Denison Influence Seen in MSC Rise To National Fame

(Editor's note: This is the last in a series of five articles dealing with the men who will assume administrative duties of Michigan State College during the extended absence of President John A. Hannah.)

By TED BARNETT

Men like Jim Denison who have brought MSC out from semi-obscurity into national fame and recognition. The rise of Michigan State as both an academic and an athletic power has commonly been credited to the skill of John A. Hannah and Coach "Biggie" Munn. But not too far in the background stands the figure of Jim Denison.

Denison, a member of the five-man board that has underwritten the operation of MSC while Dr. Hannah is busy with his new duties as assistant secretary of defense, is responsible for the new respect afforded MSC. An administrative assistant to the president on public relations, he has seen a major renovation in public opinion during the Spartan school since 1947, his first year on the job.

It wasn't too long ago that when you mentioned Michigan State, people had to stop and think—where's that Ann Arbor? Not any more. We've expanded all our horizons to the point where the name of MSC is known to everyone.

There are a few of the "firsts" that have been showered on the East Lansing campus since Denison joined the administration:

- 1. Top football team in the country.
- 2. Leadership in field of college television.
- 3. More public relation awards than any other college in the nation.

Denison's link with the improvement of MSC goes back to a period before his connection as a member of the administration. Working in former Gov. Harry E. Kelly's office to publicize the needs of the state for new educational and health buildings, Denison's efforts led the state legislature to approve unanimously the building program that gave MSC seven new buildings.

That's one of the most gratifying of all my efforts for Michigan State, he said. "When I look out my window and see the new Hall, the power plant or any of the other new structures, I sort of consider them my monuments."

Denison's link with Spartan athletics has been a strong and constant one. Ask any newsmen what rates as the top sport in the country and the odds are that he will vote for the luxurious MSC box. It was Denison who served as major figure in the planning of the new and vastly improved press facilities here.

Denison is the soul of sports coverage. Denison said that the new press box at the new stadium will be larger than the old one and that the new arrangement will be ready to go into operation later this season.

Denison brings to mind another vital job performed by Denison in his public relations ace. All arrangements and coordination for the broadcasting of Spartan sports events are handled by Denison. His efforts have brought every major television network into the booths of Mack Field and the Fieldhouse for the coverage of sports events.

In the realm of television, the college station has generally been accepted as the nation's best since its commission in 1950. As chairman of the Faculty Television Committee, Denison initiated a study of the entire video field and garnered much technical advice before considering a definite path to follow in setting up a television program here.

Under Denison's direction, the college purchased original equipment, built a TV studio and applied for license. The prime goal of the project, according to Denison, was the use of video as a public information medium, especially in adult education.

Handling all TV information directed toward Dr. Hannah's office is only one facet of Denison's relation with the state. State's leadership has been evident in his appointment as representative to the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities' joint committee for educational TV. "Just as MSC was recognized as one of the best in college radio, we're now accepted as tops in television," Denison commented.

One of the greatest credits on Denison's list of accomplishments is his work in centralizing the public relations department. When he first came to Michigan State, the department was somewhat loosely organized. However, Denison's long before Denison had brought the photo lab, the all-college news service, the athletic department and the agricultural extension information section into tight coordination.

Under his direction of the public relations service comes the task of co-ordinating each department of the service in the spreading of news to the public. This involves all kinds of information. He's also chairman of the Faculty Committee and organized the MSC Press, established in 1947 for the publication of textbooks and tradebooks. Denison is also head of the Board of Student Publications of the Commencement Committee, in charge of organizing the graduation program and procession. In addition, Denison is temporary chairman of the committee for the celebration of the MSC centennial.

The 46-year-old public relations head has had experience in the newspaper business. Starting in the editorial department of the Toledo Times in 1928, Denison moved to the Toledo Free Press in 1931 as telegraph editor. Between 1934 and 1936 he was correspondent to the capital and after a period as assistant news editor, advanced to news editor job in 1938. In 1940 he served as Michigan correspondent for Business Week.

Denison came to Lansing in June, 1941, as director of information for the Michigan Council of Defense. Starting a job with the Army in September, 1943, he went on active duty and was sent overseas, landing in Normandy only a few days after D-Day. He was transferred to Paris, France, after it was liberated and received his discharge in December, 1945.

Some of his past civic positions have included membership on the board of the Community Chest and the director of the Michigan United Health and Welfare Fund. He's also on the board of the Michigan United Health and Welfare Fund. He's also on the board of the Michigan United Health and Welfare Fund. He's also on the board of the Michigan United Health and Welfare Fund.

Dr. Hannah To Talk with Eisenhower

President Confers
With Predecessor

By ALEX LAGIMOS

State News Editor

Pres. John A. Hannah will meet President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower today for the first time since he was named assistant secretary of defense.

He will confer with President-elect Eisenhower at 10 this morning at the general's New York City Commodore Hotel headquarters.

Dr. Hannah left East Lansing Thursday afternoon by train and is expected in the Empire City this morning at 8.

This is Hannah's second trip eastward this week. Last Tuesday he was in Washington for a series of conferences with top defense department officials including a talk with his predecessor, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg.

The president said his trip to Washington was in the nature of a familiarity junket. Among the places he visited was the mammoth Pentagon Building, headquarters for the nation's military and manpower administration.

Sources close to Pres. Hannah described his talk today with Eisenhower as another "family conference." The two met early this month at the same headquarters to make way for Dr. Hannah's appointment.

Dr. Hannah will fly back to East Lansing at 4:30 this afternoon and is expected at Willow Run in Detroit at 7 tonight.

The announcement of the meeting of Dr. Hannah with Eisenhower didn't come as a complete surprise. For the past week the President-elect has been meeting with his cabinet designers and other key appointees.

Eisenhower had a full week review Monday with his cabinet members on the foreign and domestic problems which the new administration will face.

The conferences lasted until Tuesday. It is expected that Dr. Hannah will be informed of the policies decided on at the recent conferences.

Phi Mu Alpha To Play Music Of America

Next concert in the 26th season of the MSC Department of Music will be a program of American music by Phi Mu Alpha-Sinfonia at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Music Auditorium.

"Second Concerto" by Harlan A. Hastings, senior, and Ruth Buechling, Cortland, O., sophomore, piano, will begin the program.

David Koch, Mt. Pleasant senior, tuba, will play "Variations on an American Folk Hymn" with Lawrence McCann, Pontiac junior, accompanying.

Carol Broughton, Lansing junior, will accompany Richard Froeber, Saginaw senior, tenor, in "Music I Heard with You" and "White Nocturne."

"High Tide," a French horn solo, will be presented by Milan Yantich, Whiting, Ind., graduate student.

Oscar Stover, Coffeyville, Kan., graduate, and the Phi Mu Alpha Chorale directed by Richard Goldworthy will conclude the concert with "A Stopwatch and an Ordinance Map."

Series Lecturer To Talk on South

"Earthquake Lake," one of America's natural wonders, will be shown in color film at Karl Maslowski's lecture on the World Travel Series at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Auditorium.

Maslowski, noted photographer, will show the rare birds and animals found in Tennessee.

"Earthquake Lake" was formed from a series of earthquakes in 1811 and 1812 which formed a chasm two miles wide and 12 miles long into which the Mississippi rushed to form a lake.

Going home this weekend?

According to the state police roads should be good today, but for the return trip they are not guaranteed. Rain turning to snow today and surges Saturday will make traveling more dangerous.

The East Lansing weather bureau adds to the wintry picture by predicting falling temperatures today with a low of 18 and cold Saturday. North winds will blow at 25 miles-per-hour. Last year the high on Jan. 16 was 37 degrees. Recorded low was 20.

The weather up north looks good for skiers. Snow surges should begin today and continue until sometime Saturday.

Chest Fund Allocations Announced

New Financial Aid
Seen for Students

Allocation of Campus Chest funds was announced today by Paul Botts, Campus Chest director.

Campus Chest week is scheduled for May 4 through 9. Tentative plans for the week include an all-college talent show; Union night, in which the Union will be open with all activities free except for food; a jazz concert and dance; and a faculty auction.

For the first time, five per cent of the funds will go for a Campus Chest Student Loan Fund. This fund will be added to each year.

This year Campus Chest will give 25 per cent of its solicitations to the World Student Service Fund, an organization which assists college students throughout the world. It sets up educational centers where facilities are lacking, provides scholarships for students in need, builds dormitories for orphans to live in, builds colleges and sends some students to the United States to obtain their education.

The National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students will receive 20 per cent of Chest money. This fund helps Negro students by providing scholarships and by advising those who live in areas with prejudice where to go to school. So far 40 students have been recommended to Michigan State.

Fifteen per cent of the donations will go to the American Cancer Society for research programs. The Infantine Paralysis Fund also will receive 15 per cent.

Such organizations as the Cerebral Palsy Association, Michigan Heart Association, Michigan Epilepsy Center, and League for the Blind, will be helped indirectly with 10 per cent of Chest funds going to the Community Chest. The college YMCA and YWCA receive almost all of their funds from the Community Chest.

The Spartan Nursery, a co-operating agency on campus for caring for children of married students and veterans during the daytime, will receive 10 per cent of the solicitations. The Nursery also provides a place for students to observe child behavior.

Student Reactions Vary on Move Eliminating Two-Platoon System

By STAN KUBRAN

Michigan State students seemed to have been surprised by Wednesday's move by the NCAA to eliminate the two-platoon system of football.

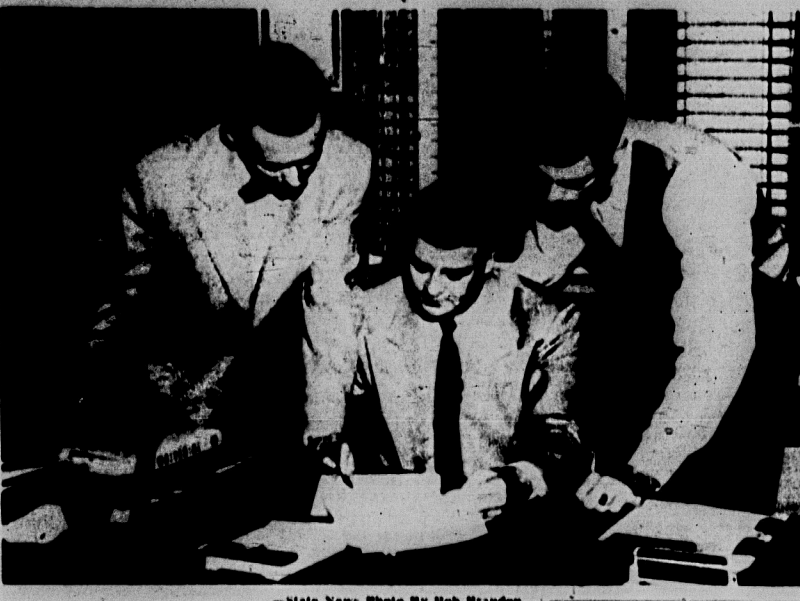

But most of them felt it wouldn't cause any drastic change in Michigan State's winning ways. Others wondered if it wasn't a direct slam at the Spartans and their winning habits.

"It sounds like our grapes on (Fritz) Crisler's part," John McVeity, Detroit sophomore, said. Crisler is the University of Michigan athletic director.

But Lynn Nowak, Ferndale sophomore, said: "State won't go to the Rose Bowl if we don't have the two-platoon system."

Williams Plea Gets Mixed Reception in Legislature

State Offices To Move Out Of Quonsets

A change of location for the Seed Laboratory of the Agriculture Department and the Historical Commission will be completed by the end of March.

Emery Foster, manager of the food and dormitory services, said that these two state departments were the last two of a group in quonset village that is being moved to the rebuilt State Office Building.

Foster said that 47 quonsets are being affected by the switch, which was begun early in December. Departments of Bank and Insurance and Conservation were the first for a change of scenery.

The five departments have been located in quonset village for two years, their change being necessitated by the burning of the original State Office Building.

According to Foster, the vacated quonset space will be used for low cost housing for youth groups visiting on campus. A group of 35 quonsets, housing the Air Force ROTC, Police Administration, Chemistry, Psychology, Sociology Department and the MSC Press, will not be affected by the new set-up.

Seniors Provide $500 High Schools to Receive Yearbooks from MSC

The senior class will donate $500 for sending Wolverines to high schools in and near Michigan, Don Marentette, vice president of the class, announced Thursday.

The donation was approved Tuesday by the Senior Council. It will be used to pay for 200 yearbooks and their distribution costs.

Roger Stinson, director of the student government High School Co-operation Committee, started the project last October. Before this year Wolverines went to high schools on a smaller scale by the yearbook staff and the office of High School Co-operation.

All but 12 of the schools are located in Michigan. Out-of-state schools receiving the 1963 yearbook are located in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana, Stinson said.

Plans call for rotating the schools receiving yearbooks so that all Michigan high schools will receive a Wolverine during a three-year period. All of the class A and most of the class B schools will be covered this year, Stinson said.

Distribution of the yearbooks will be handled by the High School Co-operation Committee. The Wolverine price was reduced to $4 a book for the project, Bob Scott, yearbook business manager, said.

Other comments were just as varied. Harry Rapson, Monroe sophomore, said: "I don't think it will help State any, but we still have enough manpower to win."

Skip Sommers, Ann Arbor junior, commented: "It will hurt the puny backs and it may hurt the team."

Art Fetters, Detroit senior, said: "I don't think it will make much difference—we still have three or four teams, anyway."

Biggie Munn, head football coach, said he would favor a one-year waiver of the NCAA's new regulation that discards the two-platoon system. "I'm looking at the problem from all sides," Munn said. "I'm thinking about the most important figures in the whole thing—the players themselves. And I don't just mean the players at Michigan State either."

Governor's Speech Hits State Deficit

Ryan Asks to End
Press Barrier

By the Associated Press

Gov. Williams' unique plea for prompt, bipartisan action by the legislature to avert state bankruptcy got a mixed reaction Thursday from the lawmakers.

Generally, the House expressed hope and cautious confidence that Williams was sincere in wanting co-operation, while the Senate was cold and critical.

Williams' 1,000-word message, delivered in person Thursday, was unique in that it dropped all the usual editorial recommendations for legislative projects and concentrated solely on the theme: "There is not a week or even a day to be wasted in coming to grips with the state deficit, expected to reach $80,000,000 by next June 30."

"The hour is very late," the governor said. "Already we are suffering some of the preliminary symptoms of financial collapse."

House Republican leaders joined in referring to Williams' address as "constructive," "sincere," and in similar adjectives. But it was another story in the Senate.

Sen. Carlton H. Morris (R-Kalamazoo), the newly-elected GOP spokesman in that chamber, declared in what was a Republican

BULLETIN

Sen. Harold M. Ryan (D-Detroit) Thursday introduced a proposed constitutional amendment in the Senate which would require the regents of the University of Michigan and the Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State College, to meet in open session whenever public property or funds are involved in their discussions.

Neither agency now permits the press or public to attend its sessions.

"policy" reply that the governor, instead of "building Michigan"—as he promised in his campaigns—actually has "bankrupted Michigan."

Morris asked the governor to note that 95 per cent of the states which have a corporation income tax also have a personal income tax and that if he pushes the former he will also get the latter.

Sen. George N. Higgins (R-Ferndale), chairman of the Senate Taxation Committee and a Special Legislative Committee studying taxes, declared Williams "is in blame for the situation we are in because he vetoed $52,000,000 worth of revenue bills. He knows who is the cause of this crisis."

Leaders of both House and Senate, however, indicated they would accept Williams' invitation to a tax discussion in his office at 9 a.m. today.

Williams told the new 67th Legislature that neither he nor it is responsible for the huge deficit, but that both must unite to eliminate it.

Saying that his tax views were well known, Williams added: "But if anyone has a better idea, I want it brought forward. I am not unwilling to listen to the viewpoints of others, and to accept as I have in the past any suggestions which appear to be in the public interest."

Student to Perform Over College Station

Alan Curtis, Lansing sophomore, will give a piano recital over WKAR at 2:15 p.m. today.

Included in the program will be "Sinfonia" from "Partita in C Minor" by Bach, "First Movement" of "Sonata in C Major" by Mozart, and Bartok's "Allegretto" and "Scherzo" from "Suite Opus 14."

Editorially Good Ol' Days?

In killing the two-platoon system, the members of the NCAA football rules committee seem to be trying to reach into the past to regain lost glory for some of the member colleges.

Although the reason for the move has been cloaked in the guise of putting football back on an even basis for all schools, this is not and cannot be the motive.

Spokesmen like Columbia's Lou Little say that the two-platoon system was too costly for small colleges to bear but then say the latest decision will rejuvenate junior varsity football.

How Mr. Little or anyone else proposes to save money by "rejuvenating" JV football is beyond the realm of our imagination. It will mean costs for uniforms, practice fields, coaches, and other essentials that will equal, and probably surpass, the cost of the two-platoon setup.

It is also interesting to note that the chairman of the NCAA group that passed the measure is none other than H. O. Fritz Crisler, mastermind of the University of Michigan's athletic fortunes.

Now that Michigan no longer "rules the West," and has lost the spotlight the gentlemen at Ann Arbor find it convenient to "bite the hand that fed them."

There are many reasons for keeping the free substitution rule and not one sound argument has been presented yet for outlawing it.

It won't make the game more interesting to fans, as the committee claims. The football fan likes scoring, colorful plays, varied offenses, and expert players at each position.

It doesn't give the game back to the players because fewer men will be able to play the game under the new conditions.

It will probably increase injuries because a player who is tired is more susceptible to injuries than a fresh, more sharply-coordinated man.

It will not cut down on recruiting, as the spokesmen claim, it will just make the bidding more competitive for high school players who are schooled in both offense and defense.

Above all, it will not level the quality of play to a position where the "haves nots" and the "haves" will compete on equal terms.

The coaches of the nation's weaker football teams and the coaches of former top teams that have tumbled are lined up behind the new rule.

Unfortunately for them, they resemble drowning men clutching at straws. They're going to look even worse in the next few years if they can't blame their defeats on the poor two-platoon system.

Tsk, Tsk, His Own Mother!

Letter to the Editor Hunt Praises Students

To the Editor: I have read your very appreciative leading editorial in the issue of Jan. 9, and I am pausing in the middle of a busy morning to thank you very much for it.

The lines of the old Persian poet, Omar Khayyam, have been running through my mind:

"The moving finger writes and having writ, Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a line."

Time has brought many changes at MSC during the last 20 years. We have expanded greatly in enrollments, in the physical plant of the college, and in our outlook.

An excellent scholar, Dr. Karl A. Stiles, will succeed me as head of the Department of Zoology.

Perhaps this is a good occasion to say something that has been in my mind for years. I have found that almost all college students are very courteous, kindly people.

In my own college days some professors thought that intimidation was necessary to secure orderly behavior from students, but my own experience proves beyond doubt that these old professors of mine were wrong.

Again I want to thank you for your very gracious and thoughtful editorial.

Sincerely yours, H. R. Hunt, Head of the Department of Zoology.

Oriental Art Lecture Stated By Professor

A second lecture in connection with the oriental art exhibit now in the Union Art Room will be given by Dr. Martin S. Soria at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Room 33.

Professor Soria is holding classes in oriental art in the gallery for the duration of the show through Jan. 25. The gallery is open to the public from 3-8 p.m. daily.

A small showing of exhibits and display designs for advertising firms is now in the student gallery of the Art Building on South Campus.

The exhibition represents the work of students from 50 schools in the United States and consists of 47 drawings selected from those submitted.

The exhibition of photographs of Japanese life entitled, "Kyoto" will continue through Jan. 27 in the corridor of the Art Department.

He will receive a gift from the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association.

In addition, he will be given a gift from the band alumni along with a leather bound book bearing the names of all contributors to the gift fund and the names of those present at the banquet. He will also receive a tape recording of the program following the banquet.

Under Professor Falcone the band has become known as one of America's foremost marching and concert organizations. Its membership has grown from 80 to 120 musicians.

Professor Falcone has been elected to the American Band Masters Association and the College Band Directors Association. He is also a member of Kappa Kappa Psi, national music fraternity, Phi Mu Alpha, national music fraternity, and is an honorary member of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association.

Skaters Add Comedy to Days' Routine of Work, Rehearsals

By PAT YABOCH
What's life like traveling over the United States as part of the chorus of an ice show, never staying more than 12 days in any town? The Ice Squires and Glamour Iceers have the answer.

"It's a lark," they all say. Especially when you are 19 to 29 and like to laugh and kid. There are plenty of both in working with Holiday on Ice of 1953. It's a life full of attractive girls who change their hair color almost as often as they change their living quarters. One of the Iceers has been a redhead, a blonde and now a combination of both; all in five months. Kids in the troupe can't even remember what color is the real one for each Glamour Iceer.

Then there are the kids that clown at every chance. Striking ridiculous poses and falling unceremoniously for the benefit of the humor of the rest of the gang.

It means working with stars like blonde 10-year-old Joan Freisinger, who'd rather play with a three-month-old poodle than watch the rehearsal or talk to an interviewer.

It also means working with Joan Hydloff, who is starring on the ice now but is studying to be a surgeon; and Jim Clark, the former trick rodeo rider; and Michael Mehan, the former Roller Skating Figure Champion. But it also means rehearsals and hard work under the direction of Rudy Richards, road manager and skater in the show.

When he yells during rehearsals, "Watch those arms. It's not calisthenics. This is a dance," all the Squires and Iceers perk up and work.

Then there are the people who always are flocking around them, visiting during free time at rehearsals, posing them in costumes for pictures and asking questions and more questions.

The Iceers and Squires' final opinion is that it's a good life for a young skater who wants to see the States and learn lots about people.

also a member of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity.

"One of my biggest jobs at MSC came when I helped Pres. Hannah in his work with the American Council on Education on the status of sports in the modern college," Denison said. "I've always been a sports fan, and basketball seems to hold the most interest for me."

"But, aside from my personal successes I may have scored at MSC, my greatest thrill has been in seeing the place grow and take its place among the great colleges of our nation. It's made me a proud and a happy man."

Graduate Assistant Jobs Still Open

Graduate assistantships on a part-time basis usually carry a stipend of $1,000 to $1,400 per month school year. Openings are available in many departments. Interested students should contact the Graduate School for details. Applications should be filed before March 1, 1953.

Michigan Perfected

By ANN McGLATHLIN

Surprisingly enough, the University of Michigan is helping to perfect the Spartans on their feet.

MSC students who have taken the preventive flu shots can thank Dr. Thomas Francis, of the U. of M., who developed the vaccine in 1944.

In 1946, Michigan State became the first college to make flu shots available to students with the help of developed vaccines, prepared by Yale University by the time Michigan, however, had the flu credit for being first.

Charles Holland of the MSC Center later corrected the error.

MSC has not had an influenza epidemic since 1946, a year after the error.
