Foreign Pals Offer Recipes

By PAT HAASE

Ever eaten octopus legs boiled with onions? 'Costas Apostalakis, a Greek foreign exchange student, has an excellent recipe for preparing them.

In order to make this delectable dish, one must have several legs of the smaller varity of octopus. These legs are boiled until tender, and to them a few onions are added. This is boiled until the onions are tender and then is served hot.

In Liberia, Edward Benson's favorite dish is vegatable stew. To make it, okra, tomatoes, green peppers, and chicken must be fried separately and then each vegetable added, one at a time, to the chicken. Fry this all together and cook in a pressure cooker for about 20 minutes. Season to taste and serve hot as a main dish.

Chosei Kabira, a MSC student from Okinawa, gives us a well-known Japanese recips, called Sukiyaki. Beef, vegetables, bean lard; onions, cabbage, and shungiku, a chrysanthemum-like vegetable, are used freely to make it. These ingredients are mixed together, cooked, and Jon Albertsson, who is a long way from his home in Iceland, tells about the preparation of pickled whale meat. The choice slices or "Hyalur und Rengi" of the whale, are boiled for two or three hours and then put in tube containing a souring liquid. After these slices of meat are allowed to soak for over two months, they can be removed when needed.

A long way from Iceland is China, the home of Lenore Ho, who gives her recipe for making arimp.

Shimp, coconuts, lard, green mions, flour, fresh milk, curry newder, chopped ginger, lemon uses, and salt are the ingred-up the coconut meat and pour its milk over it. While this is draining dry, clean the shrimp and cook the green onions until almost transparent. Add flour and curry powder to the onions and stir. Then add the coconut and fresh milk. Cook this, add the charmans. low heat for 30 minutes. Season to taste and serve hot.

Kirsten Pedersen tells about her favorite dish from Denmark. Frikadeller is made with equal parts of ground veal and pork, oatmeal, eggs, salt and pepper, onion, and milk mixed together. This mixture is rolled into small balls, fried, and served as a meat dish.

These are only a few of the delicious sounding, tasty recipes of foreign lands, so don't grimace when someone mentions a... strange dish. Our hamburgers are just as strange to the people on the other side of the world.

Editorially Day of Death?

Fourth of July, this once celebrated Independence Day, has proved to be a day of death. The accidents which occur on this specific date each year have steadily risen.

Last year the National Safety Council predicted 290 traffic deaths. The final result was 262 persons killed in autos over the holiday weekend. Also 202 drownings resulted; and this a supposed Independence Day! Independence from what? Life and its joyous qualities?

Do you, the student, the professor, the working man and man, and the average American citizen, realize that 434 weekend deaths occurred last year?

However, it seems that the celebration of our Independence Day can no longer be carried out in terms of family get-togethers, park picnics, and real old-fashioned fun to celebrate the true meaning of this event—Our Freedom. This only proves once again that Americans cannot go into mass motion on a holiday week-end without involving themselves in tragic mishaps.

Law enforcement officers try each year to prevent these accidents by means of strict law enforcement, heavier fines and end to ticket fixing, but with little success. Norwalk, Connecticut was the only city to end the year 1953 without a fatality, and certainly they don't celebrate their week-ends any differently than we do.

Would Thomas Jefferson, the author of the great document that we honor on the Fourth, be pleased if he could look upon the hideous occurances on this day of great meaning? And what about Ben Franklin and John Hancock? Do you suppose they, the fathers of our country, would be proud of us?

We leave this thought to you, Joe Citizen.

What are you going to do?

Major League : Processor Or Major Flop?

Underneath the glory and joy of a college student accepting a contract from a Major League Baseball Team, lies a tremendous problem.

John Kobs has been MSC baseball coach for 30 years and is president of the American Association of College Baseball coaches.

For a number of years he also has been against the policy of Major Leagues signing men while in college.

He said that around 30 undergraduate men had won awards of some kind since 1946, and only two had made the Major Leagues—Robin Roberts and Hobert Landrith.

some kind since 1946, and only two had made the Major Leagues—Robin Roberts and Hobert Landrith.

His prime reason for such strong concern on this point was that the possibilities of breaking into big time baseball are very limited. So, if a student player graduated from college first, made an attempt in the Major League and failed, he could use his college degree to work on his first choice of a career.

Many players accept a contract before graduation. They aren't big stars and a downfall is approaching. Had they graduated, they might have gone on in engineering, dentistry or medical work. But the majority of these men never return. Some of them find success, granted. But what about the others? Do they turn to factory work?

This could be prevented if the baseball players accepting contracts would really have an honest to goodness outlook on the future.

Their coach is a man of 30 years of experience who understands the problems of his teams and many individuals. We're with you, John. The love for your work and your men could never be measured in dollars and cents.

Here's to an outstanding coach, with high ideals, and a thought of the future for "his boys."
