East Lansing Chamber Seeks Dry Law Repeal

At 10 a.m. Wednesday the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce lacked about 75 signatures needed on petitions seeking repeal of the city's dry ordinance.

The Chamber has taken the lead in circulating the petitions and needed 500 signatures by 5 p.m. Wednesday before handling the documents in to the city clerk's office. A misinterpretation of the City's charter section governing amendments caused the Chamber to fall behind their timetable in getting the required number of signatures.

The Chamber thought they had until 60 days prior to the November election to file its petitions.

The Chamber was informed last Friday they faced a 90-day period prior to the election for charter amendment petitions.

"I feel confident we will have the required number of signatures by the deadline," said Joe Mukulla, committee head for the Chamber of Commerce.

"A number of merchants are out getting additional signatures today and we should go over the 500 mark this afternoon," he said. "My only concern will be the number of deletions the city will make by rejecting the signatures of those with improper qualifications who signed our petitions."

Mukulla then said that if the Chamber can't get the required number of signatures by the deadline, they will seek the repeal vote in next April's election.

The city of East Lansing has been a dry community since 1907 when the ordinance was voted into the city charter.

If the Chamber gets the necessary number of names on file and the City Council approves the petitions to appear on the November ballot, the voters will have the opportunity of voting in the sale of liquor, beer and wine on a take out basis for their city.

Congress Finale Tonight

The 100-member A.P. of M. Congress of Strings presents its final concert of the summer tonight at 8:15 in Fairchild Theatre.

James Robertson of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra will conduct the group.

Tonight's concert marks the end of a series which has brought internationally famous conductors to the MSU campus since June 18.

"The Congress of Strings has given us an opportunity to hear fine music performed by some of the greatest conductors in the world and the best young musicians in the country. We would never have been able to hear such music otherwise," said Wilson Paul, Lecture-Concert Series director.

Guest conductors have included Eric Leinsdorf of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, John Barnett of the National Orchestral Association, New York City, Robert Shaw, director of the famed Shaw Chorale and Joseph Kripps of the Buffalo Symphony and former conductor of the Vienna opera.

Zaida Booth, 18-year-old violinist from Briarcliff Manor, New York, said:

"The experience we all gained from working with such fabulous conductors is invaluable. Each conductor has a different style and we've learned something different with each new man."

Larry Zgonc of Portland, Ore. mentioned the "tremendous quality of the permanent faculty" as one of the great benefits of the Congress of Strings.

Members of the permanent Congress faculty are Michel Piasastro, conductor of the Longines' Symphonette, Warren Benfield of the Chicago Symphony, Rafael Druian, concertmaster of the Cleveland Symphony, Hyman Goodman, concertmaster of the Toronto Symphony and Frank House, concertmaster of the San Francisco Symphony.

New Head For Bureau

Edward J. Zabrusky has been promoted to editor of the MSU news bureau, a bureau spokesman has announced.

Zabrusky, a staff member since 1956, is a graduate of the University of Colorado school of journalism. He was previously employed as police reporter for the Gazette and Telegraph, a Colorado Springs newspaper.

Zabrusky will replace Frank D. Skinner, a former Oklahoma newspaperman, who has been with Information Services since 1953. He will enter private business.

Skinner is a charter member of the Public Relations association and secretary-treasurer of the professional journalistic society Sigma Delta Chi.

The change in positions will become effective in September, the Information officer said.

Defeats Challenger Swift by 3,000

George Romney Piles Up Large Primary Margin

State Sen. Paul Younger pulled challenger Ted W. Swift off the highballing George Romney bandwagon in Tuesday's primary election.

Swift, an Okemos lawyer attempting to unseat Younger, lost to the veteran lawmaker 11,607 to 8,294, according to unofficial returns.

Younger now goes against James McClure, Okemos Democrat, in the run off election Nov. 6.

Swift had attempted to climb on the campaign which Republicans hope will put George Romney in the governor's office next year. Swift was a moderate compared to Younger who considers himself a conservative.

The Romney bandwagon seemed to be rolling ahead full steam after Tuesday's primary when the Bloomfield Hills con-con delegate and former auto-manufacturer polled over 100,000 more votes than did Governor John Swainson.

However, neither candidates were opposed and some observers said the returns were not significant. Others said Romney's total was boosted because the Republicans had the only state-wide race--the selection of a Romney running mate--to bring out GOP voters.

One-time Lt. Governor Clarence Reid won that battle and goes on the Nov. 6 ballot to oppose incumbent Lt. Governor John Leisinski, who was unopposed in the primary.

Romney was not overenthusiastic with his large margin over Swainson, but party leaders were what they called "thrilled."

George Van Peursem, chairman of the GOP State Central Committee, said:

"I don't think any of us expected anything like this response for Romney. We're really thrilled."

Romney said: "Most of the issues and races were strictly local and it would be misleading to attempt to apply the vote totals to the statewide campaign."

Swainson reserved comment. In the 14th district senatorial race, Younger assured his victory with 2,200 votes in Livingston county where Swift polled only 900. In Ingham county Younger received 9,328 votes to Swift's 7,360.

Third in that race was Paul Chien, East Lansing, 1,094, and fourth was Larry Munro, Fenton, with 950. East Lansing voting figures were: Younger 1,078, Swift 1,732, Chien 130 and Munro 43.

James J. Cavanaugh, Okemos, and assistant professor of business services at Michigan State, won over Howard Jones, Webberville, for the Democratic spot in the race for second district state representative and will face Rep. Charles Davis, Onondaga.

Cavanaugh polled 664 votes to Jones' 334.

Repairs To Close Abbott Rd.

The section of Abbott Road from Burcham north to W. Saginaw Road (M78) will be closed for repairs beginning Monday.

The closed section will be changed to four lanes to match the roadway from Grand River Ave. to Burcham said Bob Bruce, East Lansing city engineer.

The city of East Lansing will bear the cost of the improvement from funds provided by the State Highway Department and earmarked for major street improvement.

Sidewalks will be installed along both sides of the roadway and the property owners with frontage on the right of way will be assessed the costs of the sidewalks.

Bituminous concrete will be the surfacing material used on the improved section. The Williams Bros. Paving Co. of Ionia won the paving contract with a low bid of $13,000.

The Angell Construction Co. of Lansing won the construction bid for clearing and grading the right of way with a low bid of $130,000.

The same detour for East bound M78 traffic will be used as was set up earlier this year when the Abbott-M78 intersection was closed for repairs.

Northbound Abbott Road traffic will head East on Burcham and then North on Alton Road to reach M78.

Completion of grading and paving is expected by September 13. As an added safety factor, a traffic signal will be installed at the Abbott-M78 intersection and will be in operation upon the re-opening of the improved section.

About Our Teeth

The City of Lansing approved fluoridation of that city's water supplies Monday. East Lansing has been fluoridating its water since 1955. Its population is 14,480.

Michigan State with a population of over 20,000 has never considered fluoridation of its water supply, according to Jesse Campbell, superintendent of the MSU power plant.

Fluoridation would not be of significant benefit to the student population, but there are 2,500 families living in married housing and a large number of them have children.

It is time the University officials thought of fluoridating the water supply.

Fluoridation is in keeping with modern intelligent thought and should be part of the program of any state university.

Scientific facts have pretty well quelled adverse opinion on fluoridation.

Recent public health surveys indicate that 97 million persons in the United States have decayed teeth and health experts estimate that between one half and two thirds of these persons would have been free of cavities if they had received an adequate fluoride supply since birth.

The cost of fluoridation is not significantly high that it should affect the budget-conscious administrators.

The Michigan Department of Health made cost estimates in Detroit and Ludington and the average cost annually would be 13 cents per person if sodium fluoride was used and three cents per person if sodium fluosilicate were used.

An advisory council to the city of Cincinnati in recommending the addition of fluoride to the water supply, estimated that the initial cost of installing equipment would be from $5,000 to $10,000. The annual expense per person would again be 13 cents a year.

Equipment for handling the fluoridation is standard, accurate and dependable, according to Raymond J. Faust, executive assistant secretary of the American Water Works Association.

Fluoridation should present no major problem to MSU.

Granted fluoridation programs benefit children the most, it is in keeping with the progressive university image that the children of Cherry Lane, Spartan and University Villages have the best care possible.

University officials should investigate the costs of a fluoridation program and incorporate it into our system as soon as possible.

"The list of Congress faculty members reads like a 'Who's Who' of American string music," said Paul.

Most Congress students have spent an average of three hours' practice per day excluding formal rehearsals. All of their expenses are paid by the American Federation of Musicians.

Carla Smith of Long Island, N. Y., said,

"We're all very grateful to the union. It's really been a wonderful thing to play with such great conductors and fine musicians our own age with all our expenses paid."

Several students emphasized the advantages of being with other young people interested in music.

"We've not only learned from more advanced students in our own instruments, but we've learned something about other instruments. It's really been inspiring to be surrounded by so much talent our own age," said Miss Booth.

Zgonc mentioned the opportunity to play with good ensembles. "We don't usually have the opportunity at home to play with such fine musicians," he said.

N.Y. Police Take Gun From Krips

World-famed conductor Joseph Krips, who appeared with the A.F. of M. Congress of Strings in a concert here July 26, found his art challenged by the New York City police Saturday.

Conducting a Viennese concert in New York City's Lewisohn Stadium, Krips decided that rifle shots would add authenticity to Johann Strauss' polka "Auf der Jagd" ("On the Hunt").

Krips had performed the polka with rifle shots in his native Vienna. Strauss had intended his composition to be performed with rifle shots. However, Section 196 of the New York Penal Code prohibits rifle shots within city limits or residential areas.

Showing no respect for composer Strauss or conductor Krips' art, police announced that rifle-shooting at the concert would earn the shooter six long months in jail.

Ingenuity eventually triumphed over the letter of the law. A rifle was exhibited on stage and shots were faked by tympani. The police were happy and the concert's press agent was ecstatic.

Tryouts will be held Friday, Aug. 10, Monday, Aug. 13 and Tuesday, Aug. 14. Appointments may be made at 355-9606.

district, GOP incumbents Marie Hager and Harold Hungerford earned the right to face two Democrats for the House seat. Mrs. Hager piled up 5,909 and Hungerford 5,697 to knock William Mahoney and George Phillips from the race. They will run against Bruce King, Lansing, and Manfred Lilliefors, in the general election.

In the only other contested race in Ingham County, Harry Spenny, Mason, was renominated to represent the Republicans over Hubert Ellison, Lansing, in the county treasurer contest.

Also nominated without opposition were Alvin Bentley, R-Owosso, and Neil Staebler, D-Ann Arbor, as candidates for Congressman-at-large. Bentley, boosted by the GOP lieutenant governor contest, polled 360,000 votes to Staebler's 200,000.

Upsets struck both Senate and House races as constitutional convention delegates stuck their foot in the race. Most prominent to fall were State Sen. Carlton Morris, Kalamazoo, once a candidate for governor and chairman of the senate judiciary committee, and Rep. Harry Phillips, Port Huron.

The marching band will increase its size this fall.

The expansion will bring the number of marching musicians to 144; said Leonard Falcone, director of bands. Last year the band had 130 members.

"The increase in size should make the band look better and give it a fuller sound," Falcone said.

This will be the third year of the "Patterns in Motion" theme which was originated here in 1960.

"The Football crowd seems to appreciate the theme," he said, "and many other school bands throughout the country have instituted similar marching patterns."

"The only picture or letter formations used now are in tribute to MSU and the visiting schools."

Two-a-day practice sessions will begin Monday, Sept. 17 and continue through Friday, Sept. 21. The marching band will play music from 9 to 11 a.m. and practice drill from 3 to 5 p.m.

During registration week (beginning Sept. 24) and class days hours of practice will be cut back, Falcone said.

About 60 freshman and transfer students will join the Spartan band for the first time, he said. All members will live in Case Hall during the first week of practice.

Oldsmobile Division of General Motors will sponsor two trips for the band this fall, one to the University of Notre Dame and one to Northwestern University.

Falcone, the "Dean of Big Ten band directors," has been director of bands here since 1927.

Kenton-Music And Faith

Stan Kenton, one of the foremost figures in contemporary American jazz, classifies music as being "close to a religious faith" in the search for personal identity.

The noted bandleader heads the Stan Kenton Jazz Workshop at Shaw Hall this week. The workshop enables about 250 jazz enthusiasts to work with some of the best-known jazz performers and educators in America.

Kenton's band will appear in a concert on the back lawn of Shaw Hall Friday at 7:00. The public is invited to hear jazz performed by Workshop students as well as Kenton's band. No admission is charged.

In case of rain, the Kenton concert will be moved inside Shaw Hall. Seating capacity is 1,000.

Sponsored by National Band Camps, the Kenton Workshop is held at several sites each summer. Other workshops this year will be held at the University of Nevada and Indiana University.

"The purpose of the workshop is to help young musicians broaden their outlook, to teach them some things which certainly aren't offered in their schools, and to give them an idea of what to expect in the world of professional music," said Kenton.

Kenton leads a discussion on various aspects of jazz known as "The Kenton Hour" each day at 7 p.m. for workshop participants.

In regard to his career, Kenton noted, "I've never made my living at anything but music. I've heard a great deal of music, and sometimes I think I've had all I want—but 15 minutes later I'm always looking for a phonograph or musical instrument."

Seriously, I don't know of anything better for creative thinking and finding the answers to some of life's problems."

Kenton's name has been a by-word in the world of progressive jazz since 1941, when he organized his "Artistry in Rhythm" band on the West Coast. Emerging from the ragtime era, Kenton's band pioneered a new style of jazz, one characterized by a staccato, two-beat attack.

"In retrospect, it is true to say that Stan Kenton was largely responsible for the formation of this new school (of jazz)," writes Alun Morgan in "Modern Jazz," 1957.

By 1945, Kenton's band had developed its basic style, which includes a large reed section, a metallic rhythm section and a strong brace of brass instruments.

Modern jazz has been termed a process of "unraveling a melody like a ball of string while holding tightly to the end."

According to Kenton, classical music theory is the basis of all improvisation. He terms Dixieland "the folk music of jazz."

"Progressive jazz is a much more refined musical form," said Kenton. "In this respect it may be compared with modern architecture. Progressive jazz became much more involved with the study of classical music theory."

According to Kenton, his band has recorded 38-40 long playing albums and "dozens" of single records. He has performed works by modern jazz composers such as Pete Rugolo, Ken Hanna, Neil Hefti, Shorty Rogers and Bob Graettinger.

The 1951 recording of Graettinger's "City of Glass" represents Kenton's farthest departure from accepted forms of jazz.

Discussing various forms of music, Kenton said, "I don't think any one of us has a right to say that one form of music is the only right kind."

"Our bus has a set of stereo earphones with a fine collection of classical music," he added.

The entire 22-piece Kenton band is here for the workshop. Trumpeter Marv Stamm says about 10 members of the Kenton band are working full-time on the staff.

Staff members play in small groups each evening for workshop students.

Asked about the so-called "decline of big bands," Kenton said, "I don't think this has anything to do with the popularity of the music. There are far fewer places for big bands to play, and many more for small combos. This, the expense involved, has reduced the number of big road bands.

"I do not think jazz will ever have any real appeal for the masses. No real art form does."

"A musician can't play music that appeals to everyone," Kenton said. "On the other hand, you can't play only for yourself."

Fluoride Becomes Issue

Part I of a two-part series on city water supplies, the chemical makeup, techniques of distribution, and some objections posed to the use of fluoride.

By BOB ROSS
Science Editor

One of the most sensational social issues of the 20th century revolves around a matter of science: the fluoridation of city water supplies.

Monday evening the city of Lansing finally voted for the measure. East Lansing has had fluoride in its water since 1955.

Michigan State University, which during the school year hosts more persons than East

Lansing has in its population, does not fluoridate its water, ent of the MSU power plant, said recently:

"We have never considered it. Many research people are studying decay in animal teeth and call us to ask that they be informed should we start to fluoridate."

"Other parents call in regarding their children's health. The MSU water serves Spartan and University Villages, the residence halls and all parts of the active campus.

"It is hard to tell just how many people use our water during the course of a day."

The furor that once surrounded fluoridation is dying down as the quiet pressure of scientific fact is seemingly driving the oppo-ents into the background. The danger now seems to be from lethargy.

Louis F. Szejda, chief of the research and special projects section in the dental health department of health, is the spearhead of the drive in Michigan to fluoridate the water systems of the entire state.

Szejda, a dentist, has been in the battle a long time.

During his graduate school days he helped compile a 149-page report on the hundreds of objections that have been raised to fluoridation.

He says the most common objections are: 1) why should the community take over the responsibility of decay prevention? 2) fluoridation is an invasion of the rights of parents to protect their own children's health, 3) fluoride is poisonous, and 4) fluoridation is a Communist plot.

Szejda says the most spectacular complaint was made by a California woman who threatened to sue the city she lived in because she had gotten pregnant from the water supply which contained fluoride.

Recent public health surveys place the number of persons with decayed teeth in the United States at 97 million, or more than half the population, Szejda said. If all who need dental care demanded it, there would not be enough dentists to provide it.

He continued that it is estimated that between one-half and two-thirds of this 97 million could have been relatively free of cavities had they received adequate fluoride in their diet since birth.

Putting it another way, he emphasized that between 48 and 64 million Americans suffer from "fluoride deficiency."

Szejda said that in Michigan 1,244,000 persons in 91 communities are drinking water to which fluoride has been added. Michigan's population is presently around seven million.

There are 200 Michigan communities in Michigan not served by fluoridated water. The children in these areas are being treated in the summertime with a topical fluoride service whereby a protective coating of sodium fluoride is applied directly to the surfaces of their teeth.

This cuts tooth decay up to 40 per cent and offers a protection that lasts for at least three years but Szejda added that a 65 per cent reduction in tooth decay is possible with fluoridated water supplies.

Michigan was one of the first states to test the application of fluoride to a city water system. Grand Rapids began the process back in 1945.

The figure of 65 per cent reduction of decay is largely based on the Grand Rapids experiment. The amount of fluoride used for city addition is one part of the chemical per million parts

Engineers Return To School

MSU will conduct a seminar this fall to bring up-to-date a large number of engineers working in Michigan industries who have been out of school since the introduction of newer methods.

John D. Ryder, dean of the college of engineering, said the course, to be conducted in Kellogg Center one weekend a month for 10 consecutive months, would not be a "hasty survey."

The class, limited to 30 or 40 engineers, will accept applications during the month of August in room two of the Kellogg Center, Ryder said.

Ryder said the program "is intended to provide a reasonable review of a few selected topics of modern development which are believed to be of major importance to the industries of Michigan and surrounding states."

Selected as the ten general topics are: modern mathematics computers, modern physics, molecular engineering, devices, systems engineering, modern mechanics, information noise and reliability, space navigation, propulsion and technology and energy transformation and storage.

Fluoride - Social Issue

 of water used for public consumption.
 The cost in this area stands at about eight cents per year per capita. Szejda feels that this is quite liberal considering the cost of dental repairs.
 Using an example, the cost for a family of four who last year paid out $100 for dental care, would have been only $35.32 for the fluoride service.
 As of January 1, 1961, some 45,800,000 persons in the country were receiving the benefits of a fluoridated public water supply;

Unfortunately 81,255,927 were not. The remainder of the population is not served by public water.
 Perhaps the real tragedy in these figures lies with the children. The American Dental Association released figures in January of this year showing that 40 million children in 18,000 communities are not receiving optional protective amounts of fluoride.
 The association pointed out that next to the common cold, tooth decay is the most universal disease of mankind. But, the report continued, research has demonstrated that between one-half and two-thirds of tooth cavities can be prevented by adequate intake of fluoride, beginning with conception and birth.

 *****
 Part II of this series will concern itself with the chemical makeup of fluoride, fluoride metabolism, danger of excess dosage, types of fluoride compounds available, the cost of a city's using the chemical, and the results that have been obtained in certain cities.

4-H To Meet Here

Michigan 4-H Clubs will be on parade on campus Aug. 27-30. The event is the 47th annual State 4-H Club show—one of the highlights of Michigan's 4-H year.

More than 3,000 participants will take part in events ranging from automobile driver skill contests to dress revues. Thousands of exhibits, the best in the state, will go on display to demonstrate the many talents of the Michigan's more than 70,000 club members.

The traditional livestock show is still a part of the annual show, but there are hundreds of other features which reflect the changing membership of 4-H Clubs. More and more urban and non-farm young people are enrolling in clubwork with many and varied interests ranging from gun safety to handicrafts.

While the show will retain much of the rural flavor, the chief emphasis will be on education for youth of many interests—future citizens of tomorrow.

There will be special programs on landscaping, electricity and a tractor operator's contest. While the lean hog, the blocky lamb and the prize steer will be on hand, some of the show rings will also have horses and dogs—indicating a departure from a program that was once primarily for farm youngsters.

Fewer and fewer 4-H'ers will return to the farm in the next decade and they are planning ahead to develop many new interests. The State Show in East Lansing will mirror this change.

The Cooperative Extension Service, sponsor of the annual event, recognizes that although there have been many dramatic advances in agriculture, development of youth is one of the most vital contributions to Michigan. For nearly half a century, the head, heart, hands and health organization—symbolized by the familiar 4-H clover has maintained programs which reach into every Michigan county.

Cancer Fear Lightened

The dread of local residents concerning cancer and its results may be lightened by events which took place in Moscow recently.

The eighth annual International Cancer Congress, highlighting progress made in research during the past year, was in session from July 22 through 28.

Stomach cancer, cancer caught from surrounding mountains, the dangers of tobacco, and cancer of the breast were some of the topics under consideration.

From Minneapolis comes a method to determine the distinction between stomach cancer and a plain gastric condition.

Because stomach cancer is one of the most difficult to diagnose as it rarely shows up on X-ray pictures, radioactive phosphorus P-32 is now used to determine its presence.

Norman B. Ackerman of the University of Minnesota medical school, told the congress that a one-hour test can determine the presence of cancer when the radioactive phosphorus is used.

A relationship between geological formation and cancer has been found by Doctors J. Barany and Lajos Galacz of Hungary.

Radioactive stones in rock formations can be dangerous to human life, the doctors report.

The heavy use of tobacco in any form was responsible for almost all cancer in the throat and mouth of men in South India according to two Madras doctors.

Breast cancer is the most common form of cancer in the United States but proof has come from a New York doctor that a new operation can substantially increase cures rates.

Jerome A. Urban of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering cancer center told the congress that of the 53 patients operated upon more than 10 years ago with the new method 50 percent are now alive and free of disease. This survival rate of 50 percent compares with an over-all 10 year survival rate of 33.8 percent by the conventional method.

The International Union Against Cancer, which sponsors the congress, is composed of 87 organizations in 62 countries.

Although non-governmental, the congress receives its largest support from the National Institutes of Health of the USA.

U of M Rejects

Federal Aid

The University of Michigan will reject all federal grants that do not cover university costs for overhead, said Ralph A. Sawyer, vice-president of the school.

Sawyer also said that any other grants that don't allow for government payment of unforeseen costs will be rejected.

Two such grants, from the corps of engineers and the Army surgeon general, have already been turned down.

Sawyer continued that costs on government grants can run as high as 30 percent of the total cost. He said he would not make any final decision until ceilings have been determined for other agencies and other universities have taken courses of action.

Detroit Drops Four Sports

The University of Detroit has announced it will discontinue track, tennis, golf and sailing from its varsity sports program.

The school said inadequate facilities and limited funds necessitated the measure. No coaches have been dismissed.

Detroit will continue its participation in college level football, basketball, baseball and fencing.

Twenty-five scholarships will be trimmed from the athletic program, the university said.

Periodic cicadas occur only in the eastern United States. After hiding out for 17 years, they emerge into the sun for a spree of mating, egg laying and singing. The cicadas will appear in 1962.

Trade Gets First Test

DETROIT -- The first test of which team "got the best end" of the Detroit Lion-Cleveland Brown six man swap this spring comes Saturday when the two teams meet in Tiger Stadium.

Cleveland will bring in former Michigan State star Jim Ninowski the quarterback they obtained from Detroit for Mill

Plum, who starts at quarterback for the Lions.

Former Lions halfback Hopalong Cassidy of Ohio State and end Bill Glass will be playing in Tiger Stadium for the first time as Browns. Other former Browns the Lions received last spring in addition to Plum are Bobby Watkins and linebacker

Dave Lloyd.

Other former Michigan State performers in the Lion roster are Sam Williams, seeking a starting defensive end post, quarterback Earl Morrall, destined to relieve Plum, and Gary Lowe, a defensive back. John Sharp, who played for Michigan State last fall, was cut from the team Monday. He was seeking a defensive back job.

No Fear Of Russians Now

Leaders of the Orthodox Catholic Church in Russia declare they no longer fear the persecution of their Communist rulers, according to a New York clergyman. "There is nothing more they can do to us," church leaders told the Rev. Fr. David Abramstov of St. Nicholas Cathedral, New York City, when he visited Russia a few years ago. "The Communists have thrown everything they have at us and we are still here," the Russian church leaders said. "They can no longer hurt us." Rev. Abramstov, a program participant at an Eastern Orthodox Catechetical Conference July 30-Aug. 3 at MSU, believes that the church in Russia is actually stronger today than it was at the time of the Russian Revolution.
