Chaucer's Views Cited By Coghill

Medieval Marriage Highlights Topic

By JACKIE OLDFHAM

The perennial topics of women and marriage were given a Medieval twist when distinguished visiting lecturer, Nevill Coghill reviewed them through the eyes of Chaucer Wednesday night in the Music Auditorium.

Chaucer, and the Tricks of Marriage" was the title of Coghill's talk at an open meeting of the Lit Club.

Dr. Arnold Williams, associate professor of English, introduced the eminent Chaucerian authority from Oxford University.

Beginning with an apology for picking such a broad topic for a short lecture, Coghill launched into an interesting and partly humorous discussion.

A great deal of background is needed for the understanding of the foreground of this topic," Coghill said, and began by explaining the four basic Medieval views of women.

In the view taken by the church, "virginity in sex, said Coghill.

Wifehood, though "not as intrinsically honorable," and widowhood were approved by the church also, he continued.

From the aristocratic point of view a wife was chattel bound by contract to serve her lord, and except for idealistic courtly love usually involving another's wife, "love was ruled out."

From the bourgeois view, Coghill commented, one usually found that "things pleasing to husbands were also pleasing to God."

The ideas expressed by the country people in "Canterbury Tales" were the fourth main Medieval trend of thought, Coghill brought out.

Pointing out that he always found a "special tenderness in Chaucer" at mention of the Madonna, and explaining that there had always been a surplus of women in Europe which led many into convents, Professor Coghill indicated Chaucer's attitude on chastity.

Chaucer managed to see all the important lines of thought that had been prevalent in Europe on the subject of women. Nowhere are they more amusingly or feelingly expressed," he concluded.

Army Tiff Against 2 Dismissed Carr, Hensel Vindicated

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Republicans on the McCarthy-Army investigating subcommittee threw out all charges against Francis P. Carr and H. Straube Hensel Wednesday in the face of heated cries of "whitewash" from the Democrats.

The charges against Carr and Hensel were dismissed over the objections, also, of Joseph N. Welch, counsel for the Army.

The 4-3 vote on Carr and Hensel came after Army officials rested their case in the 21st day of the televised public hearings and Roy M. Cohn, chief aide to Sen. McCarthy, was sworn in to lead off his side's testimony today.

Sen. Symington (D-Mo.), one of the three Democrats opposing the dismissal of charges against Carr and Hensel, declared "I think this is a whitewash and I do not think we will get the truth."

Symington announced he would appeal the action to the full Senate and would move for a further investigation by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The GOP majority, however, held there had been no proof of "pressure" charges against Carr, staff director of McCarthy's permanent investigations subcommittee, or of "blackmail" charges against Hensel, an assistant secretary to defense.

Thus the inquiry, now likely to end next week, narrowed to McCarthy and Cohn on one side of Army Stevens and Army Counselor John G. Adams on the other.

The vote absolved the moon-faced Carr, who hasn't said a word in public since the hearings began, of Army charges that he, Cohn and McCarthy tried by improper means to get preferential treatment for Pvt. G. David Schine.

Likewise the vote cleared the 6-foot-4 Hensel of McCarthy's counter-charge that he masterminded the Army allegations in the hope of warding off an investigation of his World War II activities in connection with a shipbuilding firm.

McCarthy agreed to the dismissal of the charges against Hensel. But he said he was not withdrawing a word of his charges.

He said he'd accept their dismissal in the light of President Eisenhower's directive last week pulling out testimony about the role of executive department officials in the row with McCarthy.

Among the characteristics of a good teacher, required to meet the qualifications of the award, are enthusiasm for and knowledge of the subject matter, intellectual stimulation, sincere interest in students and their problems, and the ability to relate teaching to the practical workings of the American democratic society.

An innovation this year was the presentation of engraved gold watches to the seven other finalists, representing each of the undergraduate schools.

They are: Dr. Richard A. Fennell, professor of zoology, science and arts; Dr. Austin Moore, associate professor of humanities, Basic College; Prof. Wilda Bolles, assistant professor of social work, Business and Public Service; Prof. Alfred H. Leigh, professor of civil engineering, Engineering.

Others are: Dr. Wade Brinker, professor of surgery and medicine, Veterinary Medicine; Prof. Evelyn Mansfield, associate professor of textiles, clothing and related arts, Home Economics; and Dr. G. Malcolm Trout, professor of dairy, Agriculture.

Phys Ed Professor

McCristal Wins Top Teacher Prize

A professor of men's physical education was presented the annual MSC Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching, Wednesday.

Dr. King McCristal, an MSC faculty member for 17 years, received the $500 grant at a noon luncheon in the Union.

The 47-year-old educator received his B. S. and M. A. degrees from the University of Illinois and his Ed. D. degree from Columbia University.

He came to MSC in 1937, after having been an instructor and coach of wrestling and freshman football at Illinois.

An outstanding teacher and writer in the physical education field, Dr. McCristal has been a leader in municipal recreation work. He is a past president of the State College Club, faculty news organization, and is a member of Sigma Delta Psi, Delta Theta Epsilon, Alpha Kappa Pi and Phi Delta Kappa.

In addition to the $500 award, Dr. McCristal will be presented with an engraved certificate, a gold master "S" key, and his name will be listed on a bronze Distinguished Teacher Award plaque in the Union.

The award was made by William L. Davidson, director of the MSC Fund, which sponsors the annual selection. Previous winners were Dr. David Dickson, English department (1952), and Prof. Oscar W. Fairbanks, engineering drawing department (1953).

Helicopter Flights Aid In Rescue

Cause of Blast Undetermined

QUONSET POINT, R. I. (AP)—Violent explosion and fire struck the aircraft carrier Bennington early Wednesday about 75 miles off shore, with at least 89 dead and scores injured.

It was one of the worst peacetime disasters in U. S. naval history, being exceeded only by the collision of the destroyer-mine-sweeper Hobson and the carrier Wasp in 1952 in mid-Atlantic. The

Michigan Casualties

QUONSET POINTE, R. I. (AP)—The Navy announced Wednesday night the following Michigan casualties in the disaster aboard the aircraft carrier Bennington:

Known dead: Douglas Goodrum, TN, husband of Mrs. Priscilla Goodrum, 15780 Alden St., Detroit; Emory D. Perdell, ensign, son of Mrs. Don Perdell, 14865 Menasha, Detroit.

Gerald James Witvoet, LTJG, son of Corniel G. Witvoet, 945 Josan St., S. E., Grand Rapids.

Seriously injured are: Cecil J. Harris, SD1, son of Mattie Harris, 1224 20th St., Detroit; Alfred Olivari, SA, son of Albert Olivari, Route 1, Detroit.

Other casualties: 178 missing or dead.

The 32,000-ton Bennington was northbound in serene seas under a sunlit sky when the big ship was shaken by a loud explosion.

"We had just completed our first successful launching of the first of our air groups," said the Bennington's new skipper, Capt. W. F. Raborn Jr. of Oklahoma City, when suddenly an explosion shook the forward part of the ship down on the second or third deck.

Realizing a catastrophe had occurred, Capt. Raborn ordered the rest of the air group to free the decks for casualty control.

Secretary of the Navy Charles Thomas flew in from Washington and after conferring with Capt. Raborn said he had ordered an investigation of the tragedy.

No Coercion For Donations

Soliciting for the United Hospital Expansion Fund will begin Tuesday. MSC's quota of the $4 million goal is $88,350 payable over a three-year period.

A suggested donation scale for college staff members has been computed, with pledges figured on a pro rata basis according to salary.

It is not, Jack Breslin, drive director for the college, emphasized that the suggested giving scale is merely that: a suggestion for giving.

Advocate pledges for MSC employes are only half of what Lansing and East Lansing workers are being asked to give.

No employe will be told how much to give, and no soliciting will be done at residences.

To meet its quota, MSC must have 100 per cent participation. The college goal is slightly more than 30 per cent of the $290,000 assigned to government and education.

This percentage is based on MSC's total number of permanent employes in comparison to those of Lansing and area towns, the county, state and federal governments.

Payroll deductions may be obtained on monthly, quarterly, semi-annual or annual bases.

The drive, which ends June 11, is being waged because Lansing has a present shortage of 270 beds, according to a federal government formula for industrial areas.

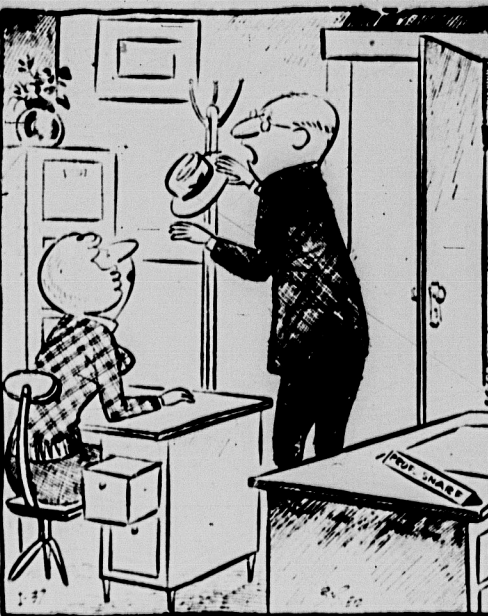

The shortage is due to the community's growth in the past 20 years, a growth caused to a great extent by MSC's expansion.

Last year, 729 employes of Michigan State used Lansing hospital facilities. No college employe may use the student health center.

The "pressure" being put on college staff members to donate is no greater than any social pressure citizens exert on others to do what they think is right.

As drive directors say, hospitalization insurance, however valuable in itself, does not provide the hospital bed that isn't there.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Biber

"Call 'Visual Aids' and see if they have a movie they can show my class—I just don't feel like lecturing today."

From the Night Desk Take Five

By BETTY ZUEGE, State News Asst. Night Editor

Student government has done it again—moved that is, or rather, expanded into a new office.

This time it's up to the Union's fourth floor in the old Town Girl's Room, of all places. Most of the executive departments are housed there now.

And members even have a radio. It once belonged to Forest Akers of the State Board of Agriculture.

It's the second move for the big executives this year. Last fall they just overflowed into the office on Publications Row next to their own.

Wonder if they've got any more ideas for expansion along the row. Maybe State Newsers had better sit tight. They might find themselves sitting at typewriters out on the corner of Abbott and Grand River.

Come to think of it, that might not be a bad idea for spring term.

All this expansion business reminds me of the day a few years back when reporters stumbled on Gaylord Sheets, ex-government big-wig, measuring the State News office.

And who knows? If the government keeps on growing, it may be ready for the old library building by the time the new one's completed.

Regional Aid Is Risky Business

J. M. ROBERTS JR., Associated Press News Analyst

The United States, carrying out its policy of giving regional aid wherever the neighbors are trying to prevent Communist expansion, is running a calculated risk in Central America.

Ever since the days of the old filibusters, who armed partisan groups and conducted their own rebellions, the very presence of arms in this area has constituted a threat to peace.

That was recognized very quickly in the case of Guatemala, which bought a large shipment of Communist arms.

It is not evident in the cases of Nicaragua and Honduras, which will be held accountable to the United States for the uses to which the arms, now being shipped, will be put.

However, if any of these arms, or those they might replace, should slip into the hands of filibusters, or of the exiled Guatemalans who advocate an armed rebellion to put down the Communist-led regime in their homeland, a critical situation might be created.

A civil war in that area, already being by border clashes, and a diplomatic break between Nicaragua and Guatemala, could spread into something quite different, something which might take the Marines, and more, back to the isthmus.

Secretary Dulles is making a point of the fact that the current arms shipments to Nicaragua and Honduras are being made at their request, under a U. S. negotiated assistance program, and after they have expressed fear of more heavily armed Guatemala.

This presumably will be followed by invocation of the Caracas resolution which said "domination or control" of any American state by the international Communist movement would be a threat to American peace.

Dulles said there were other nations ready to carry the ball on this point. This would deprive the Communists of any real grounds for accusing the United States of trying to force something down the throats of its neighbors.

Bermudas, Blazers Steal Coed Attention

By MARY LOU BERNECKER
Coeds will be keeping ironing boards busy the rest of the term to look fresh and neat in summer cotton skirts, blouses and dresses.

Bermuda shorts, the newest approved addition to coed wardrobes, provide a comfortable and "easy-to-care-for" casual outfit for hours free from classes. For "formal" sportswear, wool or wool and orlon combination bermudas worn with knee-length socks, sweaters, a matching sweater and white blazer have invaded the campus from the East.

The casual summertime skirt and blouse outfit is modeled by Judy Mock, Detroit freshman.

The longer length shorts in cotton poplin, sailcloth and denim in bright colors, plaids and checks will also be seen for picnics, canoeing and afternoon loafing.

For class wear, mixing and matching short sleeved and sleeveless blouses with yards of figured or paintbox colored skirts worn over full crinoline or nylon petticoats, will keep coeds cool and attractive.

Date dresses come styled like the girl dresses with high necks and Peter Pan collars, and fashions which start with a dress-length skirt patterned after dad's are belted at the waist to show a trim figure. Squaw dresses of Indian print material are also popular.

Scotch plaid cottons worn with white pique coats, sun dresses topped with boleros and pastel linen suits are perfect for Sunday and other dress-up occasions.

With the long Memorial Day weekend ahead, beach bags will be carrying the popular cotton swimsuits which are shown this year in scotch plaid, floral, abstract art and print patterns. The suits are inexpensive and serviceable so coeds can afford several for sun-decking, trips to lakes around East Lansing and weekend excursions.

"How are we ever going to get along without them?" worries the underclassmen.
For there's something about a senior that inspires awe. Maybe it's just their confident look or sureness about how things are done. Whatever it is, underclassmen are positive that nobody can ever take their place.

Yet before you know it, the struggling freshman develops into the first string quarterback, the best reporter is an editor and the noisy kid grows into the hall monitor "grillhound of the week."

Yes, it happens every spring. Call it growing up or coming out-it was still rightly stated by Tennessee who said:
"The old order changeth, yielding place to new."
So, seniors, you may be swinging out this week—but the returning empty swings are ours.

For cool sleeping, shortie nighties or dad's shirt with matching shorts are the perfect answer.

Footwear stresses the bare look to accent tanned legs and feet. Especially popular are strap sandals in pastel pink, blue and yellow high heels, or flats to give clothes an "outfit" look. Hats will have tiny bands of flowers or big floppy brims. Pastel handbags match your shoes and seamless knee-length hose complete the bare-legged look.

For summer make-up, a deeper shade of powder will be necessary to blend with tans, and vivid pink or coral lipstick and nail polish also favor new colorings and clothes.

Floral scents and other light perfumes to blend with the flowers on campus are perfect for the final touch to a new spring appearance.

Nine to Work on Subcommittees

Students Appointed to Head All-College Centennial Groups

By BETTY ZUEGE
Nine Spartans will be members of all-college Centennial subcommittees next year.

Roy Rider, Centennial student chairman, named eight to the committee posts Wednesday. Four of the nine will also head student subcommittees.

All-college committees and their members are: awards and citations, Don Harmer, Grand Rapids senior; public information, Bev Busch, Royal Oak Junior; transportation, Sallie Stewart, Detroit Junior.

Student representative to the housing and food committee will be announced later, Rider said.

Five of the appointees, Miss Busch, Miss Stewart, Miss Brines, Eyde and Serpa, are also members of the seven-man Student Centennial Commission.

The subcommittees work directly under the faculty-alumni Centennial planners in coordinating all activities of 1955.

Heads of the four new all-student groups to operate under the subcommittees and in connection with the Student Centennial Commission are Harmer, Eyde, Miss Stewart and Miss Brines.

Harmer will take charge of an awards committee to set up criteria for choosing individuals for special recognition by the student body. According to Rider, the awards will be presented at Centennial events throughout the year.

A talent bureau committee will be under Eyde's leadership. The committee will form a bank of student talent including speakers and entertainers.

Talent chosen for the bureau will be available to both on and off-campus groups in 1955. Colored slides of the campus and activities may also be obtained for alumni club meetings, conventions and banquets.

Rider said the committee will decide later on a system for choosing the talent.

As head of a student Guiding Service, Miss Stewart's work will include organizing a training program for student guides. The guides will be needed for all Centennial events, Rider said. Fourth of the new committees is the hospitality group headed by Miss Brines. Members of the committee will help with registration and receptions in 1955 programs.

Students will be appointed to the four committees by the respective chairmen, Rider said. They might be named for the jobs this term, he said.

In making his appointments, Rider stressed the importance of the entire student body in the Centennial celebration.

The impression that visitors get of Michigan State will depend on the friendliness, courtesy and thoughtfulness of each student," he said.

Adm. John Hoskins, who lost his right leg in the Pacific, directed the helicopter rescue operations.

He said the exact location of the explosion was not known but that it probably was in the general vicinity of the wardroom. In naval parlance the wardroom is "officers' country." If this proved true, casualties among the officers might be high.

Hoskins said he didn't believe there was any possibility of sabotage but that such an angle will be investigated along with every other.

Secretary Thomas said a naval board of inquiry will meet today. He said search for bodies in the Bennington still was continuing.

Tales of heroism unfolded after the carrier docked here about 11:30 p.m.

Grim lines of crewmen, their faces smoke-grimed and oxygen masks hung over their shoulders, lined the deck of the carrier when she docked.

Scores of ambulances and stretchers waited to spring into instant action in getting the injured to hospitals.

Helicopters had taken off some of the more seriously wounded as the Bennington moved slowly toward shore. They were landed in a field near the Newport Naval Hospital.

Ens. Robert Grant of Brooklyn, N. Y., unimpaired of raw bleeding ankles, directed the evacuation of the injured.

"This was worse than war," he said with a tight-lipped, strained expression.

He told of the explosion blowing in a hatch and of "five guys" vanishing in the terrific blast.

"Thank God, I had my clothes on." His hair and eyebrows were singed.

Dr. Coghill To Present Final Talk

Naval Coghill, distinguished visiting lecturer from Oxford University, will speak to members of Tau Sigma tonight at 8:30 in 34 Union.

"Can We Miss a Mother's Love?" will be the title of Coghill's talk.

Tau Sigma is the science and arts and business and public service honorary.

The talk will be one of Dr. Coghill's last appearances before he leaves MSU.

A fellow at Exeter College in addition to his teaching in English literature and lecturing at Oxford, Dr. Coghill has prepared text and was technical consultant for the film "The Front Page."

Dr. Coghill directed the spring term play, "The Winter's Tale," and has been director and consultant for the Oxford University Dramatic Society.

He was director of production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Haymarket in 1951 and "Pilgrims Progress" at Covent Garden in 1952.

Art Department's Student Exhibition To Begin Today

Works by MSU artists will go on view today when the art department's annual Student Exhibition opens in the Union Art Gallery and in the Art Building on South Campus.

The exhibition includes oil paintings, drawings, sculpture, jewelry, handicrafts and industrial design. It will close July 8.

In the Art Building until June 14 will be an exhibition entitled "Variations on a Theme by Rubens." The original painting of "The Marriage of Saint Catherine" is shown, with seven abstract variations of the picture.

An exhibit by Janada Brown, 18-year-old student, will be shown in the Little Gallery in the Art Building until June 4.

Yearbook Handout Continues Today

Distribution of 1954 Wolverine will continue today in the Union Book Store from 10 to 12 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m.

10 cards must be presented by each recipient of the yearbook, according to Doug Coulter, promotion chairman.

A total of 1,700 yearbooks were distributed Wednesday, the first day of distribution, Coulter said.

Starting today, sales will begin for the 1955 Centennial Wolverine Yearbooks. They must be ordered before publication.

Big Sister Meeting Scheduled for Tonight

Sophomore junior and senior girls participating in the "Big Sister" program for incoming freshmen girls will meet in the Union Ballroom at 7:30 tonight.

Sponsored by AWS Activities Board, the meeting will include a discussion on the problems of freshmen girls by Mrs. Dorothy Ross of the Counseling Center.

Firemen Answer Call To Alpha Phi House

East Lansing firemen answering a call to the Alpha Phi house at 4 a.m. Wednesday, found an overheated water heater was the cause of the alarm.

After an investigation, everything was under control within 15 minutes, according to the fire department.

Congress

The government appropriated $670 two years ago to make the shoes free for MSU students. A new appropriation will be needed next year if the service is to continue.

The divestment of Campus Chest from student government proper brought more divided opinion.

Hagadorn, Campus Chest treasurer this year, advocated giving the organization a chance at independence. He proposed a one-year probationary period.

Both Hurst and Suber called for drawing Campus Chest more closely to the government.
