

University Enrolls Record 13,000

Record Budget OK'd; Boosted By Pay Hike

Salaries were listed as the chief cause for pushing MSU's 1964-65 budget past the $100,000,000 mark.

The record-shattering budget was approved last week by the MSU Board of Trustees.

The board gave the okay to a budget of $55,372,473, which is included in the expected expenditures for the coming school year. Of this, $43,557,322 was budgeted for the main University in East Lansing, $2,754,031 for Oakland University, $4,307,357 for the Agricultural Experiment Station and $4,753,473 for Cooperative Extension Service.

This represents an increase in the budget for the East Lansing campus of $7,151,050 over the 1963-64 total.

These funds will come from legislative appropriation, student and application fees, departmental receipts, vocational education, land-grant interest and dormitory utilities.

An additional $45,000,000 is expected to come in the form of grants and gifts from the United States and private sources contract research and allied programs.

Expenditures for salaries is expected to total $30,505,294, an increase of $5,180,860 over the school year just ending.

Of this total $1,820,000 will be used for salary increases which will bring MSU into the middle-pay range for Big Ten universities. An additional $2,320,000 will be used to pay 240 new faculty members hired to meet the needs of the growing university.

Labor costs are also expected to rise because of pay adjustments. $3,948,734 has been appropriated in this area, representing an increase of $501,195 from the previous period.

Wages for the new business, administrative and service staff in student services will come to $442,000, and $225,000 will go for wages for the summer school staff.

The trustees approved the allocation of $250,000 for the restoration of the Traffic Safety Center, which was suggested in the legislative appropriation.

Trustees Adopt Ban On Driving

The University Board of Trustees last week officially adopted an ordinance which will place motor vehicles under strict limitations.

The new ordinance will practically ban student driving on campus between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. on class days. The ruling will go into effect Sept. 15.

In other action, the trustees approved the division of the department of sociology and anthropology, let contracts for road building and site construction totaling $306,434.55, approved a master's degree program for the school of labor and industrial relations and accepted a letter from the American Society of Landscape Architects urging new quarters and equipment for the school of urban planning and landscape architecture.

The new rules governing motor vehicles, which aroused reaction from both students and faculty last term, will restrict parking privileges of staff and faculty members as well as those of student drivers.

The ordinance also bans all freshmen except those who are 21 or married from owning or operating a motor vehicle on campus.

The University will operate a bus service to transport students between classes.

The new regulations will not be in effect on weekends or holidays. Although they will be separate, the newly created departments of sociology and anthropology are expected to continue working together. Both will come under the College of Natural Science.

John Useem, who was chairman of the sociology and anthropology department, will be the

To Visit Lansing

Scranton, Barry Coming

Gov. William W. Scranton will arrive in Lansing this afternoon for a two-day tour of the capital city and Detroit.

Scranton has scheduled a public rally to be held in the Frandor parking lot at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Friday the Pennsylvania governor is scheduled to fly to Detroit for a luncheon at the Detroit Press Club. He will return to Lansing in the evening

BARRY GOLDWATER

WILLIAM SCRANTON

GOP Pick Open Says Adrian

Although the Republican National Convention opens in San Francisco in less than three weeks and most observers have handed the presidential nomination to Sen. Barry Goldwater, one MSU political scientist feels that the last minute effort by Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton to "save" the party from the conservatives is having some effect.

"It is not correct to assume that Goldwater has it sewed up," Charles R. Adrian, professor and chairman of political science, said. Scranton is making some inroads into the assumed delegate strength which has been attributed to Goldwater, he said.

Adrian said the appearance during the coming week of both Scranton and Goldwater in Lansing at the state Republican convention is "just a chance to look Scranton over."

"People know Goldwater well enough by now."

Adrian said the Scranton tactic in Michigan will be to keep the state's delegates committed to Gov. George Romney "for the time being."

It is not yet clear whether either Goldwater or Scranton will be nominated, he said. The party has been looking for a compromise candidate, Adrian explained, and would have settled for former Vice President Richard M. Nixon but that his attempt at making himself a compromise candidate was handled very badly.

Party leaders may look for

Special Programs Offered

Increase Of 533 From Year Ago

A record total of 13,435 students had enrolled for classes at the close of regular registration Wednesday, according to Registrar Horace C. King.

The overall figure exceeds last year's total by 533.

Oakland University enrolled 706, up from 643 in 1963.

The enrollment total also includes: Michigan State resident center, 1,442; and credit extension, 982.

King said he expected the on-campus registration total to increase slightly because of late registration of some students.

The enrollment figures include both part and full time students and full-term and half term enrollees.

Friday is the first day that changes in enrollment can be made. The deadline for late registration, adding courses or changing sections is Tuesday, July 7 is the last day for dropping courses.

Graduating students can make no changes in courses after Friday. The last day for dropping half-term courses is Tuesday.

The first half-term ends on July 29 when registration for the second half begins. The regular 10-week session ends Sept. 4.

In addition to regular classes, more than 50 special sessions, workshops, institutes and seminars will be offered.

A new feature of the summer term will be the July 13-17 summer alumni program, "The Care and Feeding of the Mind." Designed for University graduates and their families, it will be a session in continuing liberal education.

Also scheduled is the fifth annual Fine Arts Festival, July 13-18; the ninth annual Institute on Asia, June 22-July 29; the sixth annual Congress of Strings, June 21-Aug. 15; and workshops for teachers and students in fields ranging from biology and chemistry to music and counseling.

MSU's summer term, an integral part of the University's year - round, four - quarter system, is tailored for regular enrollees who want to accelerate their programs, recent high school graduates, teachers, and persons wishing to expand their education.

Strikes Delay Construction

Two labor strikes by Lansing area plumbers and glaziers are holding up construction on several campus building projects, and may prevent openings scheduled for September, including the new Fee and Akers dorm complex.

"At this point all I can say is it's going to be very difficult to complete the buildings," Theodore B. Simon, superintendent of physical plant, said. "It is very doubtful whether we can do it."

Simon said construction is continuing on a "limited scale at a substantially reduced rate."

Workers whose jobs do not depend on the work of plumbers and glaziers are going on with their jobs, including the bricklayers, whose 21-day strike ended earlier this month.

The physical plant department called June 10 for 500 additional construction workers to take work on campus to help speed completion on the 12 current projects, several of which are behind schedule.

Simon said workers called in, but due to the strikes there was not enough work for them. The plumbers union has been on strike since June 1 and the glaziers since June 10.

Both strikes cover projects in the entire Lansing area, and the University is not directly involved in negotiations between the unions and the contractors.

Douglas Griffith, business agent for the plumbers local, declined to comment on the situation.

Chester Noble, business agent for the glaziers, said there has been no contact between his union and the contractors since the expiration of their contract June 10. The glaziers are asking a 50-cent raise over two years and the retention of present agreements on vacation pay and mileage rates.

The contractors' negotiations are handled through the Association of General Contractors, which also declined to comment.

Simon said the greatest delays at present are on the two new residence halls and on the chemistry and biochemistry buildings under construction in the science

Gardner Strikes Out Against U.S. Decline

MSU's largest graduating class in history heard the president of the Carnegie Corporation challenge them to renew their society and prevent the United States from slipping into decline like great nations of the past.

John W. Gardner told 2,763 baccalaureate and 697 advanced degree candidates at the University's 104th commencement Sunday, June 14, that this nation does not have to follow the pattern of decline of Egypt, Greece, Rome and other great civilizations.

But an "ever-renewing society" must fight apathy and lowered motivation to avoid decay, he said.

"If a nation cannot provide incentives, if it cannot motivate, if it cannot stir the minds and hearts of its members, it is on the way out," he said.

Pessimism has sapped vitality of some Americans, Gardner said, and other citizens—the "well-fed"—are afflicted with a spiritual flabbiness.

"But the success of such ventures as the Peace Corps suggest that there are still ample resources of motivation in our people," he said.

Americans will have to draw deeply from those resources or they stand a "very good chance" of missing the grimmest lessons in history, he said.

To achieve a renewal, Gardner suggested an eight-point formula which included respect for the individual, development of potential in members, a means to combat rigidity and foster innovation, incentives to further motivation, cutting through "the encircling web of vested interest,"

Council Balks On Housing Resolution

The East Lansing City Council has adopted a resolution calling for equal opportunities for all persons, but no action was taken toward adopting an open housing resolution.

Over 150 civil rights supporters jammed the council chambers, issuing demands for an enforceable open housing law.

Petitions signed by 920 East Lansing residents asking for open housing were presented by the East Lansing Citizens Committee on Human Rights.

Stanley J. Idzerda, dean of the Honors College and a member of the committee, spoke for St. Thomas Aquinas Catholic Church, saying the resolution passed by the council "leaves something to be desired" and asked that "something more concrete be enacted."

The resolution adopted by the council states that the council "goes on record as favoring equal opportunity for all persons regardless of their race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry to live in and participate in the community life of East Lansing."

A move to refer an open housing ordinance to the city attorney for a legal opinion was defeated.

Mayor Gordon L. Thomas, professor of speech, said the majority of the council felt a ruling by the state attorney general that the Michigan Civil Rights Commission has all authority in this field made a local ordinance unworkable.

Heart Attack Kills Student On Campus

On campus for the first day of summer term classes, a 20-year-old senior collapsed and died of a heart attack Wednesday afternoon.

John B. O'Donnell, 20, of Peoria, Ill., collapsed near Eustace Hall, across from Olin Health Center.

Campus police officer Ronald A. Mahaffy administered mouth to mouth resuscitation at the scene but to no avail.

Friends said O'Donnell had a congenital heart disease since birth. His East Lansing address was 534 Sunset Lane.

A Long Summer Ahead

The long hot summer of 1964 is beginning.

The long pull from registration through to finals is getting under way for the 13,000 students on campus this summer term. But more significant things are going on elsewhere that will make this summer a long, hot period of tension and major developments on national and world scales.

The strange phenomenon of Republican and Democratic politicking in presidential and local races continues. It promises to provide an interesting show for students who tire of hitting the books through the hard months of July and August, as well as for the entire rest of the world waiting on the sidelines to see what will happen in one of the most unique and disturbing campaigns in the nation's history.

For Lansing area people, election issues will hit home hard this weekend as the two top contenders for the Republican nomination show up in the capital for the state party convention.

Also on the home front, some diversion from studies will be provided by the writing of the Lansing chapter of the 1964 volume of the civil rights struggle.

The East Lansing-Human Relations Commission has passed a weak resolution favoring equal opportunity, and the verbal war for an enforceable open housing ordinance will probably continue through the summer.

A group of University students is away for the summer, working to speed integration in Mississippi voter registration and other projects, as their part in the rights struggle

The summer of 1964 looks like it will be a long and hot one, in many ways crucial to the progress of the nation, and will be warm not just with the heat of dormitory rooms and hourly exams.

SEC Draws Praise On First Anniversary

By MIKE KINDMAN
State News Staff Writer

MSU's unique Student Education Corps passed its first anniversary as an active program this term. It has been very successful in directing the enthusiasm of students to helping out deprived children in schools throughout central Michigan, according to David Gottlieb, associate professor of sociology, anthropology and education.

The corps was founded during winter and spring terms last year after a discussion of a student tutoring plan in Gottlieb's sociology of education class met enthusiastic response around campus.

The reception of Student Education Corps has been good both in Michigan and around the country. A column on SEC by James Reston of the New York Times brought requests for information from colleges around the country, and students in 13 Michigan colleges and universities are now working in volunteer teaching programs with goals similar to those of SEC.

At a conference called by Gov. Romney at Kellogg Center earlier this year, a clearing-house of volunteer teaching program was established at MSU. The purpose of Higher Education's Teaching Programs, HELPS, is to co-ordinate the operations of the various programs around the state.

"The ultimate aim of the corps is to help prevent drop-outs among intellectually qualified students," said Sandra Warden, East Lansing graduate student and one of SEC's two coordinators. "It is the socio-economically disadvantaged children who are often potential drop-outs. The purpose of the SEC is to help show these youngsters that education is the key to a better life by providing needed inspiration and motivation to continue with their schooling."

Gottlieb said there is no proof that the corps has helped prevent drop-outs. But principals and teachers have reported renewed interest in education among some students since corps members have begun working in their schools.

The corps is proof that students are interested in working for worthwhile goals, Gottlieb said.

"Young people have a lot of talent, skill and enthusiasm," he said. "If you open up meaningful areas for them, they'll get involved."

"It's almost like 'man bites dog.' Suddenly young people are doing something very responsible," he said there should be more chances for students to work against the social climate that holds some school children back and that perpetuates the poverty and poor social adjustment that is at the root of their problem.

"To me," Gottlieb said, "the responsibility of an educational institution is to use its full resources, and we don't."

He said "this institution has the physical plant and the human resources to do much more," he suggested, for instance, that school children from disadvantaged backgrounds be brought to campus in the summer, for tutoring and special cultural programs.

Gottlieb said it is essential to "think in terms of the kinds of things this University could do to assist in areas of education, especially in the area of the culturally deprived."

One of the aspects of SEC to which its success is attributed is the fact that it is run on a day-to-day basis entirely by students, with a faculty advisory committee headed by Gottlieb. "Students recognize that the survival and success of the program depend on them," Gottlieb said. "The success of the program is what they do to make it successful."

Mrs. Warden said, "The SEC really has no rules. It is founded on careful thinking and genuine concern with the problems of culturally and economically impoverished youngsters. The program differs not only from one school system to another but from one teacher to another in the same building."

"Volunteers are unhesitatingly assigned where the school feels they will do the most good. We ask only that volunteers be assigned to work directly with children and that they not be 'used' for grading papers, clerical work or things of this nature."

The students who volunteer for SEC come from nearly every group on campus, according to subject area, social group and age level. Only about one fourth of the volunteers are education majors.

Volunteers work at least one half day a week, and Mrs. Warden said, more often one full day or two or three half days.

A wide variety of subjects are taught by SEC volunteers, and many work in extra programs of athletics, music and art or group activities such as Girl Scouts and youth groups.

"Of all the student activities on campus, I feel SEC is the most worthwhile," said Lance Hauer, Detroit graduate student and coordinator. "Not only does the student have the opportunity to grow and gain, but someone else does, too—someone who really needs it."

Hauer said the corps has run into few problems in its daily operation, and has been for the most part highly praised by teachers in the schools where volunteers are working.

One big problem the corps faces is transportation for volunteers to their schools, which are up to 70 miles from campus. Several cars are provided by the corps, and costs for renting them have taken a good part of the money provided for the corps by the University and by student government.

Volunteers who have worked for at least a term are allowed to register early in order to design a program to fit their expected teaching load.

No summer program has been worked out, Hauer said, beyond general discussion and suggestions that one might be helpful.

Applications for fall term volunteers are now being taken in the SEC office, 314 Student Services.

Next year's coordinators will be Frank Blanco, Lansing senior, and Robin Ruhl, Birmingham junior. Both have been with the corps all four terms it has been in operation.

leges of citizenship and creating an educational system that will provide maximum fulfillment for each American.

Other problems Gardner listed were a peace with justice, a pressing population expansion, assistance for developing nations, creation of a new moral framework to avoid a morally shapeless world, and modernization of governmental forms and procedures.

Gardner received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree after his address, along with Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations under-secretary for special political affairs; Jay L. Lush, distinguished professor of agriculture, at Iowa State University; and Akhter Hameed Khan, vice-chairman of the Board of Governors of the Pakistan Academy for Rural Development.

Receiving a Doctor of Engineering degree was Maurice J. Day, senior vice-president of the Crucible Steel Company of America.

Distinguished Alumni Awards went to J. Joseph Cranmore, of Portchester, N.Y., president of the Packaging Machinery Division of Crompton and Knowles Corp.; Doretta S. Hoffman, of Manhattan, Kan., dean of the College of Home Economics, Kansas State University; Thomas W. Kimen of Western Springs, Ill., vice president of R. R. Donnelly and Sons of Chicago; and Clarence H. Shaver, of Glencoe, Ill., chairman of the board of United States Gypsum Co., Chicago.

Sheila Made It!

Most MSU June graduates sent out standard, formal announcements weeks before commencement, but one senior had her graduation announced just minutes before ceremonies began at Spartan Stadium.

It may have been late, but few missed it—a banner trailing behind a single-engine airplane circling the stadium, in football season manner.

In a more colloquial style than the standard announcements, the banner simply proclaimed: "Sheila Hulthan made it."

The plane and its message, which circled the stadium about eight times before the ceremonies began, made the Flushing, N.Y. coed an anonymous celebrity in the eyes of 28,000 persons at commencement.

One of 400 Arts and Letters graduates, Miss Hulthan remained anonymous until after the ceremonies when an MSU information staff photographer found her.

The "announcement" was sent for Miss Hulthan by some of her friends.

University Given Two Million In Grants, Gifts.

Gifts and grants totaling $2,066,547.84 were accepted last week by the Board of Trustees. Largest of the grants was $800,000 from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to be used for the National Defense Student Loan Program. Funds from the grant will provide loans to qualified MSU students who need assistance in financing their college work. The loans are repayable after students have graduated. This year's grant to MSU is the maximum available.

Another HEW grant, for $200,256, will support a study of relationships between the racial composition of high schools and the social structure of adolescents.

Director of the project, which will compare aspirations of Negro and white youngsters in segregated and inter-racial schools, is David Gottlieb, associate professor of sociology and education.

The U.S. Office of Education has granted $96,905 for support of MSU's 1964-65 Guidance and Counseling Institute. The program, under the direction of Norman Kagan, assistant professor of education, will run from Sept. 21 until June 11, 1965. Thirty school counselors working on advanced degrees will participate.

An $89,292 grant from the National Institutes of Health will support a training program for 17 graduate students in clinical psychology. The grant, to cover the second year of a five-year program, is under the direction of Clarence L. Winder, professor and chairman of psychology.

The NIH also awarded $82,674 to support graduate and post-doctoral student programs in the basic science aspects of food science. Bernard S. Schweigert, professor and chairman of food science, will direct the program, which includes eight pre-doctoral and three post-doctoral students.

Leroy G. Augenstern, professor and chairman of biophysics, received $76,029 from the Atomic Energy Commission to continue his study of physical mechanisms in the inactivation of proteins by radiation.

A $66,000 grant from the National Science Foundation will support a research study by two members of the Department of Physics and Astronomy, Thomas H. Edwards and Clarence D. Hause. They will investigate high resolution absorption spectra and magnetic rotation spectra in the near infrared region.

Another NSF grant, for $53,100, was awarded to Peter A. Schroeder, Frank J. Blatt and Meyer Barber, all of physics and astronomy, to continue research of electronic properties of pure metals and alloys.

A new training program for graduate students in physiology will be supported by $40,000 from NIH. Directed by Joseph Meites, professor of physiology, the program initially provides for nine graduate students.

With a $20,000 grant from the AEC, Carl H. Brubaker, Jr., professor of chemistry, will continue a study of the effects of polyfunctional anions on electron transfer between metal ions in solution.

Included among grants to Oakland University was $30,040 from NSF to provide for five undergraduate science programs: in chemistry, directed by Paul Tomboulis; engineering science, W. G. Hammerle; mathematics, Ralph Mobley; physics; and K. D. Roose, social sciences.

The Board also accepted $20,065 in scholarships, including $9,993 at Oakland.

Home Ec Dean Takes Furlough

One of the nation's leaders in home economics education, Thelma E. Porter, will begin a year's furlough July 1, prior to her retirement on July 1, 1965 as dean of home economics department.

The Board of Trustees named Jeanette A. Lee, assistant dean, to be acting dean.

The College of Home Econ-

DEAN THELMA PORTER

omics, which had an enrollment of 1,079 during the past school year, is the fourth largest in the United States.

During Dean Porter's administration of the past eight years, the college has increased its emphasis on research and continuing education, and has adopted a tradition-breaking curriculum.

The new curriculum, which is attracting wide attention throughout the nation, de-emphasizes manipulative skills and provides a balance between professional and general education.

Dean Porter, a graduate of MSU, taught and was head of the department of foods and nutrition during the period 1938-1944. She returned to the University in 1956 as dean after 12 years as head of the department of home economics at the University of Chicago.

During her leave and retirement, Dean Porter plans to continue to reside in East Lansing except for visits to her daughter in Cleveland and her son in Lombard, Ill.

Born in South Lockwood, Mich., Porter received a B.S. degree at Michigan State in 1921, her A.M. at the University of California in 1924 and Ph.D. at the University of Chicago in 1935.

MSU Gets New Fund Director

Robert E. Shackleton has been named director of the Alumni Development Fund.

He succeeds Robert C. Toll who resigned to accept a development position with the University of Illinois.

Shackleton will retain his post as coordinator of the Ralph H. Young Scholarship Fund to which he was appointed in March of this year.

In his new position Shackleton will have the responsibility for coordinating all MSU alumni fund-raising activities.

Director of alumni relations, John R. Kinney, noted that the Development Fund has made great progress in recent years under the director of Robert Toll.

"We feel very fortunate," Kinney added, "in having a capable successor in Bob Shackleton."

A veteran university radio and television sportscaster, Shackleton joined Michigan State's radio station WKAR in 1948 and later became chief of sports broadcasting for WKAR and WMSB-television.

Last year he was appointed assistant manager in charge of programming for WKAR.

Area To Get Lansing Link

Construction will begin in 1968 on an expressway which will give the University community a new direct route through Lansing.

In announcing plans for the new road, John Mackie, state highway commissioner, said that present plans call for the east-west freeway, I-496, to commence at the Trowbridge road interchange on the east side of the campus near Spartan Village. It will run parallel to Kalamazoo Avenue hooking up with I-96 by Waverly Road.

Prior to any start on construction, the highway department will have to buy up the right of way causing the relocation of approximately 900 families.

No actual purchases will be made until final plans have been drawn up. However, it is expected that all properties in the road's path will be vacated by mid-1967.

College Week Provides Courses For Homemakers

Any Michigan homemaker can be a college student for four days this summer, July 21-24 at the 37th annual College Week for Women here.

Teen-age marriages, moral questions created by science, the "new math," the fats in your diet—these are a few of the topics Michigan homemakers will be discussing.

Like any college students, participants will be faced with exploring some of the toughest questions facing today's world: Does an individual have the right to specify the heredity of an unborn child? What can we do about the school drop-out problem? Why do certain peoples of the world find Communism so appealing?

In general session, Charles T. Vetter Jr. of the U.S. Information Agency will discuss Communism at 8 p.m. July 21, and Mrs. George Romney, Michigan's first lady, will discuss "Building Stronger Families" at 7:45 p.m. July 23. Admission to both is free and clubs are encouraged to attend these meetings as a group. Both are in the Auditorium.

All other programs are open only to those that have paid conference fees of $2 for one day, $4 for four days, or $27 for registration fee, room and board for four days.

Complete program and registration information may be obtained by writing to College Week for Women, 108 Agricultural Hall.

"Who Shall Decide?" is the title of one session featuring Leroy Augenstein, professor and chairman of biophysics. He will discuss the moral questions created by modern science, such as "Does an unconceived child have the right never to be conceived?" and "Does the individual have the right to die?"

One general meeting will be devoted to a panel on teen-age marriage. Panelists are Eugene Peisner, Mrs. Carol Shaffer, Mrs. Lennah Backus and Mrs. Vera Borosage, all members of the department of home management and child development.

Homemakers can also attend two of the three-session short courses being offered on 28 topics. Class subjects include "Nutrition and the Consumer," "Social Psychology and Personality Development," "Understanding Your Child's Mathematics," "Modern Literature," "Houses Are to Live In" and many others.

Salt Forces Retirement Of American

A tired old servant is bowing out of the modern competition with its hydro-matic, V-8 super-torque, chrome-plated road companions.

Many students and car enthusiasts will be saddened by the news of the retirement of Jon Ho Reiger's the 1941 Willys American, which has come to be a familiar sight on campus.

Reiger, Dayton, Ohio, graduate student in social science, decided to retire his rare possession.

"This Michigan salt is killing the Willys," Reiger said, "so I'm storing it away in a garage in Ohio to preserve it as long as possible."

Reiger inherited the car 11 years ago from his grandfather who was the original purchaser 23 years ago.

"Since I've been teaching at the University I have used the Willys to illustrate to my classes, with certain amusement, points in economics and the difficulty of keeping an old car going," Reiger commented.

"The Willys is in fantastic condition," Reiger said. "It can still travel at 85 miles an hour without being hopped up. It has had some mechanical overhauling and repainting, but the engine remains basically untouched and the body is still in perfect condition."

Today an antique dealer it might pay from $300-400, he said. But in another 20 years its estimated value will run in the thousands.

"The Willys has assumed quite a personality," Reiger said. "It has become such a familiar sight on campus that notes have been etched on its dust and verses have been dedicated and slipped under the wiper."

One student wrote: "There was an old car named Willys,

So tired that it barely could sneeze,

Its favorite thrill was to go down a hill

With all of us pushing plus a tail breeze."

The Willys has seen the country. Reiger has taken it to both coasts plus Canada and Mexico, once carrying 1300 pounds and a 330 pound set of weights. "I've never had any trouble with it," he said. "It starts in rain, sleet or snow. Last winter when the temperature dropped to 18 degrees below, the Willys started without any trouble the first time."

Although the Willys is a familiar oddity on campus, it often perplexes curious onlookers.

"Drivers will pull up close to look at the hub caps and gas station attendants ask what type of foreign car it is," Reiger said. "Sometimes people are insulting and call it an old crate."

Reiger has received all kinds of offers for the car in trade for some things ten times the market value. But he said the car is an old friend and is worth much more to him.

Race car enthusiasts may recognize that the Willys American was once a popular make for converting to sports car racing, he said.

Yet on its 23rd anniversary the Willys is being retired in favor of a 1961 Chevy, which Reiger plans to purchase.

Before the Willys makes its final sojourn to Dayton, interested spectators might view it almost daily parked with pride behind Bessey Hall.

Hannah's Daughter Wed; To Teach Political Science

Miss Mary Elizabeth Hannah, daughter of University President John A. Hannah, was married to Myron Paul Curzan of Manhattan, N.Y., at Cowles House last Friday afternoon.

Municipal Court Judge Earl E. McDonald officiated at the civil ceremony, which was held in the garden of the Hannah's campus home.

The former Miss Hannah was graduated in political science from MSU in 1961. She had previously attended Wellesley College. She is currently working on her Ph.D. at Yale.

She met her husband three years ago at Yale when both were working on their master's degrees on Woodrow Wilson fellowships.

They became engaged in April, 1963.

Curzan will be doing work on his doctorate at Columbia University next fall. Mrs. Curzan will teach political science at Brooklyn College.

'Technical Jargon Isn't Corrupting'

The English language, contrary to reports, is not being deteriorated by an increasing use of technical jargon, Robert J. Geist, professor of English, said.

"The most notable nonsense about the English language is that it is being corrupted," Geist said.

He made the statement concerning charges that research findings and other scholarly works are being written in a style so stilted and obscure that reading comprehension suffers.

Geist said that the present situation does not warrant "blanket condemnations" or the launching of any "holy crusades" against bad writing.

He said that while the quantity of writing being produced is greater every year, the percentage of bad writing remains about the same.

However, he said that there is a "real challenge to bring technical language down to earth." Geist said that often technical terminology is accompanied by a complicated and obscure style that needlessly becomes stuck in its own groove.

To help remedy the situation, Washington University in St. Louis has embarked on a program to "decipher" the research findings of experts in sociology and other fields into English that can be understood.

But, the situation does not call for a return to the "see-Spot-run" caliber of writing that all seem to labor over in the first grade.

Geist warned that it doesn't do to over-simplify terms. Technical terms are a very necessary part of the language, especially with the increased studies in the sciences.

Citing an example of bad English in the literary field, Harry R. Hoppe, professor of English, says that many of the writers from the school of new criticism are guilty of using needlessly complicated English well diced with jargon.

Hoppe said that one of the worst sins against the language is taking something uncomplicated and presenting it in a complicated manner.

Lee Shulman, assistant professor of education, says that many teachers in the United States are unfamiliar with new educational trends because they are not capable of understanding the technical language used in the field. Consequently, they are not informed until they read about them in the more popular magazines.

that omit technicalities, such as Reader's Digest.

He said that it is unfortunate that many of the experts in their fields are such poor writers. However, their writing cannot be condemned merely because of a deficiency in style.

"I have yet to see a text book that was well written but poor on subject matter that was worth reading," Shulman said. The basic responsibility is to pursue the educational objectives first and then concentrate on style.

In other words, the fundamental ambitions in pedagogical composition cannot be validly subjugated to the secondary interests of aesthetic appealability without sacrificial consequences.

Pardon me.

complex. All four are scheduled for September openings.

Simon said that if completion of the buildings is delayed, the chemistry and biochemistry departments would remain in their present quarters in various locations around campus.

He suggested that temporary quarters might be needed to house the more than 2,500 students now signed up to live in the new dorms.

Emery G. Foster, manager of dormitory and food services, said, "I think we'll be able to move in all right."

He said students who have been promised rooms in Fee and Akers will not be turned away. "We will have people taken care of who have been assigned there," Foster said. "It might mean doubling up," he said, "for a relatively short time."

A total of 1,258 men and women have been assigned to East and West Akers Halls, and a total of 1,281 to East and West Fee. Each dorm has a capacity of 1,224. Foster said it is standard procedure to over-assign residence halls since some cancellations usually come in.

He said he has had little contact with either the unions on strike or the contractors.

"The quarrel is between the contractors and the union and we'd better leave it there," Foster said. He said the University has not entered into negotiations to help settle the two strikes.

BEHIND SCHEDULE, BUT BUILDING -- Fee-Akers dormitory complex is weeks behind schedule due to strikes by plumbers and bricklayers, but is still expected to open this fall. Similar delays last summer left McDone Hall new arrivals without showers, missing some furniture.

Accidents Concern Prof

A University safety specialist, Rollin Simonds, discussed the impact of occupational accidents on American industry at the annual President's Conference on Occupational Safety yesterday in Washington, D.C.

Simonds, a professor of management in the graduate school of business administration, reported on an accounting procedure designed to motivate industrial leaders to work for accident reduction.

Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz presided at the meeting, largest of its kind devoted to occupational safety.

In conjunction with the conference, President Johnson has designated June 21-27 as Job Safety Week.

Simonds, several times a member of conference planning committee, has done extensive research in estimating the cost of industrial accidents. His studies, in cooperation with the American Society of Safety Engineers and the National Safety Council, have resulted in the procedure known as the "Simonds Methods of Estimating Cost of Industrial Accidents."

Measuring the cost of work accidents, according to Simonds, is important mainly because "it indicates the degree to which a firm can afford to spend funds on accident prevention."

"History shows clearly," he adds, "that work accidents can be brought under control if enough effort is put into its prevention."

The professor is co-author of "Safety Management: Accident Cost and Control," the most widely used college text in its field. He has served for several years as chairman of the executive committee of the Industrial Advisory Council of Michigan.

Researchers Take To Field

University naturalists are taking to the field this summer for the eighth consecutive year.

The University Museum is sending out two research teams: one to study and collect wild life in central Mexico; the other to search for fossil remains in northern Texas.

Rollin Baker, museum director and professor of zoology, fisheries and wildlife at MSU, will head the Mexican expedition. A grant from the National Science Foundation will finance the trip.

MSU students Dan Womochel of Lansing, Carleton Phillips of Birmingham, Mich., and Michael Petersen of Oliver, Mich., will accompany Baker. Motion picture photographer and former MSU student Charles Warner will serve as cameraman for the group.

Richard Seltin, associate professor of natural science and museum research associate, will conduct the fossil search project in Texas. He will be assisted by students George Klee of Morrice, Mich., and Todd Gates of Park Ridge, Ill.

The expeditions constitute the field phase of Michigan State's museum program, Baker pointed out.

The Mexican research team will make its headquarters near Mexico City during the two-month expedition which will involve pack-trips into the mountains of central and southern Mexico.

Baker said the Mexican site was selected because it offers a chance to study wildlife under widely varying conditions within a relatively small area. Desert, grassland and jungle habitats, he said, will be within easy reach of their base of operation.

"Much of the animal life in Latin America is poorly known," said Baker, "so we are eager to acquire as many specimens as possible of small animals, insects and birds from the area."

The MSU naturalist expects to bring back a number of live animals as well as preserved specimens for the university's natural science study programs.

Seltin and his student associates will spend six weeks exploring for fossil remains from the Permian period of the Paleozoic era (about 230 million years ago).

They will be working on the 500-thousand-acre Waggoner Ranch in north-central Texas. The property has been open to researchers in paleontology since 1872, according to Seltin. Seltin's expedition is being supported by a grant from the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia.

Alleged Abortionist Faces Dope Charge

Flint businessman, Donal E. Luce, 35, will face charges of unlawful use and possession of narcotics on July 24, as a result of his arrest June 13 on charges of attempting an abortion on a Michigan State coed.

The coed testified in Lansing Township Court Monday at Luce's examination. Luce faces similar charges in Genesee County.

Cpl. Bob Earhart, a member of the State Police Intelligence Division, said that of the estimated 300 abortions performed each year in Michigan, Luce was probably the biggest single operator.

Authorities said Luce had boasted of performing over 100 abortions a year for the past 11 years.

Many of Luce's clients were Michigan State coeds, Earhart said. He estimated that Luce had performed over a dozen such illegal operations on campus in the past few years.

The investigation was touched off in February when a college woman was admitted to a hospital in Flint for treatment after Luce reportedly operated on her.

Luce also faces charges of illegal possession of drugs in Flint.

Theatre Tryouts Begin

Tryouts for "The Boy Friend," Sandy Wilson's musical spoof of the Roaring Twenties, will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7:00 p.m. in Room 49 at the M.S.U. auditorium. Students, faculty, and townspeople interested in working on the Summer Circle productions in any capacity are urged to attend.

"The Boy Friend," to be produced July 29 to Aug. 1, is the fifth play on the University theatre's Summer Circle bill. The comedy is set in a girls' boarding school located on the Riviera, and the plot centers on the romance between the daughter of an American millionaire and a messenger boy who turns out to be a titled young Englishman.

better known stories, July 1-4; "Summer and Smoke," Tennessee Williams' drama of the frustration and loneliness of a sensitive Southern girl, July 8-11; "Much Ado About Nothing," Shakespeare's satire on sophisticated love, July 15-18; and Bella and Samuel Spewack's bright comedy about the Hollywood motion picture industry, "Boy Meets Girl," July 22-25.

Mail orders are still being accepted for Scotch season ticket strips at University theatre, Department of Speech, M.S.U., and at the Summer Circle box office at Demonstration hall from 2 to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Students Form Orchestra

Piastro To Conduct Strings

Noted violinist and conductor Mishel Piastro will conduct the Congress of Strings Orchestra in its first performance of the summer Monday, June 29.

The concert, which is open to the public without charge, will be held in Fairchild Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

The Congress of Strings is composed of 102 top-ranking young musicians from the United States and Canada who are at Michigan State for an eight-week music education program sponsored by the American Federation of Musicians.

Other works on the program: "Passacaglia" by Handel-Akon; "Two Pictures from Minsk: Idyl and Dance" by Alexander Borodin; and "Concerto Grosso" by Vittorio Giannini.

Former conductor of the Longines Symphonette, Mishel Piastro is a String Congress faculty member and one of four prominent conductors to appear with the student orchestra in a series of summer concerts on the campus. He graduated from the Petrograd Conservatory where he studied under Leopold Auer. He made his debut as soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky in Moscow and Petrograd.

He has performed with the famous composers Richard Strauss, Maurice Ravel and Ottorino Respighi.

The next Congress of Strings orchestral concert will be presented July 16 at 8:15 p.m. in the University Auditorium, with Alfred Wallenstein conducting.

Institute To Focus On Asian Culture

A special program of Indian dance, Oriental art, lectures, motion pictures and television shows will focus attention on Asia during a five-week Summer Institute on Asia beginning on campus this week.

Heading the Asian program series are noted ethnomusicologists Clifford and Betty Jones who will demonstrate and discuss the classical dance of India in the Fairchild Theatre, Tuesday, June 30, at 8 p.m.

The husband-and-wife team will present a selection of Indian dances in full costume and with musical accompaniment recorded in India.

Other lectures offered by the summer Asian institute include: "Paths of Pakistan" by James W. Spain, July 1; "Education in Modern India" by S.M.S. Chari, July 8; and "Modern Trends in Pakistan" by M. R. Ahmed, July 22. The lectures will be held in the Lounge of the Student Services Building on the campus at 7:30 p.m.

Two outstanding motion pictures from Asian countries are scheduled on the MSU Foreign Film Series: "Two Daughters" (Indian), July 2 and 3; and "Yojimbo" (Japanese), July 24 and 25. They will be shown in the Fairchild Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

A series of television programs on aspects of Asian culture will also be shown during July by University station WMSB (Channel 10).

All of the Asian Institute's summer programs, except the foreign films, are open to the public without charge. Tickets for the film showings may be purchased from the theatre box office.

Two exhibitions of Asian painting at the Kresge Art Center will be featured during July: "Tradition in Chinese Painting" and "Rajput Painting." A selection of Oriental art and arms and armor of the Eastern World will also be on display at the University Museum during the month.

Campus Ministry Holds Seminar

The United Campus Ministry is sponsoring an Education Seminar Monday evening, June 29. The topic: "Do we or should we teach values?" Dr. Thomas Green, Associate Professor in Education, will introduce the topic and lead the discussion. The Seminar will be held in Erickson Hall, Room 222 from 7:00 - 8:30 p.m. and is open to the public.

chairman of the new sociology department, Moreau S. Maxwell, currently on a year-long Fulbright study of archeology in Copenhagen, Denmark, will be the chairman of the anthropology department.

Maxwell is also curator of the University museum and will continue to be affiliated with the museum when he assumes his new duties.

Charles Hughes, director of the African Studies Center, will serve as chairman of the anthropology department until Maxwell returns.

Reason for the division was that over 10,000 students were enrolled in the department during the past school year and consequently some students felt left out. It is hoped that the split will make the people and departments more meaningful.

The contracts that the trustees let will provide for extending Wilson Road to Hagadorn Road, developing Bogue Street between Shaw Lane and Wilson Road, constructing a Grounds Maintenance Nursery Center, site improving at the new Psychology Research Building, and painting McDonel and Wonders Halls.

Through the action of the Board of Trustees Michigan State will become the first school in Michigan to offer a master's degree in labor and industrial relations. The school of labor and industrial relations was also given permission to offer professional courses.

The letter from the American Society of Landscape Architects noted that the faculty is excellent in the school of urban planning and landscape architecture. It urged that new quarters and equipment be provided for to replace those presently in use, which the society termed "standard."

Foreign Students To Visit Thumb

Students from overseas are invited to a rural observance of Independence Day weekend, July 2 through 5, in the thumb area of Michigan. They will stay in homes arranged by the Christian Rural Hospitality Council.

Building Pool Hours Flexible

Softball To Kick Off IM Program

BY RICHARD SCHWARTZ
State News Sports Writer

That dip in the outdoor pool may seem all the more inviting this summer for many students, faculty and staff members expected to partake in other activities sponsored by the men's and women's intramural departments.

Likely to come in for heavy use are the IM softball fields south of the men's intramural building.

Teams can be made up of students, faculty or staff players. Faculty and staff members however, will be required to sign a special roster form.

Entries for Open League play, which begins Wednesday, July 1, will be accepted beginning Wednesday, June 24. The deadline for entries is Monday, June 29. Tennis balls will be in the air in increasing number during summer months at the same University courts adjoining Spartan Stadium where the national championships were held last week.

Entries for singles and doubles tennis slated to begin Monday, July 6, will be accepted starting Wednesday, June 24, with the deadline, Friday, July 3. Forest Akers golf course will spread out its green carpet to the University community with a host of summer tournaments. Students, faculty and staff golf tournaments will be in the offing Saturday, July 11. Slated as an 18-hole medal play, gross score tourneys winner and runner-up spots will be determined for students and faculty-staff play.

Entries will be accepted between Monday, June 29 and Thursday, July 9.

A best-ball tournament, pitting student faculty, and student staff, will be held July 18. Entries for the 18-hole play may be turned in July 13-16.

Green fees, $1 for students and $1.50 for faculty and staff, may be paid 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

at the intramural office, located in the men's building.

Pending sufficient interest, a co-recreational volleyball tournament will be offered in addition to the scheduled events.

Also on the agenda is a Women Students and Faculty - Staff tournament, Sunday, July 12. Entries will be accepted at the men's building, July 6-9. Fees are the same as for men's golf.

Tournaments in tennis and softball will be offered where sufficient interest is shown. All entries may be submitted beginning June 24. A roster must accompany all softball entries.

An attempt at making building and pool hours more flexible will be made by the men's intramural department this summer, it was announced.

Doors will open at 10 a.m. everyday except Sunday when they will open at 1 p.m. Closing hours have been tentatively set for 8 p.m. each day except Friday, when it will be 9 p.m.

These hours will be extended to later hours weekdays if the number of students and weather warrants it.

Co-recreational evening will be Friday, 6-9 p.m.

Pool hours will begin 11:30 a.m. weekdays and Saturdays, and 1 p.m. Sunday. Tentative closing hours are 8 p.m. except Friday when it is 9 p.m.

These hours may also be extended.

Weightlifting room hours are slated for Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 12 noon-6 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday, 12 noon-6 and Saturday and Sunday, 1-6 p.m.

NFL Commissioner Permits Lion Telecasts In Lansing

Reversing an earlier decision, National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has consented to the telecast of Detroit Lions football games next fall by Lansing station WJIM.

The announcement ended speculation that the mid-Michigan station would not be able to carry play-by-play of the Lion home games because it had been included in the "black list" area surrounding Detroit.

Any television station whose signal can be received in the home city can be blacked out in accordance with regulations established for all cities of the NFL.

WJIM, located on the outer fringe of this area, was placed on the "black list" for the first time last fall. It has telecast all Lions games for the past 14 seasons.

Instrumental in securing WJIM-TV's release from the restricted list was Lions President William Clay Ford. In meeting with Rozelle, Ford requested that channel six be permitted to telecast all games due to the popularity of the Lions out-state.

Harold F. Gross, president and general manager of WJIM-TV, expressed his pleasure with Rozelle's action.

"All of us at channel six are grateful for the opportunity to again bring the complete schedule of Lion's football games to our viewers," Gross said.

Spring Saw Frosh Click On Cinders

Michigan State freshman track performers have erased four marks from the Spartan frosh record book in time trials this spring.

Records were set in the 440 and 880-yard relays and in the mile run and 120-yard high hurdles.

A foursome consisting of Dassel Campbell of Hazel Park, Robert Steele of Plymouth, Clinton Jones of Cleveland, Ohio, and Eugene Washington of La Porte, Texas turned in record efforts of 42.3 in the 440 and of 1:29.2 in the 880.

Keith Coates of Sarnia, Ont., ran the mile in 4:12.2 for a third frosh mark. Steele added the fourth when he ran the 120-yard high in 14.4.

"We're especially indebted to President Ford and Commissioner Rozelle for their splendid cooperation," he said.

"We're certain the thousands of Lions fans join us in thanking them."

Tickets for the Lions two pre-season games with the Cleveland Browns, Friday August 11, and gust 28, will be available to out-state fans at the WJIM Country House, East Saginaw St.

Reserved seats for these games may be obtained by phoning, writing or calling WJIM in person.

The station will also sponsor a Lions Special for one of the regular season games which will include game tickets, transportation and lunch. Details will be announced later.

Coach's Daughter Receives MSU Grant

It may be more blessed to give than to receive, but don't tell freshman football coach Burt Smith that.

Smith, whose duties as administrative assistant to Head Coach Duffy Daugherty make him a chief donor of football grants-in-aid, is most proud of a grant received by his daughter, Kathleen.

Miss Smith, a 21-year-old graduate student here, has been awarded MSU's Hinman Fellowship for advanced study. She is working for a master's degree in reading instruction.

The fellowship, which pays a $2,000 academic-year stipend, is presented annually to a promising MSU graduate student.

Miss Smith is the first master's candidate to win the award, which normally goes to a doctoral student.

She was graduated with honors from MSU last March after completing her bachelors degree in less than four years. She is a 1961 graduate of Resurrection High School in Lansing.

Her undergraduate major was elementary education.

"She's worked real hard, putting in many hours to earn it," Smith said of his daughter.

"It's certainly a great thrill for all of us."

Smith himself, was recently named "Coach of the Year" at annual awards dinner of the Spartan Varsity Club.

Field Dwindles In Women's Tourney

Spartan coed Joyce Kazmierski, Detroit sophomore, paired off with Mary Lou Daniel of Kentucky Wednesday in the quarterfinals championship flight of the Women's National Collegiate golf tournament at Forest Akers golf course.

Qualifying with a seven over par 78 on the 6,024-yard Michigan State layout, Miss Kazmierski ranked fourth along with Arizona State's Carol Sorenson and Wake Forest's Robby King.

Miss Kazmierski, the only one of five entries by the host Spartan team to qualify for the championship flight, also won the driving contest Monday afternoon with a 216-yard slam.

In match competition Tuesday, Miss Kazmierski defeated Penn State's Suzy Williams, 2 up.

Qualifying for the runnerup first flight Monday for the Spartans was Carol Rapson at 89, Judy Reynolds at 95, made the second flight, and Angel Chakeres at 118 and Jill Thomas at 107 made the fourth.

Fresh from a win in the Spring Lake Invitational one week earlier, Sharon Wilder of Aquinas College in Grand Rapids got off to a bang Monday stealing medal honors with a two over par 73.

Miss Wilder's score, which featured a 28 putt total after hitting only 11 greens, established a new course record for women.

In the first round of the quarterfinal match play, however, Miss Wilder was defeated by Western Ontario's Sue Hilton, 5 and 3.

1962 champion Carol Sorenson, bothered by putting difficulties in the qualifying round where she placed in a three way tie for third 78, knocked Missouri's Barbara Eubany out of contention, 1 up.

Patti Shook, a native of Saginaw attending Valparaiso University in Indiana, defeated Bobbie Werner of Tennessee, 1 up.

Miss Shook had tied Miss Daniel for second place in Monday's 18-hole loop. Both shot 76.

In other first round championship flight competition, Nicki Nordstrom of Arizona State defeated Kay Hebert, of Mercyhurst, 5 and 3.

Miss Daniel's victory came over Tennessee's Ann Baker, 3 and 2.

Carol Hochsprung of Washington won her match with Miss King, 9 and 8.

Mary Lowell joined teammates Sorenson and Nordstrom of Arizona State in the first round victory circle with a victory over another teammate, Kathy Farrer, 1 up.

Quarterfinal pairing for Wednesday, in addition to the Miss Kazmierski -- Daniel match, were: Shook vs. Nordstrom, Hilton vs. Sorenson, and Hochsprung vs. Lowell.

Friday's slate features two-somes in the championship flights and each of the three runner up flights.

Tee-off for the championship will be 8:30 a.m.

The 20th annual tournament began Monday with a field of 58 entries from nine colleges and universities.

IM Show To Feature Comedy Pool Stunts

The Men's Intramural indoor pool, forsaken by many last April when the outdoor tank opened, will come in for unusual summertime use July 7.

That's the target date for the annual water carnival to be presented by the Spartan Swim Club.

An acrobatic - comedy diving routine by two Big Ten coaches, Hobie Billingsley and Dick Kimball, will highlight the program.

Kimball, head coach at the University of Michigan is a former national collegiate diving champion and national trampoline champion.

Billingsley, pilot of the Big Ten champion Indiana University Hoosiers, is a former diving coach of the U.S. Pan American team. He is a former national trampoline champion.

A synchronized swimming performance will also be given by the Lansing Sea Sprites. The Lansing area water ballerinas will leave for Europe later this summer to begin an around-the-world tour.

The Spartan Swim Club, featuring several members of the MSU varsity team, will perform a series of swimming routines.

Admission to the show, which begins at 7:30, will be $1 for adults, 50 cents for students and $2.50 a family.

New Road Brings New Traffic Flow

Two changes in traffic patterns on campus were made during the between term break, department of public safety officers announced.

North Shaw Lane, running between Shaw Hall and the parking ramp to the Bogue Street interchange, is now one-way westbound. East bound traffic will run along South Shaw Lane between the parking ramp and the Cyclotron, merging with other traffic at the Bogue Street interchange.

The other change, officers said, was to make Science Road open to two-way traffic again. Science road had been converted to one-way traffic northbound during spring term while the extension on South Shaw Lane was being completed.

Ralston Tops Tennis Menu, Peppers USC To NCAA Title

Michigan State Tennis Coach Stan Drobcak had predicted that the recent National Collegiate Athletic Association tennis tournament, which was held on the MSU courts, would be the greatest in history.

And from all indications he was right.

Four of the top ten United States players and 11 others with national rankings were entered in the tournament, but one entry, Dennis Ralston of Southern California, outshone all others as he won his second straight NCAA singles championship without losing a single set.

The USC star, who is ranked number 2 in the nation behind Chuck McKinley and is believed by some to be about to become the world's best amateur tennis player, also teamed with Bill Bond, also of USC, for a straight set victory in the doubles.

The meet had earlier been seen as a battle between USC and UCLA, and that it certainly was. USC, sparked by Ralston's performances, edged out UCLA by a mere one point, 26 to 25.

Northwestern was third with 17 points, followed by Arizona with 16 and California with 9. Western Michigan and Michigan finished in a three-way tie with Texas A&M for ninth place with four points each, while Michigan State finished in a seven-way tie for thirteenth place.

Tom Jamieson was the only winner for the Spartans. He defeated Jim Burr of Kansas 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the second round of singles before bowing to Northwestern's Marty Reissen 6-1, 6-4 in the third round.

In the first round MSU's Charley Wolff was pitted against Bond and was defeated 6-2, 6-1. The only other State player in the singles, Tony O'Donnell, met defeat at the hands of California's Richard Abramson, 6-4, 6-3.

In the doubles, Shelton and Wolff of MSU were beaten by Bill Rice and Tim Sheehan of Northwestern, 6-4, 6-2, and Jamieson and O'Donnell were bested by Stanford's Jim Beste and John Isaacs, 6-4, 9-7.

In winning the tournament, USC also earned enough points to retire the Bennett Bowl, donated by Northwestern in honor of late coach Paul G. Bennett. USC's points gave the team a total of 51 points accumulated since 1961.

Only 45 points were needed to retire the trophy.

Upon completion of the tournament, Ralston, Bond, and five others left for England where they were to compete in the Wimbledon championships.

4 Batsmen In Basin League

Sutton, Look Sign Contracts.

Spartan baseball standouts Jerry Sutton and Bruce Look have signed professional contracts this spring.

Sutton, a hard-hitting first baseman who made third string of the all-Big Ten team, signed with the Chicago White Sox. He reported to Clinton, Iowa, a member of the Class A Midwest League.

Sutton batted .383 for the Spartans, collecting 30 RBI's and scoring the same number of runs.

Look Sutton

Look, who posted a .261 batting average as State's catcher, signed a bonus contract with the Milwaukee Braves. He was signed by Scout Bob Kuzava but the size of the bonus was not disclosed. Look reports to the Binghamton club, a Class A circuit. Playing summer ball in the Dakota Basin League, which is approved by the NCAA, are Spartan centerfielder Bob Mainere, third baseman John Biedenbach, pitcher Tom Phipps and right fielder Dick Billings.

Earlier reports on Billings had been that he had contracted to play pro ball and was offered a large bonus.

State batsmen, under new Head Coach Danny Litwiler, placed fourth in the Big Ten with an 8-7 record and a 22-12 over-all mark. The 22 wins tied the regular season and the team also hit more home runs, 27, than ever before.

'Credit Must Be Given ...'

If you're wondering where the term "Love" got into tennis language, your answer can be found sitting in 217 Men's Intramural Building.

That's where you'll find Spartan tennis Coach Stan Drobac, candidate for "the busiest coach of the year" award and one of the game's most avid enthusiasts.

The word "love" is none too literal a description for the man, as a sneak glance at Drobac's office calendar might reveal.

Dates June 15-20 will find scribbled the words "national tennis championships." What it doesn't say, however, is, "I Stan Drobac, have the distinction of directing the most important college tournament in the United States."

Yet, with the 80th annual event now history, there are few who would dispute the distinction involved.

"Credit must be given..." Drobac will say, engaging in a bit of name dropping. "...Athletic Director Biggie Munn, Publicity Director, Fred Stabley..."

But you won't hear "...Meet Director, Stan Drobac..." mentioned.

And incidental was the fact that this same man, whose concern was everything and everybody, connected with the tourney, still had to manage an occasional backhand slap on the back for his own athletics competing all along.

A second peek at his date book, under the heading June 28, reads "Tuscaloosa."

Must be a vacation, you say? Wrong. Not Stan Drobac. Vacations are too plush for a man in his line.

No, it is just another chore he's taking on, or so he casually explains.

No, it's merely directing a Junior Davis Cup clinic for a week. And after that proves a success, you can expect Drobac to brush it off lightly, crediting it to John Hendrix, Ohio University Coach, who was co-director.

BOOKSTORE IN NEW QUARTERS -- Students who went to the Union this week expecting to buy their books for the term found that the bookstore has moved to the International Center on Shaw Lane.

Better Service Promised At New MSU Bookstore

The new MSU Bookstore, located in the International Center, will carry essentially the same merchandise carried by the old Union Bookstore, Robert H. Frew, bookstore manager, said, but it will handle more reference books.

Frew said all books will be on the sales floor so students may easily select the books they want. He called the system somewhat analogous to the open stack system at the library.

The sales floor at the bookstore is considerably larger than that at the old store, Frew said. The store itself is only slightly larger than the Union store, but it gives the appearance of being much larger, he said. This, he explained, is because it is all together, while at the Union there were several separate storage places.

He said there would be 11 checkouts in operation at the beginning of Fall term, compared to seven at the old store. Frew added that he thought the new checkouts were more effectively laid out than the old and would better take care of the customers.

There is a buy-back counter at the front of the store where students may sell their books. By placing the counter at the front, Frew said, there will be no need for students to carry books through the store and possibly create confusion over which books are the student's and which he intends to buy.

Bugle Echo Rouses Boys State Delegates

The echo of a bugle through the Brody dorms at 6:45 a.m. has been the 'alarm clock' of 1100 high school students on campus for the past week to participate in Wolverine Boys State.

This morning's reveille signals the beginning of the last day of a packed program which saw the formation of two political parties and a subsequent campaign and election of a state-wide system of government officials.

The day will be highlighted by a march on foot down Michigan Ave. to the state capitol shortly before noon.

Leading the Nationalist Party simulated statewide effort, Geoffrey Hayes of Traverse City emerged as governor of this 27th consecutive Boys State in Michigan.

In his platform Hayes stressed the need for government efficiency. He also called for federal aid to education, but only when the need was absolute.

Party conventions and major speeches were held in Jennison Field House while Brody served as the scene for the more informal campaign of posters and political maneuver.

It was also the scene of informal football scrimmages which saw the toll of hospital cases hit a record high of six.

The agenda further included law classes by local legal experts, talks by cadets from the various military academies, and even the publishing of a daily newspaper.

A welcome diversion for the budding politicians was a visit by a delegation of young women elected to offices at Wolverine Girls State.

Sponsored by the American Legion, Boys State is always held on the MSU campus, while Girls State is conducted at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

During the week the students heard addresses by Governor Romney and Richard Stratton of Illinois, governor of the 1963 Boys State, the national equivalent of the state event.

Bus Drivers, Janitors Attend School School

The people who keep your children's schools clean, warm and safe all through the school year are going to school for three days this week.

So will the school employees responsible for the safe bus transportation of school youngsters.

More than 1,200 custodians and bus drivers from Michigan schools will continue their education in their respective fields at the 31st annual School Building Maintenance and Transportation Conference on campus. The program began Wednesday.

has up-to-date information on the safe, efficient and economical operation of plant and equipment is the aim of the conference, co-sponsored by the College of Education, the Michigan Department of Public Instruction and the Michigan Association of School Employees.

The conference at Shaw Hall provides credit toward a Building Maintenance Certificate. Nomination of the state's outstanding custodian is a feature.

Expressly for supervisors are classes in work scheduling, supplies and equipment, plumbing, record keeping, the first year in the new building and planning summer work. For bus people are classes in highway safety, transportation facts and equipment maintenance.

Differences Discussed

What impression do foreign students get of American students at MSU? Is there social and intellectual contact between the two groups?

Augustus F. Caine, Liberian doctoral candidate in sociology and anthropology, said that students he had met did not seem to be intellectually alive.

In places where students gather, he said, he has found few serious discussions.

Caine said in his experience at Northwestern University he learned more from the students than from his books.

He attributed the lack of idea exchange to a general conservative orientation of the University community.

Calling MSU the "citadel of conservatism," Caine said this sort of atmosphere inhibits an exchange of ideas between foreign and American students.

Turning to race relations, Caine said he had heard of house-mothers who pressured white coeds against dating people of a different color, even to the extent of writing to the parents of a coed, as one did. Reports of such incidents came to him from the women students, Caine said.

Caine told of an incident where he had been called a 'nigger' in public and had gone to the dean of students and the dean of international programs to tell them of it.

He said both asked what he wanted them to do about it. He said he believed some action should have been taken because a student coming from a foreign country, running into such a situation and then finding nothing being said about it might think the University condones racism. This is a possibility for one who does not know the University's position on such matters, Caine said.

Caine said the University should be a leader in the community and should take a definite stand on what it believes regardless of some possible repercussions.

He said MSU's programs in foreign universities have a hollow ring without principles to back them up.

Hiroyuki Nishimura, Japanese graduate student, said he has gained valuable experience in the United States.

Many foreign students misunderstand American customs since they see American life as it is represented in the movies or on television, Nishimura said.

He said he was impressed by the industry of American students and their sincere philosophical attitude about religion.

But, he said, many Americans misunderstand the philosophies of others.

Asked how he likes America, he said if he points out some problems he has seen, American students say "look at your country."

Nishimura said this represents a narrow-mindedness on the part of American students with whom he has had contact.

V. N. Krishnan, Indian doctoral candidate, said he found Americans more informal than other peoples.

He said, also, he has had no trouble communicating, but one problem is the tendency of students of his own country to group together socially and intellectually more often than with American students.

Moshe Ben David, Israeli graduate student and Iqolima T. Amachree, Nigerian graduate student, both said communication depends on the type of person a foreign student is and the type of American student he meets.

Amachree said American students could learn much from others if they would be more outgoing in intellectual expression.

He also said he was not quite convinced the University is dedicated enough to take a positive stand on racial questions.

He said it is not enough to just say you are for something. Ben David said he had no trouble communicating because the Jewish background is similar to western and Christian cultures.

NO CONTROVERSY HERE -- Bathing suits, and mathematics of one piece, two piece, and half-piece beachwear, have created quite a stir across the country, but few people will debate the merits of University coeds' apparel at the Intramural pool. Photo by Larry Fritzman.

Bad Odor Combated By Check

Another step has been taken toward eliminating the "Brody odor."

A check for $2,940,469.86, which will go for a new sewage treatment plant to serve East Lansing and MSU was deposited in a Chicago bank last week.

Odor from the old plant, which was located across the Red Cedar River from Bailey Hall, was the source of many complaints from residents of the Brody group.

The check represented the balance of a $3,500,000 revenue bond issue sold last April for construction of the new plant, which will be located south of Kalamazoo Street and west of the present plant.

Work on the new plant is presently going on. The expected date for completion of the project is August, 1965.

The cost of the new plant will be shared by East Lansing, Meridian Township, and the University.

Pianists Awarded Honorary Degrees

Duo-pianists Pierre and Genia Luboshutz, both professors on the music faculty, have been awarded honorary Doctor of Music degrees by Bates College of Lewiston, Maine.

Honors were conferred on the noted performing artists during the college's recent commencement ceremonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Luboshutz, known professionally as Luboshutz and Nemenoff, have been artists-in-residence at MSU since 1962. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have concertized widely throughout Europe and America, and for many years they have been major recording artists in the field of two-piano music.

The husband-and-wife team made their concert debut in 1938 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky.

Public Apathy Aids Criminals

Crime in America has never had an easier time of it, thanks to three powerful accomplices: archaic laws, a neglectful legal profession and an apathetic public.

This is the contention of a former police administrator and investigator who says lawlessness in this nation will continue to flourish unless Americans gain a better understanding of criminal law.

Frank D. Day, professor of police administration, warns that if law and order are to be restored and maintained, the public must be re-educated to the proposition that law enforcement "is a traditional responsibility" of all the people.

In a new book, "Criminal Law and Society," Day finds the public guilty on two counts of crime against itself: forgetting that law enforcement "is fundamentally its responsibility," and being insensitive to the "needs of law enforcement."

The professor also criticizes judges, who "too often fail to take into consideration the total atmosphere that makes up an arrest or a search and seizure," and legislators, who "too often forget that obsolete criminal laws fail to keep pace with the changing needs of society."

"The problem of crime in its entirety," writes Day, "can never be solved."

He says, "It is too vast, too complicated and too much enmeshed in the fabric of society to offer hope of complete solution."

"The best that can be done is to contain it and try to reduce it to an irreducible minimum."

But, he adds, crime conditions in the U.S. today are "more serious than ever."

Recent happenings, he notes, illustrate the decay of law and order in this country: a young woman was murdered in New York City while more than 30 witnesses failed to respond to her cries.

And, more recently, a Detroit woman, suffering from a stroke, was not only denied aid by passers-by, but was assaulted while she lay helpless and dying.

The administration of criminal justice, according to Day, is "failing to meet the twin objectives of protecting society and preserving individual rights."

A great deal of this failure, he says, stems from a general lack of understanding of the aims and importance of criminal law.

"No branch of the law is less understood, yet more in need of being understood, than the criminal law," he points out.

"It is 'the law' that affects the daily lives of more people than do all the other branches combined." Few people realize this, he contends, and fewer seem aware of their duties to enforce the law.

Disinterest in criminal law, he says, also "marks the attitude of most practicing lawyers."

"Other practitioners," Day adds, "generally hold the criminal law in like low esteem if limited practice in this field can be regarded as an indication."

He urges that criminal law be elevated from "unwanted stepchild" in law schools to a position of importance equal to that of other branches of law.

He also suggests that criminal law instruction needs more attention in schools and police academies where many law enforcement officers receive training.

Food Prof Cited By Dairymen

G. Malcolm Trout, professor of food science, was given the Award of Honor of the American Dairy Science Association in Tucson, Ariz., Tuesday night. The association makes this award each year to a senior member who has made an unusual contribution of devoted service to the welfare of the dairy industry and the association.

Trout has previously received the association's Border Award for outstanding research in dairy manufacturing and the Milk Industry Foundation Teaching Award in dairy manufacturing. In 39 years as an association member he has served on 15 different committees and as chairman of eight. He was the president in 1950 and, since 1952, has served as historian of the American Dairy Science Association.

The professor has represented the association in many international dairy meetings, the latest being early this month in Paris. There he was in charge of a session on dairy textbook writing and selection sponsored by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

Trout's award gives MSU the distinction of having more Award of Honor winners than any other university in the country. He is the third MSU scientist to be honored out of 19 such presentations.

Earl Weaver, now professor emeritus and former chairman of the dairy department, received the award in 1957.

Carol F. Huffman, professor emeritus and renowned authority on dairy cattle nutrition, was the 1961 award winner. All three of these scientists have been named distinguished professors at MSU and have been selected for the "Distinguished Faculty Award" given by the MSU Alumni Association. Each has served as president of the American Dairy Association.
