CITY DRAINS DUMPING SEWAGE INTO RED CEDAR RIVER

Through These Doors . . .

Raw sewage enters the Red Cedar River through these vault doors. They are located behind the Rivers Edge Apartments east of campus.

Raw sewage, including human wastes, is being dumped into the Red Cedar River by the City of East Lansing.

The city's sewer system is contaminating the river through two storm vaults, about one-half mile upstream from campus, behind Water's Edge Apartments.

The river's flow carries the sewage downstream through MSU's campus.

Michael Stitt, manager of Water's Edge and River's Edge, says that the problem has existed for two years.

"The state came out twice to look at it," he said. "The second time, they brought the city engineer. This was last spring. The trouble stopped for about a month, and has been going on and off since then."

Involved in the dumping are two city sewers, one 42 inches and the other six feet, six inches. Both are combination sewers, as are all of those in the older part of the city system, carrying both water and waste.

Two steel doors, opening onto the river, come out of a cement vault, partially surrounded by guard rails, on a raised area at the rear of the building's parking lot.

They are along the inceptor, which runs to the sewage treatment plant and are a provision for storm weather flow.

The flap gates are designed to release overflow resulting from heavy rainfall. When such conditions exist, pressure automatically opens the gates and the water flows into the river.

Stitt said that three weeks ago, on a perfectly clear day with no previous heavy rains, the sewer had been dumping "at full force."

The flap gate was open about three to four inches Wednesday, July 13, following Tuesday's heavy rains, dumping first water and then raw human wastes into the Red Cedar.

Too much sewage for the capacity of the diversion chambers or improper functioning of the sewer downstream could be responsible for such a back-up, Robert M. Bruce, the city engineer, said.

"There is a strong possibility that the sewer needs cleaning," he added. "We will be working on a clean-up project this summer." The sewer follows the river bank, staying on the north side and crossing over at the Women's IM to Jenison Field House. There it crosses back and down to Harrison Road and the sewage treatment plant.

The raw wastes being dumped, however, are untreated. Bruce said that there are no treatment facilities available in times of overflow storm conditions.

He said that there is another storm gate at Harrison Road by Old College Field, near the putting green.

On the other side of Grand River Avenue, the 6-6 sewer is connected up to Burcham Drive, near the high school, bringing storm water from that area to the river. It extends no farther west than Charles Street, picking up east as far as Gunson, between Kedzie, Orchard and Burcham.

The sewers become smaller in diameter as they go away from the river. All the lines from the houses in the older part of the city are connected with them.

SAID KILLER OF NURSES

Suspect Seized In Hospital

CHICAGO (UPI)--Richard Speck, the "born to raise hell" loner wanted for the slaughter of eight young student nurses, was captured Sunday in a skid row flophouse where he had tried to kill himself with a gash from a broken wine bottle.

The sole survivor of the massacre was expected to be brought to Speck's bedside in the county jail infirmary for a face-to-face confrontation with the man accused of one of the worst mass slayings in modern history.

See Related Stories Page 6

The meeting was at first expected to take place late Sunday. But speculation arose later that it might be postponed until today, in any event, it was likely to be secret.

Chicago's top police officials handled Speck with kid gloves. They didn't want to run the risk of damaging their case through any possible violation of the Supreme Court's new, strict rules guarding the rights of accused men.

Michael Spiotto, deputy chief of detectives, said no policemen will talk to their prime suspect about the killings. "He will be fully advised of his rights," Spiotto said.

Police thought they had just another West Madison Street drifter in custody until a young doctor at Cook County Hospital washed away the blood on Speck's left arm and saw the incriminating tattoo: "Born to raise hell."

It marked the rangy young man on his operating table as the most wanted man in the country--the man charged with "the crime of the century."

RICHARD SPECK UPI Telephoto

Scarcely eight hours earlier, Chicago Police Supt. O.W. Wilson had launched a nationwide search for the 24-year-old seaman, drifter and ex-convict from Dallas.

Wilson said latent fingerprints found on a bedroom door had marked Speck as the soft-spoken butcher who slipped into a town-house apartment on Chicago's far south side Thursday morning and killed eight of the nine nurses who lived there.

One nurse, 23-year-old Corazon Amurao of the Philippines, escaped death by rolling under a bed while the killer was busy slaying her friends, one by one. Wilson said she had identified Speck's picture.

Doctors said Speck's tough, tattooed body had shaken off the shock of his attempt to kill himself by slashing a vein in his left arm with a piece from a broken wine bottle. He was able to talk and drink a glass of milk, doctors said. But he "shrugged off" any questions about the slayings.

Speck apparently had wandered about Chicago--dodging from one shabby hotel to another, dosing himself on cheap wine, and eluding police trackers by a matter of minutes--since police first started on his trail at a national maritime union hiring hall down the street from the murder house Thursday.

All indications were that Speck decided to kill himself when he saw his picture on the front page of every Chicago newspaper, read the detailed description of the

MSU's Attitude Towards Student Rights Improves

In announcing the withdrawal of Paul M. Schiff's suit against the University, the American Civil Liberties Union declared Friday that the University's attitude towards student rights has shown great improvement in recent months.

"Since the filing of the suit in September, the MSU administration has come to recognize the rights of its students to associate for political purposes without first obtaining the University's approval, to freely criticize University and city officials and policies, and to protect those rights by legal action when necessary," said George L. Griffiths, Lansing ACLU chairman.

Griffiths said he believed that the Schiff case helped to show the need for a recodification of the university's rules concerning student conduct, so that the rules will be clear to students and to those who enforce them.

He commended the six-month study conducted by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs in this area. Recommendations of this committee are now being considered by the Academic Council's steering committee.

Schiff, who entered MSU in 1963 as a graduate student, did not attend MSU spring term 1965. During this period he edited Logos, a newspaper published by the Committee for Student Rights (CSR). Schiff became involved in a running battle with University administrators and city officials concerning issues varying from on-campus distribution of literature to racial discrimination in East Lansing.

His application for readmission summer term was turned down. He was almost admitted fall term, but his application for readmission was denied again, soon after he filed a suit against the University concerning his summer term readmission.

Oct. 10, 1965, a three-judge panel in a Grand Rapids federal court ruled that Schiff should not have been barred without a hearing. In November, a faculty committee, after an eight-hour hearing, ruled that Schiff had by his conduct discredited the University and violated school rules in leading an unchartered student organization and in distributing Logos in student dormitories.

Schiff returned to court in December, seeking an injunction against the University, which would force University officials to cease interfering with his readmission to MSU, and which would erase all mention of the dismissal from his record.

Schiff was readmitted in January 1966. Late that month Horace C. King, registrar, advised ACLU attorneys who represented Schiff that his academic record did not refer in any way to the denial of Schiff's application for readmission.

In February Howard R. Neville, provost, informed Schiff's attorneys that he was eligible for a M.A. degree in Economics upon satisfactory completion of the usual requirements for that degree.

'Born To Raise Hell' Tattoo Reveals Speck To Doctor

CHICAGO (UPI)--"I moistened my finger tips and rubbed. I saw a B. I rubbed some more and saw B-O-R-N."

This first word of a tattoo reading "born to raise hell" confirmed a young doctor's hunch that his patient was Richard Franklin Speck, accused killer of eight student nurses.

Dr. Leroy A. Smith, 26, told newsmen Sunday about how he placed Speck in the hands of police.

Smith, a resident surgeon at Cook County Hospital, related that the patient was brought in by police at 12:30 a.m. under the name of B. Brian. He had been found, cut and bleeding in a skid row flophouse.

Dr. Smith, who was on trauma duty Saturday night, had read a newspaper earlier. He had scammed the stories of the search for Speck and looked at his picture.

"I got to him at 12:35," Dr.

Smith related at a news conference. "I picked up his head and looked at the nurse to see if she had noticed. I said to her, 'get the paper.'"

"I remembered the tattoo," he added, "'Born to raise hell.'"

Then he moistened his finger tips and began rubbing the patient's left arm and disclosed the tell-tale marking.

Dr. Smith said he asked the patient his name. "He finally spat out Richard -- Richard Speck."

An examination ascertained that Speck had a laceration in the crease under the elbow of his left arm, and there was free bleeding from a cut vein.

Dr. Smith said that a police officer interrupted the questioning in Ward 32. He quoted the officer as saying, "I wish you would refrain from asking questions. That will be done by the state's attorney."

Spending Spree Slows Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI)--The economy showed a "substantial slowdown" in the second quarter of 1966, primarily because Americans finally were ending a months-long spending spree.

The Commerce Dept. reported Sunday that the Gross National Product (GNP)--the price tag on the nation's total output of goods and services--increased in April, May and June by only $10.8 billion. This was the smallest gain since the fall of 1964, and put the GNP at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $732 billion.

Gemini 10 Launch Due Late Today

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)--While Gemini 10 astronauts John Young and Michael Collins were out fishing Sunday, project officials gave them a confident go-ahead for launch this afternoon on a dual rendezvous and spacewalk thriller.

"At this point in time the Gemini 10 mission is go," said Mission Director William C. Schneider following an afternoon review of all preparations for the ambitious space venture.

Gemini's Atlas-Agena rendezvous rocket is scheduled to go first at 3:40 p.m. with the astronauts following at 5:21 p.m. on a mission Young said has "everything in it but the kitchen sink."

Even the weather seemed to be cooperating. Project officials said the forecast was "favorable" with roughly three chances out of four that the common late afternoon thunderstorms would not interfere.

Young and Collins took advantage of the lull in preparations and went fishing Sunday afternoon after relaxing in their quarters during the morning.

While the pilots took it easy, launch teams on firing pads a mile apart readied the two space machines for the start of the final countdown at daybreak.

Expeditionist Embarks

Pathfinder Don Sockol is seen in the parting moments with his wife, Dawn, before leaving for a 10-day trek across campus. Sockol plans on being the first person to cross the University campus on foot.

All Systems Go For Campusnaut

Don Sockol began his first leg of a long journey across Michigan State's campus on foot at 9:23 p.m. (EST) Sunday.

Sockol was driven to the extremities of the MSU farms and expects to arrive at Kellogg Center in a couple of weeks.

Before leaving, Sockol held a press conference and made a few short remarks.

"I'm prepared for almost anything," he said. But, he admitted, he was a little scared.

"I don't know what's out there any more than you do," he told the crowd.

Then, glancing at his wife, he added:

"I'll make it."

Dawn, Sockol's bride of three weeks, was with the party of about 30 that came to see the campusnaut off.

"I'm not worried at all," said the pretty brunette. "I know that Donald will make it."

Later, however, after Sockol had gone, she confided that she was a little unsettled.

"If anyone can do it, Donald can," she said. "But--it is a long way."

Mrs. Sockol said she will probably stay with her family in Detroit while her husband is gone.

Sockol is making the attempt to prove to students and administrators that closer communications can and should be established, even at a huge multi-versity like MSU.

Sockol is carrying the barest survival equipment. Most of it was donated to the expedition by the PX Store in Frandor.

Sockol kissed his wife, waved his beret to the crowd, held up two fingers in the sign of a V and left.

GIRL LOST IN MINE

Calumet Search Continues

CALUMET, Mich. (UPI)--Rescue workers braving falling debris and dripping water inched down a dank mile-deep mine shaft Sunday in a nearly hopeless hunt for a lost little girl.

Police and officials of Calumet and Hecla Copper Co. vowed to continue rescue efforts 24 hours a day. But Ralph Sanford, director of industrial relations for the copper mining firm, joined the girl's stepfather in saying there was no hope Ruth Ann Miller, 7, was alive.

She fell into a bush-covered hole alongside a concrete cap covering the long-abandoned mine Saturday while berry picking with her brother, Gary, 10.

The mine shaft, which yielded its last copper in 1924, drops vertically for about a mile, officials said. The last 2,000 or 3,000 feet is a dark pool of water, accumulated from 40 years of seepage. Two Coast Guard skindivers volunteered to search the pool for the girl's body.

Local 1585 To Hold Emergency Meetings

Local 1585, MSU's non-academic employees union, will hold an emergency meeting today to decide a course of action involving a dispute in the Physical Plant last week.

For the convenience of members, three meetings will be held at different times in the Union Building. The first will begin at 2 p.m. in the Parlor. The other two will begin at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. in Room 31.

The dispute arose when the work schedules of seven men, composing a set-up unit, were changed without consulting the union, and the set-up unit was merged with a lower classification.

At a special executive board meeting last Wednesday, it was decided to present the issue before the entire union membership on campus for a decision.

Since the incident, the men affected have followed the new work schedule.

Compulsory Arbitration: Hope For Teachers

MICHIGAN TEACHERS are in a real bind. They are grossly underpaid but the law prevents them from doing anything substantial about it. The fact that they are underpaid was highlighted in a recent report by Lt. Gov. William Milliken. Milliken listed as one of the major problems facing teachers and school boards the fact that "teachers' salaries have been too low for too long."

Milliken also explains that while the Hutchinson Act, which applies to almost all state and local employees, was recently amended to allow teachers to bargain collectively, it still forbids strikes.

The main reason for this is the notion that the government represents the people and a strike against the government is a strike against the people.

Another reason is that interruption of many government functions is a threat to the general welfare.

WHILE IN THE CASE of teachers there is not the eminent danger to the public that there is in the case of a firemen's strike, the potential danger is great and the real losers, the children, are completely innocent.

On the other hand, the cause of the strikes may be a result not so much of low salaries but conditions in the schools which make education difficult if not impossible. One of these conditions would be if salaries were so low that teachers were forced to "moonlight" and could not devote their entire attention to teaching.

What then is the teacher to do? He is faced with low wages and poor working conditions, but the law prevents him from striking, and no employer, public or private, is going to consider seriously the complaints of employees who don't even have the ability to threaten to strike.

WE RECOMMEND an amendment to the Hutchinson Act, providing for compulsory arbitration if no agreement can be reached.

An impartial arbitrator would listen to both sides of the case and then determine a solution. His decision would be binding upon both sides.

This would: 1) force the school boards to listen to the teachers' complaints

2) Remove many pressures to strike

3) Make real headway against the problem of the underpaid teacher. Compulsory arbitration would not be an automatic panacea, but administered efficiently and impartially, it would be a major step toward solution of the teachers' problem.

Who Hunts For Causes?

To the Editor:

This letter offers no solutions to the problems of either Carroll Hawkins or Great Britain's Viet Nam policy, discussed in a recent letter by Michael Gabridge. Ordinarily, I am content to let the ravings of the uninformed and irrational members of the student body pass with no more than a stifled groan or a sigh. But the supercilious attitude reflected in the closing paragraph of Gabridge's letter requires some comment.

Apparently Gabridge seeks an advanced degree in the College of Natural Sciences because he objects to associate professors who "spend all their time in search of causes to picket and protest for..." and the College of Arts and Letters "seems to be full" of such professors. The point here is not that Gabridge has chosen his life's work on rather silly grounds, but that he has smugly made a sweeping and in fact grossly inaccurate generalization. The College of Arts and Letters applauds your choice of majors, sir, but, speaking for myself, I object to the thought-process (so-called) involved not just in the last paragraph of your letter but throughout.

Surely if you applied the same thought-processes to your work in the laboratory, MSU would lose some valuable equipment in the disaster that would follow. But as everyone knows scientists are careful to gather facts and observations and to thoroughly perform the proper procedures required.

But remove the scientist of the Gabridge mentality from his little world of material things and place him in the midst of any one of the great issues that confront humanity and watch what happens. Evidence and observation are abandoned for emotional responses, in this case a sense of righteous indignation joined to a hearty dislike of Hawkins' attempt to express his convictions. The thesis of Gabridge's letters on the primary subject of Great Britain's Viet Nam policy is that the British owe the United States a debt of gratitude for our help to them in World War II. Such mumbblings as "Brave Britain overlooks all the help given to her in the past..." and gives us a few sentences of moderated, watered-down semi-approval. Her generosity is overwhelming," characterize the tone of righteous indignation which permeates the author's thinking (so-called).

One need not linger long over the folly of his "position." Anyone who approached history as something more than a set of equations to be memorized could learn in a basic history course that foreign policy is rarely based upon gratitude; deeper interests are involved. At issue is not, however, Gabridge's specific position on Great Britain (which I disagree with) but his irrational response to the problem.

Nowhere is it apparent that Gabridge has explored, even superficially, the problems posed formulating and implementing any foreign policy. One cannot discover any sign that he carefully gathered information and reflected upon it concerning the specific problem of Great Britain. Why didn't he apply some of the tools of his own trade to the problem, insofar as thought processes are concerned, although, to be sure, there are distinct differences in method in certain areas? In the realm of the sciences Gabridge must do these things, why not in other spheres as well? No. Instead we get a supercilious estimation of those people who are not only concerned about man's problems but willing to do the critical thinking necessary to make some progress toward solving them.

Apology Requested For Arts And Letters

To the Editor:

I have no desire to prolong any argument with East Lansing Grad Student, Michael Gabridge. As he admits, I did enlighten him about Great Britain. But, alas, since he continues to blunder I must enlighten him further. First, let me say that he honors me when he imitates my writing style in his initial paragraph of his letter of July 14--although really as a MSU grad student struggling to be born he should cite the source of his imitation. Now, as St. Thomas, (no empiricist he), might say, I reply: I am not in the College of Arts and Letters. I wish that I were, with no offense to social science. I think that Grad Student Gabridge should apologize to the associate professors of arts and letters.

I do not spend all my time "in search of causes to picket, instead of doing what I am paid to do" as Mr. G. wrote. The empirical evidence, (worthwhile in this instance), is that my time trying to implement in practice the meaning of the Declaration of Independence in this "respectable" community is: Monday - Friday: 8 - 9 a.m.; 5 - 5:30 p.m. As an East Lansing resident Grad G. might join this East Lansing resident of 20 years, I'd be happy to have him aboard.

Singularly enough I've never written or researched so much and so successfully as in the past six months. The well is running a bit dry this past two weeks--I sort of lost my inspiration--but I'm confident that if I keep trying I'll be inspired again. In the meantime a bit of picketing in a good cause sweetens the soul!

Syrian Planes Boost War Fears

JERUSALEM (UPI)--Syrian planes buzzed the troubled Israeli border Sunday heightening fears of a possible counter strike in retaliation for Thursday's Israeli air attack 10 miles inside Syria.

Officials described the border as tense but quiet and said the Syrian Air Force planes were careful to stay over their own territory.

But they recalled that Damascus has pledged "to teach Israel a lesson" and did not rule out the possibility of more trouble from their Arab neighbor.

In Cairo, meanwhile, newspapers Sunday accused the United States of encouraging Israel to commit aggression against Syria. It was the first UAR comment on the Thursday air attack against a Syrian engineering installation being built to divert the precious water of the Jordan River.

Israeli jets attacked the facility in retaliation against what officials here termed "unprecedented provocations" by Syrian terrorist attacks along the border. They said the engineering site was deliberately chosen for retaliation because the Jordan diversion was aimed against Israel.

The two nations have been feuding for some time over how the water should be divided.

The influential Al Ahram newspaper in Cairo said the U.S. furnished arms which made the raids possible. Although the raids were carried out by French-built Mirage jet fighters, the Cairo press campaign blamed the U.S., apparently reflecting continuing bitterness in official circles over the U.S. decision in February to supply Israel with Skyhawk bombers.

It was the first time the U.S. had supplied Israel with attack aircraft.

Al Ahram said the U.S. "policy of adventure and reckless playing with fire, coupled with arrogance and disdain for world public opinion... have no doubt encouraged Israel to carry out this provocative aggression" on Arabs.

The newspaper Al Akhbar said the presence of U.S. Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco in Tel Aviv when the attacks occurred Thursday "might have been pure coincidence and might not," and Al Gomhouria expressed the hope that President Johnson felt "remorse" over having supplied Israel with arms for aggression.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban issued a weekend statement on the strike saying no nation in the world could allow a situation to continue in which its citizens were subject to attack across borders.

"We observed self-restraint for a long enough period, particularly after the Syrian attack... in May," Eban said.

'Midsummer Night's Dream' At Ledges

William Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will open in Ledges Playhouse, Grand Ledge, at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. The play will run through July 23.

Peter Arnott, who has theatrical experience from England and Wales, will make his professional American theater debut as Bottom the Weaver in this production.

Arnott is known for his books on various phases of theater and his puppet shows of classical drama in several American universities.

Directed by John Peakes, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be followed by "Under Milkwood," an earthy view of a Welsh fishing village by the late Dylan Thomas, July 26-30. Aug. 2-6 the Ledges Playhouse will present "King Lear," considered Shakespeare's finest tragedy. Costumes, selected by Ledges' costumer Sidney Poel and assistant Mrs. Eva Arnott, have been based on clothing worn in the Middle Ages.

'Whites, Arm Yourself' Says KKK Speaker

ELKTON, Md. (UPI)--A Ku Klux Klan speaker Sunday advised the whites of the nation to arm themselves in case police departments fail to stop "Negro violence."

"Black power is a revolutionary plot to kill every white child," said Roy Frankouser, grand dragon of the Pennsylvania Klan, the featured speaker at the rally staged by the Delaware and Maryland kliegles.

"Individual whites should arm themselves in case our police forces should be unable to act against Negro violence," he said.

Frankouser presented what he said was North Vietnamese propaganda literature and said a company based in Hong Kong was sending it postage-free as educational material to teachers.

He introduced a man he refused to identify, saying only that the man had been a member of the Community party since the age of 12. Mr. X, who wore large sunglasses, claimed he could have predicted a year ago the Chicago riots of last week and forecast "within weeks, perhaps days, violent riots will break out in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Atlanta and New Orleans."

This was the third Klan rally in Maryland recently. The first two drew a total of about 6,000. The Saturday night-Sunday morning audience was difficult to estimate because most of those attending did not leave their darkened automobiles. There were about 350 cars.

The Sponsors, Ben Sarton, the Grand Titan of Delaware, and Layton Braun, the king kleege of Maryland, said rallies would be held July 29 and 30 and that Robert Shelton, grand dragon of the United Klans of America, had promised to be there.

Frankouser said, "Negroes involved in the riots and civil rights activities are nothing but tools of the Communist party."

He called for "White power" to emerge. As he defined it, white power includes the arming of individual whites to come to the aid of police in cases of attack and every white registering and voting for men who embrace the Klan viewpoint.

Braun, apparently trying to start the meeting with the national anthem, wound up singing it alone and forgot some of the words. He improvised.

The Klan had advertised "A troop of mounted Klansmen" as one of the highlights of the rally. The Klansmen took turns riding the three horses that were present.

The burning of a 40-foot cross closed the rally.

ANSWERS U.S. AIR ATTACKS

Ho Mobilizes Reserves

TOKYO (UPI)--President Ho Chi Minh's decision to partially mobilize his Army reserve was seen here Monday as Hanoi's defiant answer to U.S. escalation of the air war.

Ho announced the mobilization in a brief speech carried on all North Vietnamese transmitters Sunday in which he pledged his country would fight on for "5, 10, 20 years or longer" to defeat "American aggressors."

The Communist leader made no mention of Hanoi's threat to try captured American pilots as war criminals, but reports from the Middle East said Ho's government also had taken a defiant stand on this and planned show trials despite U.S. warnings this might bring swift and severe retaliation.

The newspaper Al Gomhouria in Cairo quoted reliable sources as saying the North Vietnamese Embassy there rejected a U.S. demand that the captured airmen be considered prisoners of war and treated accordingly.

The U.A.R., one of the few non-Communist nations having diplomatic relations with Hanoi, transmitted the demand at the request of the U.S.

The newspaper said the North Vietnamese Embassy "reiterated that Hanoi considers captured American pilots as war criminals and not war prisoners."

In East Berlin, a Communist diplomat told UPI Hanoi plans to stage show trials and sentence the captured airmen to work in oil depots and other installations likely to become targets for air raids.

Ho's statement said he ordered the partial mobilization "in the face of the present urgent situation, to strengthen the national defense forces, to defeat all war schemes and acts of the U.S. imperialists, to defend the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and security of the fatherland..."

The broadcast did not say how many men would be mobilized other than that the order affected "part of the reserve officers and non-commissioned officers and part of citizens belonging to the reserves of the army but not yet serving in the army ranks."

Nor did it contain any threat to carry out a land invasion of South Viet Nam or any other neighboring territory.

The broadcast left little doubt that recent American air raids against oil depots in the Hanoi-

Haiphong area prompted the order.

"On June 27 and 30 last, the U.S. imperialists bombed the suburbs of Hanoi and Haiphong. This was a new and most serious note of escalation," Ho said.

"Bombs and bullets are being daily rained on our cities, villages, factories, dikes, dams, hospitals, schools, nurseries, pagodas, churches..."

"The U.S. imperialists hoped to shake the morale of our people. But their crime only serves to add fuel to the fire, to deepen the burning hatred of our people for the sworn enemy--the U.S. aggressors and their lackeys--and to promote our determination to fight until final victory."

Airlines, IAM Talks Back To Money Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI)--Negotiations between five major airlines and striking machinists got back to the basic issue of money Sunday as the talks reached the 10-day mark.

Assistant Labor Secretary James J. Reynolds said negotiators for the International Assn. of Machinists (IAM) had agreed to resume bargaining despite what he regarded as "serious acts of provocation" by Northwest Airlines.

The talks faltered to a halt Saturday after the IAM charged Northwest, one of the struck lines, with violating a strike agreement by soliciting servicemen for flights tended by "unqualified" ground personnel.

In announcing that talks were resuming, Reynolds said the IAM had "responded responsibly, in my opinion," to his request that management and unions get back to bargaining on substantive issues despite side disputes.

After a brief morning session, described by Reynolds as a "useful exchange," the two sides recessed to permit the airlines to review the situation.

The White House has expressed hope the negotiators would get together to "reasoning together," but there was no indication Sunday that any kind of presidential intervention was in the offing.

The strike has halted about 60 per cent of the nation's air traffic, forcing an approximate 150,000 passengers a day to find alternate transportation or stay put.

The IAM is asking for a 53 cent an hour raise over the course of a 36 months' contract, with a cost-of-living wage formula also part of any agreement.

The five airlines--Eastern, National, United, Trans World and Northwest--have offered a 48-cent increase without the cost-of-living formula.

Says Infiltration Won't Be Limited

WASHINGTON (UPI)--No amount of North Vietnamese mobilization will prevent the United States from limiting infiltration into South Viet Nam, Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus R. Vance said Sunday.

If Hanoi carries out its announced intention of partially mobilizing its reserves, he said, U.S. air strikes can still "impose a ceiling which will limit the number of men and the amount of supplies which they could move into South Viet Nam."

In a television interview (Face the Nation, CBS), Vance speculated Hanoi might need the extra manpower to repair communication and transportation lines destroyed by U.S. bombing attacks.

Near-Riot In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)--An armed robbery in which a Negro policeman wounded a Negro suspect in San Francisco's Negro district was followed by a near-riot early Sunday.

Police controlled the outbreak in a short time. They said it was not racial, despite attempts of a few hard-core Negro racists to exploit it. And police said they do not expect more trouble.

Seven fires--all small, were set with gasoline bombs. Seven Negro youths were arrested. A white ambulance driver was manhandled but not badly hurt.

British May Reduce Forces In Germany

LONDON (AP)--A threat to cut the British army on the Rhine to a token force unless West Germany pays more toward its upkeep was reported under consideration by the government Sunday as part of its program for restoring health to Britain's sick economy.

Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan is flying to Bonn on Wednesday and informants say he will be carrying what amounts to an ultimatum to Chancellor Ludwig Erhard.

West Germany has brushed off previous pressure from London for underwriting $252 million a year of what it costs Britain to keep the Rhine army, now numbering about 50,000 troops, in Germany. The total annual cost is $484.4 million, almost half of it in foreign exchange.

Police School Is Needed

A recently approved Police Administration school at Wayne State University is the second such four-year program in Michigan, Michigan State University had the first.

The establishment of the second school should not affect the school here, A.F. Brandstetter, director of police administration, said.

"It's a good development and will serve the southeastern part of the state," Brandstetter said.

Few police students come to MSU from that area, he said. Brandstetter sat on a committee of scholars which has evaluated the program as it has developed at Wayne State.

"They may call upon the MSU police administration school to help teach or do research," Brandstetter said.

The State Board of Education unanimously approved the establishment of the program of Wayne State at its last meeting.

153 KILLED SINCE FRIDAY

Cong Bombed Near Border

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)--A thousand U.S. Marines hit the beach near North Viet Nam's doorstep Sunday to set up a blocking force for a joint Marine-South Vietnamese operation designed to draw out and destroy a North Vietnamese army division believed to have slipped across the border.

Eight-engine B52 bombers from Guam backed the operation with a saturation attack on suspected enemy hiding places, some eight miles south of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Viet Nam.

The Marines and South Vietnamese reported killing 153 Communist soldiers since the operations began Friday. A North Vietnamese division runs from 3,000 to 4,000 men. Allied casualties were described as light,

Ryun Breaks Mile Record

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)--Slender miler Jim Ryun shattered the world's established mile mark here Sunday covering the distance in three minutes 51 and three-tenths seconds.

The 19-year-old collegian from the University of Kansas took two and three-tenths seconds off the old record held by Michel Jazy of France.

Ryun's record was made before a slim crowd of 1,500 at the University of California's Edward Stadium in the All-American Meet.

Carl Weisiger of San Diego was a distant second in three minutes and 58 seconds.

Ryun led at the end of three quarters and then exploded into a final lap sprint of 56 and three-tenths seconds.

Postal Station Dedicated -But Nothing Happened!

By LEO ZAINEA
State News Staff Writer

Federal postal officials launched the nation's first 24-hour a day sidewalk self-service post office here Friday and all systems were stop.

Before formal dedication ceremonies began, visiting dignitaries and University and federal officials mingled about the six-sided walk-up unit, inspecting the various vending machines, scales and mail chutes.

One of them gingerly placed a dollar into a bill changing machine, and stood waiting for the miraculous process. Nothing happened.

A few persons watching nearby broke into a muffled laugh. Unruffled at the man's consternation, another tried a vending machine for stamps, envelopes, post cards and parcel insurance.

He boldly shoved 80 cents down the slot, pushed a button and--nothing. He cast a foreboding glance at the silent machine. Taking a deep breath he nodded cheerfully to a few area postmasters clustered about, grit his teeth and deposited more money. Again nothing.

An alert member of the Washington post office dedication team rushed over to apologize for the machine and then scurried inside the tiny building to retrieve the money.

"What are you supposed to do when this happens?" he asked with a sardonic grin.

Everyone close strained an ear to catch the chagrined reply. "There's a 'hot-line' phone inside," he said, pointing to the building. "It connects you immediately to the nearest post office--at any hour of the day."

Despite a few small mechanical wrinkles, which accompany most new devices like these, the compact self-service unit was hailed as "a milestone in postal innovation" by Frank Sulewski, assistant to the regional director in Chicago. Sulewski represented Tyler Abel, assistant postmaster general stranded in Washington because of the current airline strike.

The circular shaped unit is located at the pedestrian crosswalk at Farm and Shaw lanes near the heavily-used Shaw Lot bus stop.

The unit provides all basic postal needs at no extra charge. On the outside walls of the building are vending machines for stamps, envelopes, postal cards and even parcel insurance. Scales are available for both letters and packages.

There are mail boxes for letters as well as a parcel post depository. Mailing information is posted, but any "emergency" questions may be asked over a free "hot-line" telephone to a nearby post office manned day and night.

The postal innovation here is a smaller variation of self-service units that have been tested in suburban Los Angeles, Atlanta, Ga., and Washington, D.C. One hundred of the shopping center types will be installed throughout the country within the next seven months.

All have proven to be useful, economical and well accepted, according to postal reports.

Although MSU is the site of the first campus self-service unit others will be opened in the near future at four other schools, including the University of Buffalo and Ohio State University.

"We are determined to see that South Viet Nam is not seized by the North militarily," he said. We have a commitment to see that through. Now they have got to decide themselves how far they're prepared to press that purpose."

Rusk said he did not know whether North Viet Nam actually would accept the recent Warsaw Pact offer to send volunteers if Hanoi requested. But if Hanoi did, he said, "the intrusion of

RUSK TELLS REDS

'Volunteers' Banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Secretary of State Dean Rusk warned the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies Sunday against sending "volunteers" to fight in Viet Nam. "It would be very unwise for them to get involved," he said.

In an exclusive interview with United Press International, Rusk also demanded that North Viet Nam observe "normal, civilized" procedures in dealing with captured American airmen.

As in the matter of outside Communist intervention, he refused to say what the U.S. response might be if Hanoi carried out its threat to try American captives as war criminals.

He declined to speculate about possible retaliation which, he said, "raises some very far-reaching questions."

Rusk was adamant about U.S. determination to stand firm as long as necessary in Southeast Asia. His statement came in response to a question whether there was a "point in your mind over which we cannot step" without bringing Red China into the war.

additional countries in the fighting will be a very serious matter."

He made it clear that worsening relations between Moscow and Washington because of Viet Nam would not cause the U.S. to reduce the scope of its operations there.

"We are going to meet our commitments in South Viet Nam and if there are those who don't like it, it's too bad," he declared.

On threats of "war crimes" trials of U.S. fliers, Rusk said "it is very important for Hanoi to understand that they are expected to comply with the normal, civilized standards in dealing with prisoners."

He added: "Now if Hanoi resorts to barbaric tactics in this matter, it would be a very serious development and we are trying to do everything we can to impress upon them the importance of treating prisoners as the entire world would expect prisoners to be treated."

Rusk said the U.S. still is seeking some evidence of Communist willingness to talk peace, using Canadian and other diplomatic channels, but has found no encouraging response.

Asked whether any special effort was made to persuade North Viet Nam to negotiate before oil storage depots on the outskirts of Hanoi and Haiphong, were bombed, Rusk said that when the bombings were ordered, "we did not see any prospect or any indication that Hanoi was prepared either to make peace or to talk about peace."

Rusk reaffirmed U.S. opposition to Red China's admission to the United Nations, despite President Johnson's declaration last week that the Chinese might change their rigid attitudes if they increased their contacts with the outside world.

Rusk predicted the United Nations this fall again would refuse to admit Peking because of its insistence that Nationalist China be thrown out.

Cavanaugh Fans Meet Tuesday

Students and Faculty for Cavanaugh, a group organized to promote Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanaugh for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in 34 Union.

The meeting's purpose is to sign up volunteers who wish to work on Cavanaugh's campaign on campus and in East Lansing, Frank Tomascik, the group's spokesman, said.

Big 10 Assn. Promotes Student Health Services

MSU is part of an association of student health services formed by the Big 10 schools and the University of Chicago to evaluate and standardize available services.

MSU will be the host school in 1968.

Next summer when the association meets at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill, MSU representatives will discuss budget formats and standardized "services provided" reports.

The schools initiated organization of the Big 10 association three years ago at a meeting of the 250 member American College Health Assn. in Ann Arbor.

Cooke said the mid-western institutions recognized their mutual problems and felt that a channel of communication was needed to be developed in order to discuss them.

The most prevalent differences, he said, were in available services and operating budgets.

Cooke said that while all of these participating schools have out-patient facilities, only a few health centers provide in-patient care. Most schools refer students in need of hospitalization to other facilities, he said.

He explained that the association defines a "student health service" as essentially an out-patient facility.

WHITES GO SLUMMING

West Side Calmer

CHICAGO (UPI)--National Guard troops moved into Chicago's riot-scarred West Side Sunday bent on keeping the predominantly Negro neighborhood peaceful.

Fifteen-hundred men were assigned to the area, the smallest contingent since the Guard was summoned. On previous nights 2,200-man contingents were sent out.

The troops on foot and in jeeps patrolled an area of 130 square blocks. A force of 500 policemen in squad cars roved a larger area--one of approximately 15 square miles.

There were no incidents and no arrests by 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The National Guard took the steam out of the riots Friday and by Saturday night there was nothing to keep them busy. The biggest problem was making progress in traffic jams caused by sightseers who felt it was now safe to tour the slum area where at least two persons were killed, scores injured and hundreds arrested in three nights of rioting.

Stores were looted, buildings and autos burned and thousands of windows smashed in the worst racial outbreak Chicago has seen in decades.

Taverns, liquor stores and pool halls remained closed, but otherwise life on the West Side appeared to be back to normal.

Only nine persons were arrested Saturday night, all charged with disorderly conduct when they refused to obey police orders to move from the streets. Maj. Gen. Francis P. Kane, commander of the 33rd Infantry Division, said his troops should have been called into the trouble area earlier.

"We should have been there the night before," he said, referring to Thursday night when a Negro and a 14-year-old girl were killed and six policemen were shot. The troops entered the area in the early evening and returned to their armory at 3 o'clock on previous nights.

The soldiers again toted bayonet-tipped rifles but did not carry grenades or tear gas as they did Friday night.

Symposium On Hypnosis Opens At Kellogg Today

One hundred years of research has changed hypothesis from suspicious black magic to an increasingly respected tool for the health-care professions.

Today at Kellogg Center more than 100 otometrists, dentists and osteopaths are participating in a post-graduate seminar on the clinical use of hypnosis.

Dr. Ralph J. Spagnuolo, director of the third annual symposium, said that emphasis is placed on the use of hypnosis for contact lens wearers. Other areas being studied are the basic principles of inducing hypnosis, common misconceptions about it, office routine in working with a hypnotized patient, safeguards, and child hypnosis.

The study takes the form of lectures, exhibits and actual demonstrations during which the participants practice what they have learned on each other. Spagnuolo said that the doctors themselves are admittedly apprehensive.

We have learned, said Spagnuolo, that during hypnosis a person is aware of what is going on around him, and cannot be induced to do anything he wouldn't normally do. The examiner and the patient are able to communicate, he said. This refutes the old idea that hypnosis is like going into a coma or unconscious state. As I see it, explained the doctor, the diagnostic and therapeutic uses of hypnosis deal with sharpening a person's senses through suggestion or getting him to relax sufficiently to be treated effectively.

This eye-care aspect of hypnosis is so new that it is only practiced routinely in two states, California and Maryland, said Spagnuolo. However, he and fellow participants, felt that hypnosis is the answer to helping patients who want to be fitted for contact lenses but block progress because of unnecessary fears.

In referring to the uses of hypnosis for helping alcoholics and heavy smokers, Spagnuolo said research has proven it isn't applicable. As a matter of fact, he added, the researcher on smoking hasn't been able to break the habit.

Spagnuolo said that although the clinical aspects of hypnosis are new, because of the breakthroughs they could provide they are eyed with curiosity and respect by many professions. He said that the future undoubtedly will provide for many routine uses of hypnosis in health care.

This two-day symposium is sponsored by the Central Michigan Optometric Center in Lansing.

One of the four educators conducting the symposium is Joseph Reyher, associate professor of clinical psychology here. Reyher has written many books on the subject of hypnosis and psychopathology.

Alumni Study Program Held At Kellogg

This week MSU's campus will be infiltrated, not only by the "greenhorns" here for orientation, but by "oldies"--alumni returning for the Third Annual Alumni Vacation-Study Program.

Entitled "Man--1966," the program will deal with a different aspect of man's existence each day.

Monday the lectures will cover "The Natural Sciences and Man--1966." The speakers will be Thomas H. Osgood, director of Abrams Planetarium, and Armon F. Yanders, assistant dean of Research and Graduate Programs and professor of zoology.

Virgil Scott, Joseph Waldemair and David Kubal, all of the Dept. of English, will discuss "Literature and Man--1966" Tuesday. "History and Man--1966" is Wednesday's topic.

Rains Uncover Dinosaur Bones

CIUDAD MAZQUIX, Mex. (AP)--Heavy rains recently washed away topsoil and exposed the bones of a 25-foot-tall dinosaur believed to be millions of years old, it was reported. One estimate said the skeleton, found near here in northern Mexico, was about 70 million years old.

Police Find Clothes

University Police continued a search Sunday for a man, possibly Donald A. Wilhelm, whose clothes and belongings were found Friday morning on the banks of the Red Cedar River about 20 yards from the Harrison Road Bridge.

Police had no explanation for the appearance of the articles and, due to recent rains, could not estimate how long the clothes had been there. The man who left them might have planned to return for them, they said.

An East Lansing city employee, Ray Lehman, entered the police station shortly before 11 a.m. Friday, reporting he had discovered the articles while marking sewer caps on the campus.

Police found the articles, which were only a 15-second drive from their station, amid the thick shrubbery covering the river bank. The strange assortment of wet clothing was scattered from the top of the bank to the river's edge.

Among the 65 items were two empty wine bottles, a pair of Army khaki slacks, a belt with the name "Donald A. Wilhelm" stamped on the inside, and a pair of eye-glasses. Tickets from the Tiger baseball stadium and a Flint movie theater were also among the belongings.

The empty bottles were "dusted" in an attempt to obtain fingerprints of the unidentified man. Prints were indistinguishable, however, due to a recent rain. Two police officers canoed up and down the river later Friday, attempting to find more information on the man's whereabouts. None was found, however.

University Police contacted several police departments, hospitals, government agencies, and Army units throughout the state. None of the departments called as of Sunday had any record of a Donald Wilhelm.

Police said the clothing fits a man who is 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighs 150 pounds.

Reluctant Miss Universe Decides To Accept Crown

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Miss Sweden, at first reluctant to accept the Miss Universe crown she won Saturday night, said Sunday pageant officials have assured her the year won't be so bad.

"They promised me I wouldn't have to work as hard as I did during rehearsals this week," Margaret Arvidsson said. "I was afraid I'd have to stay in a room all year with a chaperone."

"I was afraid my hands would be tied during the entire year. I was worried that it would be a year of 'do this' and 'do that' and 'be here,'" she said.

Miss Arvidsson, 18, had said earlier in the week she would not accept the title if she won. "But," said the girl after changing her mind, "it will still be bad being away from Sweden so much."

The gray-blue-eyed beauty, who was chosen Miss Photogenic on Wednesday night, broke into tears Saturday night when she won and said: "I am sad. If it is the same as here I won't go through with it."

The daughter of a sea captain, Miss Arvidsson spent two months at sea last winter, the only girl among a 40-man crew on a cargo ship.

"It was stormy during the whole trip," the photographer's model who is called Maggan by her family, said. "But I loved it. I have been going with my father since I was a little girl."

Does Maggan help out with the chores on the ship? "No," she giggled, "the men do it all for me."

Miss Finland, Satu Ofring of Tampere, was named first runner-up in the 15th annual pageant; Miss Thailand, Cherranand Savetanand of Bangkok, was second runner-up; Miss India, Yasmin Daji of Kampur, was third runner-up, while Miss Israel, Aviva Israeli, was fourth runner-up.

Miss Israel's native costume was also judged the best.

Miss Sweden, the first Miss Universe since 1960 to speak English when she was crowned, said she never used the language she studied for five years before coming to the United States.

FOR ARRANGING PEACE TALKS

Soviets Balk At British Plan

MOSCOW (UPI)—Russia squelched British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's bid for Soviet help in arranging Viet Nam peace talks Sunday even before he made his plea.

As Wilson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin exchanged polite banter during a tour of the British Industrial Exhibition here the Communist party newspaper Pravda outlined the Soviet position on Viet Nam.

"Vain are the efforts of some malicious interpreters who assert that peace supporters are going to use this occasion to call for new Geneva talks which would continue indefinitely while the American aggressors carry out their criminal war," Pravda said.

"As long as the U.S. Armed Forces remain on Vietnamese soil and continue their aggression, the only way to talk with them is the language of gun and missiles and their roar."

Wilson, who used the excuse of visiting the Industrial Exhibit to come here and personally press his peace bid, told newsmen Sunday he and Kosygin had not discussed Viet Nam yet and dodged further questions about his peace proposal.

But Wilson's own foreign secretary gave him little chance of success. Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart told American television newsmen in London the Russians have shown no inclination to use their influence with Hanoi to get the talks going.

Wilson wants Russia to join in reconvening the 1954 Geneva Conference as a forum for peace talks. The two nations are co-chairmen of the conference.

He also wants the Soviets to agree to strengthening the International Control Commission—now composed of India, Canada and Poland—as another possible avenue to peace.

Thirdly, he will ask Russia to intervene with North Vietnamese officials to prevent trial of captured American pilots as war criminals. Hanoi has threatened such trials which would surely spark violent reaction in the United States and possibly lead to further escalation of the war.

Soviet officials turned down similar bids from Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi during her visit here which ended Saturday and gave no indication of changing their position at Wilson's urging.

His insistence on coming to personally press his position has caused only embarrassment to the Russians and he has been treated with respectful coolness.

He attempted to give British enterprise and products the hard sell during the industrial exhibit tour with Kosygin Sunday, but the Soviet Premier kept telling him the prices were too high.

In addition to squelching his peace hopes, Pravda also used the occasion of Wilson's visit to carry articles accusing his government of "collusion" with the government of Premier Ian Smith in Rhodesia in suppressing the freedom of blacks in that country.

Gemini 10

second cushion Gemini 10 has to make it—was dictated by the attempt to have Young and Collins rendezvous first with their new Agena satellite and then later with the lifeless Agena orbited four months ago for Gemini 8.

A delay of more than 28 minutes in the Atlas-Agena launch would force a two-day postponement. A slip of more than 35 seconds in the launch of Gemini after Agena reaches orbit would also delay the mission two days.

If the Agena fails to reach orbit, as has happened in two out of three previous tries, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would send Young and Collins after the Agena 8 satellite on Wednesday.

Besides the ambitious try to rendezvous with two different Agenas, the Gemini 10 mission is packed with two periods of outside space activity—a spacewalk and a "space stand"—and 14 experiments.

It will be the second orbital voyage for Young a 35-year-old Navy commander who first flew as copilot on Gemini 3 last year. Collins, an Air Force major and also 35, is making his first venture into space.

British Pound Test Today

LONDON (UPI)—Britain's pound sterling, battered but still not devalued by a government reported determined to stand firm, faces its first major test today since London stock markets plunged to crisis levels last week.

The eyes of the entire financial world were focused on this morning's opening of international foreign exchange markets as British government experts completed plans to overcome what has become one of the nation's gravest financial crises since World War II.

54 Resource Experts Attend Workshop Here

Despite the air strike that clipped the wings of many travelers last week, 54 community resource development experts from the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, and Nigeria arrived in East Lansing for a workshop conference.

The participants had to hop busses and trains to get here. Some hitch-hiked.

This second annual workshop is sponsored by the Michigan Cooperative Extension Service and the MSU Dept. of Resource Development through a grant from the Federal Extension Service of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

The workshops were initiated for improving the social and economic opportunities for people in their home community, said William J. Kimball, the project's coordinator.

He said he had always sensed a lack in community development, and was pleased to accept federal cooperation in establishing an improvement project which would provide a learning experience for workers who have responsibilities in community resources.

Kimball said that the 1966 program which began July 11 and will end this Friday focuses on the appropriate framework for initiating community development. It was planned, under his direction, by an eight state National Guidance Committee.

The scope of the workshop includes providing more jobs in a community, better pay, better community services in education and job opportunities and improved leisure time facilities.

MANHUNT FOR SPECK

Publicity- Helpful Or Unfair

CHICAGO (UPI)--Criminal law experts disagreed on the propriety of the decision by the Chicago Police to announce they had identified a man they were convinced was the killer of eight student nurses.

reference Saturday that he had no doubt an itinerant seaman named Richard B. Speck, 25, was the man who stabbed and strangled the eight girls in their townhouse apartment last Thursday.

he was not allowed to see his attorney while in police custody. Wolfson said it was "unfortunate" Wilson had released the following details:

The intended victim has identified his photograph and as far as I'm concerned, there's no question he's the murderer."

Nurse Calls Speck 'Gentle'

HANCOCK, Mich. (UPI) -- A nurse who met a "very pleasant" Richard Speck in a hospital here this spring said Sunday he returned to visit her three weeks ago with "a hatred in him."

ther her job as a nurse was linked in Speck's mind with the choice of eight nursing students as the victims of the crime of which he is accused--their murder.

But he never wrote after leaving Hancock June 27, she said. Speck and Miss Laakaniemi "went to the beach and we went out to dance" during his June visit, she said. He stayed at a local hotel.

Speck's Nurse Friend Of Massacre Survivor

Michigan State Patrolman R. L. Carstens said Speck, a tattooed seaman, suffered an appendicitis attack aboard a Great Lakes ship. He was taken off and rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital in this Lake Superior city May 3.
