of entertainment, but the details of her work have not been outlined yet.

A graduate of Mount Holyoke, South Hadley, Mass., Mrs. Gonon then went on to get her master's degree at Smith college in Northampton, Mass., and later was in charge of the French house at Bryn Mawr, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHE ALSO STUDIED for a year at the Sorbonne in Paris on a fellowship, doing work toward her doctorate. She married a French man, Maurice Gonon, who died a few years ago, and French man, Maurice Gonon, she has two children, a boy 15 and a girl 13, who will attend high school in East Lansing.

Coed Occupation of Men's Dorms Causes Varied Opinions

By SUNNY GEARHART

The prospect of seeing women at home throughout Wells and Mason halls, former men's dormitories, this fall arouses various opinions among State students as Counellor for Women Elisabeth Conrad announces the tenough applications have been received to fill both dorms to capacity.

The 440 coeds will live adjacent to the ASTRs, who will live in Abbot hall. The opinions of the different coeds reflect a new attitude, especially the one of A. J. Meiser, Detroit junior, who expects to live in Mason next term. She mentioned that "I like Mason's lounge and the walk isn't far enough to talk about."

On the idea that "The walk will keep the figures in trim" Marget Jacques, Grand Rapids sophomore, is in favor of women living in the dorm.

Male Ideas

The civilian fellows have their own opinions on living either in dormitories or off-campus. They don't mind off-campus life since "the women have to be put someplace," according to Dick Dimick, freshman of Barron, Wisconsin. Because "there aren't enough men to fill up the men's dorm, it's all right to place the women in it," Chuck Ries, Chesaning junior, said.

Lary Frymaire, Chicago, last year's president of the senior class, said, "It's a fine idea. Nice place to live and Mrs. Luker, Mason housemother, is just grand. They have tennis courts, a grill, ping pong, and pool tables at their disposal. The women will have more self-government, something like the fellows had before. The ASTRs, however, will have to be put under a stricter military rule."

Opposition Views

On the other side of the ledger was the comment made by Dave Cole, Birmingham senior, who said, "I think it should be turned over to the civilians. It's an awful mess."

Straddling the middle of the road are several who don't care whether the women take over Mason or not. "Jerry" Lowwith, sophomore from Newark, New Jersey, said, "It's all right." And Rogers H. Thackberry, New Jersey junior, admitted, "Nice thing."

Ernestine Reynolds, East Lansing senior, said, "The med-bios and pre-meds could be put in Mason, because it would be handy." It would be impossible to segregate groups of coeds because the same people living together should have common interests socially and still learn new things from different fields.

Critical Views

Many unfavorable criticisms have been placed on the move of turning over the men's dorm to women. Shirley Nelson, Grand Rapids senior, said, "If there is going to be any unfavorable comment on such an arrangement, then why not move the fellows back to Wells hall and turn both Mason and Abbot over to the women?"

The comment going the rounds on campus has caused considerable commotion among the students. According to Peg Carraher, Detroit junior, "It would give the fellows and coeds a chance to act their age." To the "act their age" Bruce Ott, sophomore from Pennsylvania said, "The ASTRs are harmless!"

LETTERS . . . To The Editor

TO THE Editor:
Several weeks ago congress debated on the right of soldiers to vote in the presidential election. It was hoped that the federal government would handle this situation since the absentee ballots would be more accessible to soldiers all over this country and overseas.
However, the individual states were left with the possibility of either accepting the federal law or providing ballots themselves. New York state is among the latter. According to an estimate in P. M. less than 10 per cent of New York's men and women in service will vote, partly because of the complicated set-up under state ballots. It is important in this crisis that as many people who can vote, do so.
I do not know how many other state have followed this procedure. However, I do have access to application cards for a New York state ballot. If anyone reading this would like to have one please get in touch with me or write to the New York state war ballot commission, Albany 1, N. Y.
BARBARA CHANDLER,
448 M. A. C.

TO THE Editor:
You've finally gotten me mad enough to say something in defense of what you term the "disinterested college student of today." I don't know for how many students I am speaking, but I would like to give our side.
Up until now I have read column after column condemning us for our lack of interest in the war and the peace plans. I believe we have hesitated to answer these charges before because, when we do speak up, people think we are trying to be dramatic and laugh it off.
Well, now I am speaking and people can think what they like. You ask for our opinions and for our interest in post-war planning. All right. When we do give our opinions, they are discounted as the ravings of children who haven't begun to have had enough experience to know anything about such matters.
In the recent debates about the right of 18 year-olds to vote, the majority agreed that we were "too young to know." Sure, we're interested in this war, and we have our ideas about the peace.
We have just as many friends and loved ones fighting as the 21 year-olds; but, when you continually meet sneers for your ideas, you stop voicing them. It's our children, too, who will fight another war if one comes, but what can we say about it? We have no way of making ourelves heard.

We can't vote so we aren't able to choose the representatives that we want for our peace table. It is left to us to talk in hopes that someone of you who is old enough to vote, will hear and understand what we want, and do your best to bring us the kind of peace we hope for.
We would be interested in discussions on post-war planning and I believe we would take an active part. But for us, who have not reached our twenty-first year, it gets darn tiresome to talk and talk while no one listens, and we have no chance for action to carry out our ideas.
Just because we don't moan around the place, you feel that we have no interest in what is going on about us. We have just as much interest as the rest of the people, and the war is as vital and as much a part of our lives as it is of older people's.
If we had a chance to do a little, instead of using nothing but talk for our weapons, we wouldn't let the chance slip by us. I think I am safe in saying that there would be a very small minority of 18 to 20 year-olds who wouldn't be present at the polls if we were given the chance to vote. We can only talk—the rest is up to you.
Eleanor McDonald.

TO THE Editor:
In your column recently, you expressed sorrow for the veterans who will be on campus this fall. These men do not want your sorrow. They did what they had to do, and that's that. Sentimentality about this, about army and battle experiences, is not wanted. All you need to do is try to understand, and lend a little consideration.
The veteran students are, and will be, serious students. Many veterans starting in college under the new G. I. bill program have never been in attendance at an institution of higher learning before. They are going to attend school with very definite goals and ends in view. They are not going to stay here in order to spend a pleasant four years lounging in the grill.
Most of these men will be past the age of 20. They just don't have years of life to waste. And this is why many of our coeds are going to get a jolt.
I'd like to take a survey of the large coed population that's going to be here this fall. It would be interesting to know how many women come here to school for what reasons. It grieves me to say this, but I have found it to be all too true that

SPEAKING FOR MYSELF

By BARBARA DENNISON

MONDAY afternoon I went to Percy Jones general hospital in Battle Creek with Don Buell's service show, for the ostensible purpose of writing a story about the place and what went on for the State News.
So much went on, and does go on all the time, that it is difficult to know where to begin or what to say. Until you have almost become lost in the corridors of the place, you can't appreciate the immensity of the hospital.
Watching the men in the halls, at dinner and during the performance, was something I would hate to have missed. There are a few former State men there, one of whom I saw at a distance. He was Dan Darling, class of '45, whose plane was nearly shot out from under him over Europe.
Another State coed met a friend who lost a leg in Tunisia. He was formerly a distance runner in his college. Some of the members of the cast ran into fellows who had been at State with the ASTP, or whom they had known previously through other means.
Comments called to the stage during the performance are a sure indication that their sense of humor is perhaps more keen than ever before, because a little humor can go a long ways sometimes.
As one member of the cast put it, the men seemed to warm up to the show immediately, as though they really liked it, and although some of the performers had just about their worst case of butterflies before the show, they wanted to go right back and do it over.
Perhaps the most enjoyable part of the whole trip was watching the small children with their mothers, who came to see the fathers and husbands recuperating at the great hospital.
Almost oblivious to why they were there instead of home, the children made bright spots in what could easily have become a tragic situation if one let it be.
In the short time we were there, it was virtually impossible to get any idea of the work being done other than what is extremely general knowledge, but just being there a person can't help but know that everything is being done that can be.
And just seeing the little that I did, it made me wonder one thing . . . why should there be a need for such work and what is the reason for it all? There is none.

'40, gunnery officer on an LST which participated in the D-Day invasion of the Normandy coast, is home on a 30 day leave after spending two and one half hours in the numbing waters of the English channel three days after the invasion.
Lieutenant Ballard participated in the historical invasion of the German west wall and was returning with a second shipload of men and material when a German E-boat which had infiltrated the Allied defenses of the area torpedoed his LST and four others which were being escorted to the French coast by a lone British destroyer.
The ship was hit between the auxiliary and main engine room and caught fire before drifting into mine fields. Lieutenant Ballard was picked up by crewmen aboard the British destroyer which invaded the dangerous mine field to rescue members of the torpedoed ship's crew.
The destroyer later engaged the E-boat pack for an hour before the Nazi craft turned tail and fled. It was impossible for them to determine the number of E-boats in the pack because of the dense fog, Lieutenant Ballard explained.
While at MSC, Lieutenant Ballard was a member of Sigma Nu

Letters

many coeds are in college with the primary object of hooking some poor fish with their charms.

These women study only that bit that they can get by on. They are so ignorant that some among them cannot distinguish in meaning between the words of physiology and physics. They don't even know what the word college implies. Many of them either cannot think and reason, or don't want to. I feel very sorry for these coeds. It is all quite pathetic.

These unfortunates should know that college is not only a place for social circulation, a place for the pursuit of a happy time; that college doesn't mean football and basketball; that vocational education and training for a job is not all that college is trying to do for its students. The institution of the basic college starting this fall should indicate otherwise.

Not only must the student strive to achieve a basic education from which he can go on for the rest of his life, but college should stimulate him to think, constructively and creatively, and to evolve and progress in his thinking toward definite, clear-cut ends.

College should be a place not only to accumulate skills and knowledge, but to earn, interpret, weigh and evaluate these skills and knowledge, and to do the same to everything else that comes along in the course of one's life.

College should also make the student conscious of the interests and values in life, so that he may know how to live interestingly, actively, vitally, enjoyably for the bulk of his days.

The basic college should serve in large measure to remedy the current dullness of our student body, to re-energize, to re-vitalize it. It is also my contention that the new program of basic education will raise the scholastic standing of this institution to where it should be, and this will, for the future, draw a higher calibre of student to Michigan State.

As dark and sordid as things around here look now, I am not being too optimistic when I think that in the very near future, this fall to be exact, conditions here will improve perceptively, and in time show material gain. I have great faith that Michigan State college will eventually, within some years to come, gradually but surely forge ahead, and become not only about the best under graduate school in Michigan, but rank close to the top among the foremost universities and colleges in the country.

MORTON D. SMERLING.

TO THE Editor:

Your "scorching" columns have been of passing interest to me for quite some time. You have slammed enough. You have attempted to elicit a response from someone, anyone, by every derogatory remark known to man.

You write pages and pages of copy and say absolutely nothing. You consume valuable space that could well be occupied by intelligent, informative advertisements. Don't you ever grow weary of writing drivel? I, for one, tire of reading it.

Perhaps, though, we Spartans' subnormal attitude is so poor that as simple, uneducated, little worms, we can't find a decent reply to your unfounded statements. Why don't we reply? Why don't you say something that merits a reply?

"Respectfully" yours,

In Campus Quarters

ROMANCE may take a holiday in some quarters but not on this campus. Marriages are happening faster than they can be recorded and the lesser but equally romantic side of love taken care of with rings and fraternity pins, is running a close second.

For example, two couples chose last Thursday for their wedding day, to start things off in fine shape. The newly weds are Bev Reed, Alpha Chi, and Lt. Carl Hagen, SAE, '44, and Alice VanAken, '44, who was married to Claude Bonta, '40, of Eaton Rapids.

Lt. Gordon Perkins, '41, bombardier instructor at the Carlisle army air field, N. M., and Robert Bedell of Marion, Ind., were married at the post chapel Aug. 5 and are now living in Carlisle.

Nancy Bassett, Theta, was married to Aviation Cadet John Bauckman Aug. 5 in Royal Oak, and Jeanne Moffett, Alpha Phi, '44, and Bill Gotshall, Kappa Sig, '43, were married Saturday in Detroit.

Aug. 4 was the date on which Rae Annette Loeffler, Chi O, '44, spoke her wedding vows to Lt.

Glenn Deibert, SAE, '44, in Detroit. Bridesmaids for the wedding were Billie Morley, Chi O, and Barbara Appelfot, Theta. So much for the current marriages.

Approaching marriages are few . . . one to be exact. Maxine Waterbury, Alpha Gam, will marry John Craig of Bangor, Me., on Sept. 2. John was graduated from the Anarga Military Academy, Ill., and the Chicago Aeronautical university.

Only one engagement popped up in time for this week's column. Chuck Calkins, Delta Sig, made things slightly on the definite side Saturday night when he gave a ring to Kay Welch, '44.

Pinning are a little more numerous—but only two. Bob Coffrey, Phi Tau, is proudly telling his friends that Donna Andrews, Port Huron sophomore, is now wearing his pin. The same goes for Bill Coleman, Delta Sig, who recently pinned Dorothy Pipp of Grand Rapids.

A long time ago SAEs reported having initiated two new members. They were John Bender, Detroit sophomore, and Floyd Leisman, Muskegon

Legendary Freshmen 'Pots' to Return in Fall—in Modified Form

Blue Key Will Sell Frosh Placards to Eligible Men

The age-old tradition of freshman pots will be taken up again this fall, after a two year lapse, in a modified form, it was announced yesterday by Blue Key President Jim Bibbins, Buffalo, N. Y., senior.

All freshman men, regardless of term, will be required to purchase and wear a cardboard placard inscribed in green block letters "Fresh" Bibbins stated. The placards will probably be required wear for the first week.

Permission for the sale and wearing of the placards was obtained from Dean of Students S. E. Crowe after efforts to obtain regular green freshman pots failed.

Formerly the varsity club handled the arrangements for the pots, but since there are almost no varsity club members on campus, Blue Key, junior and senior men's honorary, has taken over the task.

The fresh signs will probably cost from 10 to 15 cents and all profits will be turned over to the varsity club fund by Blue Key, since the concession is really theirs.

Michigan 4-H Club Will Hold Annual Show and Farmers' Day on Campus

Taking away the vacant air of the between-terms campus, the annual 4-H club show and Farmers' day will be held at State September 5 through 8, A. G. plants the annual 4-H fair formerly held in Detroit.

Total premium money, made available by the state department of agriculture, reaches $16,000. Exhibits and 4-H members participating will arrive on the campus on Tuesday, Sept. 5, for registration. Wednesday's activities are for members only and consist of judging of all exhibits except livestock and an evening assembly for club members and leaders only.

The program for Thursday, Sept. 7, which is also the annual Farmers' day, will include judging of club exhibits in swine, lambs, beef, cattle, and colts. An auction sale of fat steers, lambs and hogs will be held on Thursday, also.

The rest of the exhibits will be judged Friday. The exhibits will include livestock, poultry, eggs, vegetables, flowers, handicraft, farm labor-saving devices, farm electrification, forestry, canning, food preservation, and clothing.

Work on the 24 page freshman issue, which is to be printed next week, and approaching finals, necessitates the stoppage of publication for the summer. Kettunen, state leader, announced yesterday.
