"Van," a Squirrel monkey, owned by Mike Miller, Cleveland sophomore, and pet of the Figi House, was brought in by his master for treatment.

While waiting his turn with veterinarian Wade Kelley and assisting students, "Van" took time to survey the rest of the waiting animal population with a nervous and critical eye.

A half-grown scouse, a medium sized white from central America, whose diet sometimes includes monkeys, and an occasional small dog, sat quietly in its cage next to owner Dave Bennett.

A mongrel named "Ziggy" seemed to be carrying on a conversation with a very nervous dachshund named "Fritz," and a shaggy retriever tried to make friends with everyone around including the scouse.

"Herry Green," a friendly, if homely, English Bulldog, scratched its back on everyone's legs, while a Chihuahua "Penny," lay muggily in a baby blanket, and watched the entire proceedings with large, sad eyes.

Two bouncy, untrimmed French Poodles, Suzette and Jimmy, arrived from Okemos, and a bored Doberman arrived for his usual check-up favoring a sore left ear.

The patients took their turns with outward fortitude commonly seen by doctors, but unlike people the animals displayed their dislike for shots, ear-cleaning and minor operations with loud, vocal misgivings.

Many animals came from outside the Lansing area. "Herry Green," was from Battle Creek, and the sad-eyed Chihuahua "Penny" came from Grand Rapids for treatment of a tumor.

Several hundred siling animals are treated each week at the clinic, many are housed overnight or longer, in the clinic's kennel facilities.

Major MSU Entrance To Be Shifted In Fall

The major entrance to MSU will shift from Grand River and Okemos Road to I-496 and Trowbridge Road by late fall, Richard J. Lilly, assistant director of planning for the State Highway Department said.

I-496 will extend north from I-96 paralleling Harrison Road which is on the west side of campus. Trowbridge Road will connect I-496 with Harrison Road just north of Spartans Village, Lilly said.

A traffic signal will be placed at the Harrison-Trowbridge intersection, Robert M. Bruce, East Lansing city engineer said.

Fire Alarm Goes Crazy

A fire alarm bell wailed a note of Armstrong high beauty in 345 rpm.

Not knowing whether the alarm signified a real fire or a thoughtless prank, the man evacuated the hall, Tony Hing, Armstrong safety chairman, estimated that the evacuation took six minutes.

After the hall was evacuated, the fire alarm could not be turned off. The master control box for the alarm system was located and the alarm stopped.

The Department of Public Safety finally opened the door by force and shut off the alarm. The procedure took about half an hour.

House safety officers closed off all the rooms to make sure that no one had slipped through the alarm. No definite information was disclosed as to who pulled the alarm.

John Stokes, secretary of Armstrong Hall, reported that two fire drills at Armstrong had been cancelled because of cold weather.

Campus Chest Nats $3,000

A week's worth of donations slightly more than $3,000.

Don Linder, Executive City Club and Campus Chest chairman, said most of the money would be donated to campus charities.

"Because we don't make our own money, we have to rely on the generosity of our donors," he said.

Hans Nathan, associate professor of music, began putting together pieces of his puzzle after doing post-graduate work in musicology at Harvard University.

While snooping around Harvard's music collection in the school library, Nathan, who was familiar with the early song "Dixie" by Emmett, discovered another song by the same composer -- this one called "Johnnie is a Hard Road to Travel."

"I felt that if a composer could write two good songs, he was capable of writing 20," said Nathan. "So I started investigating further."

Nathan found material for his book in the Harvard collection, in the Library of Congress, and in a "broken down chest of drawers" in the State Library of Columbus, Ohio.

Denies Interest In Presidential Race

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gov. George Romney of Michigan and William W. Scrantom of Pennsylvania, seeking to join the 1964 Republican Convention in New York, definitely do not think they had their eyes on the 1964 GOP Presidential nomination.

Rep. William E. Miller, R-N.Y., Republican National Chairman, who also heads the site committee, commented:

"It would have been most gratifyingly impressive were it suggested that you might be a candidate for President when you had only been Governor for six years."

Romney, seeking a Michigan trip to persuade the committee to select Detroit for the 1964 convention, while Scrantom led a delegation planning to attend in Seattle.

Charles and Debra Romney said their eyes are on the vice of Michigan's economy, not the Presidency, and Miller said he would appear Tuesday morning.

The committee by 1964 convention were closed.

Miller said he would bring a break in a one-day meeting for the 1964 convention would be held between Jan. 17 and 21.

"We're not going to do an announcement to the Governor," he said.

Post Ends News Drought

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Post resumed publication Monday after an 86-day shutdown of all the city's major metropolitan dailies--a hungry response from news-starved readers.

"I can't get enough copies," said a veteran Broadway newsdealer.

There were indications that the Post, which had a normal press run before the strike of 375,000 copies daily, would go to a half-million Monday.

Ravaging continued with publishers of the other eight newspapers, four of which were closed down Dec. 8 by a strike of Local 6 of the AFL-CIO International Typographical Union. Five, including the Post, shut down voluntarily.

The Herald Tribune, which voluntarily stopped publication, distributed a single sheet under its masthead in Manhattan Monday which explained why it did not return.

"For the privilege of publishing today, we'd risk sudden death tomorrow," the statement said in part.

Amory H. Bradford, vice president of the New York Times and spokesman for the publishers, said all issues in the dispute had been taken up at Monday's session. These include wages, hours, teleprinter type, pensions, vacations, night differential and other issues.

Hertram H. Powers, president of the printers union local, has often said that automation, to the extent of using teleprinter type to provide type, is a major issue.

After Monday's meeting, Powers was asked if there had been any progress.

"None that we can pin down," he said. "After all, it is hard to measure when you haven't agreed on anything so far."

Mayor Wagner is expected to suggest a settlement if the talks bog down further.

The printers have asked $18 per man weekly in increased wages, above a pre-strike average of about $141 weekly, plus fringe benefits. The publishers have said that the wages plus benefits would run $37 weekly.

The publishers have offered in excess of $10 weekly to be divided between wages and benefits.

Papers still blocked out are the Times, News, Mirror, Herald Tribune, Journal American and World-Telegram, Long Island Star Journal and Long Island Press. The latter has continued to publish suburban editions circulating in Nassau and Suffolk counties.

Dormitory Room Assignments Not Subject To Discrimination

Discrimination in on-campus housing is nearly impossible because students are not required to disclose their race on dormitory applications, Lyle Thorburn, director of residence halls, said.

Thorburn said the University assigns rooms at random.

"However, if any student states race as important to him in assignment of a roommate, preference is respected," Thorburn said.

Any student who wishes to be assigned to another room must make the move and bear the inconvenience himself, he said.

"This is a rigid University policy which is never broken for any reason," Thorburn said.

There is no enforced segregation or integration in any MSU dormitories, he added. "This is strictly up to the students. If members of one racial group appear to congregate in a particular spot, this is purely by choice."

"We talked to NAACP people and showed them the records which prove we have no way of knowing a student's race," Thorburn said.

"I believe they are satisfied that there is no discrimination in on-campus housing," Ernest Green, Little Rock, Ark., graduate student and former president of the NAACP, said.

The chapter was satisfied that "there is no discrimination in the majority of cases involving on-campus housing assignments."

Social Victory In Sports World

Times must, indeed, be changing. And for the better.

Mississippi State University broke with its policy of segregation Saturday night and decided to play in the post-season regional NCAA basketball tournament at Jenison Fieldhouse even though it will surely mean playing against Negro cagers.

As champions of the Southeastern Conference, the school automatically receives a berth in the regional play-offs.

Traditionally a basketball powerhouse, Mississippi State more than once in its recent history declined the invitation to participate in the exciting college championship competition -- all because of the archaic thinking by powerful elements in the state.

In fact, last year the team won the SEC, but policy-makers said no to the post-season tourney.

Now it appears the forces of enlightenment seem to have scored another small victory in the long war to bury the ludicrous "separate but equal" concept.

We welcome the Southeastern Conference champs to our campus and wish them the best of luck.

Killing HUAC Slow Process

For years now, Rep. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.) has been fighting an uphill battle to abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee, arguing that its tactics are too frequently more consistent with the operations of a totalitarian state than a democracy.

Although he has many sympathizers among American citizens, his colleagues in the House have not gone along with his idea of abolishing the committee. Certainly not en masse.

Two years ago five representatives voted against funds for HUAC's operation. Last Tuesday the number jumped to 20.

Roosevelt has a long way to go but it may not be hopeless.

Education Corps Would Help Deprived -- For Academic Credit

This is the second and final article dealing with the problem of educating socio-economically deprived groups in America. Part 2 introduces the idea of the Student Education Corps as a solution to this problem.

By PAUL SCHNITT
State News Editorial Editor

Dr. David Gottlieb answered his office telephone.

Dewey Lincoln, Hamtramck junior and Spartan varsity half-back was on the line. He wanted to speak to the professor about a course.

Before the end of the conversation, Gottlieb changed the subject.

"Listen, Dewey, how would you like to work a few hours a week as an athletic assistant with junior high school kids in Lansing -- for academic credit?"

"I'll do it!" Lincoln quickly replied.

It was the kind of response Gottlieb expected, the kind he has been getting to his proposal for a Michigan State Student Education Corps which would be made up of dedicated students willing to work with and help socio-economically deprived groups in the area.

Many students in his classes can't wait to start.

Teachers and principals in nearby secondary schools have expressed great enthusiasm when Gottlieb outlined the proposal to them.

"Send 30 Corpsmen!" was the immediate reaction by one Pontiac school principal, the associate professor of sociology and education says.

Money Is Biggest Problem

"It is so important for these kids to stay in school and get an education. But they don't get the attention and encouragement that their middle class brothers and sisters are getting in modern suburban schools," Gottlieb says.

"The discrepancy between middle class and lower class schools is immense. The atmospheres are so different -- the former, usually conducive to learning, and building a desire in the pupils to stay in the educational system; the latter, rarely so," he said.

"Let's recognize that there's a real sense of identification with the community can do," he says.

The biggest problem, according to Gottlieb, is financial, which manifests itself in a lack of people to work with these deprived groups.

Gottlieb is convinced that there are hundreds of students on the Michigan State campus who, if given the opportunity to work with and help underprivileged, will do it.

"Not only would it be a valuable educational experience for these students, but it would provide a real sense of identification with the community," he said.

As far as helping these deprived people, there is no end to the amount of things which the Student Education Corps can do, he said.

Natural science, chemistry and physics majors could go to area grade school classes to perform experiments in the fields.

"There is no reason to assume elementary school teachers can do this," he said.

University theater and music groups could give plays and concerts for these kids, Gottlieb added.

High school girls who are potential drop-outs can be taught shorthand and typing.

"High schools in slum areas are doing all they can do but it's not enough because of their limited facilities and personnel," he said.

Gottlieb mentioned the important role that the Student Education Corps could play in the realm of physical education.

Athletes For Inspiration

"So many of our college athletes come out of these kinds of communities -- fellows such as George Salmes and Dewey Lincoln, who have skills and status in the eyes of these kids."

Gottlieb suggests that these athletes could work as assistants in after-school programs and be elements of inspiration to the kids: "We are of the same background but we made it."

"Who knows how many potential drop-outs an All-American like Salmes could encourage to stay in school?" he said.

Parents of these children shouldn't be forgotten either, Gottlieb warns.

Workshops can be set up. Students would help parents who have little education develop reading and writing skills.

"By giving parents such skills and by broadening their horizons, indirectly you are helping their children. The atmosphere at home will become more educationally-oriented."

Five Point Plan

As far as the mechanical aspects of the program, Gottlieb suggests the following:

1. Identify types of communities where the Corps could work.

2. Let these schools apply for whatever aid they need -- a certain number of students with particular skills.

3. Set up a University office where interested students can apply for the Corps, stating their interest and number of hours they would be willing to work.

4. Fill the requests as they come.

5. Equate this work with academic credit.

"One of the major emphases of President Hannah's 7-Point Program is on independent study and research. The Student Education Corps will tie in perfectly," he said.

Seminar classes in sociology, cultural anthropology, school and society, educational psychology could include three or four hours working with underprivileged people and three hours discussion for a total of five credit hours, he said.

On Nationalism

To the Editor:
For the past couple of weeks the Robert Runyon, radio commentator for WILS has broadcast several editorials concerning America and the United Nations. The themes were as follows:

1. The United Nations' organization UNESCO preaches Communism because it supports the concept of "one worldism" and world government.

2. The United States should not follow any disarmament agreement under the guidance of the U.N. because the U.N. is not controlled by the West; it is in the hands of half-breed peoples composing the Afro-Asian bloc. (Nations not as moral as America cannot be trusted.)

3. The threat of nuclear war is not as important as the loss of American sovereignty to the U.N.

With the occurrence of several disastrous wars in the past century, most educated, rational men have given up their ethnocentric and nationalistic notions for the concept of world government. The Germans once screamed "Deutschland uber alles," and in attempting to make it so, and lost two world wars. Now Mr. Runyon screams a similar "save America from barbarians and Communists," and still holds to the same nationalistic ideas that the Germans held.

Refrigerator Of Today May Be Gone Tomorrow

The kitchen of tomorrow may lack the refrigerator of today.

A new concept—thermoelectric cooling—the thermo-electric motor is smaller, more compact, and more efficient than the present compressor type.

President and director of engineering for Borg-Warner, Dr. J. W. Smith, said.

Refrigerator components will not necessarily be located in one refrigerator, but throughout the kitchen—in bread boxes, cabinets, and other containers, he told a engineering conference at Kellogg Center recently.

The process is also ideal for small refrigerators and ice makers in home recreation rooms," Newton said.

Today's refrigerator motor will be replaced by a small, efficient, which changes alternating current to direct current.

There are no moving parts, he said, and there is nothing to wear.

Other possibilities lie in meeting the precise needs of cooling, in outdoor milk dispensers to freezing in the winter and in summer, in scientific laboratory equipment and in cooling components for space exploration, Newton said.

Newton said the process today is more costly than present compressor systems, but said the cost dropped last year, and will continue to fall with more re-

Student Directors Have Authority As Police

Red gloves and helmets identify student traffic directors who man 18 posts throughout the day to keep campus traffic moving smoothly.

The students have the same authority as a policeman while on duty. Disregarding their signals is considered as serious as running a stop light.

They are hired by the University and trained by the department of public safety.

A film is used for initial demonstration in the fall. "But the real training occurs on the spot with a supervisor standing by," Lt. Allen Andrews of the department said.

Students are posted at eight intersections chosen by the department because of the heavy volume of traffic. At 8 a.m. all 18 posts are manned, three are covered at 12 noon and 1 p.m. and four at 5 p.m.

"All the students are volunteers," Andrews said. Up to 100 traffic directors are needed to handle traffic at football games. From these students regular traffic directors are chosen by the day sergeant who works with them.

"The students are instructed to favor pedestrians and buses," Andrews said. Many times vehicle traffic will be stopped at an intersection to enable students to cross safely.

Dark winter days with icy streets present the worst hazards to the traffic directors, one director said. Motorists have driven through stop signs and hand signals because windshields were so icy they couldn't see through them.

Williams Scores 35

Boilermakers Defeat Spartans 94-93

JOHN VAN GIESON led to go ahead 91-90 on captain's layup with 35 points, including 11 rebounds as the Boilermakers closed the game.

Williams, a senior center, closed out his home court career in a spectacular performance. He scored consistently from underneath on twisting left-handed layups and popped in the long ones, too, when forced outside. His efforts were the best turned in by a Boilermaker in the first half with 17 points. Schwarz added nine and Marcus Sanders made six out of six free throws for six points.

The Boilermakers got their big impetus from pair of sharpshooters — Garland and Bill Jones. Both finished with 22 points. Purkiser chipped in with Lancers, the other Spartans, playing his final home game, came up with 10 points in spite of an ankle injury that kept him out of action for a good part of the first half.

Pete Goss also had his share of bad luck as he picked up his fifth personal with 13:19 left in the game. He fouled out after scoring the game was State's eighth in a row and left them with a 3-10 conference record. The Spartans will have to beat Northwestern Saturday to improve on last season's 3-11 mark.

Michigan State. The Boilermakers were last in the Big Ten, and State, regardless of the outcome against the Wildcats, will finish sixth in the conference.

His 25th 'S' Fencing Crew Schmitter's Dream Come True

By RICHARD SCHWARTZ
Of The State News

"The team came through when the chips were down," added Assistant Director Reggie Munn, "the most important thing in athletics. It's not how well you do in practice, but how well under fire. As for Schmitter winning the title on his 25th year as a coach, could it have happened to a silver guy?"

State finished with a total of 33 points to place ahead of Illinois and Wisconsin with 31 each. Dick Schmitter captured the title in foil and Lon Salomone copped the sabre crown. Phil Stuyton finished second in the water floater.

"Salomone is a very consistent," said Schmitter. "There were times when it looked as if he wouldn't make it, but he Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it. Most men simply think Menthil-iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes. So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably? Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect. How intelligent!
