HANI FAKHOURI

Higher Education Has Reputation

By JACKIE KORONA
State News Staff Writer

Graduate study in France, England or any foreign country is a mark of prestige for any American student.

But what of the thousand foreign students who come to this country to study?

Last spring more than 430 graduate students from countries all over the world were on the Michigan State campus. And the total is expected to climb gradually in the future, according to Donald Jay Gemmel, education exchange coordinator.

Why these students come to this country and to Michigan State in particular may be explained by the reasons of one such student, Hani Fakhouri, doctoral candidate from Jordan.

"I want to get as much education as I can from the best places," explained Fakhouri. "The United States has a wonderful reputation for this abroad -- mostly from movies and information centers.

"There is no doubt that the prestige of this country is largely responsible for the number of foreign students here."

Fakhouri, whose major field is sociology and anthropology and who is specializing in research concerning community develop-

Repeat of '62 Fall Fashion

The temperatures are still breaking records all over the country, and summer is far from gone.

But coeds throughout the United States are beginning to plan for their fall wardrobes.

Styles shown in fashion magazines and in women's clothing stores seem similar to those of last season, with bulky V-neck sweaters and wool skirts taking the lead for classroom wear.

New on the collegiate fashion scene, however, is the stress on patent leather-like shoes and boots, quilted skirts and vests and even knickers with little Oliver caps to match.

The new from top of the toe to knee can be either very bare

Stan Kenton Here To Hold Jazz Session

By ERIC M. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

Stan Kenton is on campus this week. Kenton's band and 20 top instructors and names in jazz are here, too. They are teaching about 130 young people jazz.

The annual Stan Kenton Clinic got underway Sunday in Shaw Hall. Jazz enthusiasts from all over the nation are participating in the school.

Kenton arrived on campus Monday with his band, and they presented a concert for the clinic participants Monday night. Kenton and his band will be here all week. They were at the University of Connecticut last week. They stopped on their way to campus to play in Detroit Sunday.

Clinic participants have a busy daily schedule. Each student averages about two hours of band rehearsal, one hour of sectional rehearsal, two hours of theory and arranging, and two hours in the evening of general educational programs.

According to Dr. Morris E. Hall, former associate professor of music here and director of the camp, "The purpose of the clinic is to create an interest in modern American music and to train young people about big band jazz."

"If there is not some sort of training, jazz, which is the only true American art form, may be taken over by some other nation. Jazz is tremendously popular in other countries."

Hall said that the clinic is trying to teach what the staff feels is the correct interpretation of jazz. "The staff meets each day and discusses why they are here. They adjust the schedule of rehearsals and the general program during the week to fit what they feel are the reasons for being here. We feel our principal purpose is to show young people why they should be and are studying jazz."

"One of the things taught and stressed at the clinic is music theory. Most high schools don't teach any theory. We find much resistance to theory instruction by drummers at the start. By the end of the week they are asking for more."

"At every clinic we take a survey among the students asking them what they liked and what should be improved," Hall said. "We find that more theory is desired most often."

Final Faculty Congress Tonight

A final concert featuring distinguished members of the Congress of Strings faculty will be held tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the Kellogg Center Auditorium.

The first number will feature Hymen Goodman, concertmaster of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, violin; Rafael Druian, concertmaster of the Cleveland Symphony, violin; Louis Krasner, professor of music at Syracuse University, viola; and Robert Jamieson, solo cellist with the Minneapolis Symphony. They will play "String Quartet No. 7," by Milhaud.

The second number will be a "Duo Concertant for Violin and Piano," by Stravinsky. Frank Houser, concertmaster of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, will play the violin and Dr. Paul Oerg, chairman of the music department at the University of Minnesota, will play the piano. Oerg is dean of the Congress of Strings.

The third number, "La Oracion del torero," by Purina, will feature Houser, Goodman, William Lincer, solo violinist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and Theo Salzman, solo cellist with the Pittsburgh Symphony. The program will conclude with a "Trio in D Minor," by Mendelssohn.

Police Cutback Forces

'Definite Problem Getting Cars On, Off Campus'

Traffic for MSU and University of Michigan football games will move through East Lansing and Ann Arbor this fall without the aid of the Michigan State Police.

A cutback in the State Police work week and the opening of new sections of expressway are the reasons State Police officers will not be available for the games, according to Capt. James K. MacDonald, commander of the first district at East Lansing.

MacDonald said his district will not have the manpower this fall to supply the 20-26 officers it normally contributes to aid in directing the 15,000-20,000 cars which jam the area on football weekends.

The first district normally supplies the campus with 2-6 policemen and the City of East Lansing with 20-24.

"Prior to this year, we have been able to recruit men from outside the first district for football weekends," MacDonald said. "However the cut in the work week from 56 to 48 hours means each trooper has two days off instead of one."

"In addition, more police are needed since the new expressways have been opened."

Richard O. Bernitt, director of public safety at MSU, said the State Police decision "would pose a definite problem in getting cars on and off the campus."

The MSU police force will try to take care of the added burden by adding 25 new student traffic officers to its usual fall total of 100.

The University will use the student traffic officers to direct cars around Spartan Stadium into permanent and auxiliary parking lots.

The Campus Police can do nothing to help the traffic situation in the City of East Lansing, however.

Lt. Allen H. Andrews of the MSU police said East Lansing "is going to take its problem to the city manager and city council."

East Lansing usually used two men to handle traffic at intersections during the football game traffic peak. A reduction to one man per intersection won't remedy the situation, according to officials.

The State Police announcement was made at a summer meeting on the football traffic situation including officers from MSU, East Lansing, Lansing, the Ingham County Sheriff's Office, the Ingham County Road Commission and the State Highway Department.

MacDonald said the State Police will still keep troopers available at points around East Lansing when traffic is heaviest on football weekends. These include the Okemos Road exit of I-96 and the intersection of Mt. Hope and Okemos roads.

The State Police will also keep its regular patrols on M-78 and US-127 during the football games.

State Highway officials said they would post signs to lead football traffic off I-96 to the Okemos exit and Pennsylvania Avenue. In former years the traffic has been led onto South Cedar Street.

Traffic on Pennsylvania Avenue would be routed onto Mt. Hope and to the campus. Spartan Village's two Harrison Road exits will be closed at the end of each home game.

Dallas Symphony Leader Here For Final Concert

By SUE JACOBY
State News Staff Writer

Donald Johanos, the 34-year-old musical director of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, arrived on campus Sunday to begin rehearsing the Congress of Strings for its final concert of the summer.

Johanos is the youngest conductor to work with the 100-member group. Sponsored by the American Federation of Musicians, the Congress of Strings is a music education program which enables students selected at local additions to work with some of the most prominent musical figures in the country for eight weeks.

Johanos began studying the violin, piano and trombone in Cedar Rapids, Ia., of which he is a native. He conducted his high school orchestra there.

Moving on to higher musical achievements, Johanos attended the Eastman School of Music on a scholarship. He received his bachelor's degree in violin and his master's in music theory.

Johanos has an extensive international background in the world of music.

In 1955 he was presented with a Rockefeller grant from the American Symphony Orchestra League for advanced study in Europe. He studied under prominent European conductors for 18 months in Salzburg, Rome, Paris, Vienna, Amsterdam and Milan.

Johanos worked in Philadelphia with Eugene Ormandy, musical director of the Philadelphia Philharmonic Orchestra. Ormandy was on campus earlier this summer to conduct the Congress of Strings.

Johanos' latest international honor came last winter when he was invited to guest conduct the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam. He will appear there during the 1963-64 winter season.

The young conductor has also appeared in Europe with the Netherlands Radio Orchestra as the winner of an international conductor's competition.

While he was resident conductor of the Dallas Symphony, Johanos performed guest conducting engagements with major orchestras in Pittsburgh and New Orleans. He appeared at summer music festivals in Lawrence, Kan., and Brevard, N.C.

Johanos will also conduct the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra during the 1963-64 season.

The final concert of the Congress of Strings will be presented August 15 at 8:15 p.m. in Fairchild Theatre. Like all Congress of Strings concerts, the Johanos performance is open to the public free of charge.

The Congress of Strings has brought distinguished guest conductors to the campus for the past seven weeks. They include Izler Solomon, the first American conductor of a major symphony orchestra, and an MSU alumnus, Ormandy, Ralph Hunter, choral director of Radio City Music Hall, and Louis Lane, associate conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to the guest conductors, the Congress has also had permanent faculty members who are outstanding personalities in the music world. Among them is Mishel Piastro, former concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, who conducted the fourth Congress of Strings Concert.

for the National Tuberculosis Association will address the East Lansing Lion's Club Thursday in the Union.

Dr. Harry E. Walkup will speak on "Breath-Taking Diseases."

He is also scheduled to visit MSU laboratories where a research project financed by Christmas Seal funds is underway. The MSU researchers are delving into problems of bovine tuberculosis.

Walkup is responsible for the development, administration and financing of the projects.

Offices Shifted

Student Office Reorganized

A sweeping reorganization of the Dean of Student's Office which eliminated the Men's and Women's Division of Student Affairs has now become a physical reality.

Last Wednesday was moving day for all offices in the Student Services Building affected by the reorganization, which has actually been effective since July 1.

Dean of Students John A. Fuzak said the reorganization will "probably mean more to students now that the offices have actually moved."

"Of course, the reorganization has been announced for some time. This just seems to finalize it."

Fuzak has primary responsibility for all student affairs as dean of students. Directly under him is Eldon R. Nonnamaker, associate dean of students.

Nonnamaker will coordinate the Office of Student Affairs and aid in disciplinary matters. An assistant dean, who will be a woman, will provide leadership for coeds and aid in office coordination and discipline.

The Office of Student Affairs is located on the first floor of Student Services together with the Dean of Student's Office.

The newly-created Division of Student Activities is located in the old offices of the Women's Division on the first floor of Student Services.

It is headed by Louis F. Fakhouri. The Division of Student Activities includes directors of off-campus housing for both men and Student Services together with the Dean of Student's Office.

The newly-created Division of Student Activities is located in the old offices of the Women's Division on the first floor of Student Services.

It is headed by Louis F. Fakhouri. The Division of Student Activities includes directors of off-campus housing for both men and women and coordinators of all student activities.

Student activities include fraternities, sororities, AUSG, traffic court, community relations, University committees, Spartan handbook, organizations directory, all-University activities such as Homecoming and Greek Week and all-student organizations and special events.

The Division of Financial Aids, headed by Henry Dykema, is located in the old offices of the Men's Division on the first floor of Student Services.

The Division of Residence Hall Student Services on the third floor of Student Services is directed by Don Adams. It includes advisers and personnel connected with all University-owned residence halls.

The Placement Bureau, Health Center and Counseling Center are also under the supervision of the Dean of Students.

Fuzak and Nonnamaker said they were both "extremely optimistic" about the effectiveness of the new organization.

"There are always problems involved in an extensive reorganization such as this," Fuzak said. "But they can be ironed out as they come up, and we feel this setup is far better suited to the needs of our expanding University."

Nonnamaker said the new organization should bring about a "totally better student personnel organization."

"I think this is a more flexible setup than our old one," he said. "We should be able to shift the team when circumstances require it."

Where Divisions Are Located

Students should acquaint themselves with a number of important offices changes in the Student Services Building.

The Student Affairs division is located in the same offices as the Dean of Students on the first floor of Student Services.

The Division of Financial Aids occupies the offices of the old Men's Division on the first floor. The Division of Student Activities is located in the offices of the Old Women's Division opposite the Division of Financial Aids.

Princess Sheri Of South Case

By JACKIE KORONA
State News Staff Writer

A princess lives in South Case Hall. Sheri Smith is two-years-old, and all the men in the dorm treat her like royalty. Sheri is the only female in this men's hall besides her mother, Jo. Her father is the head resident adviser, Fred W. Smith. The little miss has lived in an apartment provided for her family on the second floor of the dorm for the past year.

But Sheri's activities are far from limited to this amount of space.

The second floor lounge, right outside her "home," is a favorite haunt for this little blond pixie. The long, unobstructed floor makes a perfect runway for her tricycle, and the lounge itself couldn't be a better place to find someone to read to her.

"Sheri just puts a book under her arm and trots out to the lounge to find someone who's willing to put aside his own books and read to her. She usually does find someone, but we try to keep her out of the lounge when the fellows are studying," said her father.

Right outside Sheri's own door are some fascinating things called steps, and Sheri knows how to climb them.

She also knows which way to go to get to the vending machines. "Sheri loves chewing gum," explained her mother. "She stands by the candy vending machine until someone comes up. Then she asks him to buy her some gum."

"And she usually gets it!" Also on the third floor of South Case are some classrooms. Every so often Sheri decides its time to begin her education, and toddles up the stairs to find a class in session.

"One day we couldn't find her, and looked all over the dorm before we finally discovered her in one of the classrooms. There she stood, just staring at the instructor."

"He told us she'd just wandered in and stared. The whole class laughed at it for a minute, and when she didn't move, the instructor went on with his lecture."

Back on the second floor, Sheri has learned to push open the swinging doors which lead to the men's rooms.

When lonesome or bored with her tricycle and huge stuffed dog, Sheri opens the door and makes a trip down the forbidden hall to visit one of her friends, an RA or one of the guys.

How do the men react to this? "Most of them go along with Sheri's activities," her father said. "They kid around with her, saying that she's the only love of their lives, and that they will wait for her to grow up."

Besides getting along well with people, Sheri has learned some of the more technical aspects of life in a dorm.

Mrs. Murphy Busy

Substitute Housemother

Five children and 17 grandchildren aren't enough for Mrs. Mary Murphy. In the past year this gray-haired lady -- who's "over 65" -- has added to her "family" with five groups of college girls. Mrs. Murphy is a substitute housemother, working in women's housing when regular housemothers are on vacation or sick. "I thought this job would be so interesting, and I like young people very much," said Mrs. Murphy in explanation of why she has taken such a position. Mrs. Murphy has spent time at four sorority houses, including Alpha Epsilon Phi, Pi Beta Phi, Zeta Tau Alpha and Delta Zeta. She has also lived in an approved supervised women's house in East Lansing for two weekends this year.

While she's working, Mrs. Murphy usually spends her time either watching television or reading. "I get to know some of the girls quite well, but others I don't even get to speak to. It all depends on the size of the house."

With five children of her own, including three daughters, Mrs. Murphy has had lots of experience with young people. "Before I was married, I taught school -- the first grade at Caro elementary school. I was there for 10 years, but stopped teaching when I was married and came to Lansing."

From that time, Mrs. Murphy devoted her time to her own children until they grew up and her husband died. Then followed 17 years working in the accounting department of a Lansing department store before her retirement in 1958.

"For the five years after that I didn't do much of anything," said Mrs. Murphy, "but I got tired of that."

"I did make three trips to California to see my daughters and their families, but I wanted something more specific to do. So I applied and was put on the substitute housemother list with the University."

MRS. MARY MURPHY

Police Auction

"Nothing really out of the ordinary has happened while I've been working," she said. "The strangest occurrence was when a girl came back to the house from the hospital. She had been discharged, but still felt she was sick."

"So she just took all her things and went home."

Mentioning a rush party which took place at one of the sorority houses while she was working there, Mrs. Murphy said she'd never seen anything quite like this before.

"The girls brought the clothes for the boys and the boys brought clothes for the girls. When they got to the party they all got together and they all exchanged bundles of clothes."

"One boy had on girl's leotards, and most of them wore skirts and blouses. The girls had on boys' pants and shirts."

"I think that was kind of cute."

Anything from dishes to water skis falls into the hands of the police during a typical year.

The public will have an opportunity to bid for the miscellaneous items August 22 at an auction at the State Police post on Harrison Road.

The auction is an annual event, according to Trooper Ronald Lewis. Many of the items were stolen or simply unclaimed.

"Some of them were stolen from people whom we can't locate," Lewis said. "Others were stolen by people in prison who can't remember who they stole the items from."

Wilson Moves Into New Honors Role

JOHN WILSON

The new associate director of the Honors College stepped into his new position last week.

John Wilson was appointed to the new post at the June Board of Trustees meeting. He comes from the State University of New York where he was assistant to the president.

Commenting on his new job, he said, "I will have to change my whole outlook."

"This position is concerned with personal relationships with the intellectually gifted, while in my other post, students were a rather impersonal concern."

Wilson is no stranger to the MSU campus. He attended here from 1949 to 1953 and was a football star and top honors student.

He worked here as assistant to the vice president for academic affairs for several years until 1958. When Thomas H. Hamilton left MSU to become president of the State University of New York, Wilson also went there to become his assistant.

He attended Oxford University in England on a Rhodes Scholarship in the honors school of English language and literature.

Wilson also worked for the Central Intelligence Agency and as intelligence officer with the Air Force.

In his capacity he will be tailoring Honors College programs to the intellectually able students. One of his major problems will be making students aware of the opportunities in graduate study.

He will try to help them secure fellowships, scholarships and assistantships. The new director will also be working in the advanced placement program.

Wilson is a native of Lapeer. He is married and has two children. He will be living on Linden St. in East Lansing.

Buildings Honor Prominent People

Editor's Note: This is the second in a four-part series on MSU buildings named after prominent people.

Naming MSU buildings after prominent people immortalizes them, but what happens when the buildings are torn down? Does the living memorial then die?

So far the problem has not come up. University officials, already plagued with more important problems, will probably cross that bridge when they come to it.

The old music practice building in back of Cowles House was once a dormitory. It was named Abbot Hall after Theophilus C. Abbot, who assumed the MSU presidency in the midst of the Civil War.

When the building was given to the music department as a music practice building, Abbot's name was dropped and then added to one of the women's dormitories on Bogue Street.

As more of MSU's buildings get older, the problem will become more acute and members of the Board of Trustees will either have to drop the name of the razed building entirely or rename a newer building with the same name.

Anthony Hall was named after Ernest L. Anthony, professor of dairy science. He was dean of agriculture for two decades. In the 1930's he fostered teaching research and extension that lowered farm costs to make depression farming possible.

After World War II, Anthony helped pave the way for the conversion of agriculture from a war to a peace-time industry. He is responsible for the present broad program of continuing education throughout Michigan.

Berkey Hall was named after William H. Berkey, a member of the State Board of Agriculture for many years. He was chairman of the Board near the end of World War II when MSU or very covered up, according to the college fashion experts. As for the covered up leg picture, coverings vary from the conventional and not-so-conventional knee socks to leather boots reaching the bottom of the knee. One sketch of the newer length style boots reaches to the top of the thigh. The practicality of such foot-covering is questionable for campus wear, but boots like these would come in handy for those ski week-ends so perched gaily on top, like the popular during winter term.

Enrollment Increase Seen

enrollment expectations bd

"MSU can expect a 6 to 7 per cent increase in enrollment this fall," said Gordon Sabine, vice president of Special Projects.

"The final number of new students will not be known until registration."

Registration for fall term is Sept. 23-25. Resident credit enrollment for last fall term was 27,728. If the figure increases the predicted 6 or 7 per cent there will be about 29,500 students enrolled for credit this fall.

Sabine predicted last February that enrollment would reach 37,000 by 1967 and 48,000 by 1972.

"Applications for admission will be accepted until 30 days before registration," Sabine said.

Test Ban Signed in Moscow MOSCOW--The United States, Britain and Soviet Russia signed a partial nuclear test ban early Monday. It marks the first new major step toward peace in the 17-year-old cold war. The treaty bans nuclear testing in the air, outer space and underwater, but does not affect underground test shots. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who signed for the United States, said the treaty was "A good first step... a step for which the United States has long and devoutly hoped."

Situation Warms in Korea TRUCE LINE, Korea -- The United Nations command reports no casualties following an exchange of gunfire Monday between a U.S. Army patrol and Communist North Korean troops in the demilitarized zone.

Buddhist Priest Burns To Death SAIGON, Viet Nam -- Buddhist leaders have asked the government of South Viet Nam for the body of a young Buddhist priest who burned himself to death Sunday. The incident occurred in a small village 95 miles south of Saigon. Failure of the government to comply to Buddhist demands for less religious discrimination could result in a new flare-up of Buddhist protests that they are being persecuted.

New Land Speed Record Set BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah -- A California driver, Craig Breedlove, has set a new world land speed record of 407.45 mph. The record was set in Breedlove's jet-powered "Spirit of America."

Now Chinese Want To Negotiate PEKING, China--Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai called for a world summit meeting to discuss banning and destroying stockpiles of nuclear weapons. His proposal came following the signing of the partial nuclear test ban treaty in Moscow. He is opposed to the agreement reached by the United States, Britain, and Russia. In Moscow, the Soviet Defense Minister accused the Chinese of "leading things toward a tightening of world tension."

U.N. To Debate African Problem UNITED NATIONS -- The United Nations Security Council was scheduled to resume debate on South Africa's racial policies Monday. Later this week, 32 African nations are expected to present a resolution censuring the South African Government, but not advocating its expulsion from the United Nations.

MSU Buildings

borrowed $6 million to house to flood the campus.

The classroom and office building named Bessey Hall recalls Dr. Ernst A. Bessey to many. He was professor of botany, head of the botany department and dean of the graduate school.

The new Eppley Center for Graduate Study in the Service Industries was made possible by a $1.5 million grant from the Eppley Foundation, Inc. of Omaha, Neb. Eugene C. Eppley, Omaha hotel chain owner and pioneer in hotel education, gave the money to the foundation.

Giltner Hall is named after Ward Giltner, dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine from 1923 to 1948.

Frederick C. Jenison was a former student who came to watch football practice every afternoon. At his death, he left MSU a half-million dollar estate that included the Washington Avenue business building occupied by Grant's store in Lansing. Jenison Fieldhouse is a memorial to his name.

Kedzie Chemical Laboratory memorializes the name of Robert C. Kedzie who came from the Civil War to teach chemistry here. He educated the state against poisonous arsenic-green wallpaper and against explosive kerosene. He built up the Farmers' Institutes in 1876 which evolved into the present-day Extension program.

Marshall Hall was the Business Administration Building until it was renamed in 1961. Charles Edward Marshall was head of the bacteriology and hygiene department from 1898 to 1912.

Justin S. Morrill, Vermont congressman, penned the bill signed by President Lincoln in 1862, which gave land to the support of at least one college in each state. A million-dollar endowment from the sale of one-fourth million acres of land in the Upper Peninsula helped MSU greatly in its early days.

Pre-law Change

A proposal to change the curriculum and administration of pre-law programs has been made by the deans of four colleges. Deans of the colleges of Arts and Letters, Social Science, Business, and Communication Arts submitted a proposal to the University Curriculum Committee for a change in the pre-law programs presently taught here.

"In addition to a student's requirements for a major, he may take certain required core courses," said William H. Combs, Dean of University Services and chairman of the Curriculum Committee. "These courses will be selected to give the pre-law program a broad interdisciplinary scope."

"This proposal has now come to the attention of the University Curriculum Committee which will give it consideration in the late summer or early fall," said Combs.

"Deans Paul A. Varg, Louis L. McQuitty, Albert L. Seelye, and Fred S. Siebert formulated the suggested program for the new pre-law major."

"Part of the committee has not seen the proposal yet because many are away for the summer," said Combs. "These four schools have a great deal to do with the present pre-law programs."

McQuitty, Dean of the College of Social Science, said the pre-law course may become a cooperative program of the four colleges.

The Curriculum Committee is composed of 11 members.

30 Engineering Students

Labs, Girls Impress Mexicans

By SUE JACOBY
State News Staff Writer

Laboratories and girls made the most lasting impressions on 30 Mexican engineering students who visited Michigan State last week.

The group is touring the United States under a cultural - educational program sponsored by the U.S. State Department. All of the young men are students at the Technical Institute of Advanced Studies in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Eduardo Saracho, 23, typified the students' reaction to MSU. "We learned many interesting things from visiting the scientific laboratories here," he said. "I was impressed by the facilities and especially by the buildings, since I am studying to be a civil engineer."

Carefully enunciating his English words, Saracho spoke animatedly on the merits of Michigan State coeds.

"The girls are beautiful here. They have beautiful eyes and most of them have beautiful legs. As for the way they dress, I don't think there is anything especially -- how do you say? -- slobbly about American girls' clothes. I think they look good in anything, including shorts."

Saracho's nearly-perfect grammar was surprising in view of the fact that he has only studied English for one and one-half years. "There are many American students in Guadalajara in the summer," he explained, "and we have a chance to become acquainted with them and practice our English."

All of the young men are in their final or next-to-last year of engineering study. They took full advantage of the chance to observe the new buildings in MSU's expanding science complex.

They toured electrical, chemical and physics laboratories and heard lectures on topics ranging from soil mechanics to the American political system. Professors from several departments and colleges of the University helped in arranging the program for the students.

A highlight of the trip was a tour of the new cyclotron building. "This was one of the most impressive experiences of our visit to this campus," said 22-year-old Salvador Ibarra.

While they were on campus, the students also had a chance to view some of the "high spots" on campus not connected with science or engineering. Several of them made use of the Men's IM Pool or went skating at the ice arena.

Ibarra and Saracho both commented on an especially pleasing aspect of their visit. "We have found that everyone here is invariably punctual," Saracho noted. "Everything went according to schedule, and the person who was supposed to be with us was always here at the appointed time."

The students travel with an interpreter from the State Department and three professors from their own university.

Before arriving at MSU last week, they visited Mayville, a small Michigan farming community. Other stops on their trip include Chicago, New Orleans, Niagara Falls, Boston, New York City and San Antonio, Tex.

What are their impressions of the United States to this point? Saracho said the group had found the American people "unfailingly sincere -- at this University and elsewhere."

"The people have been unusually almost universally courteous, friendly, and eager to help us."

Ibarra said the most impressive facet of this country is the automation, "the practical way of living."

Ibarra said the thing which disturbed him most about Americans was that they "often have a false impression of what Mexicans are like."

"Too many of your people think we are uncivilized, uneducated. Sometimes they might judge a whole people by some of the workers from our country here."

"It is not good to have a lack of understanding between our peoples. We are so close geographically, and close ties can only benefit both our countries."

Saracho said the group has found American food a problem at times. "It has sometimes been difficult to make the change to American food," he commented.

The State Department interpreter asked several of the boys what they disliked most about the United States.

"The hamburger!" was the universal reply.

Most of the boys said they would like closer ties and more exchange programs between their school and universities like MSU.

"We even have initials like MSU," Saracho commented. "Ours are ITESO."

All of the students said they wished to thank Michigan State for making an effort to give us a picture of an American university.

MEXICAN ENGINEERING STUDENTS -- 30 young men from south of the border were impressed by the coeds and laboratories at Michigan State last week.

Bridge ???

The Bogus Street Bridge, which would divert a portion of heavy traffic from East Lansing and open a new route to Shaw Lane and South Campus, will probably not be built this summer.

The East Lansing City Council has not yet acted upon an offer by J. Pulte Incorporated, a Birmingham construction company, to sell land for the bridge right-of-way to the city. The city real estate committee is still studying the question.

The Council is also waiting for a report on the possibility of building the bridge 50 feet west of the present proposed site. It would mean a more complex engineering feat, because the bridge would have to be curved. This would place it entirely on University property.

It seems highly unlikely that construction could begin this summer," East Lansing Mayor Gordon Thomas said. "After the Council decides on a course of action, it must consult with the University."

MSU is paying half the cost of the four-lane bridge. It is estimated at $200,000.

The bridge, if built, should ease football traffic, which has become a primary concern of the campus police, since the state police cut-back their manpower.

Dutton Directs Math, Science Center

By LINDA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

Seven years ago a chemistry professor voiced the need for a link between the science teacher and corresponding resources at Michigan State University.

Today Frederic B. Dutton directs the unique functions of the expanding Science and Mathematics Teaching Center on campus.

Jointly established by the former College of Science and Arts and the College of Education, the Center helps serve the needs of cross-department lines of the best relationships between educational and content fields.

Teacher training constitutes a large fraction of the services of every college on campus. The Science and Math Teaching Center primarily contributes to pre-service and in-service science teachers' training programs. Aside from responding to inquiries of science and mathematics teachers concerning subject matter, curricula, activities, science fairs, and campus visits, and the Center sponsors several science institutes on campus every summer.

Currently the Center is directing a Chemistry Study Summer Institute for teachers of chemistry. The program supplies a rigorous consideration of the power and limitations of the experimental approach, as well as the appropriate use of models and their limitations. Topics include structure of matter, energy relationships, reaction rates, equilibrium, electromotive force measurements and standard electrode potentials. Participants are studying the Chem. Study test, doing lab experiments and attending lectures and classes in Case Hall.

One of the well-known summer programs at MSU is sponsored by the Science and Math Teaching Center. The High School Honors Science Institute gives prospective high school seniors a chance to look at challenging opportunities in science, according to Dutton.

For six weeks, 100 carefully-selected high school students study mathematics and one science with university staff members. Regular classes in math and biology, chemistry, geology or physics take about half the student's time. The other half is used for more detailed study and research.

Various summer institutes for science and math teachers are also sponsored by the Center. Probably the most extensive of these is the three-summer sequential program in the biological sciences.

Biology teachers spend the first summer at the W.K. Kellogg Biological Station at Gull Lake and the following two summers on campus. The institute strives to give the teacher more thorough understanding of scientific principles and their application through special lectures, field trips, demonstrations and laboratory instruction.

The Math and Science Teaching Center also sponsors traveling science programs, sending staff members from other colleges to MSU and keeping department files on programs especially for teachers. To assist the university, the Center recruits science and math teachers, promotes the use of source material on campus, contacts foundations and industries concerning means of aiding science teaching and provides a communications center between teachers and college departments.

As soon as McDonel Hall is completed, the Center will relocate its offices, now in the Education Building. Dutton said that the Center, in addition to its present activities, will become responsible for some actual class instruction programs and complete collections of instructional materials in science and math.

All-Stars Surprise Packers After Slow Start, 20-17

CHICAGO -- Four Spartans of Michigan State were members of the College All-Star delegation that upset the Green Bay Packers, National Football League champions, here Friday night, 20-17.

Quarterback Ron VanderKelen of Wisconsin, who triggered the stunning upset with a fourth period touchdown pass to teammate Pat Richter, praised the play of State's lineman Ed Budde and Dave Behrman.

Earlier the same combination of Richter and VanderKelen set up the Collegians first score, which saw Larry Ferguson of Iowa haul over from the six. The fourth period pass play covered 73-yards and caught the champion Packers completely off-guard.

Another Michigan Stateer who did an outstanding job was Lonnie Sanders, who played a defensive back slot. Young Sanders did a good job of covering the Packers' pass receivers and kept Bart Starr's passing attack off balance.

A fourth Spartan, Jim Kanicki, saw only limited action but carried out his role well in the time put in.

Another happy note for Coach Otto Graham's Collegians was the field goal kicking of Bob Jencks of Miami of Ohio. Young Jencks out did his professional counterpart -- Jerry Kramer -- by booting two out of three, while Kramer hit on only one of three and lost a chance for the possible tie.

Green Bay drew first blood in the opening period when the recovered a fumble and marched in for the score. Fullback Jim Taylor smashed over from the two.

The score was knotted at half-time, 10-10. After a scoreless third period, Jencks kicked a field goal that placed the All-Stars in front, 13-10. Then later in the final period, VanderKelen and Richter connected for their TD and a 20-10 advantage.

From there the Collegian defense held until the waning seconds, when the Packers scored their final six-pointer.

All four of the Spartans that played in the classic were professional draft choices, as were four others who were not selected for the game. Budde was a first round pick of the Kansas City club of the American Football League, while Behrman drew the same honors from the Buffalo Bills.

Sanders and Kanicki were both second round picks of NFL eleven; Sanders going to the Washington Redskins and Kanicki to the Cleveland Browns.

Other Spartans picked by the pros were: George Saines, Buffalo; Ernie Clark, Detroit Lions; Jim Bobbit, Cleveland, and Bill Zorn, Los Angeles Rams. Zorn, however, has been released by the Rams.

Kenton

Activities in the clinic are scheduled from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Highlighting the day is the "Kenton Hour" each evening at 7:30 p.m. Kenton talks informally with the students about all aspects of jazz at these sessions.

Tonight Kenton and Johnny Richards, arranger and composer, and several others will discuss "Trends in Jazz Writing," be on tap tomorrow with Thomas At 8 p.m. Mary Stamm, who used to be the featured soloist in Kenton's band and Charlie Mariano, former alto sax player for Kenton, will play a combo session. Their group is a quintet. Today instrumental clinics are being held at 1 p.m. during the workshop session held every afternoon. Latin-American rhythms will be on tap tomorrow with Thomas A. Brown directing the workshop.
