

'Our Town' Major Theater Undertaking

By BOB ROSS
Of The State News Staff

Our Town is the American drama and has, unfortunately, probably been beaten to death more times than any other American play.

Every high school, college and summer stock group in the country has attempted it at one time or another on the naive assumption that it is a simple play.

Our Town is not a simple play.

Because of the lack of scenery and rural setting, many directors wonder, after it is all over, why the play didn't have the effect intended; why the magic didn't come forth.

The answer should be rather obvious for Thornton Wilder himself has said:

"Our Town is not offered as a picture of life in a New Hampshire village; or as a speculation about the condition of life after death.

"It is an attempt to find a value above all price for the smallest events in our daily life."

Let that drama group beware which would tackle a play that requires little besides the actors. Moliere has said that all he needed was a platform and a passion or two.

To attempt Shakespeare in modern dress is likewise dangerous because all that is left is the dialogue and the skill of the actors to bring out his unfathom-

3 Girls Get Home Ec Scholarships

Ann Pratt Scott, home economics senior from Rockford, was one of three girls to receive a $300 scholarship Tuesday afternoon at MSU's 35th annual Home-maker's Conference.

Each year the Michigan Home Economics Extension Council awards two or more such scholarships to attend MSU. Winners are chosen for their leadership, scholarship, understanding and appreciation of rural life and an interest in home economics.

Mrs. Scott has a background of nine years in Kent County 4-H work plus home economics training and plans to teach on a high school or adult education level. This is the third year she has received the scholarship. She is the wife of James P. Scott, MSU junior from Rockford.

Also receiving $300 scholarships were Darlene Carol Kangas, an 18-year-old graduate of Eben High School in Rumely, Michigan, and Jacquelyn Sue Ballard, a 1962 graduate of Eastern High School in Lansing, Michigan. Both girls will begin their freshman year in home economics at MSU this fall.

Color Slides Of Far Galaxies Feature Seminar

Color slides of far-flung galaxies, detailed maps of the moon and its craters, the history of astronomy and the possibility of sentient life on other planets were the order of discussion Tuesday when James Stokley, associate professor of journalism addressed the Summer Elementary Science conference.

Stokley's talk was the second in a series of lectures to be given to 20 Michigan secondary science teachers as preparation for in-school clinics for their respective institutions.

The program is being sponsored by the Science and Mathematics teaching center.

Wayne Taylor, director of the center, explained the purpose of the conference:

"The center would like to cooperate with school systems interested in using their present personnel for an organized program of in-service assistance to elementary teachers."

He explained that the lectures would serve as models for the 20 teachers for developing their own science subject-matter presentations.

These would be the basis for subsequent work with elementary teachers in science.

Other lectures in the series will include the topics: measurement, motion, heat and sources of heat energy, sound and mechanical waves, electricity and magnetism, light and radiation, and matter and chemical energy, Taylor said.

Free Krips Concert Tonight

Public Invited To Hear Famed Conductor

Joseph Krips is described as an artist of superb musical technique who gives inspiration to all orchestra members he conducts.

A Michigan State audience and a 100-member American Federation of Musicians Congress Strings orchestra will come before Buffalo Philharmonic's conductors' wand at a public free concert 8:15 tonight in the Auditorium.

This is the first time the former-conductor of the London Symphony has directed young people in the United States. Krips is a supporter of the Congress of Strings which allows young musicians to work together for eight weeks.

"It shows the student whether or not he truly wants to be a musician," Krips said. "Music is not a career but a vocation, for it must come from the heart."

"At least two hours a day are necessary for the beginning artist in order to become accomplished. The essential thing for a student of music is to play all notes as one. It cannot be jerky or unrefined, but very smooth, and again, from the heart."

"It is not important for the listener to know the techniques of music. The essential thing is to feel and enjoy it. A meal can be delicious without one's knowledge of how it was prepared."

An example of an audience's appreciation of music is a scene which occurred during World War II.

Krips described the coldness of Europe during this time. So many people in the ignominious horrors of the battles, without food or a roof over their heads. Yet, these same individuals came willingly to the concert halls of Vienna to await the enlightening majesty of a concerto or a suite.

Their earthly possessions were few, yet the uplifting they received from the beauty of the classics gave them new hope and inspiration.

Krips described music as the "universal language". His travels include England, Australia, Israel, Switzerland, France and all parts of the U.S.

The New York Philharmonic frequently serves as host to him as well as the Hollywood Bowl.

In 1935, he was appointed professor at the Vienna Academy of Music.

After the war, his mastery of style shone brightly in France.

Heads Idaho Dept.

Bert C. Cross, assistant professor of journalism, has been appointed an associate professor and chairman of the journalism department of the University of Idaho.

The appointment is effective Sept. 1 and the Cross family will leave for the west coast Monday.

Cross came to MSU in 1955 as assistant professor of communication arts and administrative assistant to the dean of the newly formed College of Communication Arts.

Previously Cross was a reporter and copydesk man on The Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash. director of publications at Central Washington State College and assistant professor of journalism at Kansas State University.

He got his B.A. from the University of Washington, his master's from the University of Oregon and received a two year leave of absence from Michigan State in 1957 to obtain his Ph.D from Stanford University in political science.

TV STATION FIRE CLEAN-UP--Fire caused an estimated $2,500 damage to two WMSB television announcer booths Wednesday morning before East Lansing firemen could extinguish the blaze. Witnesses stated that the fire was caused by an electrical short in the studio wiring. Gaylord Creedon, studio supervisor, used six fire extinguishers fighting the blaze until firemen arrived.

COOL

Tennis Courts Filled-- Yes or No?

A 50 member East Lansing tennis club has been formed this summer, which uses Michigan State facilities for playing.

Anyone is eligible to join the club, headed by Stan Drobac, MSU tennis coach.

The club uses the 10 varsity tennis courts behind the stadium and according to Drobac was approved by Athletic Director Clarence "Biggie" Munn.

The MSU student membership fee is $5. (The entire fee schedule is listed at the right.)

The tennis club idea is fine for inspiring more persons to play the game. It is also fine to be able to use the MSU tennis courts provided no MSU student is deprived the use of a tennis court when he wants one.

It is our understanding that the tennis courts are first for the use of MSU students and personnel.

Several students have complained about being unable to use the courts and that the tennis club has taken over the best 10 of 40 courts.

They have made the courts more attractive by using canvas windbreakers and other facilities belonging to the school.

If the 30 additional courts are completely sufficient for the rest of the tennis players in the university, then the tennis club should be endorsed as a service to the community and tennis playing in general.

However, if MSU students are being turned away because there are not enough courts to go around, the tennis club is an imposition upon the Michigan State community.

There seems to be some confusion as to whether all the tennis courts are in use. The athletic department claims the courts are never filled while some students say they are.

The situation should be checked into and the future of the East Lansing tennis club should be determined by the results of the investigation.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Ricker: In reference to your letter to the Editor, I quite agree with you that relations between students and faculty at any large university tend to be impersonal -- often distressingly so. However, it is not clear to me just what you propose to remedy this situation. Your third paragraph implies that instructors ought to tell students more about themselves, but the fourth implies rather that he ought to encourage the students to tell him more about themselves. Perhaps you meant both. On the other hand, perhaps you meant that instructors ought to present some sort of "statement of faith" or outline of philosophical approach to their students before they begin on any specific subject matter. If this is what you meant, I am emphatically in agreement with you. By way of exemplification of my agreement, I enclose a brief intellectual credo. Hoping that this may be what you had in mind, I am

Roger Westcott

Chien's View

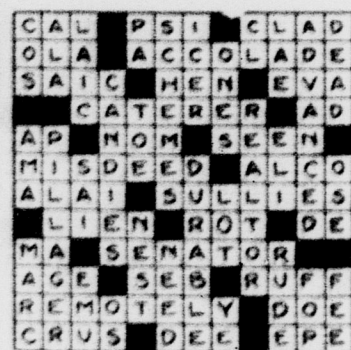

Dear Editor: It was most regrettable for the state legislators to insist that the educational institutions raise their tuition. At the same time, the administrators and their elected board of trustees yielded under pressure. As a candidate for the state legislature, I am very emotionally upset about this condition. I feel the nation was built upon equal opportunities for all. At the same time, the Board of Trustees of this institution are elected by the people. Why do the trustees lack the courage to stand on their own principles to open the door for all the financially distressed students? To compromise with the dictator-type legislators is not a good example for our future generations.

It is my firm belief that to receive an education is not only a privilege, but it is duty. There is no reason for the citizens of Michigan to penalize the young generation because they wish to fulfill their duty. Please consider this letter as an open letter because I strongly disagree with the decision of the Board of Trustees as well as the University. To yield is not the best policy for an educational institution.

With my best regards,
Paul Chien

MSU, Guatemala Join In Education Research

A cooperative center for educational research being established by Michigan State at the University of San Carlos, Guatemala, will boost U.S.-Latin American relations, a MSU staff member said today.

The university accepted a $610,000 grant last week from the U.S. Agency for International Development to develop the center. The center's research will be a cooperative effort between MSU, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Honduras.

"The center is very important to our relations" with Latin Americans, said Ralph Smuckler, associate dean of international programs. "It should contribute a good deal of useful information in years to come. The center is a cooperative effort and we will work as partners with faculty of San Carlos."

Smuckler said three or four Michigan State staff members would join the center. Karl T. Hereford, associate professor of education in Guatemala working on plans. He will direct the center.

Three staff members will come from San Carlos and one each from the national universities of the other four countries. Other staff members will be appointed on a short-term basis from MSU and San Carlos.

The governing board of the center will be appointed from the participating universities.

The center will carry out educational research with the aim of improving secondary and higher education in the countries involved. Creation of a Central American regional program for graduate study in education is anticipated.

Major research projects planned include surveys of facilities, personnel, programs, finances and similar matters for both secondary and higher education

Women, Men Roles Crumble

Traditionally masculine and feminine roles are crumbling under the impact of basic, modern trends.

Yet, new roles in the making for each sex hold promise of a richer, more satisfying life. And the strong family is the one that can take these role changes in stride.

These were the points brought out by Dr. William Marshall and Mrs. Thelma Hansen as they addressed 1,000 Michigan homemakers at "College Week for Women," 35th annual Homemakers' Conference, Wednesday afternoon.

In a discussion on building stronger families, these two members of the MSU home management and child development faculty said that we are moving in the direction of "colleague-type" roles and the "colleague-type family."

Men and women, they said, are becoming colleagues at school, where the rate of women finishing college is approaching the rate of men; colleagues at work, where almost half the wives in our solid middle class have jobs outside their homes; and colleagues at homes, where husband and wife spend more time together and more interaction between family members occurs.

Plans also call for establishing a cross-cultural processing center for study of child growth and development, training about 20 San Carlos graduate students in research technique, studying university student characteristics, and regional study of special education and rehabilitation.

The Central American program will be MSU's first international program for research abroad although its numerous other technical assistance projects have involved research.

The grant was made to MSU to be used under the direction of William E. Hawley, Acting Dean of Education, and Glen L. Taggart, Dean of International Programs.

The MSU College of Education has been aiding American-sponsored schools in Mexico and Central America since 1956. Credit courses have been given there and research in the area of special education has been undertaken.

MSU's Water Role Is Active

Professor Organizes Institute

By BOB ROSS
State News Science Editor

Third and final installment of a series on the problem of water shortage and saline conversion.

In the two previous installments of this series we have seen the growing need for fresh supplies of usable water and the methods which science has evolved to convert sea water into fresh water.

Michigan State has long been active in the problems of Michigan and the nation in this area.

The work in water research has been performed in the various departments of science and engineering. In October of 1961 the Institute of Water Research was organized to coordinate these diverse activities.

This institute is part of the Research Development of MSU. Laurence L. Quill, professor of Chemistry and former head of the Chemistry department, is the director.

The present members of the Water Institute are Lloyd M. Turk, Gordon Geuyer, Maynard M. Miller, Frank R. Peabody and E. M. Laursen, all of the MSU faculty.

Just what reasonable water use entails is usually determined by the courts, government agencies and the habits and customs of the people.

At MSU the Agricultural Economics department is conducting research into the correlation of these three demands.

Perhaps a fourth agency should be included in the above list: nature.

MSU WATER PLANT--Water purification is an integral part of the operation facilities located in the South Campus Power House next to Spartan Stadium. --State News Photo.

Climates, soils and the demands of farming methods can determine the use of vast amounts of water. It is the job of Agricultural Engineering to investigate this demand.

In the same area, the Farm Crops personnel is concerned with the water requirements of plants for producing varieties superior in quality and yield to present day plants.

Horticulture also investigates this phenomenon. Overloading fields with water not only wastes water but is also bad for the plants.

Chemistry research has been completed on the toxicity (poisoning capacity) of cadmium and chromium in bodies of water.

Quill said that this was a study sponsored by the National Institute of Health to determine the effects of such poisons on fish, wildlife, and domestic animals.

"It has been an important study," he said, "in that positive toxicity data of these metals ions was determined with relative accuracy for the first time.

 "The research was the result of cooperation between the Chemistry, Pathology, and Physiology and Pharmacology departments."

He continued that "another cooperative program was the corrosion study on copper tubing by waters of various quality under various temperatures and velocity conditions."

Some of this research was done on the piping that supplies water to the MSU residence halls and other buildings.

In the same vein, civil engineering is presently concerned with protective coatings for water distribution systems to decrease corrosion problems.

Fisheries and Wildlife is attempting to determine the potentialities of small, private waters in the production of a food crop of fish.

They are also interested in the methods of management of these ponds to obtain the most economical use.

Industrial use of water has always been a headache and the Geography department is evaluating the water resources as a factor in industrial localization.

Elsewhere in Michigan pipeline water from the Great Lakes is under consideration for transmission to critical areas in the state.

Most of us use drinking fountains and swimming pools. The bacterial count in these devices is under study by the Microbiology and Public Health personnel.

Rural areas have particular problems in obtaining fresh water and disposing of used water. The microbiologists of MSU are studying these problems to learn the effects of 'carrying' toxic molecules or organisms often found in bodies of water.

Purifying bodies of water with chemicals is fine but you can poison fish for miles around if the chemicals used are lethal enough.

The response of aquatic organisms to such chemicals is the concern of the Physiology and Pharmacology department. Water inside the human body is also being researched on the campus. The effect of excess consumption of water-soluble vitamins on nutrition is a fascinating study being carried on in the field of foods and nutrition.

There is an intimate association between stream pollution and the number of aquatic insects present in the streams. This study must concern itself with the waters of the present and the future.

There are only about 150 people in Michigan outside the academic communities who are actively engaged in the water resource problem. They must be kept up-to-date on the current findings at MSU.

The Resource Development office transmits to them such useful information, both old and new, in the fields of agriculture, conservation and industry.

Five hundred copies of each MSU report are sent out-of-state. These reports also include climatological data compiled by the Department of Statistics. Rainfall is an important factor in water conservation. Its frequency and recurrence in various intensities over Michigan watersheds is the concern of soil science.

Included in this area is the relationship between rainfall and runoff and the quantity of sediment transported in the runoff during major flow periods.

able depth. Wilder, twice winner of the Pulitzer prize, has called for the theatre "to raise the individual action into the realm of idea and type and universal that is able to evoke our belief."

Our Town is thus a major undertaking in the theatre that requires experienced actors and, above all, an awareness of life itself and what Wilder was attempting to do with it.

One usually attends this drama with an eye to three characters: the Stage Manager, Emily Webb and George Gibbs.

In the Circle theatre's production, scheduled to run through Saturday in Demonstration hall, these roles are played by Donald F. Kiel, George Sollo and Barbara Smith respectively.

As the Stage Manager, Kiel did his best to present the nonchalant minister in his role as the Greek chorus commenting on and sometimes directing the actors.

It falls to his lot in the play to bring the individual actions and universal. This he simply did not do for one reason: he never established contact with the audience.

During the entire production and especially during his philosophical speeches in acts one and three, the stage directions call for him to address the audience.

Kiel looked at the ceiling, the actors, the walls, his pipe; but never at the audience.

The boredom during his monologues was quite apparent.

He was superb however as Mr. Morgan, the owner of the soda fountain. He instilled one of the rare moments of humor into the production with his glasses perched precariously on the end of his nose, making the imaginary strawberry ice cream sodas.

Director Brandon changed many of his lines to add local color, including the name of the setting from Grover's Corners, N.H. to Carter's Junction, Mich., and Joe Crowell's scholarship went from MIT to MSC.

George Sollo didn't appear to believe in the seriousness of what he was doing. As George Gibbs, the immature, baseball loving town hero, he wasn't concerned with the function of their roles and the dramatic experience to make them convincing. Mary Miner and Bee Vary as Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Webb were the main characters throughout the evening; not through Wilder's intent but through their own ability.

Especially during the graveyard scene did Mary Miner set them to Wilder's classic realization of the function of their roles and the dramatic experience to make them convincing.

But two actresses brought with them to Wilder's classic a realization of the function of their roles and the dramatic experience to make them convincing.

Several other "corpses" were noticeably following the show.

In Track Meet Ex-MSU Runner Beats Russians

There was a definite Michigan State tone to the United States' 128-107 victory over the Russian track team Sunday in Stanford, Calif.

Willie Atterberry, who last ran for MSU's Coach Fran Dittrich in 1960, set a meet record in winning the 400-meter hurdles in 50.3 seconds. Atterberry, who now lives in Los Angeles, caught up with Rex Cawley of Farmington, Mich., and passed him at the last hurdle.

MSU observers say Atterberry is running much better than he ever did at Michigan State and is nearing his prime, although he is 28 years old, an elderly age among American trackmen.

After the meet the former Spartan, a 1962 NAAU champion, looked toward the 1963 Pan-American games.

"I may be too old for the Tokyo Olympics—I'll be 31," he said. "But I'll keep in training for the Pan-American Games for next year."

Atterberry missed the 1960 Olympics and failed to win a title in the 1960 Big Ten track meet after his coach predicted a possible berth on the U.S. team.

What is the Detroit Eastern runner doing different today than what he did during his Michigan State career?

"He's finally training the way he's supposed to," Dittrich said. "He now runs cross country. I advised him to do that while he was here but he didn't want to."

"The long distance helps build endurance. Twenty-nine isn't too old for track men. Willie has natural endurance which he didn't start developing until college and hasn't perfected it until now."

The west coast is not strange to Atterberry. Before enrolling at State, he did a lot of running on the coast. He ran a 51.2 in the 400 meter hurdle finals in the 1956 Olympic trials at Los Angeles.

When a MSU freshman, he set a world record of 1:08.5 for the 600-yard run outdoors at the 1957 Ohio Relays.

Zerby Leaves For 2 Years In Nigeria

Lewis K. Zerby, MSU professor of philosophy, left July 15 for a two year assignment as an adviser in the social sciences at the new University of Nigeria at Nsukka.

Michigan State, under a contract with the Agency for International Development, is providing technical assistance in a number of areas at the new university in Africa.

Zerby will be responsible for the general studies program in the social sciences at the University of Nigeria. His assignment there ends June 30, 1964.

Zerby joined the MSU faculty in 1946. Prior to that he helped to develop a core course on the history of ideas while at the State University of Iowa and he also worked with the development of a general division course in literature and fine arts while a technical assistant at the University of Illinois.

New Edit Board For Uof M Daily

It appears that the controversy between the student editors of the Michigan Daily and the publications board has been resolved in favor of the students.

The dispute arose last spring term when the publications board attempted to dictate to the students who was qualified to be editorial editor of the paper and to switch around the recommendations of the senior student editors.

The editors rebelled and refused to accept the positions as offered by the Board.

After lengthy debate, the Board has appointed seven of eight student recommendations and changed only minor points, according to Fred Kramer, a mathematics major from New York City, who is summer co-editor and will take over as co-editorial page editor in the fall.

As a result of the dispute, a new publications Board head has been appointed. Luke Cooper-rider of the Law school has assumed the post and according to Kramer, this should improve relations between the board and the students.

"We feel the future is pretty safe," said Kramer. "A number of student members of the board, who were unsympathetic to the paper are graduating and one alumni member's term is ending."

"What we are attempting to do," said Kramer, "is to make it a Board in review rather than a Board in control as it has been in the past."

Kramer said he felt that the dispute had brought out the need for better communications between the student newspaper staff and the board and that efforts along this line were being successful.

Appointed director of the London Symphony in 1950, he remained there until 1952, at which time, he came to America to fill the position of conductor of the Buffalo Symphony.

In reply to the question if there was any difficulty with the language barrier, he said his baton was the only necessary tool, because musicians of the world understand it.

"Conducting is not a position to be looked up to as far above the orchestra members," Krips said.

"A director must be able to work with the orchestra, as one of them, he said. If he cannot do this, his purpose is lost. He is not a master, telling his slaves to obey, but an equal with everyone."

"Of course, he must be followed, but he cannot be feared, for he must get along with everyone. He must get along with everyone."

"No one director interprets a musical score in the same way," he said. This is why a conductor becomes great - because he applies his own theories and techniques to the music to be played.

"Because of this," stated Krips, "good classical music never dies. Every age introduces a new conductor and in turn, a new interpretation of the composition."

"Here is one great contrast between art and music. A painting is drawn once. If it is reproduced, it must be done precisely, the way the painter had Brandon's use of the choir was very effective; lighting was well placed and the changing of scenery during the action of the play never became obtrusive. At times it went almost unawares.

His concert, which is open to the public will include the "Overture and Pastoral Symphony" from Handel's Messiah; Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis," Arthur Foote's "Suite in E Major," and the second performance of "Trigon," by MSU composer James Niblock.

Niblock's composition was enthusiastically received at its premiere performance at the opening of the MSU Fine Arts Festival last week.

Heath President

Mrs. Albert Heath of Milan was re-elected president of the Michigan Home Economics Extension Council Monday at Michigan State University. The MHEEC is made up of 35,000 members of home economics extension groups throughout the state. The new officers were elected at a meeting of the MHEEC advisory board preceding Homemakers' Conference, which began Tuesday at MSU.

Earlier this year, the MHEEC named Mrs. Heath to represent Michigan at the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World conference at Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 2-12.

Fairchild Presents Uncle Tom's Cabin

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," America's most famous pre-Civil War story, will be shown in Fairchild Theatre at Michigan State University Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Raymond Massey tells the story which, in the opinion of many, helped goad the nation into Civil War.

The characters created by Harriet Beecher Stowe--Simon Legree, Little Eva, Uncle Tom and Topsy--are familiar even to those who do not know the story.

In addition to retelling the famous story, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" provides an authentic look at the towns and plantation homes of the ante-bellum South.

The color film is a 1926 production.

STEP Is Stepped Up

By C. LEWICKI
Of The State News Staff

Michigan State University's Student-Teacher Education Program (STEP) is expanding. This program is designed to give its students a sound elementary school teacher training in their own community as well as on the MSU campus.

"Financed by the Ford Foundation," Ann G. Olmsted, education research co-ordinator, said, "preparations for the program started in 1959, and in June 1960, the first 25 students were enrolled. In 1961, 74 new students began training. This year, 114 new students were enrolled. The students come from Alpena, Bay City, Battle Creek, Grand Rapids, and Port Huron."

STEP, according to Mrs. Olmsted, is designed to take five years to train a student. During the first two years, the student takes the regular freshman and sophomore courses at his local community college.

During the summer sessions of the second, third, and fourth years of training, the student takes liberal arts courses on the MSU campus.

In his third year, the student will serve as an assistant teacher in his local public school and is required to take the equivalent of two MSU courses per term in his community college.

In the fourth year, the student enters a teaching internship under careful supervision in his community school and will receive a salary of about $3,000. He also takes one MSU course per term in his community college.

During the fifth year, the teaching internship salary in his community school may increase to $3,500. The student is still supervised and is required to take one MSU extension course per term.

Upon completing the five year training program, the student receives a MSU bachelor's degree and a Michigan elementary provisional teaching certificate.

Mrs. Olmsted pointed out that with the exception the three summer sessions at MSU, the student receives all of his training in his own community.

"This system," she said, "has the advantage of combining the theoretical and practical phases of teaching. While training, the student can judge from his classroom experience whether he really wants to become a teacher."

"The school districts who subscribe to the program," Mrs. Olmsted continued, "have to commit teaching slots for the students."

The student is given increased classroom responsibility during his third year. A supervising teacher guides him, helps with lesson plans, teaching techniques, testing, and pupil discipline. A Michigan State resident faculty member will meet periodically with the student to give assistance as needed.

During the intern teaching program in the fourth and fifth years, the student is assigned to teaching a regular class in the school district near his community college. With him are four other intern teachers assigned to their classes.

A supervisor teacher is assigned to the five intern teachers. He observes their teaching methods and aids them to improve their skills.

A MSU faculty member is present to give additional help in advancing their teaching proficiency.

"Wayne State and Central Michigan colleges," Mrs. Olmsted said, "are participating in the student teacher education programs. However, MSU's STEP is different and to all indications a success."

HE ASKED FOR IT

QUINTON, Okla. (AP)—Ola B. Ross, bachelor bank president in this eastern Oklahoma town, complained he was always a guest, never an honored guest, at wedding and baby showers. Then he happened to mention his prize mare was expecting.

Ross got a shower, complete with bottles, a curry comb, horseshoes and a bale of hay.

Youth Music Program Draws 500 Students

More than 500 of the top high school musicians in Michigan and surrounding states will participate in the 16th annual Summer Youth Music Program Sunday to Aug. 18 at MSU.

Carefully selected in cooperation with local school officials, the youths will receive advanced training in orchestra, chorus, ensembles and symphonic, concert and training bands.

Private lessons will be offered in individual instruments, music theory, composition, literature, conducting, accompanying and voice.

Directing the program will be a staff of 32 experienced musicians from the sponsoring MSU Department of Music and schools around the state.

Students will be housed in campus residence halls under qualified counselors and will be offered a full program of recreational activities, including tennis, swimming and organized games.

Attend Church This Weekend

Clergymen Look at PR

Trends in public education, adolescent counseling and missionary opportunities will be studied at an Eastern Orthodox Catechetical Conference Monday to Aug. 3 at MSU.

About 125 Orthodox clergymen and lay teachers from Michigan and surrounding states are expected to attend this ninth annual program at MSU's Kellogg Center for Continuing Education.

The week-long conference is designed to provide more effective instruction in Orthodox theology, liturgy and history for church members "from the nursery through adulthood."

Joining to sponsor the meeting are the Eastern Orthodox Catechetical Association and the MSU Committee on Church Related Programs.

MSU Water Role

that Man ultimately came from algae found in the sea. More practical in their consideration of algae are MSU Botanists who want to know how this substance can ruin water resources.

If enough poison accumulates from algae, recreational waters must be closed and fish are certain to perish.

And so the process goes: from a nation that is finally restricting the use of water by industries, to scientific attempts to cheapen the conversion of sea water to usable water, to the research of a major university in the areas of water uses.

It is very possible that the greatest scientific achievements of the 20th century are not taking place in the heavens; rather they are going on in the seas, oceans, rivers and lakes that cover the earth.
