Warships Given Inspection Task On Red Missiles Leaving Cuba

Khrushchev Says Ships Underway

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. government looked Thursday for its warships to confirm that Soviet nuclear rockets are leaving Cuba, but insisted this sea-check does not remove the need for on-site inspection.

The Defense Department announced Wednesday that arrangements were being made with the Soviets to check their ships outbound from Cuba with the missiles which had imperiled U.S. security. Thursday, the department said such contacts were expected soon but gave no details on the mechanics of the inspections at sea.

In an impromptu news conference Wednesday, Soviet Premier Khrushchev said the missiles "probably are on their way" back to Russia and mentioned a figure of 40. A U.S. Defense Department spokesman said Tuesday "we'll certainly be looking for a minimum of 40 missiles" when the warships rendezvous with the Soviet merchantmen.

At the time the hasty erection of bases brought a limited naval blockade of Cuba plus aerial surveillance of the sites, the Defense Department had said at least 30 medium-range mobile rockets and intermediate range ballistic missiles were known to be in Cuba.

Although officials discount reports by Cuban refugees that many of the nuclear rockets are being hidden in Cuban caves, the State Department said Thursday the agreement for examination of the missile ships at sea doesn't remove "the necessity for ground inspection and verification in Cuba."

The sea-check also left unanswered the problem of at least 20 Ilyushin-28 medium jet bombers Moscow is known to have sent into Cuba. The U.S. position is that these 700-mile-range aircraft must go along with the missiles.

Pending satisfactory answers to the inspection and bomber questions, the U.S. is maintaining its blockade against any incoming offensive arms and continuing aerial surveillance of Cuba. Also in abeyance is a U.S. no-invasion pledge which was predicated on solidly verified elimination of offensive armaments from Cuba.

Pursuing a "no-comment" policy persistently, the government has given no information on the results of the blockade or the aerial reconnaissance since last Saturday. At that time, it released pictures taken on Thursday which were interpreted as showing the dismantling of the bases was well along.

On Sunday, Edwin M. Martin, assistant secretary of State for Inter-American affairs, said the destruction of the bases was virtually complete. But no added evidence has been offered on that point.

In his Oct. 25 letter to President Kennedy announcing withdrawal of the nuclear weapons, Khrushchev spoke of verification by the United Nations. Although he did not specify on-site inspection by U.N. personnel, it was and is assumed here that was what he meant.

Smell Attacked By Guns

A 12 gun assault will be launched on the odor created by the sewage problem in the Red Cedar River.

The 10 gallon compression guns which resemble atomizers and are filled with Airwick are expected to be in working order by Monday.

The guns are equipped with 35-pound pressure tanks and will be used to spray the areas around the sewage disposal plant.

Also aiding the cause of dispersing the smell is the repair of several of the machines which drive an air mixture into the sewage, breaking it up. The machines broke down in the fall, but are expected to be back in operation within a week or a week and a half.

Donald V. Adams, educational director of men's residence halls, and Ted Smith, manager of the Brody group of dormitories, visited the sewage disposal plant Wednesday, to discuss the problem of its smell with Edgar Schneider, director of the plant.

Adams and Smith also saw the blueprints of the new sewage disposal plant to be erected farther away from the campus, on Main Street. Plans have not been made for its completion, however.

Rumors of a student boycott of East Lansing stores, with the hopes of forcing merchants to speak to the Chamber of Commerce, which in turn would get the Town Council to take action with the plant on the odor problem, turned into just rumors, Adams said. He added that the students decided this would not help the problem, since East Lansing residents have also complained about the situation.

A recommendation to spray the Brody side of the plant twice as much as the University Village side, since winds blow in the Brody direction, was made by Adams and Smith.

The University personnel are aware of the problems, Adams said. "It's tough to study and it's tough to work with the smell, especially at night when the odors cling close to the ground," Adams said.

"We came away from this place (the sewage plant), more impressed than we ever have been," he added. "They've gone all out. We hope there will be some help by next Monday, and when they get the pumps fixed, the problem should be alleviated," he concluded.

Pair Hurt In Campus R.R. Crash

Two Detroit women were reported in fair condition at a Lansing hospital after they were injured in a train-car collision which completely demolished their late model automobile.

The accident occurred 5:38 p.m. at the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad crossing at Mt. Hope Road on campus.

State Police said the C&O passenger train, barreling toward Detroit from Lansing at 60 miles an hour, crashed into the rear of the automobile, throwing the passengers clear and hurling the vehicle 130 feet down the road.

According to police, the driver of the vehicle saw the signals turn on, applied the brakes and skidded onto the tracks where the car stalled.

In the hospital with cuts and bruises are Virginia Bayorin, 52, Detroit Special Program undergraduate, and Polly Ann Buhl, 26, Flatrock junior.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Visits Recalled

By ERIC FILSON Of The State News

As the world mourns the passing of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt two local persons recall the two visits she made to the campus in 1940 and 1958.

Stanley E. Crowe, former Dean of Students (1944-1950) and head of the Lecture-Concert Series program (1940-1956) remembers Mrs. Roosevelt when she gave the dedication speech for the new Auditorium the fall of 1940.

"She received the greatest ovation in the University Lecture-Concert Series history," Crowe said. "Over 6,000 people jammed the Auditorium to hear her talk."

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced to the audience by the late president of MSU, Robert S. Shaw. "It was the largest crowd ever to fill the Auditorium," Crowe said. At that time the state fire marshal did not have jurisdiction on campus. Since then crowds that large have not been allowed into the Aud. for fire reasons.

Actually, Mrs. Roosevelt was the second lecturer to speak in the Aud. H. R. Knickerbocker, a famous correspondent for International News Service spoke in the first Auditorium program earlier in the fall Crowe said.

Mrs. Roosevelt's dedication speech was about the ideals that people should strive for in life. Afterward several people came up to her in order to touch her hand.

Mrs. Roosevelt was taken to Campbell Hall after her talk because she wanted to meet some of the students and see a dorm. She held a press conference in Campbell during her informal talks with several students.

"She impressed us as being a very great woman and was extremely interested in people," Crowe said. "She had a great love for people. When she met the students at Campbell she took charge and put them at ease."

Crowe retired as the MSU Dean of Students in 1956. He is presently the chairman of the board at the East Lansing Savings and Loan Association.

Mrs. Thomas H. Osgood, wife of Thomas H. Osgood, professor of physics and astronomy, brought Mrs. Roosevelt here in the spring of 1958 to speak to an organizational meeting for a local chapter of the American

Swainson Misses Meeting

Gov. John B. Swainson, defeated by George Romney in Tuesday's gubernatorial election, did not speak before the Michigan Farm Bureau's meeting Thursday afternoon.

Swainson sent a telegram Wednesday expressing regrets that he could not fit the meeting into his schedule.

His tentative acceptance of the Bureau's invitation to speak at the conference was received by the Bureau about eight months ago, Bureau member J. Delbert Wells said.

The Bureau received a letter almost a week ago expressing concern that it might not be possible for the governor to attend but an effort was being made.

Kennedy Pays Honor To Mrs. FDR

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Kennedy honored Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt Thursday by directing that the American flag be flown at half-staff on government buildings, military bases and vessels until the burial of the former First Lady Saturday.

In a statement mourning Mrs. Roosevelt's death, the President said "one of the great ladies in the history of this country has passed from the scene."

"Since the day I entered this office," Kennedy said, "she has been both an inspiration and a friend; and my wife and I always looked forward to her visits to the White House to which she always lent such grace and charm."

However, the nation could not if it would--heard to itself the grief inspired by the passing of one of the world's outstanding women. Sorrow spread deep and wide across the world, even behind the Iron Curtain of communism.

Messages of sympathy flowed in to form a small testimonial mountain of the abiding affection tendered Mrs. Roosevelt by the mighty and the humble, who shared a feeling that her life had enriched theirs.

Russian Concert Sunday

The Leningrad Philharmonic, oldest and greatest of Russia's orchestras, will perform at the auditorium at 3 p.m. Sunday conducted by Eugen Mravinsky and guest conductor Gennadi Rozhddestvensky.

Making its first tour of the U.S., the orchestra is part of the Cultural Exchange Program maintained by the Department of State and the Soviet Ministry of Culture. It will give 30 performances throughout the eastern states, concurrent with a tour of the USSR by the Robert Shaw Chorale and Orchestra.

In recent years the 107 man ensemble has been heard in London, Paris, Rome, Stockholm, Tokyo and many other world capitals. The orchestra, a product of an evolving musical tradition that has transcended revolution and world war, has an unbroken history from 1882. It was originally formed as a court orchestra and played its early concerts under the direction of such musical notables as Rimsky-Korsakov and Anton Rubinstein.

In the early years of the orchestra's history, Tchaikovsky made a number of journeys from Moscow to Leningrad to conduct it at the Hall of the Assembly of Nobility which is now Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall.

Today, although strongly associated with the works of Tchaikovsky, the Leningrad orchestra has a large repertoire of contemporary works. More than any other musical organization in the Soviet Union, the Leningrad Philharmonic combines the traditional with the cosmopolitan. This tour will give American audiences a chance to hear the Soviet Union's leading symphonic orchestra play works by Prokofiev, Samuel Barber, and Tchaikovsky.

India's Nehru...in happier times...

Red Chinese Start New Offensive

NEW DELHI - The Chinese broke a lull on the Himalayan battle line Thursday with fresh probing attacks. Indians said the action appeared to be a prelude to a resumption of the Communist offensive.

Prime Minister Nehru rallied his people for a war to drive what he called the expansionist, imperialist-minded invaders from "The sacred soil of India."

Long an apostle of passive non-violence, the Indian leader declared the nation's freedom is at stake and warned Parliament to brace for a struggle that might do on for a number of years.

The new Chinese attacks came in the Eastern end of the 2,500-mile disputed frontier around Walong, 15 miles from the Burma border. A defense ministry spokesman said one Indian was killed, two missing and an estimated 15 communists were killed or wounded.

Lecture-Concert's Ticket Problem

The State News has received a number of letters in the last few days from students claiming that they had anxiously looked forward to attending the Leningrad Symphony concert but discovered to their dismay that the Sunday program was sold out three hours after student tickets were made available.

Another irritated student wanted to know how many season tickets are sold, perhaps suspecting Machiavellian tactics by the people in charge.

We truly sympathize with those students who were unable to obtain tickets for the four programs which have been sold out this fall. Indeed, attending the concert by the Leningrad Symphony, "A Program for Two Players," and "The Sound of Music" may be once-in-a-lifetime experiences for many individuals.

But only by placing these circumstances in perspective, only by understanding the nature of Michigan State's Lecture-Concert operations, will a fair picture evolve.

Last year, the New York City Ballet was here for two performances. The cost was $10,000 each night.

The students didn't have to pay one penny. And since Dr. Wilson Paul, director of the Lecture-Concert Series, is not a millionaire, the money had to come from someplace.

The University provides for approximately 15 percent of the expenses. Dr. Paul must raise the rest himself.

Hence, every year, one-half of the 3,964 seats are placed on sale to the public. At least 50 percent of the tickets are saved for the students. In fact, Dr. Paul states that when tickets are at a premium for the more desirous programs, students are allocated as many as 2,200 tickets.

Dr. Paul admits that for every $4 or $5 ticket that a student gets free, he has to raise $3.

One of the problems which Paul faces is the irregularity of student attendance.

Monday, one of the world's greatest violinists, David Oistrakh, performed. There were many empty seats in sections devoted to students.

One fact, however, must be considered. The student enrollment is growing by leaps and bounds. Moreover, the quality of the student is improving enormously.

For sure, all of these statistics provide implications for the Lecture-Concert Series.

The implications, indeed, have become fact: over 6,000 MORE students attended Lecture-Concert programs last year than the previous year, according to Paul.

A Lecture-Concert committee, set up by AUSG, is operating with one of its functions being to consider this problem and make recommendations for the future.

Quite obviously, something has to be done. It would be nice to see the University increase its subsidy; but it must be realized that few if any other universities give money at all. And Michigan State has enough financial problems without adding another.

Perhaps students should be made to pay a small fee. This proposal may sound shocking. We've become spoiled. However, if you were a student at the University of Michigan, you would be paying $4 for a $4 seat.

We could be facetious and make one more suggestion. Then, again, there is no lighting system in Spartan Stadium.

MSU Statistics.. Story Of A Big Ten School

Sally Derrickson

Speaking of statistics... when it comes to facts and figures, Michigan State has some that are pretty impressive.

About MSU students: MSU's enrollment totals about 27,000 students, counting the branch at Okland. Some 25,000 are on campus—which includes 960 acres of land with 13,000 trees—and about 15,000 are undergraduates.

About 37 per cent of the undergraduates are women, and 21 per cent of the grad students are females. There are 2,462 married undergrads, and 2,407 married graduate students.

More than 550 foreign students from 84 countries are enrolled at State.

About half of the undergrads live in University residence halls. Another 10 per cent live in fraternities and sororities, and more than 2,000 live in married housing. Owen Graduate Center accounts for 14 per cent of the grad student population.

About the campus: Some 5,400 different species of trees, vines, and shrubs are scattered across the campus—all labeled. Beal-Gardfield gardens next to the library, founded in 1873, are the oldest of their type in the United States.

There are 900,000 books in the library... somewhere. And more are coming in all the time.

Over 2,000 acres of experimental farms and research installations are located on MSU property in the East Lansing area.

Letters to the Editor

On Zionists, Sheep, Tickets, Etc.

I am an Arab and have nothing against the Jews as people or their religion, but the Arabs are against the Zionist movement. The Western Powers headed by the U.S.A., when ex-president Truman was in the White House, stole the Arab land of Palestine and left more than one million Arab refugees without homes. These people still live in the worst conditions under which human beings can survive.

I was glad to see that Leonard R. Sussman, Executive Director, American Council for Judaism, clarified the difference between the Jews and the Zionists (who are outnumbered in this country) State News, November 1, 1962, and considered his American citizenship first and above all. I have found that the Zionists always feel that they belong to Israel more than they belong to their country of citizenship in many respects.

If this is the case I wonder why they don't all go to Israel? Of course they can't because they are enjoying the wealth and the security of the U.S.A. And they will be always able to keep "their homeland" existing through the hundreds of millions of tax-free dollars annually, and through their political influence in the U.S. government.

An American Jew (presumably a Zionist) on this campus once said, "Wait until there will be a Jew president in this country, then all Arabs will be wiped off the map." I don't know if he meant that the Zionists will take over the U.S. or what?

No Respect, Trust

Whatever the aims of the administration of this University in attempting to deny academic freedom to our students and faculty and the right of free speech to those who are guaranteed that right under the Constitution, its ends will never justify its means in the minds of intelligent men.

We all profess to believe that the Founding Fathers were wise and that their principles were just, impartial, and beneficial to all. Each of us says that he appreciates the benefits of freedom and democracy.

It is discouraging, then, to find an instructor supposedly dedicated to the pursuit of Truth, to be ruled by men who are unaware that they are destroying the principles under which it functions. Can it be that our administration is composed of men so dedicated to raising funds, so dedicated to the approval of influential friends, or so dedicated to personal power that they can't forget their obligation to freedom and democracy?

At Oxford, Mississippi, the administration, assisted by sympathetic faculty and students, allowed justice to be defied. Here at MSU, the administration, assisted by unwilling faculty and student faculty committees is succeeding in the perpetration of injustice. Fortunately, even for those too passive or too ignorant to care, we have leaders like Peter Werve, Jan Garrett, and Bob Howard who are willing to risk their personal well-being for us in defense of our freedom. Isn't it time that we place enduring values above transient ones and let it be known that we can't respect an administration which doesn't respect our rights, and we can't trust an administration which doesn't trust our rationality?

Might and Right

While it may be a fine thing for Mr. Beeler to discuss the moral aspects of American foreign policy, we must not lose sight of the fact that we are facing a serious challenge to our way of life. Need I point out the aims of Communist policy or the methods which they facilitate to accomplish their ends.

In order to cope with the threat of Communism we are finding it necessary to develop a realistic foreign policy of our own—one that will meet the Communist threat even at the expense of certain moral platitudes. In short, I feel that the realm of morality, especially the right and wrong, black and white morality of American culture, should be kept separate from the realm of foreign diplomacy.

We have learned a bitter lesson in the past that when these two realms are combined the results are a confusion of and many times a setback to our national interests. Therefore, if we consider ourselves to have a basis for fighting against Communism, then we must be realistic in our policy making even if it calls for a disregard of Occidental moral concepts. We must be ready as a result to ask ourselves if the end—the democratic way of life—justifies the means, moral or otherwise, and I believe they do.

L-C Tickets

It was expressed to me through various and sundry publications and persons that upon entering Michigan State at our disposal would be one of the best Lecture-Concert Series to be found anywhere in the nation.

The students want to "cash in" on this exceptional opportunity. I am not fully aware who receives the lion's share of Lecture-Concert tickets but being a somewhat self-centered student I would enjoy obtaining a larger portion of the Lecture-Concert tickets than they do at the present.

Sheep Story

Once upon a time there were four very unusual sheep who felt uncomfortable following in the paths of their fellow sheep. (Color the four sheep black.) It occurred to the four sheep that it was ridiculous to eat the muddy and trampled grass in the herd's browsing pasture when across the way was a beautiful green pasture with rolling hills and plenty of the freshest grass.

So one day, to the outrage of the other sheep, our four friends ventured from the herd to the rolling hills across the way. There, things went very well for the four black sheep. They ate of the freshest grass and grew strong and healthy. New sheep were born, and soon a prosperous community developed. Meanwhile, the old herd grew lean and died.

Time passed. The founding sheep died and things started going poorly for the new herd. The grass became trampled from use and turned brown and unhealthy. Then one day a black sheep was born into the herd, and like most black sheep he had a new idea.

"Why not move to the unused field across the road?" the little sheep eagerly suggested to the elders. Now it was common knowledge that the grass on the other side of the road only seemed greener so naturally the elder sheep were enraged. The Committee for the Screening of New Grass Areas, which had been formed in memory of the four founding sheep, arose to indignantly rebuke the impetuous young sheep. "What was good enough for the founding sheep is most certainly good enough for you!" "Yes," cried the little sheep, "but the founding sheep said that all sheep should be free to seek new grass." "That is true," conceded the head of the committee, "and that is what we are here to help you do. But you must trust our judgment for we are older and know what grass is best for you. It is dangerous for a little sheep like you to venture into unknown fields for you could get lost or worse, you could be eaten by the big bad wolf which we have heard is lurking in the field across the road."

So the little sheep went away, but he was not satisfied. He felt positive that the grass really was greener on the other side of the road. One day he could contain himself no longer. He invited several of his friends, and together they started across the road when they were seen and stopped by one of the elders. A great trial was held and the little black sheep was convicted of conduct unbecoming a sheep. As a result he was put on probation and restricted to a small, barren area of the pasture where it was felt he wouldn't be able to possess the minds of the other young sheep. Shortly afterwards, the young sheep died but before he did he asked that the following epitaph be inscribed on his grave:

I THOUGHT BIGBAD WOLVES WENT OUT WITH SANTA CLAUS!

The Editor Says ----- Big Gamble: Nixon Lost It

----- Ben Burns

Tuesday marked the end of Richard Milhouse Nixon's stellar political prestige. He hit rock bottom in the California gubernatorial contest where he was shellacked by the incumbent incumbent Pat Brown.

No matter what your political affiliation, you have to be a little sorry for the rags-to-riches politician, who began his career in 1946 with his election to Congress.

That first campaign of Nixon's got him the reputation of a backstabbing politician, who relied on sly innuendo and vague charges to cripple his opponent.

Nixon replaced an excellent Democratic congressman named Jerry Voorhis, who later in writing a book, "Confessions of a Congressman," absolved Nixon from any connection with the campaign that hinted at Voorhis' Communist tendencies.

Voorhis placed the blame on the big money interests that controlled and backed Nixon. He commended Nixon as an excellent individual and honest politician.

Voorhis was noted as one of the more liberal Democratic congressmen and was deeply respected by leaders of both parties. That 1946 campaign helped to kill Nixon a little in 1952.

Later Nixon vaulted to the Senate and then slipped into the second spot on the Republican slate in 1952.

Nixon's fame stemmed partially from the part he played in convicting Alger Hiss, a Roosevelt advisor, of competing with the Communist party. There is still a good deal of debate over the evidence produced to convict Hiss.

The evidence against Hiss centered on an old typewriter that had been used to type certain incriminating notes. Records seem to indicate that the FBI had this typewriter in their hands before it was discovered in the Hiss attic. The whole situation was confused, but one thing is certain—

Nixon picked up more enemies around the country with his actions in the Hiss case.

As vice president, Nixon was awarded the title "The board man!" Republicans who disliked him joined with Democrats in assailing his personality and said he was like a weather vane and changed course to better his personal situation.

During an Eisenhower administration tour of South America Nixon caught a rock in the teeth. When he met Khrushchev in Russia, Nixon fiercely debated with the roly-poly head of the Kremlin.

Campaign supporters used these incidents as a basis for boosting Nixon for president and for pushing his candidacy for governor. Nixon entered the California campaign in an attempt to boost his sagging party prestige.

He had won six times previously in California, and one would win would put him back in the race for the 1964 GOP presidential nomination.

He hadn't lost by much in 1960 and maybe just maybe, maybe he wasn't good enough, and Nixon caught another rock in the teeth.

His home folks repudiated him. He lost by 250,000 votes. Nixon has a dim future in national politics. In 1960 he was almost-president, today he is an almost-nobody, political Nixon fought for every office he ever got. He and his wife were in there slugging every inch of the way.

He is a Quaker by religion, but a politician by ethics. He stands less chance than Adlai Stevenson of getting nominated for national office. He hasn't got Stevenson's impeccable reputation and intellectual image.

I feel sorry for Nixon—he gambled and lost.

Roosevelt spoke before a luncheon held in the Big 100 Centennial rooms of the Big 100 Center. Immediately after she held an informal meeting with students.

It was a most marvelous day, said Mrs. Osgood. "She is about how important it is to get along with each other in the world."

Roosevelt also stressed the importance of the U.N. is being given a chance to give nations a chance to work together about their problems, said Mrs. Osgood.

Mrs. Osgood was trying to form a chapter of the American Association for the United States when Mrs. Roosevelt visited. A week later the chapter was formed and Mrs. Osgood was vice president at the time.

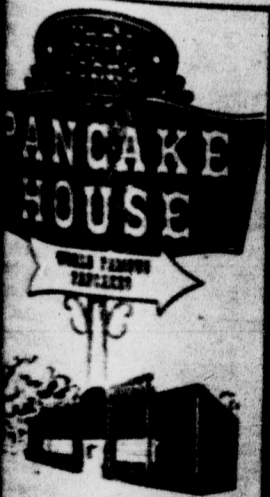

Mrs. Roosevelt came to Michigan in 1954 there were only 12 chapters of the Association in Michigan. Now there are 12, said Mrs. Osgood.

Purdue's 'All American' Band Here Saturday

Leading the "All American" band through its routines will be one of the most famous college twirlers in the country, the "Golden Girl," Teddie Darling of Manteca, Calif., who was selected from hundreds of applicants. Purdue bills her as the "Queen of the Nation's Twirlers."

This year's Golden Girl, Teddie Darling of Manteca, Calif., was selected from hundreds of applicants. Purdue bills her as the "Queen of the Nation's Twirlers."

The superlative-minded Purdue bandmen also boast "the world's largest bass drum." This monstrosity is more than ten feet tall, eight feet in diameter and four feet between its heads. It takes four husky bandmen to maneuver the "Monster," as it is known to Boilermaker fans.

The heads of the colossal drum are covered with the signatures of mayors and governors of cities and states where the Purdue band has played. The most notable autograph is that of former-President Harry Truman.

The "All American" band boasts of a number of firsts that are now widely copied by other bands.

In 1907 it became the first to break ranks and form letters when it made the block "P".

Also, the band was the first to play an opponent's school song, and the first to use a precision line of majorettes.

In addition, the band marches with a distinctive step known as the "Boilermaker Strut."

Grad Wins Turkey Trot

Don Shuster, a member of The Grads, independent team, raced into the finish chute 50 yards ahead to win the 19th annual Turkey Trot in a time of 5:57.7 Wednesday night on Old College Field.

The team winner was East Shaw Hall.

Also winning live turkeys were Bryon Latter representing Armstrong Hall, who placed second, and Mike Mehas of Case, who was third.

In residence hall competition, Bryon placed second and Armstrong came in a close third.

ATO was the first fraternity team to complete the run, but they only managed to place tenth overall.

A crowd of approximately 200 watched as 23 teams and 200 participants ran in the cold wind that swept over Old College Field.

Intramural News

Block champions claimed their titles in women's IM volleyball this week. These champions will compete for residence league and sorority independent league trophies next week.

Travelling trophies will be presented to the champions in each league.

Playoff times will be announced in the State News. Carol Harding, IM director, advises girls to check the paper for their schedules because this is the only announcement to be made.

Residence block champs are: Case one; West Yakeley one; East Mayo; Wilson six; Wilson nine; Butterfield three, Phillips two and Rather four, tied in their block. Playoffs will be announced Monday.

Sorority-independent league championship will be announced Monday also. Kappa Alpha Theta and Kappa Delta girls should watch for play-off times.

This week game scores were: East Landon one over West Landon two; North Williams over West Landon; East Mayo one over Gilchrest two; Off-Campus one over Off-Campus two; Kappa Alpha Theta over Kappa Kappa Gamma; Zeta Tau Alpha over Tri-Delta.

Un-defeated Case Hall fell to Wilson's women's field hockey team Wednesday, 2-1. West Yakeley won by default over Butterfield.

Because basketball season follows volleyball, swimming and field hockey, a basketball clinic will be held next Wednesday in the new gym of the Women's IM building. All women interested in IM basketball competition should attend this demonstration and informal question and answer session.

Conference Cross Country Championship At Iowa

By JOHN VANGIESON
Of The State News

State's cross country team will be trying to regain its winning touch which brought eight titles in 12 championship meets to the Spartan campus. The Big Ten meet Monday at Iowa's South Finkbine Golf Course kicks off this year's championship schedule.

Coach Fran Dittrich said that his team is ready and is going to be a contender.

The Spartans are coming off one of their worst seasons in years, but Dittrich feels his team is just beginning to reach its full potential.

Back from last year's second place team are three runners who scored. They are: Roger Humbarger, 11th; Don Castle, 15th, and Bob Fulcher, 19th. Also returning are Dick Gyde and Ron Berby, who ran but didn't score.

Rounding out the Spartan squad are sophomores Mike Kaines and Jan Bowen.

Dittrich isn't counting out any of his runners, but he said none of them will be as strong a title threat as Gerry Young was. The graduated Young finished second in the 1961 conference race.

Iowa, the squad which ended State's Big Ten championship winning streak at six straight last year, is favored to repeat.

The Hawkeyes have an impressive winning streak of their own, winning 14 consecutive dual meets. Included in the streak is a decision over Wisconsin - conqueror of State this fall.

Although missing Jim Tucker, last year's champion, Iowa has three men back who finished in the top 10 - Larry Kramer, fourth; Ralph Trimble, fifth, and Gary Fischer, seventh.

One advantage State will have as it seeks to dethrone Iowa is superior balance. Last year the fifth Hawkeye runner finished 28th while State's fifth man was only 19th.

Before State can challenge Iowa, it must dispose of an excellent Wisconsin squad.

The Badgers loss to Iowa was the only one they suffered, during the regular season.

Leading the Wisconsin team are sophomore Greg Gard and senior Don Loker, 14th in last fall's meet.

Other possible contenders in the conference chase are Illinois and Indiana.

Iowa holds a victory over Illinois, but the Illinois' Al Carius has been clocked in 19:47, best time of any runner appearing in the Big Ten meet. Dittrich rates him as one of the two strongest individuals in the race.

Indiana, beaten by Notre Dame who State trounced, has had its share of bad luck, but the Hoosiers could be tough if they can field a healthy team.

Clinton Campbell, 10th last year, and Charles Umbarger, third, are Hoosier threats. However, Umbarger has been hurt and may miss this contest.

The only other schools fielding full teams, Ohio State and Minnesota, appear to be also-rans. But Buckeye sophomore, Frank Parks, has run a 19:57.2 this fall, making him as the second leading contender for the individual crown, according to Coach Dittrich.

Northwestern will not enter a full team, but will send a few individuals.

This year's meet marks the first time since 1941 that the race hasn't been held at Chicago's Washington Park. As far as State is concerned it should have stayed there - Iowa is tough enough without a home course advantage.

Dittrich said that the Spartans have never run on Iowa's home course before, but the team will have a few days to practice before the meet is run.

Forddy Talks To HPER Club

Forddy Anderson spoke to the HPER Club members at their regular meeting Wednesday night.

Anderson, who is head basketball coach of the Spartans, divided his speech into two parts - the duties of physical education and how to coordinate a basketball clinic.

Looking toward the future, club sponsor George Sygula pointed toward the forthcoming state athletic convention in Lansing this month. Plans were also discussed for working with the women's HPER Club.

Pass Competition

The winner of the Football Pass competition in which 357 competed was Jim Obermiller. Obermiller and Max Hasse tied the first time through with 19 out of 25 completions. In the play-off Obermiller beat Hasse by completing 14 to Hasse's 9.

King of Swat

Playoffs At Stake

Action continued in IM football Wednesday as teams fought for block championships and the much sought after play-off berths.

Wally Arnold scored two touchdowns as West Shaw eight regained early season form to defeat a highly favored West Shaw seven team 25-6.

Wilson twelve scored on a first period run by Wayne Gates

Campus Has Largest National Voice Library

The largest collection of recorded voices in the world is available to MSU students at the newly-formed National Voice Library on the fourth floor of the Library Building.

G. Robert Vincent, assistant to the director of libraries and curator of the National Voice Library, has preserved the original speeches of more than 8000 people. The unique service is built around these recorded speeches.

"Throughout the years I've captured historic events by recording the voices of the people involved," said Vincent, "as a photographer takes pictures."

A magazine editor at the age of ten, Vincent became personally acquainted with former President Teddy Roosevelt. A framed copy of an article written by Roosevelt for the magazine still hangs above Vincent's desk.

Vincent said his collection of recordings was increased considerably when he worked ten years for Thomas Edison.

"I got the entire collection of cylinder recordings and later developed a device to take the sound off them electronically."

Vincent believes that actual recorded voices give a more insight into the character of historic figures than merely reading about them in books.

"It gives a much better perspective to actually hear the participants in a historic situation," he commented.

The library contains recordings dating from the time of Abraham Lincoln to the present. Vincent records all major contemporary events so that future generations will be able to hear them.

History Books By Profs Sell Widely In Europe

Russell E. Nye, professor of English, and J.E. Warrup, a former visiting professor at MSU, are co-authors of a two-volume American history which has become the most widely sold work of its type in Europe.

The books, "The Birth of the USA" and "The Growth of the USA" were published in 1955 by Penguin Books in England. The edition sold 100,000 copies.

A French edition sold 50,000 copies in 1961. A German edition will be sold in 1963 and is expected to sell 40,000.

Warrup, a native of England, is president of the British Book League and a lecturer in both British and American Universities.

Spartan Engineers Begin Activities

The Spartan Engineers, a new campus organization to spark more active interest in engineering education for freshmen was begun last month.

The group plans to sponsor several seminars and lectures featuring speakers eminent in the engineering and science education fields.

Officers were elected at the first organizational meeting Oct. 6.

Information concerning the Spartan Engineers may be obtained from Harwood Phend, assistant to the dean of the college of engineering.

Future Profs Tour Campus

High school students interested in teaching will inspect State, Saturday, according to Ronald G. Rex, assistant director of student teaching.

Rex estimates that 200 students will gather on campus for a Future Teachers Field Day. Twelve Michigan high schools will be represented.

Sandra Hulkoski, president of the MSU Student Education Association, is the host for the meetings.

"Teaching as a Career Choice" by Rex and "Admissions Outlook at MSU" by Russell Wentworth of the admissions office are the topics at the meetings.

The students will be told about career opportunities in education before a tour of the campus. Following lunch, they will view the Purdue game at 1:30.

The program is sponsored by the Student Education Association (SEA) and MSU to stimulate interest in teaching.

AWS Boards Attend State Conference

Members of the judiciary and activities boards of the Association of Women Students will travel to Mt. Pleasant today for the annual Intercollegiate AWS State Conference.

About 25 junior colleges, colleges and universities will be represented at the two day event to take place on the Central Michigan University campus, said Miss Mabel Petersen, campus AWS advisor.

Margaret Mead, well known anthropologist, will deliver the keynote address, "Where and When Gender Matters."

"The purpose of the conference is to discuss the reasons for AWS and exchange ideas for its furtherance," Miss Petersen said.

The Honors College is presenting a recording each Thursday night. One of the departments using recordings to aid instruction is the department of American thought and language.

WXAR radio will begin regular broadcasts of historic recordings on Nov. 15. Two programs will be presented daily, one in the morning and one in the evening.

The closed-circuit TV studio, located at 280 Education Building now sends 72 class-hours of instruction per week to ten campus buildings, serving students enrolled in such classes as accounting, natural science, physical education, speech, and veterinary medicine, Davis said.

"Television is not at all a replacement for teaching, but rather an effective tool for teaching," added Colby Lewis, coordinator of closed circuit TV.

"Closed-circuit TV can give a more personal touch, continued Davis. "It appears as if the instructor is talking directly to each student, as opposed to the feeling one experiences in a large lecture hall."

There is one television set for every 25-30 students in a classroom, Davis added.

Closed-Circuit TV is not new at State. MSU pioneered programs between two locations back in 1956, for the veterinary medical school. The system was expanded in 1961 with the laying of a coaxial cable around campus making every building a potential receiver.

Satire On Society Plays At Arena

"THE AMERICAN DREAM," a satire on American society and its ideals, opened Wednesday night in the Arena Theatre.

Edward Albee, an off-Broadway playwright and creator of the play, has several shows to his credit including "THE ZOO STORY," "THE DEATH OF BESSIE SMITH," "THE SAND BOX," which was produced on television, and the currently successful "WHO'S AFRAID OF VIRGINIA WOOLF?"

A one act play set in present times, all the action of "THE AMERICAN DREAM" takes place in the interior of an apartment. The story involves a family whose image of the "right way" of doing things is warped with materialism. The Grandma, a rather comic character denounces the "right way" and as a result is completely ridiculed. "The American dream" is the figure of a handsome young man who is greatly admired by the family, but in reality is a homosexual who is extremely unstable and unable to make decisions.

The director of the play, Farley Richmond, a graduate assistant, the five characters as follows: Mommy, Ellen, Daddy, Nell, Bernadette, Grandma, Fat Ridge, Mrs. B. Junior Ridge, Young Man, Vincent.

The play will run through the day in the Arena Theatre. "Observers along the Canal, West Germany's short-cut between the North Baltic seas, note that German shipping has vanished.

Dean Outlines Aims Of Future Educators

Future educators will base their teaching methods on research findings instead of philosophical beliefs, William B. Hawley, assistant dean of education, said in an interview.

"The major aim in education will be to learn more about human learning directly through research data."

As a result of this scientific approach, he pointed out, "teachers will handle more of the professional and technological aspects of learning. This will free them from routine tasks of a repetitive nature."

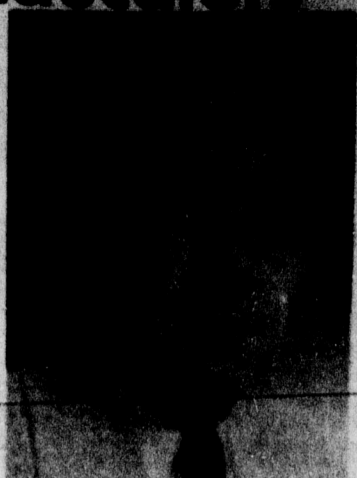

"Analysis of educational technology will determine the most effective methods of teaching," he said.

The production of better teachers is a second aim of future educators.

"A good teacher," Hawley explained, "has to be an individual who is fully appreciative of the vast differences that there are among students."

He or she should feel satisfaction from working with students who have different sets of values.

"A good teacher should also feel challenged to use professional skill in situations that demand its use.

WM. B. HAWLEY

"Today," Hawley pointed out, "teachers tend to want to work with bright students rather than where great professional skill is needed."

"Teachers need to be sound educationalists and master of the subject she or he teaches," he said.

Redesigning of a graduate program is the third aim of education.

"We must redesign to make more flexible in our changing times," with a more intensive study of the cultural forces that affect us."

Puffball Extract May Offer Cure For Certain Cancers

A fungus, the giant puffball, may provide a cure for certain types of cancer.

Professor E. S. Beneke of the department of botany and plant pathology, is working on calvacin, an extract from the giant puffball, in the hopes of finding a cure.

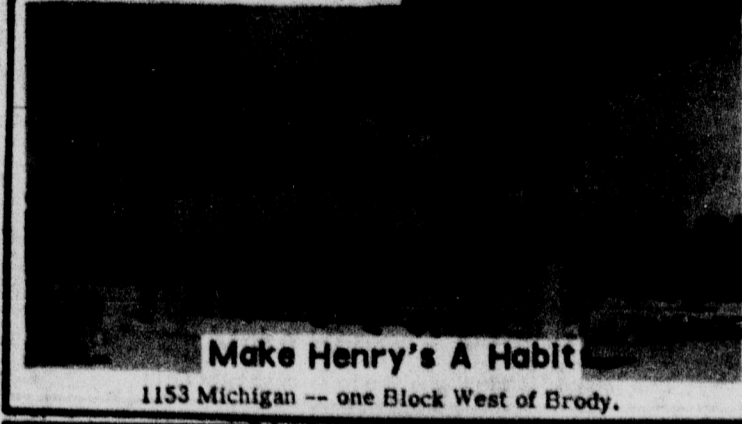

This extract was discovered by the late E. H. Lucas of the University who found that it showed promise of anti-tumor effects.

Beneke, working with the Sloan - Kettering Institute of Cleveland, produces calvacin to be tested against known tumors. Calvacin has proven effective against tumors in rats and other small animals, and will be tested in humans.

If calvacin proves to be effective in humans against some types of tumors, a means of mass production will have to be found to make calvacin effectively, said William Drew, department head of Botany and pathology.

STILL SMILING -- Governor Swainson is able to...

Democrats Ponder Michigan Future

George Swainson as governor...

Another possibility is Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh...

He is generally regarded as a strong mayor and a good administrator...

Cavanagh, who upset incumbent mayor Louis Miriani last winter, is a newcomer to politics.

Another newcomer is Attorney General Frank J. Kelley...

Kelley, appointed to succeed Paul Adams, won his battle Tuesday with Robert J. Danhof...

is still the Democrats'...

The tournament will be directed by Lew Hamilton, ED 2-8681.

Prof Attends Meet In Paris On Agricultural Policy

The Common Market will directly influence both overseas and at-home agricultural trade, reported D. E. Hathaway, professor of agricultural economics. Hathaway attended an Atlantic Institute-sponsored meeting on agricultural implications of the Common Market in Paris, France. The United States, Great Britain, Germany and France were represented at the meeting. "Agricultural policy adjustment will be one of the most difficult adjustments the Common Market will have to face," Hathaway said. "All of the countries face some policy dissatisfaction and unrest; such as the losing of markets, political troubles, and additional competition." "Some adjustments must be made, because the Common Market must take in agriculture as well as other fields," he added. One of the biggest questions facing the US, Canada and New Zealand, all low-cost producers, is whether these countries will have access to markets or be squeezed out to protect European farmers. Hathaway said that much additional pressure will be added to our own agricultural programs.

Library Gets 2 Rare Books

Two rare books about veterinary medicine have been received by the University Library. "Libro de Albeiteris," written in 1547 by Francisco de la Reyna, is the first unrecorded edition of the most complete and popular Spanish book on the treatment of sick horses and mules. MSU has the only copy in this country. "Hippiatria Stue Marecalla" by Lorenzo Rusio, is one of the main sources of veterinary knowledge in the Renaissance. The book contains three large woodcuts of horses and 43 engraved woodcuts of various designs and inscriptions in French and Latin. Rusio was an Italian veterinary doctor.

Scientific Advisor To Give Talk On 'Space Logistics'

D. T. Perkins, Scientific Advisor of spacecraft organization, Lockheed-California Company, Burbank, California, will give a talk on "Space Logistics," Monday from 4 to 5 p.m. in room 120 physics-mathematics building. The program is part of a series of mechanical engineering seminars featuring authorities on problems of outer space. Perkins will discuss magnitude of space operations in the future, anticipated timing, participation of man in space flight systems, logistics nature of space exploration and planning today for tomorrow. All interested persons are cordially invited to attend.

Grant Given For Science Curriculum

The University Science and Mathematics Teacher Center has received a $24,000 National Science Foundation grant for a program to improve general science teaching in secondary schools. The funds will be used to conduct an institute for 45 general science teachers of grades 7 through 12 during the 1963-64 academic year. Directing the program and the institute will be Jane E. Smith, associate professor of geology. The aim of the institute is to increase the scientific knowledge and training of the teachers through a year of advanced study on a full-time basis, Smith said. To be eligible for participation, teachers must have a minimum of three years of general science teaching experience and have at least five years of teaching time prior to retirement. The teachers will receive instruction in the fields of mathematics, earth science, biological science and physical science leading to the master of arts for teachers degree.

Bazaar Underway

Carrying the theme, "Peoples' Waiting Well," the annual bazaar sponsored by the Women's Society of Peoples Church will take place Wednesday.

The event will be held at the church from 1 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Coffee will be served during the afternoon, and a ham dinner is planned for 5:30 p.m.

Booths featuring baked goods and candies, fruit cake, aprons, hand knit items, needlecraft novelties, stuffed animals, dressed dolls and floral decorations will be open during the entire bazaar.

Two other booths adding variety to the displays are an "Art Treasure" of antiques and a "Teen Corner" selling cookies and potato chips.

Publicity Chairman Mrs. Robert Stow said proceeds will go toward financing church missions.

Reservations for the ham dinner must be made by Monday. No tickets will be sold at the bazaar.

Alumni Chapel Tributes Dead

"In honor of those who served their country...in memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice."

This is the chief purpose behind gifts donated by over 5,000 MSU alumni, parents and friends for the construction of an interfaith war memorial on campus in 1952.

After the loss of the Old College Hall in 1918 where Beaumont Tower now stands, students were without a campus worship center. Standing among open lawns overlooking the Red Cedar River, the Alumni Memorial Chapel is open to all faiths and creeds.

Simplicity is carried out in the plain walls, woodpeps, beamed ceiling, stained glass windows, chandeliers and candleabra.

The altar, designed after the chaplains' combination altars of World War II, is in the chancel.

which also holds a pipe organ, pulpit and choir benches.

Stained glass windows, the gift of a group of parents, symbolize religion, brotherhood and patriotism. Those on the east wall of the chancel represent prayer, self-denial and charity. Adoration, sacrifice and thanksgiving themes add featured the west side.

Windows on the east wall of the nave express human achievement through knowledge, wisdom, truth and aspiration. The story of MSU is narrated on the west wall.

From the birth of an idea in 1940's to extensive cooperation in education overseas, the windows tell the story of this university. They also portray Farmers' Week, Engineering Department, Experimental Station, School of Applied Science and Liberal Arts, as well as student activities from sports to pranks.

Narthen stained glass lists phrases from talks by President John Hannah and the carved names of MSU's 459 war dead.

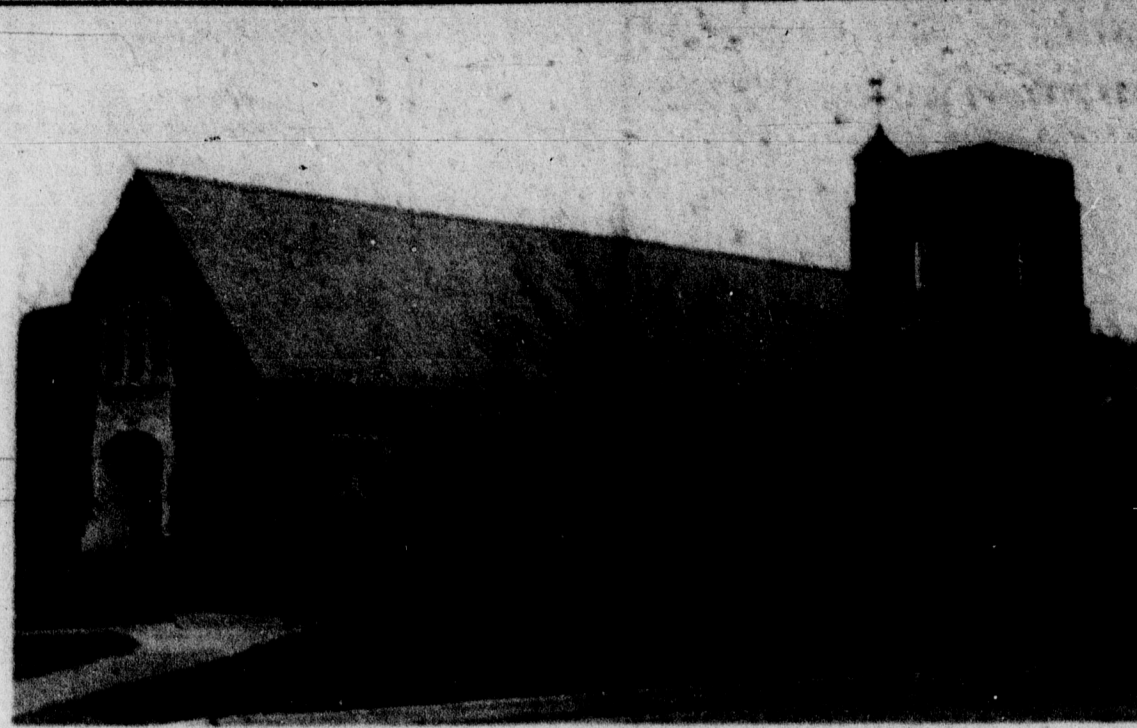

Single stones of many shapes and hues are set in the chapel walls. They were rescued from the remains of German and London cathedrals during World War II and sent overseas by alumni.

The Alumni Memorial Chapel is used for a variety of purposes. Any group or persons associated with the university may reserve it.

Religious services, Christenings, weddings and memorial services take place regularly in the building.

The ground floor lounge is the scene of workshops, conferences and meetings on religious topics. Greek initiations and performances of religious music also are held.

The Chapel, open for daily visits, is maintained by a section for dignity and privacy of services. Reservations can be made through the Union Manager's office.

FAITH CENTER ON CAMPUS--The Alumni Memorial Chapel, overlooking the Red Cedar River at Michigan State University, welcomes students and faculty members of all religions and nationalities.

Faith on Campus

By Linda Miller

How often have we heard the warning, "Experience is the best teacher," without attaching any special significance to its implications? Experience influenced every walk of life. In solving the problems that confront us repeatedly—physically, emotionally and spiritually—we cannot view the future for answers. We must look to the past in formulating decisions.

Previous experience tells us whether or not we should eat breakfast on a particular morning, to cite a common problem. It also gives us motivation in selecting our career life partner and, of ultimate importance, our faith.

Because we are primarily concerned here with faith on the campus, it is vitally significant that we realize and act in accordance with the influence of experience.

When we were younger, parental advice was often enough to satisfy our curiosity about the questions which life posed. But now that we are virtually on our own, personal experience provides us with answers. Actually, even as preschoolers, we learned more about that hot iron if we touched it and drew back, than if our mother merely told us to keep our hands off.

The same is true today. No one else's word is as good as the results of our own experimentation. Experience keeps a hard school, but we can learn in no other.

Our discussion of revelation last week is relevant to the experience of faith. As the noted deist, Thomas Paine, said, "Revelation...means something communicated immediately from God to man...It is revelation to the first person only, and hearsay to every other."

In this we see that the experience of revelation is not meaningful when we pass it on to others. Similarly, personal experience is much more valuable than "hearsay." If someone who has had a personal experience with God tells us about it, we cannot expect to benefit from it in the manner in which they did.

How, then, we must ask, does the significance of experience relate to our search for faith on campus? Presently, as we experiment to discover our philosophical credo, experience tells us what to reject and what to sustain.

For example, we may be attending various churches to investigate their worth in our own particular search. What happens to us at these encounters determines our beliefs, not what we anticipate or overhear through the experiences of others.

This also applies to those who reject attending church or believing in God. But how can we know this is what we do not want without first subjecting ourselves to the experience?

If we are sincere in our urge to open doors leading to philosophical answers, we must look to experience as the vital key. We cannot waste time by solely accepting the notions of others, although I would not advocate ignoring them.

Time for experimentation is the main highway on our quest for faith. Other opinions are important, but they are sparsely-traveled byways....Experience is the stuff life is made of.

"A good example is the best sermon."

UCCF Plans Fall Retreat

United Campus Christian Fellowship will discuss the topic, "Alone in the Crowd," at its fall retreat next week-end at Wesley Woods.

The manner in which the Christian faith speaks to the human situation from modern drama and psychology will involve the use of a study booklet by the National Student Council, resource materials, selected Biblical passages and a tape.

Resource leaders at the retreat included Rev. Warren Day, Rev. John Dewey, Rev. Walter Kania and Rev. Ralph Miller.

Presbyterian, Congregational, Evangelical Reformed, Disciples of Christ and Evangelical United Brethren college students will depart Friday night, Nov. 16, and return Sunday noon. Non-preference students are also invited.

Reservations for the retreat may be made at the College House next to the Peoples Church in East Lansing. The cost is $5.

World Mass Proposed

Vatican City, (P) - A German-born missionary bishop proposed on the floor of the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council this week a revolutionary world Mass that he said could appeal to all Christian peoples.

Bishop William Duschak of Cebu, Philippines, said the "Missa Orbis" he envisions would be offered by priests who faced the congregation throughout and used the language of the region, speaking always aloud and never in a whisper.

The 59-year-old prelate told about his plan at a news conference after the general session in St. Peter's Basilica.

"The people have a right to participate in the Mass and we must give them that," he told newsmen.

Wilde Speaks of Religious Threat

There is a real threat to religious freedom in America, Richard Wilde told the Humanist Society Monday.

Wilde, a member of Protestant and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State (POAU), said he assumed the Constitution guarantees religious freedom and don't see the danger.

Wilde, active in the American Civil Liberties Union and its Church-State Committee, said there are two drives today which threaten separation of church and state.

He cited religious education and observances in the public schools. He said there is a widespread practice of opening schools with Bible readings and prayers.

The second threat to religious freedom is the increasing demand for public funds by parochial schools, particularly Roman Catholic.

Wilde said the legal basis for the separation of church and state lies in the First Amendment, which states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion..."

"As Americans or as bishops we are entitled to our own opinion about the Amendment. However, the only one right opinion is the one expressed by the Supreme Court," he said.

"It is from the free school system that the strength of America springs. It is the place where people of all races, creeds and colors can live and learn together. It is the place where people of all races, creeds and colors can live and learn together. It is the place where people of all races, creeds and colors can live and learn together."

He said parochial schools isolate their people. "It is as bad as segregate people by religion as by color and race."

Wilde said the legal basis for the separation of church and state lies in the First Amendment, which states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion..."
