Their Brother's Keepers

The ominous moral indifference growing more apparent each day in modern mass society is not confined to the violence-ridden streets of our nation's largest cities.

On the Michigan State University campus, a man dropped dead of a heart attack Saturday near the famed statue of Sparty. The tragedy took place approximately one hour before kickoff of the MSU-University of Michigan football game.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands of eager football fans must have passed the man as they hurried toward Spartan Stadium. However, only one citizen, who also happened to be an MSU student, took the time to notify the campus police that a man was lying unconscious on the ground.

Most of the football throng did not even slow down to look at the unusual sight of a man lying prone under Sparty's statue. Those who did stop quickly passed on, apparently in too much of a hurry to help a fellow human being.

East Lansing firemen were unable to revive the man with artificial respiration. It is both tempting and horrifying to ask whether the man would have lived if the incident had been reported earlier.

Were all of the passers-by in too much of a hurry to notice the incident?

Or were they simply too indifferent to care what happened to a man who was lying unconscious on the ground?

Those who stopped for a quick look must have known the man was in trouble. It is difficult to understand how ordinary citizens can be so totally alienated from their fellow men that they ignore death to make it to the stadium in time for the kickoff.

Persons in the sheltered "halls of academe" cluck in horror each time the newspapers print another account of a girl who has been raped in New York while several hundred apartment-dwellers watched.

Undoubtedly, some of the football fans who passed by Sparty's statue last Saturday were among those who are most horrified at stories of big-city violence in full view of spectators.

In reality, people who look at an unconscious man and continue on their way are more guilty than the city-dweller who watches a stabbing from his apartment house.

When a person fails to come to a stabbing victim's aid, he at least has the excuse of fear of personal injury. Saturday's football fans had no such excuse. The only risk they ran was that they might be late for the game.

Modern Americans seem determined not to be their brother's keepers.

Letters To The Editor

Grad Students Carry Full Loads

To the Editor:

I feel the University administration should re-define its stand on what constitutes a "part time" student. University rules currently specify that a student must carry a minimum of 12 credits before he is considered a full time student. This means that persons carrying fewer than this number of credits will not receive a student activity book unless he pays an additional $12.

This may be fine for undergraduate students, but I do not see how this should apply to those on the graduate level. Most graduate students seldom carry more than 12 or 13 credits per term. Furthermore, the average load carried by a grad varies from nine to twelve credits.

Of course, if a grad student, or for that matter, any student, can get into a football game without an activity book if he really wants to, I did it myself to see the MSU game with Michigan. But, why should this law apply to graduate students? I certainly don't consider myself a "part time" student with nine credits, when I find myself confronted with more demanding class assignments which take up more of my time than those I had been given while carrying 18 credits in undergraduate school.

I sincerely hope somebody gives what I have said some serious thinking. I am sure there are many others who are in full agreement with me.

Sincerely,
George Taylor III

'Silent Cal For President'

To the Editor:

On Monday the State News published the results of a bumper-sticker poll in which Barry Goldwater led Lyndon Johnson by 26 to 18. These results are somewhat at variance with those of an independent bumper-sticker poll taken during the last week, presumably with the same degree of scientific accuracy as the State News poll.

The findings of this poll are: Lyndon Johnson 41; Barry Goldwater 29; Calvin Coolidge 1.

Barry Has Firm Policy

To the Editor:

I've just finished reading your article dealing with Barry Goldwater's statement that the only threat to world peace is Communism. Your editorial writer unashamedly displayed his incompetence when he began to ponderously list every internal disturbance in the United States as evidence of "other" threats to world peace. He then concluded that Goldwater oversimplifies the issues at stake.

What a dolt!

The key phrase in M. Goldwater's quotation is "world peace." This indicates that he was speaking about foreign policy and how he would conduct it if he were President. His implication is that true peace (or coexistence) is impossible with the Communists, and that, while our criterion might be peace, theirs is world domination, and there can be no reconciliation between the two. Goldwater has not oversimplified the issue, to the contrary, he has broken the mass of concretes down to a basic principle: a guideline for us to follow in all our foreign affairs. He is the first candidate to offer the American people some standard on which to act.

A Sensitive Subject

Foreign aid poses a set of extremely sensitive problems in international relations.

Economist John Kenneth Galbraith pointed out in a speech here Friday that countries which are on the receiving end of economic aid are determined to retain their political independence. On the other hand, countries which give foreign aid often expect political support in return for their dollars.

Galbraith drew an analogy between the Sino-Soviet split and America's problems with some of the underdeveloped nations receiving U.S. economic aid.

China balked. Galbraith pointed out, when Russia tried to dominate her political policies, Russia reacted by cutting off economic aid. The present frigid relations between China and the Soviet Union can be attributed to economic rather than ideological causes, according to Galbraith.

America's problems in relations with underdeveloped nations are similar in many ways. As Galbraith pointed out, countries on the receiving end of foreign aid often develop a kind of "touchy nationalism."

A delicate balance must be achieved in order to solve the problems caused by foreign aid.

The prosperous, aid-giving nations must learn to establish the fine line which divides useful guidance from domination of the small countries.

Small nations must attempt to understand the difference between legitimate assertion of political independence and bull-headed uncooperativeness.

The political leaders who draw the lines must be men of wisdom and courage.

The leader of a small, struggling nation must have the courage not to blame the painful birth-pangs of his country on an outside nation which is administering foreign aid.

The leaders of the aid-giving nations, such as the United States and Russia, must have the wisdom to use their wealth for the good of other people rather than as a lever for political domination.

Ban Hiring Bias

Editor's Note: This is the eighth part of a series on the new civil rights law by Jim Spaniolo, Cassopolis freshman.

The Attorney General may, if he deems a case is of general public importance, file a civil action in the appropriate district court. This action will be accompanied by a request for a three-judge court. The decision of this court can be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The commission will require employers, labor organizations, and joint labor management committees covered by this title to keep employment files and other records necessary to carry out the purpose of this title. The provisions just stated will not apply to the above mentioned groups, if they are located in a state having a fair employment law.

All those included under title VII are authorized to post notices stating the important provisions of this title. They are to be posted in readily accessible places, so as to inform employees or members can be informed.

Those who oppose the provisions in title VII have argued vigorously that there is no constitutional basis for it. They say the federal commission is given too much power to spend large sums of money, investigate the records of businesses and industries, and utilize state, local and federal agencies.

One Southern congressman asserted that every business and industry with more than 25 members will now have to think racially when hiring employees. A final argument given is that this section of the law encroaches upon the rights of the states, business and industry.

Proponents of this title and those actively seeking its enforcement base the constitutionality of title VII on the "privileges and immunities" section of the fourteenth amendment and the interstate commerce clause. They also say that fair employment legislation is very vital today. They point out that the President's Council of Economic Advisers in 1962 reported that the nation's economy loses from $13-$16 billion a year because of racial discrimination. They believe that if Negroes were comparable to that of whites, they could be able to spend that much more money and boost our economy.

Campus Summary

Need Both New, Old

By Mike Kindman

One of the problems of MSU's rapidly expanding enrollment that has made itself plain this fall is the difficulty of squeezing more than 31,000 students into the current supply of classrooms on campus. Even though new classrooms have opened this fall in Fee and Akers dormitories and scheduling has been spread over more of the campus, traffic jams still occur periodically.

Provost Howard R. Neville said that one alternative to allowing classrooms to fill up during peak hours--approximately 9 a.m.-2 p.m. daily--the University could adopt the alternative of making up arbitrary schedules for students according to its own convenience, letting the class hours fall where they may.

Another possibility--the one being followed up in University planning--is to tolerate the jam-ups now and work for more future classrooms spread around campus. This year's budget request to the state legislature includes a request for $5.5 million for a new classroom-office building "equivalent to two Bessey Halls," Neville said.

Neville said that although next year the number of square feet of classroom space per student will not change from this year, by the fall of 1966, with the opening of the projected new building, that figure will increase.

More urgent than the need for classroom space, Neville said, is the lack of office space for an estimated 250 to 300 full-time faculty members. Part of this gap will be filled by spaces in the new building.

In the question of modernizing and increasing office space, Neville said, one of the main problems the University faces is the decision whether or not to remove an old and outdated building.

A great many offices are now located in older buildings in the central part of campus. Eventually, when the current lag in office space provisions is filled, these buildings may come up for consideration as sites for new buildings. Neville said that, in some cases, historical value could outweigh other considerations and require buildings to be left standing.

He mentioned the Conservation Building near Ag. Hall. One of the oldest buildings on campus, it has been used for practically every function possible in a small college. Back when MSU was MAC, that building used to include office and classroom space, as well as dormitory provisions for members of the college's governing board when they met here.

Neville said it may be wiser to leave such a building standing, for the sake of the University's historical tradition, than to tear it down and replace it with something newer, when the new south campus Conservation Building opens next year.

The present Administration Building is also set to be replaced, if the legislature allots funds, by a new Ad Building south of the Red Cedar River, in the area now occupied by some of the post-World War II "temporary" buildings.

The historical value of the old building, at various times a library and museum and the site where many of the major decisions in MSU's early history was made, is very likely, Neville said, to override any other considerations.

Mother's Plea Helps Gain Smolen Release

CARACAS, Venezuela—Lt. Col. Michael Smolen, kidnaped and held 86 hours by pro-Communist terrorists, said Tuesday his early release was due in part to his mother's public plea to the kidnapers. He said, however, a primary reason for his release, as related by the kidnapers, was that "Your publicity purpose has been served."

Committee Rejects Pre-Election Probe

WASHINGTON—The Senate Rules Committee's Democratic chairman rejected Tuesday Republican demands for pre-election hearings on an alleged political payoff in the Bobby Baker case. The chairman, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., said it was impossible to bring back a majority of the rules committee's members to conduct the hearings before the elections.

He added that it would be fairer to all concerned not to stage the potentially explosive inquiry "in the heat of a bitter political campaign."

Isbell Hits Cuba, Heads for Florida

MIAMI, Fla.—Isbell, wound up to hurricane strength Tuesday, battered western Cuba with winds of 80 miles an hour and drew a bead on Florida's lower west coast and keys.

A hurricane watch was posted for Florida from Tampa to Key West. Red and black hurricane flags were hoisted on the tiny offshore islands of Dry Tortugas as the state was threatened with its third damaging blow of the season.

Miller Says Goldwater 'On March to Victory'

SCRANTON, Pa.—Moving into the final three weeks of the campaign, GOP Vice Presidential Nominee William E. Miller said Tuesday that Goldwater and he "are really on the final march to victory in November."

Everything that Goldwater has been saying "has now proved to be in fact true," Miller told an airport rally of 200. "There has finally come an end to the distortions."

Oswald Investigator Said Suspended by FBI

DALLAS—The Dallas Times Herald said Tuesday that FBI Agent James P. Hosty Jr., who investigated Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the Kennedy assassination, has been suspended for 30 days without pay and transferred.

The copyrighted story by Times Herald reporter Jim Lehrner quoted "unimpeachable sources."

The story said the disciplinary action was taken in the office of J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director.

Connally Says Goldwater Slipping in South

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Texas Gov. John Connally said Tuesday that Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign is slipping but that he thinks President Johnson still has trouble in four Southern states.

Connally told a news conference at the 30th Southern Governors' Conference that his sources of information indicate Johnson "might well lose" Louisiana. He said the same sources indicate Johnson is trailing in Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

Romney Urges Insurance Program for Aged

DETROIT—Gov. George Romney Tuesday urged other Great Lakes States to join with Michigan to set up a pool to provide low cost health insurance for the aged.

In a speech before the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, Romney said, "This type of pooling arrangement, already in operation in several other states, would be operated jointly by Michigan domestic life insurance companies and those companies in other states which wish to participate to provide broad health coverage to persons over 65 at a price they can afford."

Britisher Thinks Cosmonauts Back Early

LONDON—A leading British space authority said Tuesday the Russians may have brought their three cosmonauts back to earth earlier than planned and illness among the crew might have been the reason.

"I think it more likely that the condition of one of the crew deteriorated than that there was any mechanical or electrical fault," said Sir Harrie Massey, professor of physics at London University.

U.S. Goal 'Not Hostile to Soviets,' McGhee

KASSEL, Germany—U.S. Ambassador George C. McGhee said Tuesday the United States wants to promote the independence of East European Communist countries—but not out of enmity to the Russians.

"We are trying to help promote a trend of developments in Eastern Europe which can, if advanced sufficiently, lead to ending the division of Europe, and, as an inevitable corollary, the division of Germany," he said in a speech to a meeting of young Germans sponsored annually by the city of Kassel.

"In all this there is nothing hostile to the Soviet Union—no intention to marshal the little European nations against the Soviets."

Space Travel New Sport in Soviet Union

MOSCOW—Sports commissioners greeted the three Soviet cosmonauts when they landed Tuesday in the space ship "Sunrise" in order to register their 16-orbit flight.

The Soviet Union regards space travel as a new sport and wants to have its records certified by the commissioners, Tass News Agency explained.

"Sunrise" set the record for multi-manned spacecraft since it is the first to carry more than one person. But its 16 orbits were far short of the 81-orbit record of Cosmonaut Valerian Bykovsky.

Expand Board Of Trustees; Eight Seek Two New Seats

Eight candidates for the Michigan State University Board of Trustees will fight for two seats in the Nov. 3 election.

Four political parties are represented in the contest in which two incumbent Republicans are seeking re-election.

The new Michigan constitution which went into effect Jan. 1 calls for an increase in the membership of the Board of Trustees from six to eight and extension of the six year terms to eight years.

Following adoption of the constitution the legislature authorized the governor to fill the two vacancies for the calendar year 1964, these two positions to be filled at the fall election for eight-year terms beginning Jan. 1, 1965.

Gov. George W. Romney appointed Paul D. Bagwell and John S. Pingel as the new interim members. The two Republicans brought a 4-4 balance of political power to the Board.

Bagwell ran twice for governor of Michigan in 1958 and 1960. He was an MSU professor of speech and headed the department of written and spoken English (now American thought and language). He holds an honorary doctor of literature degree from Yankton College, South Dakota.

Pingel, a 1938 MSU graduate, was named All-American halfback and played professional football with the Detroit Lions. He was an assistant football coach and administrative assistant to the dean of students here. He ran for the Board of Trustees in 1961.

Both men live in Grosse Pointe where Bagwell is president of K-S Funds, Inc., of Detroit, and Pingel is executive vice president of Ross Roy, Inc., a Detroit advertising agency.

The two Democrats challenging the incumbents are Frank Hartman of Flint and Clair White of Bay City. Hartman is a member of the State Board of Education, and White is a former member of the Wayne State Board of Governors on which he did not seek re-election.

Hartman is superintendent of Carman School District, Flint, and White teaches economics at Central High School, Bay City.

At its state convention the Freedom Now Party nominated Eugene S. McGuire and Grace Lee Boggs, both of Detroit, for the two seats.

Running on the Socialist Labor Party ticket are Theos A. Grove and Albert Mills, both of Utica.

All eight candidates were nominated at their state party conventions.

At a special session of the legislature in December, 1963, the terms of the present trustees were extended one year.

Warren M. Huff and Frank Merriman, through December, 1966; C. Allen Harlan and Connor D. Smith, through December, 1968; Stephen S. Nesbit and Don Stevens, through December, 1970.

According to the new state constitution, Article 8, Section 5, the trustees and their successors

"shall constitute a body corporate known as the Board of Trustees of Michigan State University."

The constitution gives the Board general supervision of the institution and the control and direction of expenditures from MSU funds. It also selects the president of the University, who is the principal executive officer and presides at meetings of the board as an ex-officio member without the right to vote.

The study of "critical" languages of the world is getting increased attention by MSU's newly-organized Department of Linguistics and Oriental and African Languages.

Course work in three Asian and six African languages is being offered by the Department. The oriental languages are Bengali, Chinese and Japanese. The African languages include Bamba, Hausa, Ibo, Swahili, Wes Kos and Yoruba.

They are among some 60 world languages designated by the U.S. government as "critical," from an international political standpoint. The U.S. Department of Education grants fellowships to college students under the National Defense Education Act for study of those languages.

MSU is also inaugurating a new master's degree program in linguistics. The program, James P. Wang, acting chairman of the Department explains, is designed to train students in the analysis and scientific description of languages.

Irvine Richardson, professor of African languages, has assumed the editorship of MSU's Journal of African Languages, a three-times-yearly professional publication. It is devoted to research articles by international scholars on African languages, literature and linguistics.

NEW MEA BUILDING DEDICATED--MSU President John A. Hannah recently dedicated the Michigan Education Association's new headquarters located at Abbott Rd. and M-78 in East Lansing.

Dems Charge 'Spy'

Republicans Implicated In Plot

WASHINGTON 4--Democratic officials unveiled today a tangled "spy" plot which they said involved a $1,000 payoff to an employee in their headquarters for funneling information to the Republicans.

Wayne Phillips, assistant public relations director for the Democratic National Committee, said the employee told party officials about the alleged attempt to get him to spy for the Republicans and they helped him give the GOP information, some of it spurious.

The employee, Louis Flax, said he had delivered one envelope of copies of teletype messages between the Democratic headquarters and state committees to John Grenier, executive director of the Republican National Committee, shortly after Flax said he received $1,000 in cash from another man on the street outside GOP headquarters.

He made another delivery to Grenier yesterday, walking the four blocks between the two parties' national headquarters, he said, and was told by the Republican official that there would be no more money until "you get something hot."

Phillips said intervening deliveries were made to Grenier by mail.

Grenier, after reading an affidavit signed by Flax and dated Oct. 12, declined comment. As newsmen entered his office, shortly after Flax said he made yesterday's delivery, Grenier was seen pushing copies of teletype messages into a yellow envelope.

He said he knew no one by the name of Flax and "I don't know what's behind it."

Most of the information on the affair was contained in the Flax affidavit which was given to newsmen after they were called to Phillips' office in the Democratic committee's news and information office.

While newsmen were there Flax made several attempts to contact Grenier by phone to set up yesterday's meeting, Grenier was not in his office until a 1:30 call, but on an earlier try newsmen heard a woman who answered the phone tell Flax--going by the alias of "Mr. Lewis"--"We have been receiving the things if that was what you wanted to do."

Phillips said the information supplied to Grenier consisted calized. It was decided that the major portion of the EDP's limited financial resources should be devoted to these areas of greatest impact.

He said EDP devoted to the development and implementation of educational principles and procedures which will preserve and improve undergraduate education in the face of increasing enrollments, potentially limited financial resources, a growing shortage of faculty personnel and explosive increases in the amount and complexity of knowledge.

Tracing the history of EDP, Dietrich said that in February, 1963, when the program was introduced, 31 tentative curricular guidelines were distributed for "discussion purposes."

"Unfortunately, EDP was and sometimes still is identified as 'project X,'" he said.

"When the guidelines were distributed, great faculty concern was expressed that a master design was being imposed, but nevertheless, organized study of the guidelines was dropped."

However, in June, 1963, as Dietrich pointed out, the University approved three of the guidelines--retention of the quarter system, a 180-credit minimum for graduation and the concept of larger blocks of undergraduate course credit.

England's Butchers Go To Canines

LONDON 4--Organized butchers of Britain faced up to a fact of life Tuesday: Some of their best customers are dogs.

A butcher in this animal-loving land who won't let women bring their pets into his shop is asking for a decline in business.

"Hell hath no fury like a woman whose dog is scorned," said L. A. Moss, a member of the executive council of the National Federation of Meat Traders.

Leslie Franks, a Brighton delegate to the federation's annual conference, put it even stronger: "When a housewife buys the meat these days, her pet is likely to get better meat than her husband."

Thus, Franks declared, the family dog is actually a better customer than the head of the family himself, and will be treated as such by a butcher who knows which side his bread is buttered on.

Franks accordingly opposed a motion by butcher W.F. Brabin of Liverpool asking the federation to favor a law barring dogs from butcher shops as a health hazard.

"If we want to keep the supermarkets from draining off our customers we must practice hygiene," urged Brabin.

He pointed out that a no-dogs-in-butcher-shops law would take the onus off the individual shopkeeper, who might lack the courage to enforce such a ban on his own.

In the end, cooler heads prevailed.

Tossing out the Brabin motion, the federation passed a substitute urging a stepped-up propaganda campaign to convince pet owners that they should leave their dogs outside when buying meat for either man or beast.

More, Better Jobs For Graduates Are Exhibited At Career Carnival

Job opportunities for 1964-65 graduates in all fields are better than ever before.

This was the consensus of approximately 250 representatives from 83 companies and agencies at the annual Career Carnival held Monday and Tuesday in the Union.

Companies plan to hire more graduates than last year, and starting salaries are showing a general increase.

Job outlooks are especially good for graduates with a liberal arts degree. The trend towards hiring liberal arts graduates has been increasing yearly, even for those companies which mainly attract those in technical fields.

Representatives from Dow Corning and Bendix Corporations, for example, say their companies plan to hire more liberal arts graduates than in previous years.

"We can use bright, ambitious graduates in almost any field," one representative said.

Most companies conduct training programs for newly-hired graduates, which help to place the liberal arts major in an area for which he is best suited.

Opportunities for graduates in technical fields are high, representatives said.

The demand for engineering, chemistry and mathematics graduates is always greater than the supply, they said.

Most representatives agreed that Career Carnival was an excellent opportunity for students to gain employment information, especially when followed up with an interview.

Many companies represented at the Carnival will be conducting interviews at the Placement Bureau during the year.

"We are extremely pleased with the large turn-out at this year's Carnival," Ed Fitzpatrick, assistant director of the Placement Bureau, said.

Students' questions generally concerned general outlooks, promotions, salary and training programs.

Several representatives said that students visiting the Carnival this year seemed more mature and better informed than in previous years.

Students seemed less interested in immediate salaries than in long-term opportunities, one representative said.

Ad Dept. Head Gains Recognition

John W. Crawford, chairman of the Department of Advertising, was recently elected a fellow in the American Academy of Advertising.

He was also elected regional dean of the Academy for Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota.

Academy fellows are elected annually for their contributions to advertising in scholarship, development of major practices, publications, instructional procedures and improvement of advertising education.

Auditions Start For Cap-Gown

Auditions for the University Cap and Gown Series will be held in Kellogg Center Auditorium Oct. 19 as the series begins its search for local talent.

Through this Office of the Continuing Education Service, public and private community groups can obtain paid entertainers, said Ruben W. Droscha, assistant coordinator.

Students wishing to audition may call 355-4570 or come to 56 Kellogg Center.

Deadline Draws Near Critics Acclaim Loren, Mastroianni For Strike At AMC 'Yesterday, Today And Tomorrow'

SNAPPY DRESSER—Mary Lou Hudkins, a University policewoman, models the new uniform identifying her as part of the University police force. Photo by Larry Fritzlun

DETROIT (AP)—The auto industry's only profit-sharing plan was the subject of lots of talk but little negotiating Tuesday as bargainers for American Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers Union worked under a Thursday midnight strike deadline.

General Motors Corp. remained strikebound and walkouts have hit Ford Motor Co.

Negotiators for AMC and the UAW said other contract matters were discussed in morning bargaining sessions, but both sides presented their profit-sharing cases by newsmen in written statements.

American Motors said it still believes in the profit-sharing concept, but proposes to abandon it in a new three-year contract. AMC said this is because the UAW is asking profit-sharing plus the same economic package it negotiated with the big three—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

The UAW wants the plan continued and agreed in profitable years AMC workers would get more than those at the Big Three. But it said it was willing to risk losing a new week's vacation and two additional paid holidays in poor years.

The union estimated these gains cost approximately 10 cents an hour per worker and said this amount was what it agreed in 1961 to forego if the workers' share of profits was insufficient to support fringes added that year.

AMC and UAW negotiators face a Thursday midnight strike deadline and were expected to carry bargaining into Tuesday and possibly Wednesday.

AMC employs 25,000 in automaking at Kenosha and Milwaukee, Wis., and in appliance manufacture at Grand Rapids, Mich. General Motors, the colossus of the automakers, which already has reached national agreement

The latest Joseph E. Levine import, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," an Italian motion picture produced by Carlo Ponti, presents a trilogy of episodes on a unified theme.

The film, starring Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni, probes three major ways of life, love and philosophy common to the three classes of people in Italy today.

The first of the trio is a perceptive farce examining the rigid, hypocritical, middle-class mores the poor are forced to endure. A husband keeps his buxom wife out of jail by keeping her "in the family way."

The second episode concerns upper-class tailoring of morality to individual whims and desires.

As she rides with her lover in a car, a woman professes her undying passion for him until she reveals her true sense of values. The most outstanding feature of this episode is the original photography of the Milan countryside.

In the third episode a young amoral couple react to the society that has ignored them by delightfully ignoring its antiquated rules of behavior. Taking the most optimistic view of the trilogy, the conflicting characters eventually find a ground of tolerance.

Loren and Mastroianni both demonstrate their unique range of acting talents in their portrayal of the trio of characters. Vittorio DeSica's direction is excellent.

One hopes, after seeing this picture, that the trilogy-production, a favorite of European movie-goers, will become more common in the United States.

Addition To Open

A $120,000 addition to the Spartan Village School is scheduled to open next Monday.

The four-room addition had previously been scheduled for use Sept. 14, the first day of classes, but a delay was caused by construction strikes.

The addition makes a total of eight classrooms available for occupancy and also includes MSU facilities for televising classroom situations to students of the College of Education.

The school mainly serves children of MSU students living in the married housing areas, so MSU is paying 80 per cent of the construction cost.

In addition to the construction costs, equipment and site work costs are estimated at $20,000, making the total cost around $140,000.

Counselors Sought Early

Students who will want to visit the Counseling Center are urged to make appointments as early in the term as possible.

Donald L. Grummon, director, said that the number of students visiting the center drops considerably between registration and mid-term. After mid-term, he said, the counseling staff is booked solid with appointments until the end of the term.

Many students who make appointments after mid-term cannot be seen by a counselor until the next term, Grummon said.

"We simply do not have the personnel to meet the great demand at the end of the term," he said.

The Counseling Center employs 19 permanent staff members and 17 doctoral interns.

Most students come to the center for advice on educational and vocational planning and personal problems, Grummon said.

Counselors also deal with problems of academic achievement and administrative details, like a change of major.

All students who change majors during the first two years are required to visit the center.

"Often this is just a routine," Grummon said, but many times a counselor will show a student that he has not made a wise decision.

Last year nearly 6,000 students visited the Counseling Center.

CSP Offers: Travel, Study In Europe

Four special travel-study programs in Europe are being planned through the office of Continental Study Projects in New York.

The programs include a nine-day crossing on a student ship and a full summer's study and travel in Europe.

One program includes four weeks of study in Paris at the Sorbonne, Alliance Francaise with four weeks of travel by Eurailpass. This railroad pass gives the student a chance to see Europe at his own pace. There are unlimited stop-over privileges.

Also offered is four weeks of study in Palma de Majorca at the Luis Vives College. This also includes a four-week travel with Eurailpass.

A third program is two weeks of sight-seeing in Paris including the special Bastille Day celebration. There is also four weeks of study in Grenoble at the University of Grenoble.

Another includes one week of sight-seeing in Paris and four weeks at the University d'Aix-Marseille in Aix-En-Provence. An international music festival is located here.

The cost of each of these programs, including transportation, is $786.

For more information and an application form, a student can write Continental Study Projects, 527 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y.

Home Ec Meet

To put today's knowledge into improving the housing to today's people is the aim of a home economics conference here Wednesday.

"Home economists will be studying their role in improving the housing of all people in this conference," said Gertrude Nygren, MSU program assistant in home economics extension.

She is also chairman of the planning committee for the eighth annual conference on improving the Teaching of Housing in Home Economics in Land Grant Universities.

Spartan Swimmer Wins Silver Medal

By MIKE BROOKS
State News Sports Writer

Gary Dilley, Spartan sophomore from Huntington, Ind., smashed a world record Tuesday as he swam to a silver medal in the Olympic games.

Dilley's 2:10.5 clocking in the 200-meter backstroke bettered the old world mark of 2:10.9, but left him the length of his hand and a fifth of a second behind Bob Graef of Verona, N.J., Bob Bennett of Long Beach, Calif., finished third to complete an American sweep of the event.

Spartan swim coach Charles McCaffree, in calling it a "wonderful performance," said it was a great effort that carried Dilley so far.

Dilley had been timed at 2:12 when he won the Olympic trials in September, but only needed a time of 2:13.8 to win his semifinal heat.

Dilley prepared for the Olympics by working out during the summer with the Spartan Swim Club under the eye of Assistant Coach Dick Fetters.

At the Great Lakes Invitational meet he captured two firsts, two seconds, and a third in the individual events, while also swimming on two winning Spartan freshmen relay teams for a total of seven events.

Hoop Tryouts

Freshman Basketball Coach Danny Peterson will conduct tryouts at 3:45 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 15, in Gym 3, Men's IM.

Dilley's versatility should give a big boost to the swimming team.

In addition to his backstroke ability, he is also an excellent freestyler according to McCaffree.

McCaffree said that he would use him in the medley relay, the 200-yard backstroke, and the 100-yard-freestyle.

Dilley is not enrolled at State this term because of time required to participate in the Olympics, but will be back winter term and begin working out with the team.

SECOND FOR U.S.

Graef Earns Gold Medal

TOKYO 4—Jed Graef of Verona, N.J., won America's second Gold Medal at the Tokyo Olympic games Tuesday with a world record time for the 200-meter backstroke and Australia's Dawn Fraser completed an unprecedented swimming triple.

Graef led a 1-2-3 American sweep in the backstroke with a time of 2:10.3, finishing ahead of

The last time a Michigan State swimmer was on the Olympic team was in 1952. Clark Scholes won a gold medal in the 100-meter freestyle in Helsinki that year.

Another sophomore who competed in the Olympic trials could add depth to the swimming team.

John Ladd, an honors college student from Minneapolis, swims the 200-yard butterfly.

As a freshman, he was elected to the national freshman honorary fraternity, and was secretary-treasurer of the Porpoise swimming fraternity.

Michigan State's Gary Dilley, Huntington, Ind. sophomore, and Bob Bennett of Long Beach, Calif. Dilley was timed in 2:10.5 and Bennett in 2:13.1.

Miss Fraser, at 27 considered old for a swimmer, won the first swimmer to win the same event in three successive Olympics by flashing home in the 100-meter freestyle in the Olympic record time of 59.5.

The United States added to its medal total by taking second and third behind Miss Fraser. Sharon Stouder of Glendora, Calif., took the silver medal with a 59.9

clocking, becoming only the second woman to crack the 60-second barrier, and Kathy Ellis of Indianapolis was third in 1:00.8.

The five medals by the swimmers brought the United States' medal total to 10, two gold, five silver and three bronze. Russia has four medals, taking a second-place silver in lightweight weight-lifting, the only other final on the day's program.

Poland's Waldemar Basanowski won the event with a total life of 951.5 pounds, a world and Olympic record.

AFTERMATH OF SUCCESS

Frosh Praise Block 'S'

By RICK PIANIN
State News Sports Writer

It takes just three components to comprise a football game: 22 well-trained athletes, a large throng of spectators and a great deal of spirit.

When there is a noticeable lack of enthusiasm, it requires a devoted human dynamo, like sophomore Bob Amsler to aid in regenerating it.

Amsler spends about 70 hours of his school week in this capacity as chairman of the Block 'S,' an organization which he feels can greatly bolster the spirit at Spartan Stadium.

"When I came up here for my first year, there was a complete lack of enthusiasm," he explained. "There was never any one group which could be depended upon for cheering support, until the advent of Block 'S.'"

Membership this year to Block 'S' has been limited to freshmen, for it was felt that they lacked any organization which was strictly for them.

"This school is enormous," said Amsler, "and a means was needed for freshmen from all over campus to get together, and at the same time enjoy themselves."

Participants seem to agree on the merits of their club.

"The organization is a proud ornament of the freshmen class," remarked Ron Root, a journalism major. "Many of the freshmen think that no one really cares about them, yet here is an organization which is designed expressly for them."

"I don't see why more people don't join it right away," added Mitch Miller, a political science major. "It's a great deal of fun participating in an organized cheering section which really stands out at a game."

Freshman apathy was in evidence at the Southern Cal. game, when only members filled the 1,180 allotted seats. And even Saturday's full turnout cannot be considered a true indication of student attitude, since all seats were in such great demand.

"I feel that freshmen are just now realizing what a fine opportunity the Block 'S' is, and this enthusiasm is snowballing into great proportions," Amsler said.

Amsler pointed out that much of the credit for his club's fine showing should be given to his industrious assistants, including Tom Carman, freshman ticket chairman, Joanne Re, senior stunts chairman, sophomore Bob Flack, equipment manager, and Darrell Groves, junior assistant chairman.

Although Duffy Daugherty and his squad are looking no further ahead than Saturday's game at Indiana, Athletic Director Biggie Munn looked many years into the future by signing a two-year grid pact with Georgia Tech. It will begin Sept. 18, 1971, at Atlanta and conclude Sept. 23, 1972, at East Lansing.

The games will mark the first gridiron meetings between the schools.

Georgia Tech withdrew from the Southeastern Conference this season after making several bowl appearances on behalf of the conference in recent years.

Meanwhile, the Spartans stepped up workouts last night in preparation for Saturday's contest with the Hoosiers at Bloomington.

Injuries may prove an obstacle to the Spartan defensive forces with Ed Macuga, Ron Goovert, and Don Bierowicz nursing leg injuries that could hamper their performance.

To strengthen the MSU defensive alignment, Rahn Bentley, used both offensively and defensively in the first three games, will concentrate on defensive duties against the Hoosiers.

The Spartans will head into Saturday's contest with a string of five consecutive victories against Indiana and 13 wins in the last 14 games with the Hoosiers.

This year Indiana was expected to have one of their best teams in recent seasons, and their present record can't be taken as a measure of their potential. In their first three contests, the Hoosiers have dropped one-point decisions to Iowa and Northwestern and were edged 17-9 by powerful Ohio State.

Against Iowa last Saturday, Indiana ran a total of 90 plays in a brilliant display of ball control.

Baseball Decline Untrue

By DUANE LANCASTER
State News Sports Writer

Of the two most popular American summer commodities, baseball and hot dogs, one seems to be lagging in the popularity polls and it's not Farmer Pete who is feeling the pinch.

The Cleveland Indians recently announced a two-year loss of more than $2,000,000. The Kansas City Athletics, Milwaukee Braves and Cleveland want to move. The Pittsburgh Pirates once this year drew less than 500 fans to Forbes Field.

In general, there seems to be a general feeling that baseball may no longer remain as our national pastime.

But MSU Baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler said he does not feel that this necessarily is true or that it means interest in baseball is declining.

Litwhiler said the reasons for recent franchise moves in the major leagues and the talk of even more cannot be taken as lack of spectator interest but merely a shifting of it.

"With more and more people moving to the west coast, it is only natural that baseball should follow," he said, noticeably perplexed that the stability of our national pastime would be questioned.

"Baseball owners want to go where the attendance is," he said, "and places like Atlanta and Seattle (both destination prospects for the Indians) would probably draw more fans than Cleveland."

"I believe the major leagues set a new attendance record this year in spite of the extensive coverage it receives through radio and television," he said.

"It's not the major leagues that are in danger," he said. "The minor leagues are the ones that face the trouble."

"People don't go to see minor league baseball any more because the facilities are so bad. But this could be solved if the teams dressed up their parks a little."

"A couple of the major league clubs could do the same," he added.

Another reason for the decline of minor league clubs cited by Litwhiler, majors are bringing up most of the talent. Thus people are going to the big leagues where better baseball is played and the entertainment is greater.

"Perhaps the American League is experiencing some attendance decline," he said, "but this is because the people like winners and the only real winners in the American League are the New York Yankees."

He pointed to the National League which has had six different pennant winners in the last seven years and has not suffered at all at the gate.

Need More Fields To Cope With Soaring IM Entries

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

Will the addition of more football fields help Michigan State University solve its expansion problem?

Asking such a question may sound a little absurd, and you might think "how can more football fields solve a large university's expansion problem?"

Additional football fields will solve one phase of expansion--the expanded growth of IM football.

With an increasing rate of students participating in intramural athletics, especially football, during fall term, a solution had to be found to cope with the expanded recreational program.

Presently there are four lighted football fields for IM use. In addition, parking lot "L", which is adjacent to the playing fields, is available.

According to IM Director Frank Beeman and his assistant, Larry Sierra, these fields are not enough for the coming years.

"There were 197 entries in IM football last fall," Sierra said. "With a greater number of participants each year, we couldn't handle all dormitory, fraternity, and independent games on a four-night-a-week basis."

"Therefore, our only alternative this year was Sunday night football" he said. "With the approval of 'Biggie' Munn and Vice President John Fuzak, we now can operate at a maximum number of 120 games per five days."

It is expected that Michigan State's enrollment will be increased 10,000 in the next decade and with that tremendous growth, the recreational facilities may have to double in number. The possibility exists that the Sunday night expansion alone may not be able to handle IM football after this year.

According to Beeman, additional football fields are vitally needed. He said he hopes that the fields will be completed by next fall to meet the growing student body.

"I plan, however," says Beeman, "to recommend lighted, multi-purpose fields. In this way, the possibility of participating in various activities by many students will be increased."

Thus, as 24 games opened the fall season for IM football Monday night, the solution for the foreseeable future remains more football fields.

Married Housing In Great Demand

Married students are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain housing in university facilities. There are now 265 couples waiting for apartments compared to 158 couples last year at this time, Ray D. Lamphear, manager of married housing, said. "As to where these students are in the meantime," Lamphear said, "your guess is as good as mine."

No figures are available on the whereabouts of married students living off campus. Some students are living in trailer units, some are commuting from home, some have found apartments and others, with their families in other cities, are living in rooms or at the Lansing YMCA.

This year's large waiting list was caused by an increase in married students on campus and fewer vacancies at the end of the spring and summer terms, Lamphear said.

Though there are plans to increase undergraduate and graduate housing facilities for single students, Lamphear said he knew of no plans for an increase of apartments for married students. Each of the 2,056 apartment units maintained by the University for married students rents for about $90 a month. The apartments are now filled by couples with at least one student in school.

Married students have an advantage over single graduate students in placement on waiting lists for University housing. Graduate students must live in undergraduate housing to be placed on the waiting list for Owen Hall. Married students are not required to live in University facilities while awaiting placement.

Fall registration showed 5,191 married students enrolled in school, said James V. Stoneman, assistant registrar for evaluation and research. More men than women, 3,669 of the total, were married.

Stoneman said that the married student total represents individuals. No attempt is made to determine the number of couples involved.

$26 Million Misallotted, GAO Charges

WASHINGTON (AP)—Administrators of a federal program to create jobs in high unemployment areas let $26 million flow into places that had recovered economically, the General Accounting Office (GAO) charged Monday.

The agency criticized by GAO, the Area Redevelopment Administration, denied it had been inordinately slow in adjusting its policies to changed economic conditions. A program of federal projects should not be turned on and off instantaneously as the rate of unemployment in an area fluctuates, it said, acknowledging "administrative delay" of seven to 13 months, in some cases. It said this was a reasonable period for determining an area was no longer eligible for help.

GAO made its report to Congress, in whose behalf it oversees operations of the executive branch. The program under study was set up by the Public Works Acceleration Act of 1962, authorizing $900 million to provide jobs quickly by building projects in areas of "substantial and persistent unemployment."

GAO said Detroit, for example, was designated as one such area in 1961, when its unemployment rate was 11 per cent, and projects ultimately totaling $44.7 million were allotted to the area.

But the accounting office said recovery in Detroit started in 1961, by September 1962 unemployment was down to 5.2 per cent, and by July 10, 1963, the Labor Department removed Detroit from the "substantial and persistent unemployment" category, and recommended it no longer be considered a redevelopment area.

Yet, the report said ARA did not take the Detroit area off the list until Feb. 20, 1964, and some $23.4 million worth of projects were scheduled to begin after October 1963.

Patience Urged On Phone Use

"Wait for the dial tone before calling," is the answer of telephone officials to student complaints about busy signals.

Herbert Shaw, manager of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. branch that handles the University's phone system, said that even off campus students, if they are calling from a 351 exchange, must wait for the dial tone.

The two campus exchanges, 355 and 353, plus the 351 of many sororities and fraternities, are on the same system.

Mrs. Eva Buckley, supervisor for the campus system, said that if students still have trouble making calls after waiting for the dial tone, they should call her at 355-2374.

Management Club

The MSU Management Club will hold its first meeting of the year 7:30 this evening in Room 35 of the Union.

John H. Hoagland, associate professor of personnel and production administration, will speak on the prediction of business, stock and political trends.

ICC Schedules Soccer Block

The International Co-operation Committee (ICC) has requested all students planning to sit in its block at the football game with Northwestern University, Oct. 24, to turn in their activity book coupons this week.

They should be brought to the ICC office in the International Building Wednesday, Thursday or Friday.

All students planning to sit in the ICC block at this Saturday's soccer game should meet outside the field at 1:15 p.m. ID's will be required.
