Tito Keeps Eyes On UN, Russian Troop Movements

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR. AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Does Cominform military activity in the Balkans mean that war is coming to Europe this year? .

No categorical answer can be made this side of the Iron Curtain.

Marshall Tito's charges that Russia and her satellites are making aggressive preparations along Yugoslavia's borders certainly add a somber overtone to long-standing fears.

There are domestic circumstances which could cause the Belgrade dictator to make such charges at this time for his own purposes.

Tito's official family has not been unanimous in approving his recent steps toward Western friendship, his appeal for outright food aid and loans, and his final break Russia. Until last Christmas Tito kept up the myth that his differences with Russia were with a regime which was itself probably deviating only temporarily from true communism. Since then Yugoslav propaganda has charged that Russia was out and out fascist. Some of his lieutenants haven't been too enthusiastic about that.

All this year Tito has been trying to overcome opposition among his own people with seeming steps to-ward democracy, obviously in the hope of creating greater unity.

Right now he is negotiating for the purchase of war materials from the U.S. and Britain, and it is to his interest to create an atmosphere of urgency in this connection. It is to his advantage to intensify the attitudes already taken by Britain and America that any cominform attack on Yugoslavia would almost certainly set off World War III.

Regardless of Tito's motivation, the facts to which he calls attention are incontrovertible and critical. Whether they mean that the Cominform has decided on war cannot be said. That it is preparing for war, in fear or by design, is sure

George Perkins, U.S. assistant secretary of state, said after a conference with Tito recently that the Yugoslav-ruler does not believe an attack will come this spring.

That does not agree with the impression received from, Tito by others in recent months. Some who have talked with him have been convinced that he does expect such an attack

Now Yugoslavia says that Russian troops are de-ployed along her border after a fashion entirely un-connected with their pence treaty rights to guard their supply lines to occupied Austria. That trenches are being dug, mortar employements made, and airfields be-ing built. That new military roads are being built. The well known charge of mobilization beyond peace treaty limits is repeated.

Tito is obviously laying the groundwork for an appeal to the United Nations if an attack occurs. He will expect the same response as was given to Korea-direct military aid.
