Brilliance, Ease Mark Term Play Production

By JOE HOFFMAN
State News Night Editor

If witchcraft was practiced as charmingly in the olden days as it was on the Fairchild Theatre stage Thursday night, it is doubtful that it would ever have been outlawed.

In Bell, Book and Candle, the fall term play which opened a three-night stand, the rather difficult art was performed with ease and brilliance.

The John Van Derten comedy certainly lived up to its expectations, with a nearly full house enjoying every moment of it.

The cast of five humans and one animal all performed magnificently, with special praise going to Dixie Auxter and John Jacobson.

A special meeting of the board has been set for Tuesday to interview applicants for the post.

In discussing the resignation, the board went on record as encouraging new ideas for the content of the Spartan and modified the appointment system to allow prospective editors to express their ideas for changes.

Those interested in applying for the position should contact Mabel McMurtry, director of student publications on the third floor of the Union.

Those who will be expected to make a letter stating their qualifications for the position and any changes may have for changes in the magazine. Letter deadline is Nov. 11.

An interview system has been set for applicants to have their views before the board to make the decision.

Gillian's New York City apartment was the setting for the interview.

Many Memorials Mirror MSU Traditions

By MARY LOU QUIGLEY

What makes a memorial or a monument? Sometimes there is a bronze plaque stating exactly why a statue was set or why a bust was made. Often, however, nothing but tradition makes one tree any different from any other tree, or any building more sacred than another.

Harold W. Lautner, head of the Department of Landscape Architecture, pointed out that MSU has many memorials and monuments, but to his knowledge, a complete listing of them has never been made.

Some of them are undoubtedly familiar to all. For example, Beaumont Tower. This carillon tower around which all campus buildings were erected in 1928 on the site of the first classroom building on the campus.

The other is "Honoring

Dawson vs. Morrall

Boilermakers Await Revengeful Spartans

By JACK BERRY
State News Night Editor

The names of Lenny Dawson, Lamar Lundy, Bill Murakowski, Earl Morrall, Clarence Peaka, Walt Kowalezyk and Gerry Planutis bring to mind offensive strength and scoring potential.

However, in the latest statistics released by the Big Ten, Purdue ranks first in defense and Michigan State is second. The Spartans are fourth in the conference offensively. Purdue is fifth.

The referee points out that the Boilermakers' defensive rank is due to ball control. Coach Stu Holomich's squad has allowed their opponents an average of only 52 plays per game.

Against Wisconsin last week the Spartans had only 58 plays from scrimmage. The final score was 27-8.

In their six games this season the Spartans have averaged 58 plays per game to 68 for the opponents.

The difference is that once State had possession of the ball it didn't take them long to score. In those six contests, Spartan scoring drives have averaged 4.2 plays.

Three drives have consumed 10 plays while the others ranged down to one.

Saturday's action will pit the conference's two leading passers against each other. Dawson has thrown almost four times as many passes as Morrall but the Spartan signal caller has a better average (5.9 to 5.8) and fewer interceptions (3 to 9).

In total offense, Morrall has averaged 7.2 yards per play while Dawson has a 5.5 record. Dawson, like most strictly passing quarterbacks, has a minus rushing mark of 21 yards while Morrall has gained 98 yards on the ground.

The Boilermakers' leading runner, Murakowski, has carried 61 times in conference competition this year gaining 252 yards. State's Kowalezyk has had only 36 rushes yet he has compiled 254 yards and a 7.1 average gain in the Big Ten.

But it is not Purdue's running game that is expected to give the Spartans the most trouble as they attempt to knock off the team that has beaten them two years in a row.

Off-Campus Students Vote Spartacade Support

By DONN SHELTON
State News Managing Editor

The "I Like Spartacade" parade grew larger Thursday night when the Assn. of Off-Campus Students voted to actively support the annual spring carnival.

In a resolution that passed unanimously at its 10th anniversary meeting, the Assn. also commended PanHel for its stand on Spartacade and voted that its own participation in the carnival be exclusive support of the carnival.

Earlier Thursday PanHel had lost at least temporarily, the support of the MST Veterans Assn., a factor that figured heavily in Wednesday night's decision by the sorority group to back Spartacade.

At the Wednesday meeting Spartan Beta, PanHel's president, told the Assn. representatives that the veterans would actively support PanHel's booking of students.

Tuesday Bruce Ferris, president of the veterans group, denied Miss Beers' statement that personal and family funds had been used to support PanHel's booking of students.

The train will leave the Michigan Field House at 6:30 Saturday morning.

Campus Chest will issue one free andoughout train fare.

Game seat tickets will be exchanged on the train for the game stub attached to the triple purpose ticket.

The train will leave the Michigan Field House at 6:30 Saturday morning.

Spartan Spirit, sponsor of the trip, will pass out song sheets to encourage group singing on the trip.

The train will arrive in Detroit approximately two hours before kick-off time and leave immediately after the game ends.

Singing will take the spotlight on the return trip and will be accompanied by a banjo player and an accompaniment meandering through the train to aid the singers.

The train will arrive in downtown Lansing at 11:30 Saturday night.

Buses will be available for the return trip to the campus according to Spartan Spirit officials.

Worst Clash Since '48 War

Casualty Reports Differ; U. S. Seeks Peace Talks

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israel and Egypt Thursday reported hard fighting between their forces for possession of a frontier checkpoint in the Sinai Desert. There were casualties on both sides, but the figures differed widely, and almost every aspect of the fighting was in dispute.

EGYPTIAN troops and officials have not given their account of the battle, described here as the most serious since the Palestine war of 1948. Britain Thursday held Israel responsible for starting the fighting.

The Israelis said they killed 50 Egyptians and captured 10 while losing two killed and 10 wounded.

The Egyptians said they lost 200 Israeli soldiers and 100 missing, not killed.

An Israeli army spokesman said there was no truth whatever in the report of 200 Israeli dead.

The fighting, which started Wednesday night, was for the strategic El-Sabaa post in the El-Auja Nizana demilitarized zone. The Israeli Foreign Ministry said the post is in Israeli territory and the Egyptians insist it is in theirs.

Arriving the Egyptians of besieging El-Sabaa in violation of the armistice peace treaty attacked and seized the post Wednesday night. Through the Israeli Foreign Ministry announced the Egyptian invaders had been expelled from Israeli territory.

The Egyptians indicated there was action by warplanes but the Israeli announcement made no mention of air operations.

The fighting came less than 24 hours after David Ben-Gurion had taken office again as Israeli premier with an offer to meet Arab leaders in an attempt to end the increasingly dangerous strife between Israel and Arab states.

Arab League sources replied that Ben-Gurion's proposal was useless because the Arab states will continue to avoid direct talks on the ground they would imply recognition of the Israeli state.

House members were surprised at the overwhelming support given the extended program. It was far more than the program which Gov. G. Mennen Williams originally urged legislators to pass.

The Senate also passed a bill that would make a moratorium to voluntarily integrate Michigan's tests of nuclear weapons safe.

A State Department spokesman said the Senate bill, if signed, would provide $200 million for the program.

In Cairo and Washington, however, Arab leaders challenged Ben-Gurion's sincerity.

Statements from Egyptian officials in Cairo and from Egypt's embassy in Washington contended the former fighting which started Thursday was planned even in such cases where evidence could have to be submitted to prove numbers.

Ferris said there was a good chance the veterans would vote in favor of supporting PanHel's stand but pointed out there are many points to be cleared up first.

Thursday night members of the AOCS Executive Board took the same view of limiting their Spartacade participation to PanHel.

Chaired by members of both groups, a program is to discuss over the matters of participation of membership for actual work, funds, timing for the combined groups and competition among members of one organization.

The AOCS board reported its membership was interested in supporting Spartacade as a unit because most of them had never had the chance to work on air-campus events.

In other action Tuesday night the AOCS board passed a resolution to complain about the lack of men's lounge in the Union, a lack heavily felt by their off-campus peers.

Many Paths Lead to Goal

In a vote of 10-8 Wednesday night, the PanHellenic Council justified its intention to continue participating in Spartacade.

In doing this, the members exercised the same rights the H's used earlier in deciding to abandon Spartacade, the right to decide for oneself.

Much has been said, and doubtless much more will be said, about both actions, but one recurring theme that crops up is the "unfairness" of the IFC withdrawal.

This is not a question of fairness or of sportsmanship. Spartacade is one of the principal sources of revenue for Campus Chest, true, and it is wonderful that so many people have taken this way to express themselves in the Paul.

It is also gratifying that a number of people still feel they want to express themselves this way.

The thing to remember is that participating in this activity is not a game. It is a lot of hard work. It is a business operation.

Campus Chest is the instrument through which students channel their charity and public service contributions.

When it becomes necessary to hold the club of sportsmanship over people's heads to get them to assist in the support of the chest in its activities, the virtue of honest giving has been lost.

The sororities have decided, presumably under no outside pressure, to contribute to the chest through Spartacade.

The fraternities have decided, from all appearances on their own, to contribute in some other way.

Both are within their right, and both are to be commended for taking a public stand on their views.

Other groups have an equal prerogative to decide for themselves, under no social pressure or influence, how they wish to contribute or if they wish to.

The success or failure of Campus Chest is not at stake. If one dollar is provided some charitable cause through the efforts of Campus Chest, then it is a success.

Competition has the effect of stretching the generosity of all of us to the limit. Social pressure has made all of us die deep in our pockets, sometimes beyond our better judgment.

The desirability of the Chest operation is beyond question, and such social motivation is a part of nearly all people.

Considering the number of students on this campus the "goal" of the chest in its fall drive is well within reason. Spartans should pass it easily without being pressured.

The route of direct contributions is one that many may want to take. There are many other ways, but all lead to the same place.

Northwestern Ought To Pull Out of Big 10

EDITOR'S NOTE: The State News here prints selected excerpts from the controversial editorial which appeared Tuesday in the Northwestern Daily, student publication of Northwestern University.

These comments with respect to Northwestern's students, faculty, administration and administration's policies are not to be taken as reflecting the views of the State News.

The administration's position on the proposed merger of the Big Ten football conference reached a decision last Saturday at a meeting of the Big Ten Council. That decision was to postpone Big Ten football for the winter of 1956-57.

During that period, they have won a grand total of three games.

Northwestern is the only private school in the conference, the only school that receives no state funds to help support athletics. We are the smallest school in the conference.

And our students' claims are mounting. Our faculty are asking for a reduction in the size of the class. We have no separate physical education facilities in which students can exercise. Good football players, who would never be able to get to Northwestern because of poor high school grades, go on to become stars at other members of the Big Ten.

All of these are valid reasons for our being outclassed constantly, mowed under by the Big Ten teams.

After serious consideration the question for some time we have reached the conclusion that Northwestern has got to back in both athletic and academic prestige or out of the Big Ten.

Wouldn't be any different in getting schools more out of our own class? We think not.

'Terrible Situation' Arises Over Bikes

To the Students:

Those of you who live in the Busch group of dorms and other men's residence halls have, of course, by now been alerted to the terrible situation that has arisen over bicycle parking.

I am the proud possessor of a Schwinn and sometimes, being in a hurry, don't park in one of the already full racks. I learned the other day that my bicycle will be apprehended and forced away if it isn't properly parked. Now isn't that a clear-cut explanation?

It is bad enough having to park my car two blocks away, but now I have to be on guard every moment to see that the campus "gang busters" don't apprehend my bike and despite my already wallowing bank account some more.

This is an appeal to you, fellow students, to rally round and perhaps bring it home to the administration that there are many more important issues to be enforced on campus than the parking of bicycles.

Julia suggested to finish up with perhaps a few more racks, could be set up in the places where the wall-knocking students carelessly park their bikes.

Cabbies Okay

To E. Ebel and D. Birdsong:

May I state you are not as foolish as you obviously are trying to be. Taxicab administration is a highly complex business. It involves accounting, buying and selling, personnel management, and various other details of endeavor.

I believe it would be a very profitable procedure to set up a formal course covering this industry. Taxicab companies would benefit as would society through possible lower fares brought about by taxicab economies.

We are asking no miracles. We don't want to win every game. We would like to break even once in a while. We think it sheer idiocy to keep on taking on schools which are far our superiors athletically.

We are blaming nothing but the inherent disadvantages which plague Northwestern in the Big Ten and will always plague us as long as we remain.

And, rather than continue to play the role of the underdog, rather than admit the inferiority of the economy and build a make-shift-pressure advertising program, we would prefer to see Northwestern take advantage of its situation and start advertising with all the regular athletes.

For no reason why Taxicab Administration could not take place alongside police and hotel administration in helping to raise the general level of intellectual attainment on this campus.

Wouldn't be any different in getting schools more out of our own class? We think not.

Conference Doesn't Eliminate Negative

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press Analyst

American efforts to accentuate the positive at Geneva fall far short of eliminating the negative.

Secretary Dulles enumerates several points where East-West viewpoints are approaching each other. The West seems to be taking the propaganda line that, since negotiations can be continued, the foreign ministers' conference is a positive gain. It's not easy to swallow.

Indeed, while the ministers have shown no signs of any real agreement, the Russians have again added another element of discord which has been played down in formal conferences. This some time.

That is the everlasting Russian effort to advance a communist ideology.

Molotov coolly laid it back on the conference table with his insistence that any solution of the German problem must include protection for Communist institutions in East Germany. He denied the right of the German people as a whole to have any voice in that.

The Russian "new look" also has been badly spattered by her admission, after hiding for a time behind the claim that it was Czech business that the Communists deal with. Egypt was really made in retaliation for Israel's attack against the new Northern Tier Middle East defense pact.

It is notable too that the recently announced Communist slogans for another year returned in many respects to the Stalin line, even quoting from his prescriptions for expansion.

The West needs to be very sure that in continuing the present negotiations against all hopes of agreement, it is not playing Russia's own tune.

BOSTON (AP)—Pigs are helping reduce the city of Boston budget.

Harriers Race Bucks In Last Away Dual Meet

Kennedy,
Jones Lead
MSU Team

Last Race Before
Title Meets Begin

Seeking their third straight dual meet win of the season, the Michigan State cross country team travels to Columbus to meet the Ohio State Bucks Saturday morning.

Spartan coach Karl Schlauder will enter Capt. Selwyn Jones, Henry Kennedy, Guy Denney, Terry Block, Ed Townsend, Bill Miller and Leon Mosler.

Last year the Bucks downed Michigan State 27-30, but the Spartans are the favorites going into this meet. The team isn't expected to have as easy a time as has been the case in the Penn State and Wisconsin meets.

Michigan State's fifth, sixth and seventh men were selected after a special intrasquad race Wednesday afternoon. Townsend was the winner with a one-mile time of 22:10. Miller was second with 22:17, and Mosler third in 22:20.

The other runners were Dave Miller with a 22:32, Fred Kuester, 22:07, and Tom Goreska, 23:07. The times are considered good because the race was held in a cold, heavy rain.

Sophomore Henry Kennedy, undefeated this season, is the heavy individual favorite while Jones should be a close second.

Kennedy has been impressive this season and will be one of the favorites for the NCAA title later this month. His 19:23, for example, is the fastest in the nation, but the Canadian may break that mark before the season is over.

Jones, who would be the number one man on any other team in the nation, has been running fast times but has been overtaken by Kennedy. His 20 minutes flat four-mile time is currently the third best in the nation.

In last week's Wisconsin dual Block beat Denslow for the third position and both are expected to battle it out again. Denslow has the faster four-mile time, however.

Townsend, who was scheduled to run last week, was sick and couldn't make the trip. Hoke took his place. Prior to his sickness Townsend was the squad's fifth man.

Ohio State coach Charlie Bertram will have a team built around four men: Bob Colden, Bill Bartel, Guy Berech and Bill Blackburn.

The Buckeyes' main weakness is the lack of a good fifth man. Ohio State entered unattached entries in the Michigan AAU with Bartel seventh, Berech ninth, Blackburn twelfth and Colden fifteenth.

This is the first dual meet of the year for the Bucks.

Marshall
Seeks Ban
On Masks

Urges Pro League
To Abolish Guard

WASHINGTON, D.C. — George Preston Marshall, Washington Redskins' president, proposed Thursday that professional football abandon use of face masks.

He said the face mask causes more injuries than it prevents and added that he had urged National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell to abolish the use of any and all types of face masks.

A check was run on Marshall's suggestion and it turned out that all but four of the 32 players on the sport use face masks.

In an informal poll, the Redskins players voted against their president's 12-1 in favor of face masks. The lone exception was halfback Jim Tamulis, who said he believes he once suffered a severe thumb sprain when he was tackled by an opposing player face mask.

Ed Kunkle, Redskins' coach, said it turned out that all but four of the 32 players on the sport use face masks.

"If they took my mask away, I'd quit pro football," he said.

"I broke my nose seven times in college when I didn't have a mask. The University of Nebraska spent $1,250 on me for plastic surgery."

Marshall and asking pro players didn't prove a thing. He said a check should be run on college players to see if they don't use masks very frequently and that there are fewer injuries in college than pro ball.

Masks don't belong in football, Marshall said. They're causing more injuries than they're preventing. Furthermore, the grinding and attempted breaking of masks is becoming all too prevalent.

Over the whole season, Tamulis, 6-6, 213 pounds, and Koenke, 6-7, 195 pounds, have each caught 13 passes.

Lundy's receptions have gained 184 yards and one touchdown while Koenke has gained 174 yards.

Besides the two big ends, Dickson does not have a favorite receiver. But it is significant that two Purdie ends rank in the top six in pass receiving in the Big Ten. They are Bob Koenke and Lamar Lundy.

When the season began, the Spartans were about the greenest team in the Big Ten. As the campaign has progressed, they have played faster than any other school.

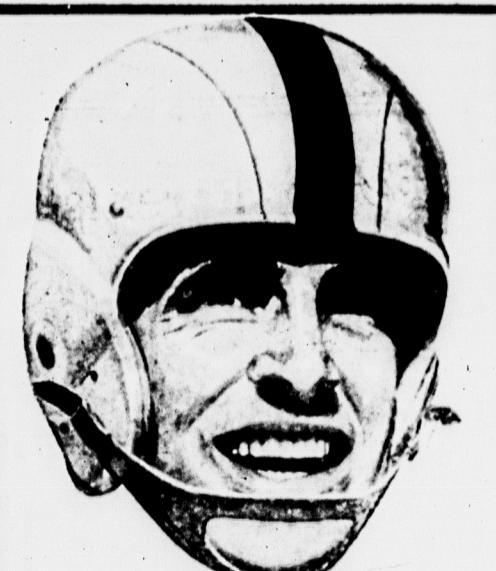

In the season opener with Indiana State's two scoring drives took 10 plays each. Jim Wulff scored the other on a punt return. Against the Badgers the Spartans cut their touchdown drives to one three-five and six plays.

As was noted earlier, Purdie has limited their opponents to an average of 52 plays per game. Could it be that State isn't need that many sputters?

The Spartans' main weakness is the lack of a good fifth man.

Ohio State entered unattached entries in the Michigan AAU with Bartel seventh, Berech ninth, Blackburn twelfth and Colden fifteenth.

This is the first dual meet of the year for the Bucks.

NCAA Figures Upset

Offensive Power Shows Surge in Grid Statistics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The upsets of the 1955 football season apparently aren't confined to the outcome of games. They're even turning up in the college statistics.

Only a week ago NCAA Division Bureau figures revealed that defenses were in command of major college football to the greatest extent in many years.

Then on Saturday, everything changed.

That Notre Dame is primarily a running team was a contributing factor.

Auburn, runnerup in total defense, was all load with a somewhat poorer record in spite of a record-breaking 1,140 points.

As they say, "It's a new world." And it is.

Where the major colleges had averaged only 544 yards a game for both teams in gridiron games for the first six weeks of the season, they suddenly stepped it up to 600 yards average for the final days' struggles. And the scoring average of 320 points both teams increased to 350 last weekend.

Navy last week's leader in total defense and defense against scoring skidded to third in both departments while losing 21-7 to Notre Dame.

But at the same time the Midshipmen moved from fourth to first place in forward pass defense as Detroit, Auburn and Michigan all suffered. The fact that Notre Dame is primarily a running team was a contributing factor.

West Virginia was the only major team to hold its opponents to less than 300 yards last Saturday.

Marquette and Illinois were the others.

With Navy yielding 21 points to UCLA and Stanford last week, the leading defense in forward pass defense as Detroit, Auburn and Michigan all suffered. The fact
