Inez Slashes Keys, Then Heads For Gulf

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Hurricane Inez, the end of her murderous rampage nowhere in sight, slashed through the Florida Keys Tuesday and then burst into the Gulf of Mexico and new targets for her wild winds.

Churning backward from the heart of the Bahamas, the vicious, unpredictable storm whiplashed 650 square miles of sea and shore with screaming winds and slashing rain.

Along southeast Florida's coast from Fort Lauderdale to Miami, power transformers blew in showers of green sparks, and foaming surf cut streets and highways in half.

Inez shook fruit off the trees and tore at ground crops in Dade County, where farms north and south of Miami produce an estimated $5 million worth of food per year. John Frederick, president of the Dade County Farm Bureau, said Tuesday it was too early to assess the damage.

"There's been quite a bit of damage,"

he said. "There's a lot of fruit on the ground, and damaged plants."

Winds gusted up to 109 miles an hour at Plantation Key as the strong side of the storm struck. Gusts of better than a 100 m.p.h. battered Key Largo and Tavernier in brief spurts.

Charles Taylor, 17, wading in the thundering surf in Fort Lauderdale, was knocked down by a huge wave and disappeared. Police said they feared he drowned, but the body was not found immediately.

Two elderly Miami Beach residents - Isaac Buzy, 84, and Miriam Radin, 74 - collapsed and died of apparent heart attacks while trying to rig shutters at their homes.

Seventy-mile-an-hour gales and mountainous waves beached the 82-foot Coast Guard cutter Point Thatcher on a jetty just off the resort row of Miami Beach.

Then in a heroic act that adversity often prompts, 50 to 75 men, women and children waded into the towering surf and formed a human chain to help the stranded Coast Guardsmen reach the safety of shore.

With top winds hitting a 90 mile clip at Key Largo, the start of the 100-mile - long necklace of Keys that leads from Florida to just off Cuba's coast, Inez was only a shadow of the storm that killed possibly hundreds in the Caribbean.

Outside of widespread power failures - 30 percent in Miami - and the numergency of shredded shrubbery and uprooted trees, there was little substantial damage. No cases of structural damage were reported.

In the low-lying Keys, which can stand the winds but get plastered by the water, Inez hit at low tide. The main artery, U.S. 1, was cut by driving surf and rolling debris at several points. But flooding was minor.

The disaster coordinator for the Florida Insurance Department, Bruce Caswell, made a quick survey behind Inez as she rumbled south and announced that the storm was doing little damage to property in Florida.

The main reason, the Weather Bureau said, is that Inez is no longer a major hurricane.

Sigma Nu waives national 'white clause'

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

A clause in the national Sigma Nu constitution barring Negroes from membership in the fraternity does not apply to the MSU chapter, the president of the local chapter said.

The national convention of Sigma Nu voted in August to retain the "white clause" but the Michigan State chapter, in compliance with University policy, has held a waiver from the national clause since 1962.

The by-laws of the MSU Board of Trustees prohibit the existence on the MSU campus of any fraternity, sorority, student organization or club that in its constitution discriminates against potential members on the basis of race, color, national origin or ancestry.

The office for student activities asks the national organization of each fraternity and sorority to affirm in a written letter that the MSU chapter will not practice discrimination as defined in the by-law.

One other local chapter affected by the University by-law, Alpha Tau Omega (ATO) is in the process of removing any discriminatory clauses from its national constitution, Edwin Reuling, assistant director for student activities, stated.

The office for student activities periodically requests national organizations to send them their constitutional changes and reaffirm a non-discriminatory policy, Reuling said.

A fraternity charged with discrimination would be investigated first by the Interfraternity Council, then by ASMSU and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. The faculty committee would send its recommendations to the board of trustees through President Hannah.

No charges of discrimination have been brought against any fraternity since the 1962 by-law was passed, Reuling said.

The vote on the "white clause" in the Sigma Nu national convention was prompted by Duke University's refusal to accept waivers similar to those accepted at MSU.

Duke University, Durham, N.C., recently indicated that the Sigma Nu chapter there would be expelled if the clause were not removed from the national constitution. Duke would not accept a local waiver from the clause.

The Negro exclusion clause should be voted out of the national constitution within a few years, Wade Fletcher, president of MSU.

Milliken says far right doomed in Michigan

William G. Milliken, Michigan Lieutenant governor, told MSU students Tuesday afternoon that the Republican party must face two challenges in the future if it is to survive.

First, the party "must face up to the problems of cities because that's where the people and the major problems facing state governments are, and second, we face the challenge to provide equal opportunity for every man and woman in Michigan," he said at a campaign stop at the MSU Union.

Milliken added that these challenges spell doom to the right wing of the Republican party in Michigan.

"There is no place in the party for organizations like the John Birch Society because they simply want to use the party as a mechanism for their own benefit. Their aims are foreign to the aims and goals of the party," he said.

However, Milliken said it was essential that conservatives, moderates and liberals be admitted to the party for an adequate dialogue which must be maintained within the party itself for effective action.

Lukens resigns from ASMSU

ASMSU's Vice-president of Student Services has resigned from his Cabinet post due to a conflict with his fall schedule.

Bill Lukens, Chicago, Ill., junior, plans to continue his involvement in student government, but feels he wouldn't do justice to his position if he continued to serve with his present course outline.

Petitioning will begin Wednesday.

U.S.-Soviet airline talks to resume

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming long-stalled negotiations on direct New York-Moscow airline service.

If a final agreement is reached, jet flights between the two cities are expected to begin late next spring.

A State Dept. spokesman, announcing immediate resumption of the talks, said Monday night the decision gives "positive meaning to our frequent statements that we seek areas of agreement with the Soviet Union in spite of differences arising out of the Vietnamese conflict."

An agreement was reached tentatively five years ago, but U.S. officials announced Aug. 21, 1961, the United States would not sign it "in view of the international situation." The announcement came as the Communists began building the wall dividing the city of Berlin.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko are understood to have agreed in New York two weeks ago to re-open the talks.

"The air transport agreement is perhaps the one area where we can make progress in a demonstrable and forthcoming fashion without raising broader considerations of national policy," Robert J. McCloskey, State Dept. press officer, said.

McCloskey said talks between Pan American Airways, the U.S. carrier, and the Aeroflot, the Soviet-owned line, will resume next week.

FOR PHYSICALS

Draft Boards may call men in 26-35 bracket

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Selective Service System spokesman said Monday night state directors have been requested to instruct local draft boards to have all men between ages 26 and 35 in classes 1-A and 1-A-0 who have liability because of deferment forwarded for pre-induction examination at armed forces centers.

The spokesman said the instruction went out 10 days or two weeks ago, although there was no previous public disclosure.

He said that as of Aug. 31, men still liable to be drafted because of previous deferments - even though they are in the age group 26-35 - had been examined and 28,153 had been found qualified for military service.

To complete the inventory, local boards were asked to forward the remaining 41,780 men in this age group for pre-induction examination.

The spokesman said that as of now, no men over 26 are being inducted for military service but the inventory of those aged 26-35 will give an indication of how many men in that group might be available and qualified for military service if they are needed.

These men would be in what is known as the fifth category of call. Presently men in the fourth category, those who married in recent years during a period in which married men were automatically granted deferment, are in some cases being inducted.

Hershey supports pacifists' strength of convictions

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) -- The director of the Selective Service says that if he found it morally impossible to accept the nation's policies, he would go to jail rather than serve in the Armed Forces.

Speaking Monday night to a largely hostile audience at the Yale University Law School, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey answered questions dealing with the Viet Nam conflict and with the draft system he heads.

Asked what he would do if he were of draft age and found he would be forced to perform military acts he "found morally impossible to support," Hershey said, "In order to maintain your dignity, you'd have to go to the penitentiary."

When Hershey entered the hall, he was greeted by light hissing. When he finished, he received an ovation from about two-thirds of the audience.

He suggested that those opposed to the draft "should change the law, rather than hammer the administrator over his head for doing his duty."

Draft test to be given again here in November

Students who missed the Selective Service Test here last May will have another opportunity in November.

The Selective Service Qualification Test is to be administered on the MSU campus Saturday, Nov. 19, at a location to be announced later. Test application blanks can be obtained at 207 or 339B of the Student Services Building.

To clarify some facts and dispel some of the many rumors that have been floating about the campus, Col. Dorsey R. Rodney, campus draft consultant, said:

"I would advise students that haven't taken the test to go ahead and take it. Students who have already taken the test, however, will not be allowed to take it again."

Student deferment recently has been, and will continue to be, largely dependent upon two main factors: class standing and the student's performance on the test. If a student does well on the test and has a good academic standing in respect to the rest of his class, chances are that he will receive a student deferment.

This, of course, is not a set rule, because other factors must be considered; for instance, the student's position in respect to his schedule for graduation.

PARKING PROBLEMS

Ramp to ease N. Campus woes

By BOBBY SODEN
State News Staff Writer

North campus parking could be on its way to normal by next fall with the completion of most of the six construction jobs now causing the critical shortage. With some 500 fewer parking spaces available on north campus than last year, many drivers are being forced to park in lots south of the Red Cedar and walk to their place of work.

A solution will come primarily with the new five-story parking ramp behind Bessey, according to Harold W. Lautner, Director of Campus Planning and Maintenance. The 576-car ramp is scheduled for completion by August, 1967.

Temporary relief should come almost immediately in the form of about 100 unpaired parking spaces near the site of the old power plant, Lautner said. The area where the coal bins and water reservoir once stood will be ready to park cars as soon as it is levelled and steel wreckage is removed. The office portion of the old plant, when razed, will also accommodate a limited number of cars.

Lautner explained that the real parking trouble exists within an oblong area from Wilson Road on the south to East Circle Drive on the north, and from Farm Lane on the east to Red Cedar Road on the west.

There are, however, no scarcity of proposals for alleviating the parking situation from the Office of Campus Planning. The problem is rather one of finance.

Parking ramps are expensive propositions, as supported by Lautner's estimate that the new ramp behind Bessey will cost $2,000 per parking space.

Eight possibilities for future ramps exist, four on each side of the Red Cedar River, Campus Planning maps show.

After completion of the ramp behind Bessey, construction of a next ramp between the International Center and the Engineering Bldg. will be considered. The enormous number of persons moving to the new Language-Math Bldg. make this area a potential trouble spot.

The other six ramp possibilities will be considered in the future on the basis of need. Several of the old class buildings near the present Administration Bldg.

will be demolished, reducing the need for further parking facilities.

The All-University Traffic Committee's most important contribution to the cramped parking situation was abolishing the faculty-staff reserved parking spaces, utilizing much of north campus parking.

The end of individual reserved spaces came early last summer, after it was found they were not being used enough to warrant the space, said James Tanck, Waterford, Wis., graduate student, and a member of the All University Traffic Committee.

Tanck said he personally felt the north campus parking shortage was critical enough that the traffic committee had been almost forced to choose between graduate employe permits and the individual reserved space system.

The University Police will conduct a traffic survey in Lot G in the near future to determine how much it is being used, Tanck said.

University Needs More Buses on Weekends

Last weekend a resident of the East Campus complex complained. "I waited forty minutes Saturday for a bus. The first one came after 20 minutes, but it was packed with about 125 people and didn't stop. The next one had only 100, so the driver stopped."

It is too early to tell whether last weekend's packed buses near East Campus will be the rule for future weekends.

But the number of buses running on weekends has not increased since the fall of 1964.

Buses still run at 20 minute intervals.

In the same period the number of students living in the East Campus has increased by 2600.

Other indications point toward an upswing in bus usage. Reports show that buses are carrying an average of 47,000 students on class days--up 15,000 from last year.

If this heavy usage proves to be the rule rather than the exception on weekends, we suggest the university add to the Circle-Fee route.

If this is done, the extra buses will be directed toward the area exerting the added pressure--the growing East Campus.

Ferlinghetti 'Ban' Was 'U' Blunder

One month ago, many students might have thought Ferlinghetti was anything from a folk singing duo to an Italian food.

Today, they know he is a poet. They know because the Administration wouldn't let him read on campus. The old story.

The popular theory sped heavenward that Ferlinghetti was banned because the Administration didn't like Zeitgeist, the off-campus magazine that sponsored him. The Speech Dept. had agreed to allow Zeitgeist to use their Arena Theater for the paid-admission event.

But the Administration said that an unrecognized group could not hold a profit making activity on campus.

There was no reason to even suppose that Zeitgeist would break even, much less make a profit. Zeitgeist lost money on four previous sponsorships of poets in East Lansing.

But the Administration is right.

Blind observance

MSU Ordinance 30.00: "No person, firm or corporation shall...sell or offer for sale tickets for goods, activities or services...within the boundaries of MSU..."

Exceptions to this rule are "fund-raising events sponsored by registered student organizations, living units and major governing groups" (which must also be approved by ASMSU).

So the Administration is right--technically.

And blindly. For what was the law intended? If it was enacted to keep students safe from ice-cream trucks dashing all over campus and to prevent sidewalk vendors from cluttering up the campus, it might be rationalized.

But when it bars a noted poet from campus, that is another story.

Ferlinghetti is required reading now in ATL 113. He is a literary figure of some dimensions. He is part of a student's education.

The Speech Dept. felt that it would be in keeping with its educational role in the University to expose students to Ferlinghetti.

Rules and order are necessary.

But how can a University allow a rule to prevent such an educationally and intellectually important event from taking place on campus?

The University, not a movie theater, is supposed to be a hub of intellectual life.

Readers' Mind

MSU denies culture

To the Editor:

Andrew Mollison was probably justified in noting that not all of the individuals who waited outside the State Theatre came for purely esthetic reasons. I am sure that a good many hoped to hear Lawrence Ferlinghetti so that they might also be included as members of what you termed the "infolk" (whatever that means).

The essential point I wish to make was captured by the State News photo of the people waiting in line to see Ferlinghetti. I am right in the middle of that line. Seeing myself in the paper waiting, reminded me of yesterday's disappointment and prompted me to voice my feelings.

Your article failed to mention that hundreds of students, myself included, did not have the opportunity to hear Mr. Ferlinghetti. I think that I speak for many people when I express my dismay and sour disappointment. Once again my university has failed me.

Mr. Fuzak's decision, barring Mr. Ferlinghetti's appearance on this campus, because of the administration's refusal to recognize Zeitgeist, is outrageous. The rather dubious distinction of that "recognition" prevented the poet from utilizing the more adequate facilities of the campus.

Zeitgeist has, in the past year, sponsored the appearance of four poets and has been the outlet for the work of many MSU students. Whether or not the administration agrees with Zeitgeist's literary complexion is not the salient point.

If the University feels that by "recognizing" Zeitgeist, it is condoning or agreeing with its contents, then the whole idea of University recognition should be dropped. This point of recognition reminds me of the reluctance of certain members of the United Nations to "recognize" Red China. Indeed, it seems rather fatuous that a force representing 745,000,000 people is ignored.

Can the administration afford to ignore the contributions that Zeitgeist is trying to make to this academic community? I believe it cannot.

Zeitgeist has not applied for recognition as a student organization--Eds.

Proud of students

To the Editor:

One of the most typical and continuing concerns on the various campuses I have encountered, throughout my years as an undergraduate and graduate student, and as a faculty member at another university, has been the problem of "student apathy".

On September 28, another faculty member and myself announced to our classes that training and practice in play therapy techniques with emotionally-disturbed children would be available to interested undergraduate students. Where I had hoped for possibly 5 or 6 volunteers, by the afternoon of the 29, over 40 students had contacted me and had asked to participate in the project.

Such a response suggests that students will seek out and participate in programs that (1) will yield personal gains, knowledge and experience and (2) will yield a demonstrable effect on others, on the immediate community and on society in general.

I am proud of these students and hope that other projects can be developed that can make productive use of their interest and drive, and, I am sure, the interest and drive of most of the student body.

Eisenhower Has All The Answers

Former President and now Elder Statesman Dwight D. Eisenhower has called for a quick end to the Viet Nam war.

"I would do anything that would bring the war to an honorable solution as rapidly as I could," Eisenhower told newsmen Monday.

Asked whether he included the use of nuclear weapons, Eisenhower replied: "I would not automatically preclude anything."

What method could bring a war to a close more "honorably" than the use of nuclear weapons? One is tempted to ask.

And what could bring about a more effective and satisfying "solution"?

"If I had the responsibility," Eisenhower continued, "just as soon as I could I would bring this thing to a conclusion."

"Everything must take a back seat to winning a war and that goes for social programs," the General continued.

If this doesn't make our friends in Asia (assuming we have some) jump up and shout "I like Ike" -- what will?

Further news reports reveal that Ike also advocated stern steps to deal with crime and violence.

"I think the Republicans ought to take the strongest possible position to remove this curse," the ex-President and statesman said.

One wonders about the answer to the unasked, but implied question.

Does Ike advocate the use of nuclear weapons against muggers?

The year of the challenge

The school year 1966-67 will be the year of the challenge for Michigan State.

The reason? Simple. With the exception of athletics, MSU had a difficult year last year. To use a little collegiate jargon, MSU publicly "lost its cool."

First, there was the Paul Schiff affair, which began in July and ended in January with Schiff surprisingly being readmitted. From start to finish, the University was on the defensive. By readmitting Schiff before a Federal court had decided the case, and not long after the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs had refused him, the University appeared at least inconsistent in its actions.

Then there was the sensationalized, but partially valid, article in Ramparts magazine which savagely attacked a project MSU sponsored in Viet Nam in the middle and late 50s.

The University's biggest blunder was not in the project itself, though mistakes certainly were made. It had been terminated years before the Ramparts article was written, and the nature of our international projects had since been modified and improved.

The problem was in the University's public response to the assault. First, there was none. Then it conflicted with the testimony given by faculty members who had served on the project. Throughout, the University's position was marked by an obvious lack of candor and frankness. Many faculty and students were appalled by the University's handling of the situation.

Resignations

Not long after the Ramparts episode, a number of outstanding faculty members began announcing their resignations, though no correlation between the two has been established.

The Political Science Dept. was hardest hit, losing three full professors, including the chairman of the department. This year the department has been pressed just to offer the courses it did a year ago.

The year also ended in a wave of student unrest, as rioting broke out, without apparent reason, during finals week in several of the large residence hall complexes.

Obvious questions raised were the success and wisdom of the living-learning concept, of massing so many students so close together, and of attempting to accommodate so many students on this campus.

The biggest challenge and brightest hope for this year is adoption of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs report on academic freedom, now before the Academic Council. For the most part, the report is a progressive and pioneering step, despite the committee's apparent rush to finish the report on time.

It recognizes the need for greater and broader student participation in the decision making and operation of this university.

The report also attempts to protect students from arbitrary actions by faculty members and administrators.

It recognizes the growing bureaucratic structure of the University and tries to give students the tools to cut through it.

Finally, it recognizes mounting student concern over the quality of classroom instruction here at MSU -- something too many faculty members are unaware of or conveniently ignore.

Double problem

But the challenge here is twofold. First the report must be adopted without crippling amendments. Second, if adopted, it must be implemented and made workable. For any set of laws, rules, or safeguards are meaningless unless enforced.

Unless the report on Academic Freedom is enforced and made a meaningful part of University operations, much the same will be said of it as was said of the Civil Rights Act of 1957, "Not worth the paper it's written on."

And finally, this will be another year of challenge for the individual student at Michigan State -- but even more so than before. Here, the emphasis is on the individual, not for the personalized treatment he might receive, but for the individual initiative he must display if he is to speak and be heard, if he is to seek and find, and if he is to tap the vast resources of this university, often hidden by its awesome size. At MSU in 1966, to be timid is to be lost.

Some 38,000 students -- more than ever before -- no longer a prestigious goal but a harsh reality.

The year still lies ahead, unproven and yet unspooled. Let's not make it two in a row.

PARIS (AP) -- France set off the fifth atomic blast in its series of South Pacific tests Tuesday over Mururoa Lagoon near Tahiti, the Defense Ministry announced.

The ministry said the blast was the last in the series.

Peace Corps volunteer returned

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A Peace Corps volunteer who was arrested Sept. 11 when he strolled across the Iranian border into the Soviet Union has been released and is in Tehran, the State Department said Tuesday.

scheduled to arrive home Wednesday night. In Annapolis, Dawson's mother greeted the news of her son's release with: "It's just wonderful. I just knew they would release him." Her voice was barely audible because of emotion.

Officials said Thomas R. Dawson, 24, of Annapolis, Md., was permitted to cross the border at Asatara into Iran Monday night. Dawson is

Big railroads to merge

NEW YORK (AP) -- A special federal court gave the green light Tuesday to merger of the New York Central and the Pennsylvania Railroads into one massive $6 billion rail network stretching half way across the continent.

The court voted 2-1 against further delay. A group of smaller lines led by the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad had asked for more time and a deeper look into the financial effect upon them of the merger.

The dissenters were given until Friday to file any notice of appeal. Barring further court intervention, the merger could take place as early as Nov. 1. It had been scheduled for Sept. 3, but the three-man special court deferred it on a temporary basis.

'Howe too radical to lead integration'

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Harold Howe II, the embattled U.S. Commissioner of Education, was told today he was too much the "zealous reformer" to administer a school desegregation law.

Rep. William H. Colmer, D-Miss., citing Howe's outspoken views on the importance of desegregating schools, said the commissioner lacked the objectivity needed for his job.

Howe agreed that "I'm inclined to make strong statements in speeches, believing that you don't have much time and you have to make an impression."

But he said a speech he delivered in New York last March, which contained comments to which Colmer objected, was directed specifically to the problem of urban school districts. The problem there, he said, "is de facto segregation, which is not touched by the guidelines."

He said his speech should not be read as describing his attitude toward Southern schools. "But we have recognized that segregation, however it occurs, created educational disadvantages. And I was trying to get them (the big city school superintendents) to put the problem on their agenda and suggesting possible solutions they might look into."

Howe was back for a second day of questioning before the House Rules Committee, which is looking into the Office of Education's guidelines for withholding federal funds from schools that fail to desegregate.

As he did on the first occasion last week, Rep. Ray J. Madden, D-Ind., termed the hearing "a political inquisition," and a "propaganda sideshow" and said it should be abandoned.

Rep. Powell found guilty in slander suit

NEW YORK (AP) -- Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., has been found guilty of civil contempt for a second time in a defamation of character suit against him. State Supreme Court Justice Harry B. Frank, in his decision Monday, said that if Powell appeared before him Friday, he could avoid a second civil arrest warrant being issued against him.

Early in 1964 the Harlem Negro congressman was found guilty of civil contempt for not paying a $33,000 judgment against him by Esther James, a Negro charwoman whom he called, on a television program, a "bag woman"—a collector of graft for corrupt police.

After failing to collect that sum, Mrs. James filed another suit charging that Powell had transferred ownership of his Puerto Rican home to avoid payment. That judgment stands at about $151,000, including interest.

Vote for more socialism

BRIGHTON, England (AP) -- Prime Minister Harold Wilson won a vote of confidence from his balking Labor party Tuesday for his government's harsh economic policies. He served notice he will use the law to enforce an unprecedented wage-price freeze.

Wilson said his program, assailed by workers, will set the stage for more socialism in Britain. He said the state soon will take over parts of the steel industry and urban building land. The docks will be reorganized on the basis of state ownership, he said.

Those remarks won him cheers at the Laborites' annual convention here.

Wilson demanded revolutionary changes in all sectors of British society beginning with an assault against "conservatism" on both sides of industry. He lashed at leftists and rightists alike for their attitude and foreign currency reserves had halted in September.

To leftists Wilson observed: "We cannot afford to fight the problems of the 60's by seeking vainly to find the answer in Highgate Cemetery."

This is the north London suburb where Karl Marx is buried. The Prime Minister's jibe seemed not to have been appreciated by some of his leftwing Cabinet colleagues like Barbara Castle and Anthony Greenwood, who have long regarded Marxism as the basis of British Socialist thinking.

To rightists and Edward Heath's opposition Conservatives, Wilson said: "Still less shall we find our solution in rightwing doctrines which have been rejected not only by this Labor movement but by the mass of the British people. This is why the Tory party has been reduced to a pathetic irrelevance."

Wilson named "smug conservatism" in all its forms -- meaning stodgy traditionalists who live in the past -- as "the greatest enemy that lies in our path" toward the new Britain.

DIRKSEN PREDICTS

'War will expand soon'

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen predicted today the war in Viet Nam will have to be expanded soon.

However, Dirksen made it clear in an interview he does not expect President Johnson to resort to the use of nuclear weapons--an action GOP former President Dwight D. Eisenhower said he would not "automatically" preclude.

"Things can't go on like they are in Viet Nam," the senator from Illinois said. "You either escalate the fighting or think in some other terms. We can't surrender and we can't retreat."

In predicting that the war will have to be expanded, Dirksen mentioned no troop buildup figures.

He said that the question of nuclear weapons was discussed by the GOP group but only in the context of their possible use "in an emergency, if your back was to the wall and there was nothing else to do."

He supported Dewey's contention that Eisenhower was not advocating nuclear attacks when Eisenhower said "I would do anything that would bring the war to an honorable conclusion as rapidly as I could."

"He simply meant that we shouldn't advise the enemy in advance as to what we are going to do," Dewey said.

This fell short of satisfying Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. He called in an interview for Eisenhower to "produce specifics" on how he would go about ending the war.

The GOP committee urged that "every practical step" be taken to achieve victory but avoided detailing such steps.

Mansfield said Eisenhower "is the best informed man about Viet Nam outside the government. The President has kept in close contact with him through White House meetings, sending representatives to Gettysburg to brief him and in asking for his suggestions and advice."

Mansfield said he does not attribute any political motives to Eisenhower's statements, although they were made at a news conference after a Republican policy meeting.

Although GOP National Chairman Ray C. Bliss said Viet Nam remains the primary concern of voters, Mansfield said the outcome of next month's congressional elections will not "change the course we are now set upon" in Viet Nam.

An advocate of limiting the war, Mansfield stoutly defended in the Senate the honesty of Johnson's pursuit of peace. In an obvious reference to Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Mansfield said it was had enough to have Hanoi, Peking and Moscow question the aims of this month's meeting in the Philippines of South Viet Nam allies without similar downgrading at home.

Meanwhile, others had this to say about military action in Southeast Asia:

--The State Department: Its "information indicates" that Soviet missile specialists in North Viet Nam are limited strictly to training activities.

--Deputy Prime Minister Abdul Razak of Malaysia said with the request of the South Viet Nam government his country would probably send troops to South Viet Nam.

--Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., a leading critic of administration policy: What he called administration silence of the U.S. buildup in Thailand puts Congress in the position of "easily and compliantly--if not enthusiastically--becoming the instrument of the President."

--Former New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey following a meeting of the Republican Coordinating Committee: He understands 100,000 additional American fighting men will be sent to Viet Nam by the end of the year.

'White clause' waived

ident of Duke's Sigma Nu chapter, stated.

Fletcher, a junior, said he knew of only one Negro who has ever gone through Sigma Nu rush since he joined the chapter. That Negro did not pledge, he explained. Fletcher knew of no Negroes who had ever been members of the local Sigma Nu chapter.

Duke University's refusal to accept the Sigma Nu waiver reflects a growing trend among colleges to bring pressure to bear on fraternities and sororities to end discrimination on the basis of race.

A U.S. District Court recently upheld the University of Colorado's suspension of Sigma Chi fraternity's rushing and pledging privileges on campus for violating the school's anti-discrimination rules.

The University of Colorado regents had ordered an investigation of Sigma Chi in April, 1965, after the fraternity's national executive committee suspended a local chapter at Stanford University, Cal., for allegedly failing to keep the ritual and to maintain a clean house.

The Sigma Chi committee acted just before the Stanford chapter was to pledge the first Negro in the national fraternity's 110-year history.

The national organization of Sigma Chi has sent a letter to the MSU office for student activities stating that "there are no stipulations barring anyone from membership because of race, color or religion" in its national constitution.

This satisfies the University by-laws. The University has not brought any charges of discrimination against the local Sigma Chi chapter on the basis of the "social acceptability" clause.

Viet Cong unit pinned by Allies Confidence

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. air cavalrymen, reacting to the destruction of an American helicopter, killed 35 more Communists Tuesday in the allied drive that pens some main-line enemy units in a coastal area north of Qui Nhon.

Hanoi regulars and hard-core Viet Cong were squeezed by land and menaced from the sea. The roll of their fellow dead and captured over three days of battle against American, South Korean and South Vietnamese troops soared to 513.

The American troopers, while killing 326 of the enemy, claimed an unusually high bag of 131 prisoners. That is a ratio of about 2.5 to 1. Ordinarily allied forces have been counting five or six enemy dead for every one they captured.

Sinking morale might account for readiness of those men—the equivalent of a Communist company—to surrender. There was no announcement of any prisoners taken by South Korean and South Vietnamese troops, who had killed 56 in other phases of the drive.

U.S. and Vietnamese patrol boats stood watch offshore to capture any who might try to flee by sampan. One report said North Viet Nam's 61th Division was involved.

Downing of the helicopter set off a heavy firefight. It was the fourth to fall under enemy fire since the air cavalrymen sped in Sunday for Operation Irving. They formed the northern side of a box with Koreans on the south and Vietnamese on the west.

An Air Force F100 Super Sabre was shot down in the Mekong delta about nine miles southwest of Saigon while making a napalm run against guerrilla positions. It was the 12th plane to have fallen from enemy fire in South Viet Nam. There was no word on the fate of the pilot.

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market averages climbed Tuesday but more issues declined than advanced.

The market rallied in the morning, lost its gains around midday and then came back up in heavy trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 Industrials gained 5.23 points at 763.19 after slumping Monday to its lowest level since Dec. 24, 1963. The Associated Press 60-stock average rose .7 of a point to 275.4.

Museum augments its animal display

The past three summer expeditions of the Museum staff have brought the live animal population at the Museum up to two boa constrictors, two iguanas, three ctenosours and 450 cotton rats.

The reptiles, collected on a research expedition in tropical America, are on display on the main floor of the museum and will remain there for the next two or three weeks. Rollin Baker, Museum director, said that the animals are popular, and have been a drawing card for museum browsing.

The rats are not displayed, but are being bred and studies in the laboratory atmosphere of the museum's top floor. The "rat lab" will furnish information about the relatively unknown rodent that has ruined crops and spread disease in Mexico.

The research, an almost unknown entity of the Museum's activities, will help control the rodent and provide detailed facts on its development.

The animals are cared for by two graduate assistants in zoology, Peter Dalby and Michael Petersen. They were among those who accompanied Baker and a faculty member from the University of Texas at El Paso on the field study trip. Their expedition, one of the seven that were undertaken during the summer, was financed by the Natural Science Foundation.

Dalby and Petersen said that the lizards would make good pets. They are quite tame, need little care and are vegetarians.

They said that the reptiles were quite easy to capture. Dalby said that the larger iguana was lassoed by a cowboy as it tried to avoid the researchers by diving into a lagoon.

Ex-Nazi advocates civic duty

A former Nazi political prisoner pleaded with a group of students and faculty members to perform their "civic duty of offering a well-balanced and intelligent public opinion to their government officials in an effort to prevent the rise of a Hitler like dictatorship."

Speaking on "The Weimar Republic and the German Reichstag, 1930-33," Gerhart H. Seger said Germany's "responsibility" for World War II stemmed from the fact that it was ahead of other European countries in many fields, yet behind in politics.

"Not ready for the democratic form of government provided by the Weimar constitution, the German people revolted against their republic," Seger said in his Friday night speech in the Physics-Math lounge.

Although 80 per cent of the general population supported Hitler when he came to power in January, 1933, according to the former Nazi political prisoner, only one-third of the constituent representatives supported his appointment as Chancellor.

"In an effort to obtain the 'vote of confidence' necessary for him to stay in office," Seger said, "Hitler terrorized the opposing government officials and their families on the pretense of Communist infiltration."

"After official confirmation of his title, Hitler began molding the minds of the populace for the historic events which followed by taking over control of all the mass media," concluded the former Weimar Republic official.

Draft information explained

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

University procedures for releasing information to the Selective Service System have changed somewhat from last year.

The University will continue its policy of not releasing any information to the Selective Service concerning students unless the registrar's office to do so by signing the appropriate card at registration.

Registrar Horace C. King explained that this service has been offered to students because MSU starts its fall term much later than most schools.

Many local boards, he said, expect to receive notification of the student's official registration from the University by October 1. However, MSU does not actually complete all of its registration process, including drops and adds, until almost two weeks after that date.

To alleviate this problem, King said, the temporary cards were offered students until the University has completed the registration and drop and add processes.

Official Selective Service System Student Certificates will then be sent to the Selective Service System. These will be mailed within the next thirty days, according to King.

Other details of the University's Selective Service policy remain essentially the same. The Registrar's office makes, for all male students who so request, two reports each year.

Immediately after the registration process ends, the University sends the first report to state offices of the Selective Service System. The report is filed for all full-time students, and includes their name, selective service number, and date that the fall term began.

Under this system, freshmen are defined as those with under 40 credits; sophomores, 40 to 84 credits; juniors, 85 to 129 credits; and seniors, 130 or more credits.

Although the University considers 10 credits or more full time for fee assessments, for Selective Service purposes, it follows national guidelines in defining full-time status as being 12 credits for undergraduates, nine for masters candidates, and six for doctoral candidates.

However, the national Selective Service guidelines state that the student should be making "normal progress" toward a degree.

King cautioned students that this means, for example, that undergraduates can take as few as 12 credits per term, but, if they wish to remain classified as full-time students, would still have to average 45 credits per year.

Though local boards determine whether a student is making normal progress, the University has an established set of guidelines in its class ranking system.

Under this system, freshmen are defined as those with under 40 credits; sophomores, 40 to 84 credits; juniors, 85 to 129 credits; and seniors, 130 or more credits.

King said that data processing forms are used for most students. However, where there are special circumstances, the University files a "long form" in which the special circumstances are explained.

The second report is filed by the University after the end of Spring term. It is filed, according to the Selective Service guidelines for all full-time male, undergraduates, on-campus, degree-program students who have enrolled for and completed twelve credits each term. According to this definition, if a student earns less than 12 credits any one term, he is considered a part-time student and no report is filed for him.

In addition, all visitor credits for which an "N" grade were received do not count toward the 12-credit minimum.

This end of term report includes the number of credits earned to date and the student's class ranking to four decimal places. For example, a student might be ranked as in the top 3.1456 percent of his class.

Although acceptable Class Standings are determined solely by the local board, the national

Selective Service System has suggested the following guidelines for considering a student's draft eligibility:

--Freshmen should be in the upper half of their class.

--Junior should rank in the upper three-quarters of their class.

--Seniors who plan to attend graduate school should rank in the upper one-fourth of their class.

Students who wanted this end of year report submitted for them should have filed a request form at registration.

King emphasized two things. First, the card that most students signed does not authorize a transcript to be sent to the local board. The University will not send a transcript unless the student specifically requests this service in Room 13, Administration Building. A fee is charged for transcripts.

Second, King said, the University neither establishes any of the draft guidelines, nor corresponds with the local boards. The University's sole involvement is to send, and then only when requested by the student.

In addition to these two reports, King said, the University notifies the system of any changes in the student's status during the year, including changes from full-time to part-time status, graduation, or withdrawal.

SCHLESINGER:

'Political parties tools for climbers'

American political parties are office-seeking instruments developed around men's ambitions, said a Michigan State professor of political science in a speech here Monday.

The speaker, Joseph A. Schlesinger, spoke on "Political Careers and Party Leadership." The lecture was the first in a series by the Political Science Dept.

Schlesinger, who received his P.D. at Yale University, compared political parties and their members in five democracies: the United States, Canada, Great Britain, France and Australia.

Politicians, like all men, seek advancement in their careers, he said. Schlesinger wished to determine the type of men each party attracted.

Schlesinger used the age for and the length of previous office-holding as criteria to judge the elected officials of each party.

He divided the parties into four groups, young and experienced, such as the American Democrats; older and experienced, the Republicans; young with little experience, the British Labor party.

Schlesinger said his research findings "fit in with the general perception of the parties' structure."

The speech was based on one delivered by Schlesinger in September to the American Political Science Association's annual meeting held in New York City.

His text is to be included in a collection of articles on political leadership to be published by the Wiley Book Co.

S. Viet guns lack A-warheads

WASHINGTON -- The United States has two nuclear-capability ground weapons in South Viet Nam, but no atomic warheads have been sent to that country, military officials said Tuesday.

They ruled out the likelihood of any tactical nuclear weapons being used in the current military situation. They said the grave political implications would far outweigh military gains.

In the jungle war of Southeast Asia, they added, it is difficult to envision targets suitable for nuclear hits.

But if by some unforeseen circumstance the United States felt desperate enough to draw upon its nuclear arsenal, they said, atomic warheads could be fired from 155mm and 8-inch howitzers now in operation against the Communists.

The warheads are not in Viet Nam, but they could be in the Army's hands in short time, officers said in interviews. The same applies for air and naval forces.

The question of whether nuclear arms should be used in Viet Nam rose again this week with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's statement that he would take "any action" and "would not automatically exclude anything" in efforts to end the war quickly and honorably.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara told a House appropriations subcommittee last spring he didn't want to state categorically such weapons would never be employed in Viet Nam, "but I cannot conceive of a situation which would require their use in either of those countries."

The administration fears that such a radical turn of the military effort might draw Red China or Russia into the war.

Officers hasten to point out that the decision rests not with the military but with the President. For that reason they are extremely hesitant even to discuss the possibility of nuclear war in Viet Nam.

"I would be dubious about the use of atomic weapons in South Viet Nam in any fashion," one officer said. Their devastation, he explained, would quite likely claim civilians among whom the Viet Cong operate.

"You don't succeed in your effort to win the hearts and minds of men by blowing a few of them up," he said.

If pressed, Pentagon officers speculate that atomic explosions might be used to seal off with massive eruptions of earth certain infiltration routes such as the Mu Gia Pass along the North Viet Nam-Loas border.

B-52 bombers have flown a number of missions and have dropped thousands of bombs in attempts to close down the Mu Gia Pass, but the North Vietnamese manage to get through.

Students fined in liquor case

Three 18-year-old men, one of them a student, pleaded guilty Monday to charges of minors in possession of alcoholic beverages, University Police said.

Receiving fines and costs of $49 in Lansing Township Justice Court were Eric J. Howell, a new student; Bruce H. Everson, of Bay City; and Scott W. Trych, 18, of Midland.

The three were arrested early Sunday morning near Beaumont and Forrest, police said.

A 'giant' in forced seclusion

MOSCOW (AP) - The countryside around Moscow has had a magnificently sunny summer, and now autumn leaves brighten the rolling hills.

Appreciation of the rural Russian scenery is marred for one country squire, however. NIKITA S. Khrushchev lives quietly with the beauty of nature, but not out of choice.

In the two years since he was ousted from power, Khrushchev has spent his time walking, putting in a garden, doing a little hunting in the birch and pine woods and reading.

He has been reading widely, from newspapers and Russian history to the memoirs of Charles de Gaulle.

Occasionally he is visited by old friends who still remember the ebullient, earthy little man who rattled nuclear rockets at the world. Those are personal friends rather than the colleagues who turned unexpectedly on him Oct. 14, 1964, and stripped him of the Soviet premiership and Communist party leadership.

About 20 friends drove out to Khrushchev's country villa last April 17 to help him celebrate his 72nd birthday with a barbecue. It rained.

His four children go out frequently to visit Khrushchev and his wife, Nina Petrovna, 66, The grandchildren - five at last report - romp on the lawn.

The Khrushchevs are comfortably pensioned in a pleasantly spacious house near the village of Petrovsky Daliye, about 25 miles west of Moscow.

It lacks a heated swimming pool or an indoor badminton court, such as Khrushchev enjoyed at the premier's country homes. But it is good enough for a former Soviet Communist party boss - or, for that matter, for a retired capitalist. It is far better than anyone except a member of the Communist elite, a top scientist or a few leading artists can expect in the Soviet Union.

The Khrushchevs also have an apartment in downtown Moscow three-quarters of a mile from the Kremlin. Mrs. Khrushchev uses it occasionally on shopping trips.

Her husband rarely goes there - because he still attracts a crowd. The new leaders apparently do not like that. They provide a chauffeured car, and the chauffeur may have other duties than simply taking instructions from the passenger.

Khrushchev has come to town twice to vote. The first time, exactly five months after his ouster, was carefully arranged by the authorities. It proved that he was well and living peacefully, but he looked like a man eating himself up with frustration.

His most recent appearance was at the parliamentary elections June 12. Khrushchev voted for his successor, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin. With the expiration of his own term in Parliament, Khrushchev lost his last official job.

Khrushchev said then that he had been sick. "But everyone gets sick now and again," he added.

For others, the memories of Khrushchev are fading fast. Except for a few mentions in histories and museums, the name of Nikita S. Khrushchev has disappeared. The pictures are gone, and the countless volumes of his endless speeches have vanished.

And he is left with the bright leaves of autumn - and the cold wind of approaching winter.

Female ex-GI from Thailand at MSU

By TRINKA CLINE
State News Staff Writer

Dynamite comes in small packages, and so do Thailand's army lieutenants.

Poranie Sthitvong--all 5'3" of her--spent four years in the Thai army, practicing on the salute and taking her turn on the rifle range to attain the rank of first lieutenant.

A graduate student at Michigan State, Poranie says she is the only daughter in her family to serve in the army. Her brother, who is interning in a Philadelphia hospital, spent some time in the air force.

One sister began to study art and is now married. Her younger sister has earned her bachelors degree in economics and accounting and is teaching in a Thai university.

After the required month of basic training, Poranie worked in the mapping service, constructing maps from aerial photographs.

The rank of second lieutenant came after Poranie mastered the salute and exhibited her marksmanship, followed soon by one final promotion. Poranie, however, reports her target eye is not so keen as it was then.

Before coming to MSU three years ago, Miss Sthitvong taught mathematics at Csulalongkorn University. At the suggestion of university officials, Poranie applied for United Nations sponsorship to study in America. She passed the language exams and left Bangkok for Michigan.

Two years of her stay have been under the aid of the UN, but Poranie is now studying on her own. Last year she earned her master's degree in mathematics and statistics. Winter term Poranie will receive her master's in education and leave to teach in Thailand once again.

In Bangkok, Poranie's favorite hobbies were tennis, swimming and cards, activities she finds no time for here.

Poranie Sthitvong

MSU professors? She finds them "so nice and good. And, they try to understand when I do not speak too clearly."

Poranie's return to Thailand several months from now will not end her interest in the United States, because she plans to come back again.

Other universities taking part in TAP are the University of Michigan, Wayne State University, Western Michigan, Northern Michigan, Central Michigan and Eastern Michigan universities.

Educators to meet at Kellogg

Area elementary and secondary educators will participate in a conference dealing with the Technical Assistance Project (TAP) for disadvantaged children Thursday and Friday at Kellogg Center.

MSU, one of seven state universities taking part in TAP, will be host of the first regional conference under the new program, according to Melvin Buschman, assistant director of continuing education.

"Too little to eat or to wear, impaired health and family troubles often are at the root of learning problems," Ira Polley, state superintendent of public instruction, said recently. Children with such problems will be getting help from MSU and their local school districts soon through TAP.

Initiated by the State Board of Education under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act passed last spring, TAP is an effort to meet "the special health, nutritional and environmental needs of the students," Polley said. "Through the TAP project we are tapping the resources of the state universities to help local districts."

Several MSU departments and colleges will send representatives to the conference. Proposals will later be drawn up for specific projects under the TAP program.

HPR sponsors
dance classes

Fall term dance classes for children in kindergarten through senior high school will be sponsored by the Dept. of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

Registration will be held from 4-5:30 p.m., Oct. 7 in the Women's Intramural Building. The seven-week program will begin Oct. 14. There is a registration fee of 25 cents.

Rebellious students defy police

Riots on Campus

Third in a series

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

"It was the cops' fault," Ask a student involved in the finals week "riot" of Spring term. That's what he'll say.

"Sending those 250 policemen to surround the Brody Group
Wednesday of finals week fired up the crowds of students more than breaking them up."

The situation doesn't look that simple, however, to the sociologists, the advisers and the deans who have been checking into what happened finals week.

"A crowd must have a symbol to focus on. They need an authority to lay the blame on,"
James S. Hundley, assistant professor of sociology, explained.

"By being on the scene the police represented the authority of the administration, the nasty faculty members or whoever else
the students connected with their gripes," he said.

Why were the policemen there?
Two outbreaks, one in the Brody area and one on southeast campus, had occurred the night before.

The southeast outbreak at 1
a.m. the first night was "vicious," according to Richard O.
Bernitt, director of public safety.

Men rally at McDonel
About 80 men students gathered outside McDonel, threw rocks, chanted obscenities and shouted "Kill the cops."

"The University Police didn't retaliate as far as I saw," Donald Adams, director of residence hall programs, said.

"They just left the crowd alone.
They went for reinforcements."
"After the difficulty controlling the crowd at Holmes and McDonel, the night before, the only alternative was to get ready to call in help sooner if trouble broke out again," John A. Fuzak, vice president for student affairs, said.

Handling of any further outbreaks was given to the police alone.

"Students don't realize the chances they take in mob action. They don't realize how quickly the mood of a crowd
can switch," Fuzak said.

"You don't know what might have happened if the police hadn't been put on the alert and then called out," he said.

From interviews with spectators, participants and advisers,
Hundley and an assistant pieced together the story of what did happen when police were called out.

Students sense trouble
"The kids knew something was up Wednesday," Hundley said.
"They saw the RAs were edgy.
They saw men in suits standing around in the dining hall."

Quite a few students reasoned that if they were expected to do something, they might as well

do it, Hundley said.

Wednesday was hot. Students left the Brody grill and their rooms to cool off. As the crowd grew, more people showed up.

At 10 p.m. most of the students in the grill went outside.

"You might say the students were flattered they were important enough to rate so many police," Hundley said. "The students wavered between going back inside as they were asked or staying outside, but more police kept coming and it got to be a big deal."

As motorcycle police drew up,
students cheered. It was a game.

Some said they wanted to make Hundley-Brinkley the second night in a row, Art Tung, member of ASMSU Student Board,
said.

Chain reaction effect
Each time more police arrived, more students left the halls to see what was going on.
Before the evening was over the crowd grew to about 900.

About 250 police showed up,
most, like the University Police,
with hard helmets and small riot sticks. The East Lansing Police carried gas masks, but they brought no tear gas.

"Some kids yelled, 'Hey, let's see what tear gas smells like,'"
Tung said.

Lansing Police carried no
sticks or clubs.

Trainees among the state troopers were called out. The state troopers carried the needed equipment, one trooper said.

"I found no animosity against the University Police, but the students seem to hate the East Lansing Police," Hundley said.

"And they hate East Lansing businessmen who they say treat
students like dirt and jack up the prices."

The student has the feeling the East Lansing community treats
him like a second-class citizen, and he resents it, Hundley said.

COMMITTEE

Wage report due

The first report of the Compensation Committee set up by an all-University referendum spring term will be presented to the major student governing groups Oct. 14.

The committee will determine whether to pay student government officials, whom to pay, and how they shall be paid.

Ralph Faust, Berwyn, Ill., senior and chairman of the committee, urges all students to express their opinions and suggestions to their major governing group representatives.

"I want everyone to know that we are considering it now," Faust
said.

Suggestions and opinions will be considered and possibly incorporated by the committee with information they have investigated, Faust said.

The final report of the committee is due Oct. 21. Both dates were established in the constitutional amendment passed by the students in the spring referendum. The amendment only stated that the decision of the committee may be appealed only by a petition for a ballot by 10 per cent of the qualified voters in the student body.

The Compensation Committee is composed of representatives of the six major governing groups.

Members of the committee are:
Bill Motz, Men's Hall Assn.
(MHA); Pat Stone, Women's Inter - Residence Council (WIC);

Student gov't for freshmen

Freshmen interested in working for the student government are urged to attend a meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Con-
Con Room of the International Center, reports Steve Keen, director of ASMSU's personnel development division.

The Board chairman, Cabinet
president and vice-presidents will give brief speeches discussing their respective student government areas.

Petitioning will be held after the meeting for positions in the student government.

Jim Halverson, Interfraternity Council (IFC); Janet Bufe, Pan
Hellenic Council (Pan Hel); Phil
Kraushar, Inter - Cooperative
Council (ICC); and Peggy Hill, Off Campus Council (OCC).

Persons qualified by the constitutional amendment for compensation consideration are members of the Student Board and the president and four vice presidents of the Cabinet.

The amendment also specifies that no more than two per cent of the previous year's student tax may be used for compensation.

Contest deadline set

Organizations that have not received information concerning the Homecoming Queen contest can still obtain entry details
by contacting Gary Brey, chairman of the queen contest, at 337-1721.

An Oct. 10 deadline has been set for the contest, sponsored by

ASMSU's Special Project
division.

For information concerning displays for Homecoming, call Sue Higbee, display chairman, at 332-5001.

Executive secretary Maureen

Professional Qualification Test—A prerequisite to qualify for a career position with the National Security Agency.

WHEN: December 10, 1966
(Get a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office)

If you expect to receive a liberal arts degree before September 1967, register for the Professional Qualification Test. Taking and passing the PQT doesn't commit or obligate you to anything, but we urge you—even if you are not now fully certain of your future interests—to investigate NSA career opportunities.

An Agency of national prominence, this unique civilian organization is responsible for developing "secure" communications systems to transmit and receive vital information. How and why does that affect you? Because NSA has a critical and growing need for imaginative people—regardless of your academic major.

You will participate in programs of national importance, working in such areas as: Cryptography (the making of codes and ciphers), analytic research, language research, data systems design and programming, and administrative management.

At NSA, your professional status and earning power grow rapidly from the day you begin, without having to wait for years of "experience." Starting salary of at least $6,451 (for bachelor's degrees), regular increases, excellent advancement possibilities... and all the benefits of Federal employment. Another advantage is NSA's location, convenient to both Baltimore and Washington and a short drive from ocean beaches and other recreational attractions.

Plan to take the PQT. It could be your first step to a great future!

IMPORTANT: THE DEADLINE FOR PQT APPLICATIONS IS NOVEMBER 25. Pick up a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office. It contains full details and the necessary registration form. Applicants must be U. S. citizens, subject to a complete physical examination and background investigation.

Band adopts new routine

The MSU Marching Band's world premiere of a new marching maneuver will mark the traditional rivalry of the MSU - University of Michigan football game Saturday.

The band will feature a technique of diagonal maneuvers in its familiar patterns-in-motion style to the tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown" during halftime.

This new technique of the patterns style will permit the four-man squads of marchers to locate themselves diagonally as well as horizontally and vertically across the field.

Assistant Band Director William C. Moffitt explained that "entirely new geometric designs and maneuvers with truly kaleidoscopic results" will enhance the band's total effect.

Other halftime features will be Moffitt's arrangement of three Bach compositions in marching rhythm, called "Bach With a Beat;" a Tijuana Brass style version of the MSU "Fight Song," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" and "Tea for Two."

Moffitt described MSU as a leader in progressive movement, and stated, "We've been told that Michigan State is becoming the marching band capital of the country for leadership and innovation."

According to Moffitt, the original patterns in motion style was introduced in 1960 and has since received national acclaim.

"The total effect of the band at halftime is the key to the performance. When you make a picture formation, you can only face one way. With geometric figures, fancy footwork and the music you are able to please everyone," said Moffitt.

"When we adopted patterns in motion," he continued, "there was just as much curiosity as when the 'T' formation in football was adopted over the single wing."

Moffitt explained that there is no set schedule of music and shows for the season. He writes the show the weekend before each game and the band rehearses that week.

"By writing each individual show each week," the director explained, "I am able to stay closer to the psychology and moods of the band."

There is also a new concept in themes for marching bands. "Some weeks we use themes and other we don't," he said. "We are now using non-restrictive themes."

The band plays all special arrangements with visual and musical effects planned simultaneously to complement each other.

In the past two years, Moffitt has conducted 29 marching band clinics to help other instructors apply the patterns-in-motion technique to their bands. He also has published six books since 1960 about the basic concepts of the method which have been best-sellers in their field.

The 175 members of the band arrive at school about two weeks prior to the beginning of fall term and practice every day for an hour for a week before each performance.

The number of members remains set at 175 with about 60 new men added at the beginning of each year.

Rule book distributed

A handbook covering university regulations considered to be most important to students has been compiled and distributed by the Associated Students of MSU (ASMSU) and the Office of Student Affairs.

Some 15,000 copies of the handbook have been placed in all living units and in locations off campus. Some of the regulations listed in the handbook have never been printed before. However, not all University regulations are included.

"We decided it was not practical to make a complete listing," Art Tung, Midland junior and member of the handbook committee, said. "We included only those regulations we felt the students could use. These are the ones they will be held responsible for."

The information in the handbook has phased out the AWS Handbook and the Organizations Directory, and caused a revision of the Sparta Guide. The information from the Sparta Guide is now available in a second handbook especially for student leaders. Expenses for the handbook totaled approximately $3,000. About half was paid by the Division of Student Activities and half by ASMSU.

A handbook committee was set up last winter term by the Student Board of ASMSU. Members of the committee included representatives of the major governing groups, Lana Dart, assistant director of student activities; Jeff Green, former ASMSU director of organizations; and Pete Grometer, former ASMSU vice president for student services.

NYC TROUPE

Ballet 'brilliant'

For those who know their pas de deux's and don'ts there were one hundred enjoyable minutes on hand Monday as the Lecture Concert Series presented the New York City Ballet company.

In the minds of balletomanes this company will invariably be associated with the name of George Balanchine, the extraordinarily gifted choreographer who serves as the company's Ballet Master and guiding spirit. This is Balanchine's company, and on Monday night it was also his performance.

All three of the selections presented were choreographed by Balanchine, and it is a tribute to the man and his company that such a varied and enjoyable program could be so fashioned.

The first selection, substituted from Tuesday's program, was "Serenade," based on Tchaikovsky's magnificent "Serenade for Strings." This selection dates from Balanchine's early career in the United States and contained some splendid work, notably the literal interpretation in dance of the fugue in the first movement. Tchaikovsky's musical intent was well served by the company, which paid a seeming tribute to both the Russian master and the man whom he intended to honor, Mozart.

The second work on the program, "Monumentum Pro Gesualdo," and "Movements for Piano and Orchestra," based on two works by Stravinsky but performed as one selection, showed the company at its characteristic best. "Monumentum Pro Gesualdo," accenting Stravinsky's neo-classicism, tended to be overly interpreted and was hampered by some poor orchestral playing, but "Movements" showed the sinewy, restless energy that has made the New York Ballet one of the world's finest companies.

The final offering was Hershey Kay's "Stars and Stripes," based on the marches of Sousa. Here all stops were pulled with great enthusiasm, much to the delight of the less-than-capacity audience.

An alumni fund begun by the MSU class of 1915 has made possible the first publication of selected essays written by Honors College students and freshmen enrolled in honors sections.

The fund, specifically set up to stimulate good writing in Michigan schools, will finance the annual publication and distribution of the essays. The 85-page paperback volume will be sent to Michigan high schools and universities with honors sections, and will be made available on campus in November.

The volume contains eight of 50 manuscripts submitted during the regular 1965-66 school year. They were selected this summer by an editorial committee consisting of faculty representatives.

'CAN'T WORK WITH HATE'

Southern Dem quits race

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Rep. Charles L. Weltner's decision to withdraw as a nominee for reelection rather than support Lester G. Maddox has stirred praise for his courage mixed with concern over the political wisdom of his course.

Monday's announcement by Weltner, a Democrat, that "I will give up my office before I give up my principles" tossed a bombshell into an already shaken Georgia political scene.

Maddox, a Democrat, is running for governor against a Goldwater Republican conservative, Rep. Howard H. Callaway.

Weltner said he "cannot violate" the oath he took as a Democratic candidate to vote for party nominees in the general election.

"I cannot compromise with hate," he said. "I cannot vote for Lester Maddox."

The announcement also stunned many in Congress where Weltner has become widely regarded as a symbol of a "new South."

From Northern Democrats generally came high praise for the Atlanta Democrat, 38, now serving his second term. He has been a staunch Johnson administration supporter and backed all three civil rights bills in the last three years.

"Charlie Weltner is one of the finest and bravest men I have ever met in all my years in public life," said Speaker John W. McCormack.

And the dean of the House, Rep.

Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., called Weltner's decision "a very wonderful and courageous decision."

A Texas Democrat, Jack Brooks, said there is an "old East Texas proverb" which says: "You cannot exercise statesmanship unless you have first been elected."

One of Weltner's fellow Georgians, Rep. James A. MacKay, said he was astounded but added he expected to vote the Democratic ticket even though

"I wouldn't have time to affirmatively campaign for Mr. Maddox."

But most Georgia Democrats in Washington shied away from direct comment on Weltner's move. Sens. Herman E. Talmadge and Richard B. Russell declined comment. House members from Georgia generally took the position that the decision was Weltner's and they would support the ticket.

In Georgia, Maddox reacted by asking if Weltner planned to resign from the Democratic party.

"The Democratic party is becoming more conservative by the hour," he said at Savannah.

Weltner, in making his decision known, said he would neither run for Congress as a write-in candidate nor seek any other office this year. But he said "I hope I can sometime serve again."

He said, "Today, the one man in our state who exists as the very symbol of violence and repression is the Democratic nominee for the highest office in Georgia. His entire public career is directly contrary to my deepest convictions and beliefs."

LBJ aid blasts wage settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) - The chief of President Johnson's economic staff today denounced the wage settlement between American Airlines and the Transport Workers Union as clearly inflationary.

He added: "Any business which agrees to terms like these cannot justifiably complain about deterioration in the purchasing power of the dollar; and any union which demands them has lost any right to complain about a rise in the cost of living."

The statement came from Gardner Ackley, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. He said the council had learned that the Sept. 28th settlement between the airline and the union averages about 6.5 per cent.

"Thus the settlement is clearly inflationary," Ackley said, "just as was the earlier agreement between the same union and the New York Transit Authority."

Orioles, Dodgers set for opener

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- Don Drysdale and Dave McNally, both belted liberally their last time out, shrugged off those performances and primed themselves for a far more vital one today when they open the 1966 World Series for the defending champion Los Angeles Dodgers and the aspiring Baltimore Orioles.

The NEWS In SPORTS

er who was equally well lathered in his last start on Friday against the Minnesota Twins, both tossed the ball easily during final workouts at Dodger Stadium Tuesday and pronounced themselves ready to go.

So was a capacity crowd of 56,000 which was expected to turn out for the opening game in which the Dodgers are a 6-5 favorite to win the ball game and an 8-5 choice to win their second successive World Series.

On the 11th hour before the shooting began, the Dodgers hit the books. They were closeted for more than one hour with Manager Walt Alston in a closed room, going over individual books on various weaknesses and strengths of the Baltimore players.

The books were supplied by Al Campanis, head of the Dodger scouting staff. Alston went over every detail in school teacher fashion before his players finally took their last minute workout.

When the Dodgers were through with their drill, the Orioles, headed by Manager Hank Bauer, took over the field and also went through a workout which lasted more than an hour.

Alston, participating in his sixth World Series in the last 13 years, said he was not sure yet about his lineup except that veteran Jim Gilliam will be playing third base.

"I'm not sure whether I'm going to bat Gilliam or Wes Parker second," said Alston.

"A couple of my players may be hurting a little but nothing that will keep them out of the Series."

Alston said he felt the Orioles are a "well balanced" club with an "especially strong bullpen."

"The only way we can play them is the same way we have played everyone else all year," he went on. "We'll peck away with singles and doubles and hope that our pitching can hold them. We know Frank Robinson well enough to know he can swing the bat. And it's up to us to stop him."

The Dodgers' plot wasn't at all disturbed over Drysdale's last outing against the Phillies in which the towering right hander was rapped for four hits and two runs in two innings.

"Actually, I felt pretty good about Don," said Alston. "In his last seven or eight starts he has pitched great ball with the exception of last Sunday. His control was a little off that day, but he pitched just enough to make him right for the opener."

Alston said he would go with his 27-game ace, Sandy Koufax, in the second game on Thursday and Bauer named right hander Jim Palmer as his pitching choice.

And if either Drysdale or Koufax get into any trouble, Phil Regan, the Dodger relief ace who compiled a 13-1 record this season, volunteered he was ready.

"My arm feels real good," said Regan. "Surprisingly good when you consider this is the first year I ever pitched in relief. I thought it would be stiffer and sorer. It's not."

Regan, who spent most of his big league career with Detroit before coming over to the Dodgers last winter, knows the Oriole hitters better than any other Los Angeles pitcher and felt that the local ball park would give the Orioles trouble.

"I think most hitters have trouble in this park," said Regan, "especially hitters of their type."

Parker said he thought the Orioles have a much stronger team than most people think. "Of all the teams we played in spring training," said the Dodger first baseman, "they impressed me most. Brooks Robinson is as fine a ball player as I ever have laid eyes on. He's ready every time he's at bat or in the field and no one out-hustles him."

Shortstop Maury Wills, admittedly weary both physically and mentally, said the Dodgers underestimated the Minnesota Twins somewhat in last year's World Series, but they would not make the same mistake against the Orioles.

"We've found that the American League winner turns up stronger than we anticipated," declared Wills. "We learned to respect the Twins and we certainly respect the Orioles right now."

Bauer said there was only one questionable player on the Orioles and that concerned his slugging first baseman, Boog Powell. Powell injured the ring finger of his right hand and it has handicapped his gripping a bat.

"But Boog told me on the plane on our way here that he would be all right," Bauer said. "If it should come about that he can't start then I'll put Curt Blefary at first instead."

Regan desires to 'sit it out'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- Phil Regan, who compiled an amazing 14-1 record in relief for the Los Angeles Dodgers, has a funny World Series ambition--he hopes he never gets to pitch even one inning.

"I've never pitched in a World Series," the relief star said, "but I hope we get four straight complete games against Baltimore and I don't have to pitch one inning."

Should Manager Walt Alston need him, however, Regan says he's well rested and ready to pitch when called on.

Regan, in addition to his 17 wins, has saved 17 games this past season in the greatest year he's had since he started professionally in 1956.

"Right now the bullpen is in as good shape as it's been all year," Regan said. "It's well rested. I've pitched only four innings in more than a week and only one inning the last time I got in a game."

Regan was nicknamed "The Vulture" by his teammates because he had come into so many games during the late innings and collected wins.

"I really don't mind the nickname," he laughed. "When a player gets a nickname it means he's been getting pretty good and if he's a man from another club it indicates he's been accepted by the new team."

"But it startled me a little to be called 'The Vulture' even in a place like Philadelphia. The name seems to have caught on."

Regan says there's a big element of luck in having a season like the one he has enjoyed the past year.

Dodger fans frustrated in Series ticket search

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- The impact of having a second straight World Series in Los Angeles didn't hit the citizenry with its full force until Monday but once the message came home the typical reaction burst forth.

"Who's got tickets for the series?" was the cry that rang through the sprawling metropolises.

Even before the Los Angeles Dodgers announced the public sale of only 8,000 seats for each game, hundreds began converging on the luxurious stadium a few blocks from the downtown civic center.

And by the time the ticket windows opened for the public offering at 1 p.m., thousands were lined up in an eager effort to obtain the coveted tickets, limited to only two per person for a single game. In 45 minutes they were all sold out.

The Dodgers' management had withheld any announcement on a public sale until after the pennant was clinched. They knew from past experience that work in the stadium offices would be brought almost to a halt by the crush of people and the day-long inquiries once the ticket sale was announced.

Monday the Dodgers' switchboard was so jammed with calls that it took more than an hour in some cases to reach the club's operators.

The Dodgers are limited in the number of tickets they can offer to the public by their huge season sale lists and their many block ticket buyers during the regular season.

With more than 18,000 season tickets sold, the club offers each of the regular purchasers an application for a pair of tickets. By the time the block buyers also have been given their preferential choice, the league, commissioner's office and visiting team have received allotments, only a comparative handful of tickets is available for the public.

Although the Dodgers went through the public motions of not admitting that they were about to host the World Series for the second consecutive year, behind the scenes preparations have been going on for weeks.

"We have to start work in time to have all the preparations completed for the first game, even if there's a chance we may not be in the Series," Vice President Arthur E. Patterson explained.

Even before the Dodgers started on their final road trip 11 days ago, the lights were burning until after midnight each night in the Dodger ticket offices where Ticket Manager Walter Nash and his crew put in late hours.

With the club on the road during the closing phase of the season, Stadium Director Richard B. Walsh worked out plans for the handling of crowds of around 55,000 for each game played in Los Angeles. That meant hiring, instructing and training of hundreds of additional personnel.

Nearly 600 applications were received for working press credentials for a press box seating 108 persons. To handle the accredited applications, an auxiliary press box had to be constructed above the regular box.

And should the Series go only five games, all the work would be for only two games in Los Angeles starting Wednesday.

Cross country course covers golf fairways

By GAYEL WESCH
 State News Sports Writer

It isn't exactly humble, happy or sweet, but certainly there is no place like the home course at Forest Akers Golf Course for the MSU cross country team.

Golf season is now coming to an end, and the team has taken over the fairways to practice for its opening home meet of the season Saturday.

Now the harriers get to run out to the course and back in addition to the seven miles they run at practice each day.

The Spartan cross country course is laid out in two loops: a one-mile oval cutting through the center and run twice; then a two-mile periphery along the edge.

Spartan Coach Fran Dittrich said that the MSU course was "rougher than most courses in the league."

"Indiana's course was hillier than ours, but you ran uphill as much as downhill," Dittrich recalled. "On our course you run a long ways uphill, level off and run just a short time downhill."

MSU's course does have one hill that must rank with any in the conference. It is fondly referred to as "cardiac hill" by the members of the squad. In the course of their four-mile run they must climb "cardiac" three times, once on each lap.

The MSU course was the site of the NCAA cross country championships from 1938 through 1964.

The record for the Spartan course was set by Elmer Banton of Ohio University in 1964 with a 20:06; MSU's fastest time was turned in by Fordy Kennedy in 1958 with a 20:07.1.

According to Dittrich, there is a home course advantage in cross country although it is very slight.

VIEWPOINT

Lucas quit; but why?

By DENNIS CHASE Associate Sports Editor

On December 31 of last year, Joe Falls, sports editor of the "Detroit Free Press", quoted Harold Lucas as saying, "I like defense. I like to look at my man in the eye and see how he reacts. It's sort of fun to get the feel of him, mess him up, bend him a little.

"I like to run down a quarterback every now and then, too." On July 20 Lucas, the St. Louis Cardinals No. 2 draft choice, walked out on the team and a $250,000 contract, citing "personal reasons."

He later expanded: "I just don't like it anymore . . . I got tired of it. It was okay when I was in that dormitory with the Cardinals. But once I had to leave, it was different.

"People tell you they do things they don't like just because there's money in it, I don't believe them.

" . . . when it cools off a little, I'll mess around a little, maybe play a little basketball."

Cardinal coach Charley Winner was fining Lucas $10 a pound per day until Harold reached a playing weight of 270. He had ballooned to 315.

"We had to take him to the stockyards to weigh him," Winner said.

Lucas had other problems. Winner offered one:

"In college, Harold did not do too much pass rushing. He played a waiting game. So we tried to get him to rush the passer, and he was making good progress at it."

You have to be nuts to play pro football. It takes a certain combination of guts and stupidity. Ability is only part of it. You have to have the temperament.

A fellow who walks out of training camp without reason, and who later says that the coach was "tough" on him because he was asked to shed a few pounds he should never have put on in the first place, lacks the temperament to play pro football.

My father once told me, "if you can't take the gaff you should get out of the game." Lucas got out, but he should have gone out with honor, not with, "aw, who wants to play pro football anyway."

Defensive Coach Hank Bullough offered this opinion:

"Linemen are a strange breed. He's got to like to hit, hit hit. He's got to love it more than anything else. Let's face it, it's a job. Losing weight is a job, coming to practice every day is a job.

"Why did Lucas quit? That's for the psychologists. But I think he quit because it wasn't fun anymore."

Simple enough. But why didn't Lucas say it? Why didn't he say that, after playing three seasons of college football, he couldn't take the grind of pro ball? And if he didn't know why he did it, why not say that?

Football players fail in many ways. Some are cut, some sit on the bench for years, and others shuffle from team to team.

And some pick up their marbles and go home.

Lucas didn't walk out of the Cardinal camp because he liked to eat, because he was homesick, or because he didn't care about money ("I'll go wherever I get the most dough," he once said).

He walked out because he couldn't cut the mustard.

Soccer game at 3:30 today

MSU's undefeated soccer team, for the first time this season, will be at least semi-healthy when they meet Calvin College here at 3:30 today.

"Tom Sanders still has that pulled tendon," said coach Gene Kenney. "It's been slow responding to treatment, Matty Ruschelski, of course, is still out. But the rest of the team looks good.

"If we play as solid a game as we played against Pittsburgh we should take 'em," he added.

The Spartans have played Calvin eight times and beaten them every time. MSU has a wide goal margin, 46-2.

Calvin's closest game was in 1962, 4-1. They were beaten by as much as 9-0 in 1959.

Last year the score was 7-1. Calvin has not been exceptionally strong this year. Their record is 1-1. But they have a young team and will be looking for an upset against a top-ranked MSU squad.

Kenney plans no major lineup changes.

SOCER TIDBITS: Gene Kenney has been sick with the stomach flu since Saturday night. He was pretty much recovered, however, during Tuesday's practice.

Assistant coach Nick Krat has signed to play professional soccer. Indiana tied St. Louis Saturday, 2-2. The Billikens lost to Quincy last Wednesday 2-1, leaving most soccer observers shaking their heads.

Tony Keyes could break the MSU record for assists in one season. The record is 11, held jointly by Bill Schwarz and George James. Nick Wirs, junior transfer student, came from Wright Junior College, not Purdue, as previously mis-mentioned.

Heavily Armed

That's what opposing quarterbacks think about when they hear the name Charlie Thornhill. This shot proves that "Mad Dog" is heavily armed, and he proved he was dangerous by tallying 13 tackles against Illinois last week. For his efforts, the 201-pound senior linebacker was voted "Midwest Lineman of the Week" by the UPI. --Photoby Chuck Michaels

UPI calls Thornhill lineman of the week

Charlie "Mad Dog" Thornhill, star defensive linebacker for Michigan State, was named Tuesday by the United Press International as Midwest "Lineman of the Week."

The 201-pound senior had a brilliant game against Illinois Saturday, making eight solo tackles and assisting on five others. Three times he threw Illinois ball carriers for losses, totaling 22 yards.

"Hitting is the best part of the game," said Thornhill. "It's fun, and I think football is a fun game. It's not all fun, but without it, I think football is boring."

This season Thornhill has been hitting more than any other Spartan. After MSU's first three games he leads the team with 39 tackles, 14 of them solo.

Thornhill was given the game ball for his performance against Penn State two weeks ago, and named "Spartan of the Week."

"Charlie gives everything he's got all the time," Coach Duffy Daugherty said about the new star of his defense. "We could name him Spartan of the Week almost any week and not be too far wrong. He has tremendous speed and quickness, and is a wonderful competitor."

"Mad Dog," as the compact bundle of energy has been tagged by his teammates, has been a regular linebacker since his sophomore year. However, he had not played the position earlier.

When recruited from Addison High School in Roanoke, Va., Thornhill was a fullback. After having scored 219 points on three league championship teams, Thornhill wasn't overjoyed with the idea of switching positions.

"When they first switched me, I thought I wanted to quit," said Thornhill. "But I wanted to play football, and I wanted to play where I could be the biggest asset to the team."

"I decided to try linebacker, and found out that I really enjoyed hitting. I know I'm playing the right position now."

After a tackle, Thornhill can often be seen pointing a warning finger at the ballcarrier. "I tell them not to come around this way again," he said.

Thornhill, whose physical makeup is reminiscent of an inverted pyramid on a solid base, is one of the most muscular players on the team. Hitting with "reckless abandon," he uses his strength to make bone-crushing tackles.

Defensive line coach Hank Bullough tabs Thornhill as one of the top linebackers in the conference this fall.

Halfback Dwight Lee made one of the most telling comments on Thornhill, after a scrimmage last spring. "Mad Dog is one of the hardest hitting guys I've ever come across," Lee said. "I hate to scrimmage against him; he hits hard every time, and he's in on every tackle."

Sailing team opens seasons with victory at Kent State

The Michigan State Sailing Team opened their fall season last weekend with an overwhelming victory in the Kent State Invitational.

Racing Team Captain Bill Zemlin, Grosse Pointe senior, and Commodore Dave Chavkin, Roslyn, N.Y. junior, led the team to a nearly flawless victory with a combined record of five seconds and three firsts in eight races.

Zemlin and Chavkin also led their respective divisions as high point skippers. Crewing chores were handled by Barbara Richard, Gary, Ind. junior. Second place was taken by host Kent State University, seven points behind MSU, and Port Huron Junior College finished third.

MEMO diverts potential dropout

EAST LANSING (P)--A MEMO on a bus helped put Gloria Clocklin in college where educators thought she should be, but where her pocketbook said she couldn't be.

MEMO - More Education, More Opportunity - is a Michigan program aimed at giving a stay-in-school boost to the student whose grades aren't tops but who has a "glint in the eye" to succeed.

In searching for that student, MEMO placed advertisements around the state, including placards on buses.

That's how Miss Clocklin discovered the program.

"It has always been my desire to become a registered nurse," she wrote to MEMO headquarters here, Miss Clocklin, who graduated from a Grand Rapids high school in 1964, was working as a technician at Grand Rapids' Butterworth Hospital.

"My grades were above average but nothing spectacular," she wrote, "so competitive scholarships are not the answer. My financial situation leaves much to be desired."

Miss Clocklin added that her mother was sole support for a brother and sister still in school.

From MEMO headquarters the letter went to Miss Edna Sargent, registrar at Northwestern Michigan Community College in Traverse City, Miss Sargent investigated, received excellent recommendations for the girl, and found the "need was absolute."

The school arranged for a $400 National Defense loan and $600 in matching funds from its Economic Opportunity grant allocation for Miss Clocklin.

"I would say MEMO has made it possible for a very fine and above-average student and young lady to attend college without being constantly harassed with working, and worrying about where her next tuition money was coming from," said Miss Sargent.

"I'm anxious to get started," said Miss Clocklin, 20, who will finish her nursing studies in about two years.

Gordon A. Sabine, who leads Michigan's MEMO project in spare time from duties as a vice president of Michigan State University, calls this a typical MEMO case.

Grad test forms now available

Students wishing to take the Admissions Test for Graduate Study in Business should begin preparation now. Registration forms may be obtained at 403 Eppley Center.

The test is prepared and administered by the Educational Testing Service and will be offered on Nov. 5, Feb. 4, Apr. 1, July 8 and Aug. 12.

A candidate should apply separately for admission to each business school of his choice. He should inquire of each whether to take the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business and when he should take it.

A Bulletin of Information accompanies a registration form for the test. It contains sample questions, information regarding registration for and administration of the test. A list of schools requiring the test is included.

The bulletin should be obtained six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, Box 966, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J. 08540. Registration forms and fees must reach ETS at least two weeks before the desired test administration date.

If communications were good enough, you could stay in the sack all day

We developed Picturephone service so you can see as well as talk when you call. And be seen, too. We introduced Tele-Lecture service (two-way amplified phone calls) to let you hear lecturers in distant locations. And so you could ask them questions no matter how far away they were.

Right now, many students can dial from their dormitories to a language lab. Soon a student will be able to dial into a computer thousands of miles away to get information for his courses.

Depending on the nature of the information, he might get his answer back audibly, printed on a teletypewriter, as a video image, or a facsimile print.

Some of these services are available now. Others are being tested.

For the next week or so, better get a move on.

Thanksgiving flights to NY available

Students interested in flying to New York over the Thanksgiving weekend are urged to contact immediately Brad Miller of the ASMSU Travel Bureau for reservations.

Student half-fares will not be honored by Northwest Airlines during the holiday, and the Bureau is offering the trip with reduced fares to all interested students or faculty.

Reservations must be turned in to the airline by Oct. 14. The two flights on Northwest jets will leave Nov. 23. The return flight is scheduled for Nov. 27.

The cost is $51 plus tax. Miller may be contacted by calling the Office of Finance and Operations, third floor of the Student Services Building, 355-8269.

TED SMITH
B.S.M.E. of the Bethlehem Steel Loop Course knows where the action is. He's on the move at the nation's most modern steel plant — our Burns Harbor Plant in northern Indiana.

Join the action. First step: pick up a copy of "Careers with Bethlehem Steel and the Loop Course" at your placement office. Then sign up for a campus interview. Our 1967 Loop Class has openings for technical and non-technical graduates (and post-grads) for careers in steel operations, research, sales, mining, accounting, and other activities.
