Profiles In Courage

MSU finally made it Monday, with its first peaceful demonstration against the prolonged war in Viet Nam. Many other campuses have already seen demonstrations protesting the war, one of the most agonizing episodes in American foreign policy in the Cold War era.

The cause of getting American soldiers and "advisors" out of Viet Nam has captured the imagination of the new generation of idealists now in the nation's colleges, as a symbol of such outdated concepts, in the minds of many, as imperialism, interventionism. nationalism.

There is dissension among the students interested in seeing an end to the Viet Nam war, as among every other group concerned with the war. Some want to end only direct American military involvement. Others want the United States to pull out altogether and leave Viet Nam to shift for itself. Some want to, of the past here, too.

see anti-communist pressure maintained despite an end to the war, while others feel communism is all that can save Viet Nam from total destruction.

This dissent evidenced by the several factions among the approximately 120 people who demonstrated Monday, marching from Beaumont Tower to the East Lansing Post Office. But this is just part of the game of political involvement, a demonstration of free thought in action.

It is encouraging to see students here taking sufficient interest in political affairs to march for an hour or two in sub-freezing weather just to show the world where they stand. As we have said before, this is an area in which MSU has been too far behind the rest of the country for too long.

Campus Summary. -Real Student Government By Michael Kindman

There is a recurring debate on many campuses concerning the nature of student government. Some, nostalgic for the old days of raccoon coats and rah-rah girls, feel that student government has a job to perform--the continuation of the myth of "school spirit" and the independent, if ineffective, exercising of democratic rights. Representation without implementation. AUSG.

Others, more up-to-date, feel that student government has a different job to perform--the intelligent and pragmatic use of the power of student opinion to effect policy reforms and improve academic conditions. Student government less concerned with the rules and more concerned with the results.

The current proposal for a new student government here is of the latter type, with limitations.

The proposed student board would get things done. It would have the respect of the administration, it would work quickly and efficiently, it would "get around." It would eliminate all pretense of representative government as such, and replace it with a well-oiled mechanism representing what it thinks is student opinion. So be it.

There is no question that the student board of the proposed Associated Students of Michigan State University can do a better job of winning administrative sympathies to the student government, and can probably be an effective voice in the running of the University, but only as effective a voice as the concept of student government as a kind of shadow-boxing game can let it

The student board can get things done, but it will still have to have all its decisions passed on by faculty and administration committees, and will still be operating in a kind of vacuum. If student government is to be effective, the students mustbe given a voice in University affairs that means something.

This could be managed by allowing students, faculty and, yes, even administrators to sit down together and hash out policies and problems, and then letting their decisions be the final word. There is no need for the multi-le tel approval of study government decisions which exists now except as a means to avoid giving ultimate power to the students.

Students here--particularly the kind of experienced and responsible students who would show up on the student-board or, even better, on a more open and voluntary sort of semi-representative body--are surely capable of taking part in reasoned, mature decisions. Student government can not be worthy of the name until they are allowed to do so.

It would be wise for students to vote in favor of the proposed student board government March 9. They should do so, however, with the idea in mind that this is not the final answer, but rather a temporary step to real student government. Similarly, the supporters of the new government and the student leaders who will be on it if it is instituted should be aware that their primary function will not be self-glorification or even the calculation-within a 14-man vacuum -- of "student opinion."

The student board's primary function should be to prove to administrators that students are responsible and mature enough to take a reasonable role in University affairs.

This done, we can get on to the more important business of finding a way for every group in the University community to be active and important in the establishment of University policies. As I have said before in this column, Michigan State needn't become the cold, sterile "multiversity" described by Clark Kerr smile at the fact that I spent as the university of the future, but to avoid becoming so it must four and one-half hours reading encourage involvement in the business of the University.

Voice From The Id

By JIM DE FOREST

Of course it's mad, positively mad, yet, when I see it setting

there in all its stainless steel majesty . . . You people talk of your free will and your freedom of choice, but you're not free--It controls you, your whole life.

Don't you realize that the dishwashing machine down in the dorm kitchen is making you act as you do. Your whole life is a pawn, because, without you, it cannot survive.

You think that your parents or social pressure made you decide to attend college, but it was really the force rays from the dishwashwashing machine that made you attend.

You live in a dorm because it NEEDS you to eat and, so, to soil plates or knives and forks so it will be able to exist. Football games, classes, dances, they're al part of the facade; they're all part of the front.

Look at it. Listen to it. You can feel its surge of power and authority as the hot soapy water rushes through its bowels, changing destinies at the splash of some suds. How helpless man is! Do we live, die, and reproduce at the whim of that monster? I say no, no, a thousand times NO! Damn the Dishmaster, full speed ahead!

Point Of View

On Educational Isolationism

Editor's Note: Walter Adams, professor of economics, wrote the following point of view column to respond to recent charges by state Sen. John Bowman, D-Roseville, that Michigan State University and the University of Michigan are spending too many Michigan dollars educating out-of-state students.

Last week, Sen. John Bowman, D.-Roseville, chastised Michigan State University and the University of Michigan for admitting too many out-of-state ("foreign") students and thus keeping worthy Michigan youngsters from atwhiskey before I let them put that needle in me. tending their own state universities. Sen. Bowman suggested that the two schools should take more interest in educating our native sons than in becoming national universities.

I have no doubt that the senator has the best interest of Michigan at heart and, being a Democrat, he can hardly be quilty of xenophobia toward Texans and Minnesotans who, after all, are Americans (even though an unfortunate accident of birth deprived them of Michigan citizenship.

May I, therefore, invite the senator's attention to the following facts, so that he can respond as cogently to his complaining constituents as the Lawmakers of France did to the candlestick makers a centruy ago.

(1) No qualified Michigan high school graduate is currently denied admission to MSU. To admit those not qualified would be a cruel hoax and deception and would condemn them to the frustrating fate of a drop-out.

(As it is, some 95 per cent of the freshmen attending MSU are academically eligible to return for the sophomore year -- a tribute to the wisdom of the selection system.)

(2) Michigan State University last year enrolled 1 out of every 7 freshmen starting at Michigan institution of higher learning-public or private, junior college or university. This is hardly a record deserving of cen-

(3) Out of an MSU freshman class of 7,096, some 1,360 came from out-of-state. These "foreigners" not only enriched the academic environment of our Michigan students, but paid an academic surcharge of $546 for their tuition. They lived in unsubsidized lodgings, consumed unsubsidized meals and bought unsubsidized goods and services. While they were legal residents of other states, they were physical residents of Michigan.

They and their parents contributed heroically to Michigan's balance of payments -- as any Michigan businessman will readily testify. (Would it not be ironic for a tourist-oriented state to build a wall around its universities in order to keep out "foreign" intruders?) (4) Michigan is irrevocably part of a federal union of states, and the day is long gone when states levied taxes, tariffs, and impediments on interstate commerce. Our welfare--economic, social, and intellectual--cannot be segregated and isolated from the rest of the nation. Just as innumerable engineers at General Motors, scientists at Dow and professors at Michigan State have been trained at institutions not supported by Michigan taxpayers, so many of our native Michiganders are trained in our state institutions only to "emigrate" to New York and Pittsburgh.

If Sen. Bowman's logic were followed to its ultimate implications, we would subsidize the education of only those Michigan students who would indenture themselves to permanent residence in this state. This is both impractical and preposterous.

Our state is a peninsula. Let us not try to make it an island!

Lingo Won't Allow March

SELMA, Ala .-- Alabama's chief law enforcement officer said Tuesday that Negroes would not be allowed to stage a march of taxes of a University of Michigan demonstration planned by Martin Luther King Jr.

"They are not going to march after 4:30 p.m., (CST)" said Col. Albert J. Lingo, state public safety director. Lingo personally commands a large force of state troopers under orders from Gov. George C. Wallace to prevent night demonstrations. If they persist, said Lingo, "we will use whatever force is necessary to stop them but only whatever force is necessary."

British Power To Be Reassurance

LONDON--The Labor government pledged British nuclear weapons Tuesday to reassure friendly non-nuclear nations like India living in "the new shadow" of Red China's atomic

But Prime Minister Harold Wilson's 4-month-old administration in an official outline of its defense program, ruled out virtually all danger of "major nuclear war arising from a direct conflict" between the Soviet Union and the

Clay Is Fearless

NEW YORK--Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, a convert to the Black Muslim sect, said Tuesday he has no fear of reprisals from the friends of murdered Malcolm X.

"I walk the streets daily by myself -- I have no body guards, I fear nobody," the voluble titleholder, who has changed his name to Muhammad Ali, told the Associated Press by telephone from

"If anybody wants me, I'm not hard to find."

Jenkins Answers Quescions

WASHINGTON--Walter Jenkins, President Johnson's former top assistant, submitted written answers Tuesday to more than 25 questions asked him in the Senate Rules Committee's Bobby Baker investigation.

Jenkins swore to the answers in the presence of Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., the committee chairman.

Where the oath was administered was not disclosed, but it reportedly took place in the office of Peyton Ford, Jenkins' lawyer.

Romney, Hatcher At Impasse

Gov. George Romney said in Lansing Tuesday that he and University of Michigan officials are at an apparent impasse over a basic policy matter regarding expansion of higher education.

Romney says neither he nor U-M President Harlan Hatcher have changed their positions on proposed expansion of Michigan's Flint branch from a two-year to a four-year university. Romney asked in his budget message that the proposed expansion delayed until a report is issued from a blue ribbon committee studying the matter. Hatcher however, announced that U-M was going ahead with the

Russians Worried Over Bombings

PARIS--Soviet Ambassador Serge Vinogradov told President Charles de Gaulle Tuesday that the Soviet Union is extremely worried about the U.S. bombings of North Viet Nam and their possible consequences.

Soviet sources said Vinogradov delivered the communication verbally at the Elysee palace. At the end of the 20minute talks, he left a memorandum summarizing what he had told De Gaulle.

Frankfurter Funeral Today

WASHINGTON--Supreme Court justices will pay their last respects today to Felix Frankfurter, but there will be no public services for the retired justice, dead of a heart attack at 82. Chief Justice Earl Warren announced the private memorial service Tuesday, and a court spokesman added there would be no public funeral and no word on other final rites.

Mary Poppins Tops Nominations

HOLLYWOOD--"Mary Poppins" was the surprise leader when motion picture academy nominations were announced Tuesday. It scored in 13 categories. "Becket" and "My Fair Lady" followed with 12 each.

The 37th annual awards derby was off to a fast start with the three films in close contention. "Hush. . . Hush, Sweet Charlotte" and "Zorba the Greek" trailed with seven nominations each and "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" captured

Dummies Again Guard Border

COLOGNE, Germany--Dummy border guards, set up by Communist East German authorities to scare off refugees, are reappearing along the Iron Curtain, West German border police reported Tuesday.

The life-size dummies, dressed in the uniform of the East German National People's Army, had been first seen in 1958 but were withdrawn then after a few weeks.

When Dave Price first decided

At the 1963 Midwest Open Ferris was present when Price was competing as a Spartan. He noted then that when he had first seen Dave he'd thought that he was just wasting his time in gymnastics and should try another sport. After seeing him in the invitational contest, he couldn't believe the progress he had made.

Fraternity Ensemble Performs

By JUDY HOPPER State News Reviewer

An enjoyable program of light descriptive music for symphonic band was presented by the Sinnight in the Music Auditorium.

Members of the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity ensemble performed works by American composers. "Fireworks," by Clifton Williams, was full of brassy splashes of sound and shrill, high woodwind trills, depicting the excitement of a warm July 4th night. Robert Washburn's "Pageantry's' smooth, rich melodies and staccato march tunes were as patriotic as "America," while Frank Perkin's "Fandango's" clicking castanets and Spanish rhythms couldn't be mistaken. "Badinerie" by G. Knudsen delighted the audience with its gay, perky melodies in the British folk dance idiom.

Led by Gerald Bartlett, band director in the East Lansing Public Schools and an alumnus of Phi Mu Alpha, the group performed well through the final number, "Salute to the American School Band Directors Asso-What little they lacked in precision, intonation and accuracy, they made up in spirit and ex-
