Streamlined Constitution On Ballot

Vote Wednesday On Revised Rule

Students voting in the final election Wednesday will find a proposed "streamlined" student government constitution on the ballot along with the names of candidates for officers.

Considerably shorter than the present constitution, the new one changes the election of council officers, the method of filling vacancies and the powers of the council.

Streamlining was achieved by elimination of all matter thought not essential. This included most election regulations which are subject to frequent change.

Future councils would be compelled to publish all council ordinances if the new constitution is approved Wednesday. In the past confusion has often arisen due to lack of information on this score.

Another provision would eliminate the practice of allowing council "late ducks" to vote in the election of officers for the council which follows them into office.

Instead, election of new officers would be delayed until the fourth meeting of newly elected councils when supposedly members would have had a chance to become acquainted and to estimate each other's abilities.

Power to President To fill council vacancies the president of the Student Government would be given the power to appoint qualified residents of the district involved with the advice and consent of the council.

The full text of the proposed constitution appears on page 20.

ROTC Band Parade Honors Six Candidates

The title of Kettering's address will be "Days of Opportunity." The speech will highlight Michigan State's 90th commencement program, which will see the opening of 1946 graduates and 213 higher degrees, the largest number in the history of the college.

Kettering, who received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from Ohio State University, holds honorary degrees from the American Whittier and Dickinson, among them the honorary degree of Doctor of Engineering Research from the University of Nebraska, the only such degree ever conferred.

Received Awards Kettering, who has received more than a dozen national and international awards for outstanding achievements in the automotive engineering and manufacturing field, among them the French Legion of Honor, the Order of the Crown of Belgium, and a fellowship in the National Academy of Sciences.

Kettering directed the first electrical starting, lighting, and ignition systems for automobiles, invented the independent electric generator for use in isolated farm homes and other buildings, and made original research discoveries that led to the manufacture of the first V-type for automobiles.

Under Kettering's supervision at the General Motors Research Laboratories countless other discoveries and inventions were put into practical use, including harmonic balances, static and dynamic balancing machines, and four-wheel brakes, engine oil control and fuel-injection systems, and the two-way Diesel engine now used in streamlined trains, Diesel locomotives, marine installations, and stationary power plants.

The reception planned for two nights because of the large number attending will be held in the Union ballroom from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

THE SQUARE CORNER

Wallace, Russia And The U.S.

By PAT MCCARTHY

HENRY WALLACE'S RECENT OPEN letter to Premier Stalin has caused some discussion among diplomatic circles, and those of the U. S. state department in particular.

True, our friend-and-our-friend Henry is a presidential candidate and the open letter gag was a good publicity stunt.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S RATHER cold-nosed view of the Wallace letter and Moscow's publication of Ambassador Smith's letter is no more than a little pulling his head back into his shell.

But, to quote the Detroit Free Press Sunday editorial, "firmness in foreign policy does not mean slamming the door in Russia's face."

WALLACE'S LETTER IS TYPICAL OF his usual reasoning, idealistic and full-of-shining Utopian lights.

UN Debate A Must

Sentiment for an organized world government is spreading into one of the largest spontaneous citizen's movements of our time.

Organizations backing the idea differ as to methods of establishing the federation, but all agree that some kind of international government is necessary to prevent an atomic bomb duel, and ultimate world destruction.

The United Nations, now in its fourth year, has not provided the solution to the myriad of international problems that have arisen since the end of World War II.

Defenders of the UN as it stands now say that the organization, although only three years old, is trying to cope with problems that have resulted from centuries of strife dating back to biblical times.

ments, free exchange of scientific ideas, speedy peace with Germany, peace in the Far East, speedy peace with Japan, assurance of Russian and American intentions, free access to raw materials, and a liberation of the UN veto and atomic energy control.

If these policies were carried out, world peace and eternal happiness would certainly be the result. But, with characteristic aplomb, Wallace completely ignores the involved problems that are blocking the solving of these world problems.

Nevertheless, the Russians have shown a little interest in a man-to-man discussion, and it doesn't behoove the State Department to get uppity about it.

HENRY WALLACE IS NOT AN OFFICIAL representative of the U. S. government, and Russia certainly isn't proceeding under the illusion that he is.

Maybe it's time that a few more people do a little letter writing. Maybe not to Joseph Stalin, although that's not a bad idea, but at least to those people who are trying to present some semblance of a U. S. foreign policy.

According to Dr. Paul Schlipp, associate professor of philosophy at Northwestern University and a staunch advocate of world government, scientists give us from five to twenty five years of "grace" before an atomic war is likely to wipe out humanity and destroy civilization.

Another argument used by the defenders of the UN is that the world needs a feeling of community sentiment, or unity, before it is ready for world government.

The time element conflicts with this theory, too, for the time required to attain this feeling would be unimaginable.

Tomorrow night Dr. Schlipp will debate in the music auditorium with James Eldridge, Midwest Director for the American Association of the UN, on "Resolved: That the United Nations is the solution to the problem of world government and world peace."

No matter which side of the question you, personally, take, the debate should not be missed, for no one is untouched by the problem once we realize that humanity's only other choice is destruction.

'As You Like It' Ready

By FIL RACETTE

With the first performance of the all-college term play, "As You Like It," scheduled for the Fairchild theater stage tomorrow night, the production crews are applying the finishing touches to sets, lights, and costumes.

The production has been planned on the staging scheme used by the Elizabethan theater. The play will remain open during the entire performance. Special production effects have been developed to enable scene changes to be made without interrupting the progress of the play.

Ben Wampler of the speech department, in charge of set design, announced yesterday that all sets will be painted black, white, and silver. In contrast to the sets, the costumes are in red, green, orange, and blue.

Wampler said that the color scheme is being used to make the actors stand out against the dark settings.

Reading the list of production crews are Dick Fineran, Lansing senior stage manager; Bob Vornsteinberg, Chicago senior, chairman of construction; Louise Malory, Detroit senior, chairman of painting; Marjorie Harrod, Lansing sophomore and Maynard Simmons, co-chairman of costumes; and Barbara Johnson, Pleasant Ridge sophomore, chairman of make-up.

Dress rehearsals for the production, and songs, was held last night. The final rehearsal for the entire production is scheduled for tonight.
