Coleman Attacks Williams For Pressing Legislature

Governor Says Heat Is Needed

Government Forum Opens

BY MARGARET FULLER Gov. G. Mennen Williams' actions in putting pressure on the state legislature Tuesday came under attack by state Sen. Creighton R. Coleman (R-Battle Creek). Coleman accused the governor of "trying to make it hot for the legislature." In the first panel discussion of the forum in state and local government at Michigan State, Coleman, Republican caucus leader in the senate, said "The governor must work with the legislature instead of putting on the heat."

Viet Nam Assistance Is Essential

Barrows Calls For Long-Range Aid

Security for the strife-torn Viet Nam, was described last week as the top priority item in American assistance to the new Indo-Chinese republic. Leland Barrows, director of the U.S. operations mission in Viet Nam, in a press conference last Thursday called for a long-range aid program for Viet Nam. Terminating Indo-China a hot spot in the cold war, Barrows said he did not expect it would turn into a shooting war.

He cited terrorist incidents by anti-Diem sects following the April uprising. "I don't foresee any more civil war in the city," Barrows said. The Viet Nam mission head, who left Saigon about a month ago, conferred with university officials while on campus. Nine more Michigan State specialists were to leave at the end of June for Viet Nam as part of the U.S. mission in Saigon.

The Foreign Operations Administration's two-year contract with Michigan State calls for $1,800,000 in technical assistance. In addition to military and economic aid, assistance is being given in agriculture, education, public health, public works, police administration and public administration.

"I hope this is the beginning of a long-range program," Barrows said. It is designed to "provide the simple elements of security this year." President Ngo Dinh Diem's government now is capable of keeping order, Barrows said. A defensive army is being built to prevent border incidents.

It will be smaller than the Communist Viet Minh army. The U.S. has appropriated $220 million for military assistance for Diem's government.

Attention is being directed toward the July, 1956 election set by the Geneva agreement for determining the future of Viet Nam. The election commission may accept an election which the "U.S. would not find satisfactory," Barrows said. Representatives from Poland, Canada and India serve on the commission.

Dr. Edward W. Weidner, head of the political science department, is directing the Michigan State group in Saigon. Thirty persons will be assigned to the mission when it is complete. The program has been speeded up, Dr. Charles C. Killingsworth, head of the assistance program for Viet Nam here, said.

"In view of the urgency of the situation, we have stepped up our schedule of arrivals in Saigon so that our group may achieve maximum effectiveness as soon as possible," Killingsworth said in a prepared statement.

300,000 Books Start to Move As New Library Is Readied

No, the books aren't sick. Those stretchers are just an easy way to transfer four million books to the new library.

This is only the beginning. Three hundred thousand volumes of reserved, juveniles, home economics, and text books are being moved at the rate of 20,000 volumes a day and placed on steel shelves called stacks until they are settled in their new position.

These books are being temporarily placed on the ground floor in the north room while U.S. and U.N. documents, biography and fiction and micro-film are put in the east room.

By September 15 the first floor will be settled. This includes the card catalogs, main circulation desk, library, committee room, social science and literature, reference technical processes and a reading room for the blind.

The second floor will house the school of business, school of education, fine arts, and reserve book counter.

Physical science, biological and applied science, biology, and the Holder collection will be on the third floor. On the fourth floor will be the seminar space, lecture room, staff room, and faculty study space.

One-hundred-fifty-six thousand open cases will be divided into special science literature, micro-film and fine arts.

There are three types of divisional reading rooms planned. First there is the selected collection such as one prepared in Colorado. Second is the divisional reading room.

The stage had a realistic appearance of authentic tepees in the background. Lighting effects simulated campfire.

The Indians, a large council of Explorer Scouts, gave exhibitions of authentic Indian dances. The boys were dressed in elaborate, brightly colored, feathered costumes and were painted with ceremonial warpaint.

The most spectacular production of the evening was the eagle dance. Dressed like eagles, all the boys participated. The rhythm and timing were excellent.

The course will be concluded on Friday, July 22, with a graduation luncheon at which time certificates will be awarded.

Only members of the National Association are able to attend with a limited number set at 35. If need be the limit will be reset to 40 members. People from all over the country are to attend this course.

Among the classes included will be lectures and demonstrations covering the use of modern equipment and methods of cleaning and maintaining floor surfaces, walls and ceilings as well as a study of effective management procedures. Safety, Textiles and Furnishings and the philosophy and practice of hotel organization will be discussed in various classes also.

High School Music Students Attend Course

The 10th annual Youth Music Program being held at Michigan State from June 27-July 16, is the largest group to ever attend the three week course.

The program offers high school students the opportunity to continue their music studies during the summer, to be taught by excellent teachers and directors in their field, and the chance to live in a college atmosphere.

The 250 students that enrolled in the course live at Abbott Hall with the exception of those who live at home in Lansing. Recreation is provided by two directors who assist in making the many facilities of the campus available in the areas of sports, social dancing, parties, picnics, and student productions.

The students took theory classes on the first day to determine how advanced each was in order that each might fit in a certain group.

New Housekeeper Study Course Offered at State

Michigan State is joining the National Executive Housekeeper's Association this year in making available a course of study for hotel housekeepers. The members will have a total of 58 hours instruction. Headquarters for the institute will be Kellogg Center which is located on the campus.

The course will be concluded on Friday, July 22, with a graduation luncheon at which time certificates will be awarded.

Only members of the National Association are able to attend with a limited number set at 35. If need be the limit will be reset to 40 members. People from all over the country are to attend this course.

Mann Likes Michigan State's Adult Education Program Hailed Best

George Mann, director of adult education for California, told a Michigan State audience Friday that Michigan has the best adult education program in the nation. He made the statement at a conference of adult education leaders at its final day at Kellogg Center.

The 50 educators attending the conference came from all over the United States and from Formosa, Thailand, Iran, and Egypt. At this third annual adult education workshop, the leaders heard the state's program outlined and discussed ideas to bring back to their areas.

Four states named by Mann as having taken the lead in adult education were Michigan, Wisconsin, New York, and California. He noted that there are many states that lack a program altogether.

He pointed out that a well balanced adult education which includes vocational, creative, remedial, and straight academic courses does much to develop a better informed citizenry. New job requirements, Mann said, are creating the demand for improvement of skills. He added that programs similar to Michigan State's do much to keep population up with advancing techniques in industry.

Spartan Spirit Committee Asks Student Help

The Spartan Spirit Committee is asking for student help in preparing for next year's games and events. Although most of the work will be concerned with making pom-poms and planning rallies, some secretarial work is available. The committee has already begun to plan Centennial football game pep rallies for next year.

The "Spartan Review" will be staged at the largest rally which is to be held before the Notre Dame game. Big name entertainers are being lined up for the affair even at the present time.

Students wishing to help the Spartan Spirit Committee should contact commissioner Don Gilllette at ED 2-6183 or by note at the Student Government office.

No Coeds in European Universities Culture, Not Practicality Stressed in Foreign Schools

By VICKY MISU Methods of teaching, courses offered, length of school semester, and extra-curricular activities are all big factors in the differences between the American school system and European system, but according to foreign students who met at the International center, last Friday, the most prominent difference is the absence of coeducation in the European plan.

In most countries in the Old World, from grammar school up through high school, boys and girls attend separate schools, or if the town is small and there is but one school, boys and girls must stay on separate sides of the building. All wear uniform dress, and their course of studies are more difficult and lean toward the idea of giving all the students the same basic background including cultural training instead of training the students for their particular choice of a vocation. If a boy wanted manual training to help him in a job after he had finished school, he would have to, in most cases, go through a period of apprenticeship in his chosen field.

Half-Million Expected for Farm Show

Crowds numbering from a quarter to one-half million are expected to attend the five-day Farm Mechanization Centennial which will begin August 15. Arrangements for food, bus and trolley service, and rest stations are now in the final stages.

Under the direction of George A. Weber, 100,000 copies of the Centennial folder have been sent all over this country. 15,000 more being distributed by the Tourist and Resort Association of Michigan.

Thousands of people will be reached by the promotional material in the advertising of the Bell Telephone, Detroit Edison, and Consumers Power Companies. Articles concerning the Farm Mechanization Centennial will be printed in the top farming magazines of the nation. One of these families will be brought to the Centennial as an example of good farming people.

Those people who can not get to the Centennial will have it brought right into their homes by special radio, television, and movie programs.

Educational Standard Needed

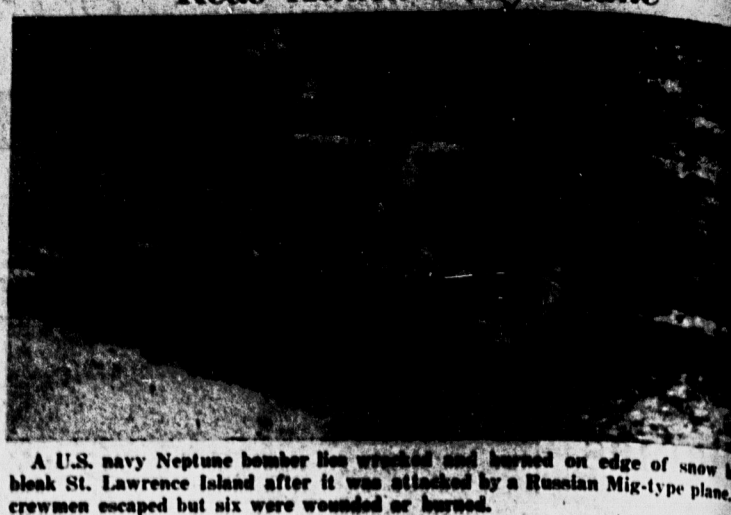

No reason was given in rebuttal during the forum on state and local government, by Senate Majority Leader...

What was not mentioned in this conversation was: 1. How the governor proposes to increase state control over education.

3. How those students in large rural areas with a small population can be given the same opportunities as their city cousins in richer and more populous places.

The answer lies in the field of a beneficial and mutual co-partnership, where the state would not wield dictatorial powers over the local school district.

To Be Cautious Is to Be Alive

Accidents are preventable. They just don't happen but are caused by the three I's of the highway— incompetence, indifference, and irresponsibility.

The 1954 Independence Day weekend saw 33 persons lose their lives on Michigan highways. During the month of July, 1953, there were 8,600 accidental deaths of these 3,188 involved a motor vehicle.

Circumstances that contribute to motor-vehicle accidents are speed, (nearly 3 out of 10 are violating a speed law), alcohol, vehicle condition, obstruction of vision, physical condition of drivers and weather conditions.

The National Safety Council says there are 59 million reasons why you should drive carefully on the Fourth of July.

That is about the number of registered motor vehicles in the United States today, and adds up to 10 1/2 million more reasons to drive carefully over the Fourth this year than on Independence Day five years ago.

Auto mishaps always lead the list of Fourth of July accidental death causes, but drowning also claims a high total on this midsummer holiday.

So if you're driving somewhere over the Fourth, take it easy. Obey all legal speed limits and keep your car under control at all times.

Let's help make this year's Fourth of July weekend a safe and sound one. Remember you may save a life and the life you save may be your own!

Rocks With a Past

Tradition and History Surround Landmarks

Two of the prettiest parts of the campus are the large rocks southwest of the Union hall and north of the Beaumont Tower.

The rock near the Tower is the Resting Rock and was left on campus thousands of years ago by a glacier which swept across Michigan. It was left on the Delta triangle that connects Michigan Avenue and Grand River.

to its present location. It was moved in the summer of 1872. Two earlier classes had tried to move the rock and were unsuccessful in doing it.

An architect was hired to engrave the donor's name on the stone and he spelled the word class with only one s. Because the engraving was centered, when the second s was added, it threw the engraving off balance.

Has Reproduced Backgrounds

Museum Is Interesting Place

By FLORENCE RICHEY
The museum is quiet, but somewhere in a back room the artist J. W. Hope, is working. Hope spends his time reproducing natural backgrounds for the habitat groups which can be found throughout the museum.

His first job is to make a manikin, the form over which he will put the skin of the animal. He starts out by making a clay model of the animal in the exact dimensions.

After this is done, the clay is covered with plaster of paris, which hardens forming a mold. The clay is taken out, as it would eventually crack, and the plaster of paris mold is left.

burlap and paper mache. After this mixture has hardened, the whole thing is submerged in water. Separation takes place, and the hardened paper mache and burlap mixture is the finished manikin.

The skin is then stretched over the model, an artificial eyes are put in, and the animal is complete.

He has already drawn a small sketch of the scene where the animal was captured, and will now paint a large mural from it. Any pine trees that are going to be in the scene have been preserved. Every leaf is exactly like those at the place of the animal's capture, as wax molds were made of them. Everything possible is done to make it natural, giving the museum a serene and restful atmosphere.

Hope started this type of work when there was a lot of it to be done. There are not too many of these kinds of jobs left.

The bench in front of the Rock is called the Engagement Bench, and only engaged couples are supposed to sit on it. It is believed that the custom of the bench began after 1900 because before that State was primarily a boy's school.

The Halfway Rock near the Union was first located midway between Lansing and the campus, on Michigan Avenue. Legend says that a bird flew by and dropped a cherry pit into a tree and students have stopped and rested in its shade ever since.

In the late 20's a building was built on the rock's site and the rock had to be removed. Dr. Frank S. Kedzie hearing of the rock's removal had it placed on campus.

The stone which is now less than one-fourth of its original size has this poem (written by Frank Hodgman, '62, inscribed on it.

When half the toilsome way was passed,
We rested by the stone;
Within whose cleft a cherry pit had,
Taken root and grown.
The cleft was not so very wide,
Just half an inch or so.
The little tree scarce touched its side,
Some forty years ago.

Ohlson Elected Head Of Home Ec Society

Dr. Margaret A. Ohlson, head of the foods and nutrition department at Michigan State, was elected national president of Omicron Nu, national honor society for home economics at their biennial meeting last Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

This 20th convolve was held at Michigan State in connection with the school's centennial.

Elected to the post of treasurer was Dr. Christine Newark of the school of home Economics, Ohio State University, with Dr. Martha J. Karner from the school of home economics, Kansas State College taking over the job as editor.

Dr. Newark is a Michigan State graduate. Tenure of office for the three posts are from 1955 through 1957.

At the convolve, the feature event was the banquet held Saturday evening. Dr. Thomas H. Hamilton, Dean of the basic college at Michigan State, gave the major address entitled "The Excellent Foppery of the World."

Friday evening a picnic supper was held honoring the founders and alumnae of Omicron Nu. Miss Katherine Hart, head of the department of institution administration, Michigan State, was toastmistress and speaker for the supper, speaking on "They Had an Idea."

Omicron Nu was started in 1912, with the first student chapter being established here at East Lansing. Today there are 39 chapters, representing some 28 states, and membership totalling 16,114. It is open to men and women in the field of home economics.

The students were asked, too, if they had much difficulty in adjusting to American type food after first coming here, to which they stated, "a little." They also made comments on the food served in the dorms, most of them running along the lines that "You just get used to it."

During the school term, the number of foreign students at State number usually around 300, with the number attending the summer sessions less than half this amount. The total registration for this summer's six week and nine week sessions is 117. The majority of this number are students that attend State during the fall term, too.

The different countries represented total 35, with the highest representation from one country totalling 16 from Columbia, South America. Canada's total is 15, with India numbering 14. China, Thailand, and the Ryukus each have six, and Germany has five.

Charlotte M. Young of Cornell University, as president, has been prominent in the field of home economics. Her achievements included the receiving of the Borden Foundation award, which is presented annually to a nutritional scientist by the American Home Economics Association for outstanding work in human nutrition.

Her new weight reduction diet developed in the State foods and nutrition departments, brought national attention to her in 1951.

She has also written numerous articles for professional bulletins and journals.

E. Lansing Cited By Safety Council

A plaque from the National Safety Council was presented to East Lansing a week ago Wednesday for outstanding achievement in public safety education during 1954.

The presentation was made at the last meeting of the season of the Greater Lansing Safety Council. The luncheon meeting was held at the Home Dairy, Lansing's mayor, Ralph W. Crego, presented the award to Mayor Max Strother of East Lansing.

This is the seventh time that the city of East Lansing has received the award in all fields of safety department activities, safety education, programs, and public presentation.

Another Sparty

Do you know where this "Sparty" is? It's somewhere in the vicinity. Last week's picture of the light was taken at the Grand River entrance to the mill. All other lights on the Union are after-dropped.

France Visits State in Play 'La Parisienne'

France is coming to Michigan State via the summer term play about Paris, 1885. It will be presented July 23 through 25 in the ballroom of the Union Building. The play will be under the direction of Roger Busfield, instructor in the Speech Department. Last February for the Agricultural Conference, Busfield wrote and directed a play entitled "Michigan Gold Rush." However this is his first try at a term play at State, for he has only been here one year.

The play, "La Parisienne" (The Woman of Paris) by Henri Becque is a three act comedy about the gaiety of Paris in 1885 when everyone was gay, wild, and restless.

Those chosen for the leading parts were the following: Dora Arnet as Clotilde, Frank Serresonne as DuMesnil, Robert Jones as Lafont, Ronald Johnson as Simpson, and Louis Tobin in the role of Adieu.

"La Parisienne" is the story of what a man's wife will do to further him in politics. The maid shows how worked people really can be.

(continued from Page 1) forties in both houses of the Legislature since 1936, the Republicans could have passed any bill they wanted, he said.

"I've fought for the foster care bill for five years against Democrats," Coleman retorted. "I think it is an important program."

Republican support of the fair employment practices bill came "out of sincere conviction" and not from "fear of the executive office," Senator Coleman stated.

Hart called for a greater role for the lieutenant governor in state government in order to attract better persons to the job. He referred to it as a stepping stone for the governorship.

Forum

"The only real significance (of the lieutenant governor's post) is standing by if anything happens," Hart said.

Making the legislature a full-time job was suggested by Coleman. He said it was hard to justify enlarging the staff of the legislature on a full-time basis because the legislature operates on a part-time basis.

"Every time you increase the staff you have to increase taxes," he said.

Michigan government is below the national average in the number of state employees hired on a per capita basis, Governor Williams said. He termed the executive staff "terribly overworked."

"Legislators don't have the business to do a decent job," the governor said. "I don't think the legislature are adequately paid."

Hart suggested that the house should confirm the governor's appointments instead of the senate.

Coleman's reply was that "the senate is closer to the people often than the house or the governor."

The senate gives effective representation of minorities, he said.

Trailer Tour

Twenty-two of the latest style trailers will be on display August 15 through 20, in the farm mechanization show at Michigan State. Although the mobile homes will not be open to the public till then, they will be ready for group tours during July.

Bluem's 'Martha' Wins

A. William Bluem, an instructor in radio-TV writing at Michigan State, won a national award for his short play, "A Cake for Martha." The prize was awarded him in a playwriting contest sponsored by the Huntington Park Civic Theater of Huntington Park, California.

Previously, Bluem had won two awards in the writing field. He won first prize in a national television drama contest held by Columbia Broadcasting System in 1950. More recently, he was prize winner in the annual Communications Award sponsored by the University of Illinois.

Bluem's play will be produced by the Huntington Park Civic Theater on July 14 and 15.
