GI Bill Needs Reexamination

When GI educational allotments were first designated as "subsistence allowances," many thought that the intent of the GI Bill was to cover the living costs of the veterans while he attended school. But today, in the wake of spiraling prices, the veteran realizes that living under the allotment means "bare" subsistence, if at all.

The question remains: Did the GI Bill intend to provide for living costs? Or was it designed only to give a large measure of assistance?

If the former be true, the Federal government is obliged to raise the allotments. If not, then the veteran must look elsewhere to supplement his income.

Some persons think that GI's expect a "free ride" on the government. "Just because a man served in the Armed Forces he is entitled to something for nothing." Perhaps a few are of this mind, but most veterans know better.

The people of the United States in their Congress decided that certain aids, including education, should be rendered those men and women who served the country in time of war. Hence Public Act 416, otherwise known as the GI Bill of Rights.

Educational provisions for veterans is a sound investment. In years to come, the U. S. will harvest the sweet fruits of a better-schooled populace in terms of higher standards of living, more, highly skilled workers, and an electorate more alert and enlightened than ever before.

The many thousands of veterans entering school this fall are grateful for the educational opportunities offered them and eager to get on with their schooling.

But—"Am I expected to live on my allotment check?"

LETTERS to the EDITOR

To the Editor: With registration beginning with the "Z" end of the alphabet this term, I looked forward to a satisfactory schedule. To my amazement, after getting my program arranged in the school of Engineering, I found I would carry the tremendous load of 12 credits! Just four subjects, two of them Basics at that. During last spring term I carried 13 credits. At the rate I'm piling up credits I should be out of here about the time my 17-month-old son begins school.

Now, if I were alone in this dilemma there might have been an excuse for it, but several friends with whom I compared notes, all had a minimum of 12 credits scheduled.

I know there is a drastic shortage of instructors not only here but everywhere, and because of the lack of classrooms for such a large student body, many subjects are not being taught. This was the case before the beginning of

Louis, Brooklyn Prepped For NL Pre-Series Playoff

LOUIS, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Those unpredictable, unreluctant Brooklyn Dodgers meet the Cardinals tomorrow at Sportsman's park in the first of a three-game playoff to decide which of the two National League clubs stand up and take it.

For the monetary reason the prospect is not pleasant. It is sure to be a weary, slow-down crew when it finally grips with the American League about a week from now. But that will make the starting tomorrow none the less hard.

The slump-ridden Cardinals strong favorites to win the play-off—first in the history of organized baseball. A $20 bet placed on the Red Birds would win only $13, while a $10 wager on the Brooks would return $13.

The Cardinals, who blew a chance to sew up the flag late yesterday when they were beaten by the Chicago Cubs in their final tussle, went through a small workout today. Manager Eddie Dyer said his starting pitcher tomorrow would be either Elmer Foltz, a left-hander of recently dubious ability, or Murray Dickson, a right-hander.

The Brooklyn, who gained a reprieve after being shut out in their final game against the Boston Braves yesterday at Ebbets Field, spent last night and most of today on the cars. They got in here too late to exercise, but their manager, Lippy Leo Durocher, left no doubt that they would be ready when the bell rings at 1:30 CST tomorrow.

Leo said he leaned strongly toward Ralph Branca, a Brooklyn right-hander, as his starter in the first game of the play-off. Branca blanked the Cards 3-0 with three hits the last time he faced them in Brooklyn.

Reader Sparks Spartan Attack In Wayne Rout

Spartan Halfback RUSS READER is met by a trio of Wayne tacklers as he circles his right end for a short gain. Reader scored two touchdowns in the game, running 98 yards from second quarter kickoff for the second, and kicked four conversions.

20,000 Fans Set Opening Day Attendance Record As Michigan State Gridders Trounce Wayne, 42-0

By CHUCK STRATTARD
Before 20,000 sun-drenched fans in Macklin field, Michigan State's Spartans threw open the curtain on their 1946 football campaign Saturday afternoon with an impressive 42-0 victory over Wayne university.

Following three times in the first five minutes, a fast and elusive State backfield operating behind a hard-charging forward wall pulled itself together and struck in lightning-like fashion over and over in the air for their first score, and from then on the outcome was never in doubt.

Three State Fumbles
Following the first exchange of punts, which saw three State fumbles delay their offensive thrusts, Russ Reader, punter from the Spartans 42 and Steve Wayne's safety mate, Johnny Harjo, back to his own 10, and he was dived on the 12.

On the fourth down Vargil Flores punted to the Wayne 42. Reader was downed on the Wayne 36. On the second play Reader failed to find the field slope, and hit Lynn Chalmers on the 26 with a flat pass, and the speedy halfback gathered it in and raced all the way for the first score.

Reader concerted to make it 7-0 and the fans were on their feet for more.

Tartars Stopped Early
Wayne was unable to penetrate through the big State line following the kick-off, and Flores kicked out to Reader who got back 20 yards into Tartar territory picking up two vicious blocks in front of him by Chalmers and John Harris on the east side lines.

No sooner had the fans settled back to talk about the first score, when lightning struck twice in the same spot. On the first play from scrimmage, Steve Sieradski, State's fullback broke through a gaping hole off tackle and sprinted 45 yards through the bewildered Wayne secondary into the end zone to make it 13-0. Reader hit on the conversion which came off before the quarter ended, and it was State 14 Wayne 0.

Second String Wrong
At this point Charley Bachman pulled out the first string team, and found much to his enjoyment that the second string operatives were as alert as the team that started the game.

Sparked by little George Guerre, (pronounced Gary) from Flint, 160 pounds of football dynamite the second stringers went to work on the tired Tartars.

Unable to move against the MSC line, the Detroiters found themselves constantly bottled up in their own territory and only the good punting of Flores kept them out of more trouble.

On the second of his first two kicks in the second quarter, Guerre went to work. Flores kicked to the Flint Flash and he grabbed the ball on the dead run and scampered back 15 yards to the Wayne 43.

On the next play he went around end and after eluding at least five tacklers, skipped into the clear and went 41 yards to the Wayne four yard marker. Then Bill Spiegel, a baby freshman halfback took a front hand off and raced side around left end to state standing up. Pete Fornari split the uprights and it was MSC 21 Wayne 0.

Wayne's Henry Haag started to fill the air with passes, and for the first time in the afternoon the Green and Gold had found an Achilles' heel in State's defense. Haag threw to Ralph Haas for two yards, then he hit Bruno Marano on the Wayne 49. The next Haag aerial was good to George Sinkus for a first down on the MSC 34.

On the next play Haag passed to Angie Coratti on the 18 who lateraled to Sinkus on the 12, but the ball bobbed out of Wayne Tanker's hands and rolled into the end-zone where a host of Spartan defenders led by Frank Waters fell on the ball to register an automatic touchback, and thereby went the Tartars to a change of the afternoon to score.

State took over on their own 20, but Guerre was forced to kick out of bounds on the State 43. Wayne took another flurry of passing but Spartan defenses tightened and the half ended with Spiegel and Guerre alternating on the offense carries.

Russ Reader, the Spartan triple threat, electrified the crowd when he grabbed the second half kick-off and went 98 yards for the fourth touchdown. Apparently bottled up on the 30 yard line, he broke out of a mass of green-shirted tacklers, picked up several blockers and raced for the west side line.

A key block by Barney Hooppard the last Wayne defender on the Wayne 35, and Reader cruised the remaining distance without a Tartar in sight. Reader made the fourth conversion good and it was 28-0.

The fifth touchdown came after Wayne gave up the ball to MSC on the state 42 after gambling on a fourth down pass. Sieradski sent three yards off tackle to the 45.

On the next play Russ Gilpin passed to Reader on the Wayne 45, and the big 190 pound speedster galloped down the sideline without a hand being laid on him. The play covered 55 yards. Reader made his fourth perfect conversion.

Wayne hit the air lanes again, but the Spartans were ready for them. See FOOTBALL, Page 4.

400 Women Added To Big Sister List

Big Sister ranks were filled last Friday by the addition of 400 upperclass women who signed during the campaign sponsored by Big Sister council. Due to the influx of approximately 500 freshmen women, the council was forced to stage a last-minute campaign in dormitories and sorority houses.

A convocation will be held at 7:15 tomorrow evening in Music auditorium for all freshmen.

Prospective football managers should have their names and phone numbers of the Union Club for Black Member.

women and upperclass women who signed up to be big sisters during last spring or this fall's campaign. Upperclass women will be a signed their little sisters after accurate records are obtained from registration figures.

MSC Varsity Sport Shorts

Statistics of the Michigan State game may afford some explanation for worried Spartan fans who visualized a Wolverine blow-down every time Wayne completed a pass against State.

The Hoosiers connected for 12 of 36 series against Michigan for a total of 172 yards. The Wayne passing attack which carried to the three yard line in the final quarter was largely due to Tartar end Tino Barbas who played for Michigan State last year.

Russ Reader's runback of the second half kickoff was equalled by Louis Cecconi, Pittsburgh halfback, who ran 98 yards for a touchdown against West Virginia Saturday.

Rulers Authorize Barrack; Fire Department Created

Fifty-five new faculty appointments were made by the State Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State college during its September meeting, Karl McDonel, secretary of the board announced recently.

Included among the appointments is one divisional head and two department heads. The State Board also accepted gifts for the college totaling $3,180, authorized the establishment of a fire department for the college, and approved creation of 12 temporary steel barracks for housing and classrooms.

Dr. Russell B. Nye, English department head, was appointed director of the division of language and literature, effective September 1. Prof. Nye, a member of the MSC faculty since 1940, was named head of the English department in August, succeeding Dr. Ben Eweman, who resigned to become Dean of the School of the Liberal Arts at Penn State college.

Nye Won Prize
Winner of the 1944 Pulitzer prize for American biography for his book, "George Bancroft, Brahmin Rebel," Dr. Nye will control the activities of the departments of English, speech, dramatics and radio education, and foreign languages.

Second in the list of appointments is Dr. Hermann H. Thomson, new head of the foreign languages department, who succeeds Prof. L. C. Hughes, now retired. The appointment will be effective January 1, 1942, when Dr. Thomson comes here from his position as professor of romance languages at Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio.

Psychology Has New Head
The State Board divided the department of psychology and philosophy, naming Dr. Harold H. Anderson, formerly of the University of Illinois, head of the psychology department. Dr. J. M. Bellan, formerly head of the combined departments, will continue as head of the department of philosophy. The latter is at present on leave of absence.

Remaining appointments included one associate professorship, 18 assistant professorships, two assistant physicians, and 18 instructors.

Approve New Classrooms

In addition the State Board approved the building of temporary steel barracks to alleviate the classroom shortage. The barracks which are furnished by the Federal Public Housing authority will be ready for use sometime during fall term.

Plans have also been formulated to give the college more adequate fire protection by establishing a branch of the East Lansing fire department on campus. A temporary building to house the new fire equipment will be erected on the corner at Harrison road and Kalamazoo until a permanent station can be built.

AP Prexy Awarded Service Medal

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30 (AP)—The board of directors of the Poor Richard club announced today it gold medal for achievement will be presented to Robert McLean, President of the Associated Press and the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The award will be made at the club's annual banquet Jan. 17, the anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin.

OPA To Retain Meat Prices

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30 (AP)—Chances for any quick removal of meat price ceilings dwindled further tonight as Secretary of Agriculture Anderson ruled officially that it still is scarce.

However, Anderson's second monthly list of scarce agricultural commodities, issued under the new price control act, removed ceilings from the following:

Ceiling Off

Canned fruits, fruit juices and fruit nectars, oat cereals, canned corn, all salmon, wet and pressed sugar beet pulp, rum, cordials and liquors.

These were left off the Agriculture department's short supply list. The law forbids OPA to apply ceilings to any food not appearing there.

New Developments

There were these other developments too, on prices and foods:

1. Chairman Roy L. Thompson of the decontrol board predicted in a speech the end of most price regulations within six months but said no amount of political or other pressure will influence the board.

2. The decontrol chief in a recent address said the board did not foresee the present meat shortage when it restored ceilings because it "expected better cooperation" and "didn't expect to see human nature react as it did."

Army Turns

3. The Army turned to Argentina for meat.

4. Livestock supplies at the major American markets showed a considerable improvement, with the cattle run the heaviest of the month at Chicago.

FOOTBALL

Gene Glick, Waters and Spiegel shared passing and running honors in the final drive that set the stage for the sixth State score. This combination, along with Cappaert, pushed all the way to the Wayne 15 yard line before the Tartars braced momentarily to take the ball on downs. A holding penalty put Wayne back on their one yard line.

Florea punted to Glick on the 34 and the big freshman halfback got back to the 26 before he was pulled down. Glick passed to Spiegel on the 16. Jim Blenkhorn, fourth string halfback crashed through to the Wayne 11.

On the next play Glick took a lateral from Blenkhorn and bolted into pay dirt for the score. Pete Fornari hit with his second conversion of the afternoon, and the rout was over.

AWS Establishes Rule On Date Classes

Until the Associated Women Students board rules otherwise, women registered in evening classes, scheduled until 10 p. m., are to leave their names with either their housemother or counselor before leaving for class.

Women students are given 20 minutes to return to their residences if the class or college function continues after closing hours. Nominations for officers in the residences were held last night. Petitions of the nominees must be in the AWS office today, according to Jean Proctor, Detroit.

Qualifications for officers are found in the AWS handbook. Petitions will include: nominee's name, residence, office nominated for, class, point average for the previous term and her all-college point average.
