

The Only Salvation For Student Gov't

A plan to streamline Student Congress will be presented to that group for consideration tonight, and if approved, will be put before the student body for a vote.

A re-evaluation committee composed of campus leaders formulated the plan in meetings since the beginning of fall term. They have studied student government systems at other schools, considered Michigan State's special problems, and come up with what we think is an excellent plan.

Michigan State University has changed tremendously in the 12 years since the present constitution and organization were set up. This proposal to streamline the Congress is the first evidence that AUSG is attempting to meet the needs of a growing University.

The advantages of the new plan are many.

First, it cuts the number of representatives from the present 78 to 30. In recent years, Congress has had difficulty getting people from each district to fill the posts. The redistricting plan still gives adequate representation to students, but chops the now unwieldy group down to workable size.

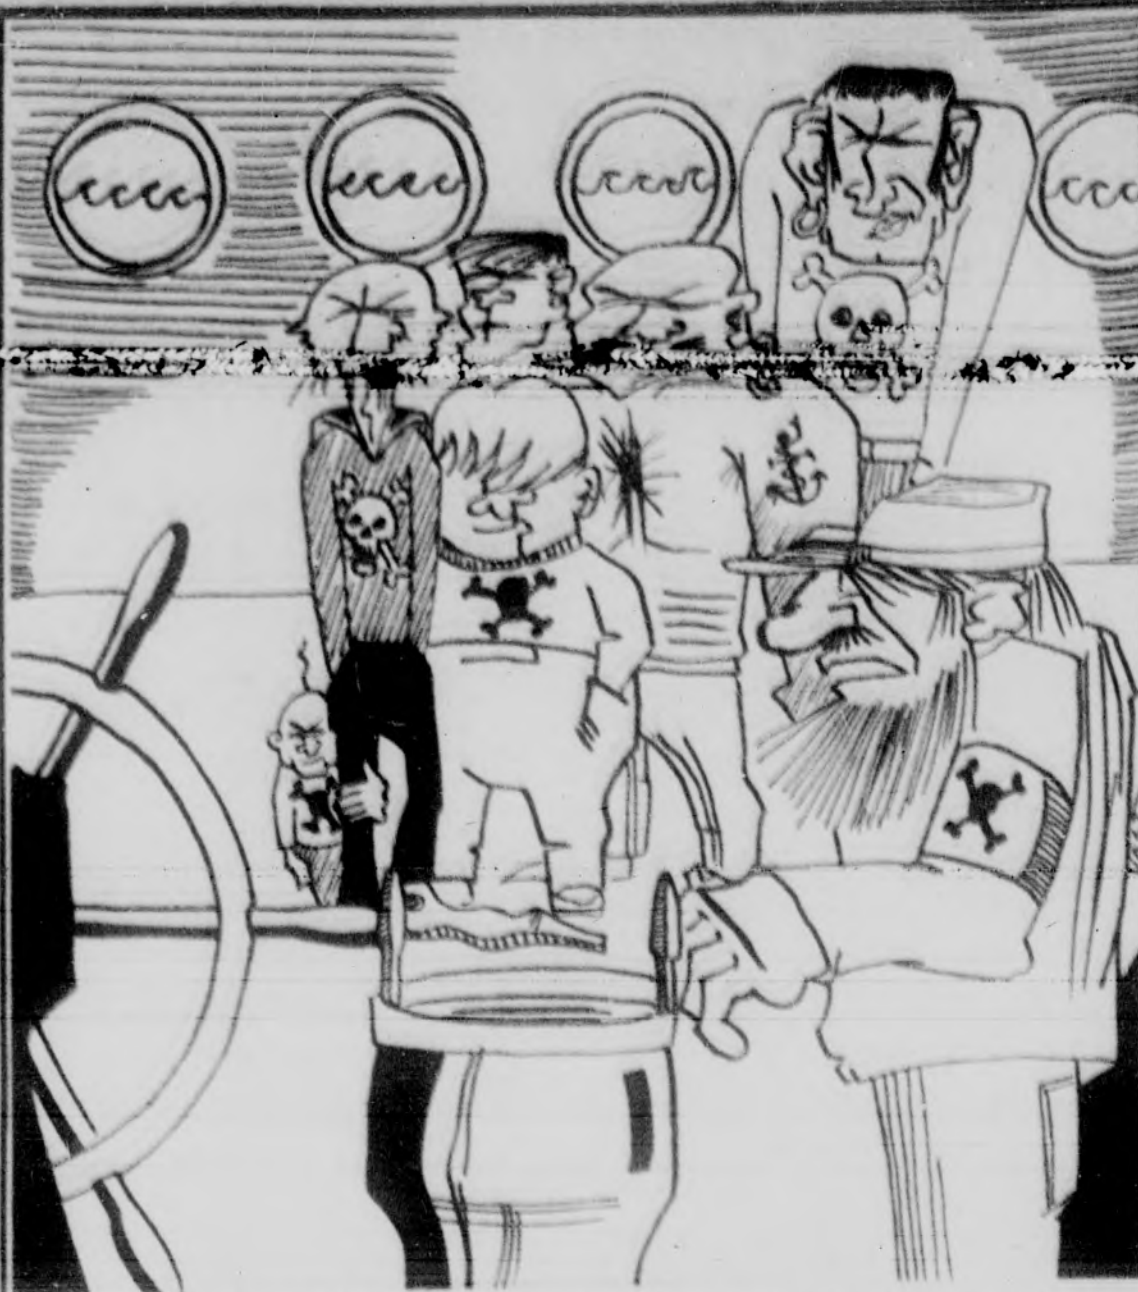

Leaders of major campus governing bodies--IFC, WIC, SOC,

MHA, and Pan Hel--are for the first time given a vote. This may give them more power, by centralizing all the major student influence groups under one organization.

In addition, class government representatives, Associated Women Students, and the Graduate Council are given a voice without a vote. A clause in the constitutional amendment would allow other major governing bodies to be added to the group later.

The amendment also tightens requirements for elected senators. A senator must be at least a third term freshman; he must have served as an officer of any recognized student group and/or in AUSG; and he must have a 2.2 grade average to run and a 2.0 to stay in office. This provision may tend to boost the quality of Student Congress as a whole, and draw fewer "Wednesday night politicians."

We hope that Student Congress will consider this proposal carefully, and send it to the students for approval. As we see it, it may be AUSG's only hope of becoming a truly effective and representative voice for the students. It has not fulfilled this role for a long time. This reorganization plan could be the spark it needs.

MSU Fraternities Face Problems

(Editor's Note: This is the last in a three-part series on the fraternity system. Today's article, by Bill Doerner, member of Phi Gamma Delta and State News Kellogg Center reporter, deals with IFC plans for fraternities at MSU.)

IFC will concentrate on improving the present fraternity system rather than on expanding it during the next year, Frank Marner, Saginaw Junior and newly-elected president of the Inter-Fraternity Council says.

"At present there is much more room for improvement than for expansion," he said. Marner, who ran on a platform of broad re-evaluation of the fraternity system, plans to spread out his program over a year-long period.

"During spring term President Marner will speak to president's assembly, the legislative branch of IFC. We also hope to line up a speaker for every house. Sometime next fall term, on the same evening for everyone, this speaker will attend dinner at the fraternity house and deliver a short talk outlining the advantages and the shortcomings of the present fraternity system," Marner said.

Marner said he hopes that the discussion and exchange of ideas prompted by this candid examination will spur fraternity men to decide their own goals. When these objectives have been specified, he said, IFC will try to implement them during winter term.

"We hope that the next executive council will evaluate the program and decide how well it works," he said. Marner, president of Delta Tau Delta, emphasized that he would not attempt any changes which were not suggested by fraternity men themselves.

Marner thinks there is the greatest disparity between what fraternities say they do and what they actually do. He quoted rushing booklets which extolled the cultural and moral values of fraternities.

"We have to face the fact that they simply aren't there right now," he said, "and quit fooling people they are."

"We have to bring our 'oughts' into range. We know we 'ought' not to sin. But we will sin, just as everyone else does."

Marner listed four broad problems in the present fraternity set-up.

- (1) MSU's dormitory system is one of the best in the country, and is a source of competition to fraternities.
- (2) The housing facilities of our fraternities are not as adequate as those at other universities.
- (3) The 28 fraternities are spread around the East Lansing area. This decentralization tends to weaken the esprit de corps among houses, and to encourage fraternity men to live only for their own houses.
- (4) There is always the problem of the smaller houses.

Commenting on the problem of dormitories, he said, "The dormitories are competition only as long as we both are offering the same thing. To the extent that the fraternities can pride themselves on the brotherhood and group participation that the dorms can never hope to offer, they should have no problem."

Speaking about the problem of the small house, he said,

"We have to realize that there will always be small houses--either old houses on their way down or young, vigorous ones on their way up. The problem is to make certain that the same houses are not always suffering."

"We plan to appoint one member-at-large (one of the seven positions on the executive council) to work with the small houses."

"I want to find out how the larger houses can sacrifice together for the smaller ones," he said. Marner admitted it was difficult to define a "small house", adding that "some houses are obviously in trouble--they have only 20-25 active members, the house is not full--but you have to decide where to draw the line."

"But we can't sit back and do nothing--there are at least three houses which are on the campus within two years if we do," he said.

Social Pro For Two Fraternities

Two MSU fraternities, Alpha Tau Omega and Zeta Beta Tau, have been placed on social probation for a year by the Inter-Fraternity Council for jointly sponsoring an unregistered, unchaperoned party that included alcoholic beverages and coeds.

The action came after an accident which killed three youths, one of them an ATO member, and injured several others.

The discipline the fraternities received was not because of the accident itself, but rather because the accident called attention to the party.

And, unjust as it may seem to some, this is part of the University's disciplinary philosophy. Examined closely, it's as fair a procedure for dealing with student violations of drinking rules as could be found.

The University's attitude is this: We have rules against drinking on campus. We have rules against unchaperoned, unregistered parties which include coeds and alcohol. When violations of these rules are called to the attention of the University and the public at large, we are forced to take action.

In the case of ATO and ZBT, the accident called attention to the illegal parties, and the University, through IFC, took action. Action would have been taken if neighbors had called police or the University to complain about the party.

Certainly, blame for the accident cannot be placed on the fraternities who sponsored the party. In any college community there are parties involving liquor--whether they are sorority and fraternity parties or informal groups of students.

Accidents involving drinking need not happen. Again, it is a matter of judgment--judgment that, admittedly, adults do not always use. But students especially, because they are frequently exposed to new situations involving drinking need to be aware that no one can drive safely "under the influence."

Planning For The Future Takes A Slide Rule

This is the third part of a series backgrounding the Trustees decision to start the Educational Development Project. Project members will study how to better serve more students in the 1960's.

Estimates of future enrollments are based on the total Michigan college enrollment and this is sure to be related to the number of births 15 years ago.

In the past 10 years, enrollment at Michigan's 68 colleges went from about 80,000 to about 162,000 students. This figure includes the students at nine new colleges started during the decade. The total enrollment at these schools, approximately 22,000, has paid 200% contribution to future Michigan State enrollment includes the assumption that these new colleges, plus a half dozen others soon to start, will take their full share of students and will grow to projected levels.

Oakland University bears out the statement the new institutions seem to have little effect on the Michigan State enrollment in East Lansing.

The net effect of Oakland is that it has expanded the market. An increased number of students are now attending college.

Graduate enrollment has been growing even faster. For the past several years it has shot up at average of 10 per cent a year.

Michigan State officials expect that our present enrollment rate, being one out of every seven freshmen who start at any Michigan college, will continue at about the same level.

It is the job of the Educational Development Project to study the total academic program and project the best ways to raise the quality of the individual Michigan State student's education during the next 10 years.

Stir Opinion Against Iraq

Soviets Decry 'Blood Bath'

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet bloc campaigned Tuesday in an effort to build up world opinion against the anti-Communist drive in Iraq, which it called bloody repression.

Iraq's new president, Abdel Salam Mohammed Aref, protesting against what they called "the mass murders of Communists and other democrats, the fighters against imperialism and reaction."

Russians recognized quickly after the fall of Premier Abdel Karim Kassem 10 days ago, were widely denounced.

Iraqi Communists in secret broadcasts still appeal to Kurdish tribesmen to continue against Aref's government the rebellion they opened against Kassem. But informed Baghdad sources said a Kurdish delegation was expected in the Iraqi capital in a day or two for peace talks.

A Geneva spokesman for the all-Swiss committee said, however, it was not clear what action could be taken. The committee has had no representative in Iraq since the early days of Kassem's 4 1/2 year dictatorship, which ended in his death Feb. 9 at the hands of his revolutionary captors.

Earlier, both the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda and the party's ruling central committee had expressed concern about the situation in Iraq. A Soviet embassy spokesman in Baghdad said Tuesday the 700 Russian technicians in Iraq are remaining on their jobs at the request of the new government.

Prominent Red Cellist Dies

MOSCOW (AP) - Cellist Svyatoslav Koushevitsky, who played in a trio with violinist David Oistrakh, has died unexpectedly, Tass reported Tuesday. He was 54.

Koushevitsky toured the Soviet Union and foreign countries, with Oistrakh and pianist Lev Oborin, Tass said. Oistrakh has given concerts in the United States. He played at MSU last November.

Tass said Koushevitsky became well-known in the Soviet Union in 1933 when he won the "all-union contest of musicians." Later he became a member of the Bolshoi Theater orchestra in Moscow.

He began teaching at the Moscow Conservatory in 1940, Tass said. He earned recognition as a lyrical musician.

The cause of his death was not reported.

Opportunity Awaits Advertising Majors

Students who decide to major in advertising while at Michigan State can find numerous opportunities in whatever phase of the profession they desire.

The introductory courses as well as the more advanced courses offer the student a chance to use his imagination and creativity, and thus develop a more complete idea of the advertising business.

Many courses in this field give the student their first chance to actually work with a business organization.

This practical experience is a great asset in helping the student understand the relationships between the advertising agency or department and the business world and its problems.

Courses in industrial advertising have become very important as we become more and more a marketing economy.

Many courses offer informative field trips to advertising agencies and also to the client's business, if the class is engaged in formulating an advertising plan for the business.

 from the lower income group, proposed the Higher Education Loan Corporation, a government corporation similar to the Federal National Mortgage Association, to sell bonds and raise money for three kinds of student aid.
 The plan would be a "Social Security reverse," collecting the first and paying a voluntary rate of income tax for many years, no matter how much they earn.
 The plan would make ample credit available if an accredited institution accepts the student. Thus the money would be in the hands of colleges," he said.
 The basic justification for the plan is to handle a need for larger numbers of highly trained people in our economy."

GROOVY PATH TO MARS—It looks complicated enough to be the work of a "brain trust" agent, but there's one. Kitzmablock, professor of engineering, mathematically worked out this manned space flight path to Mars for the U.S. Army.

Map For Space Flight Drawn By Professor

The space flight mission will be the longest in a "single" mission... The "map" is a "groovy" one... Kitzmablock, professor of engineering, mathematically worked out this manned space flight path to Mars for the U.S. Army.

Greek Housemothers Have Rewarding Job

The ideal fraternity housemother must be cultured, poised, and be sympathetic with the problems of college students... The rewards a housemother receives are numerous.

Most housemothers at MSU have been with the same house for 5 to 10 years... The rewards are greater than any inconvenience a housemother may endure.

16 Students Compete In Bridge Tournament

Sixteen Michigan State students will attempt to out bid, out play, and out wit other competitors in the National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament tonight.

This tournament is an annual February affair... Each school is given five days to play the hands and send in the scores to a Bradley University judging team.
