Classes Strike Called By Berkeley Students

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—University of California students at a mass meeting Thursday called a classroom strike because police had been summoned during a sit-in protesting Navy recruiting on the campus.

Some 3,500 of the Berkeley campus' 30,000 students attended the meeting and voted overwhelmingly by a show of hands to strike classes starting at 8 a.m. Students declared that off-campus organizations are not permitted by regulations to man tables on the campus. The university administration said government organizations were exempted from that rule.

Mario Savio speaks

The last speaker to urge the strike was Mario Savio, who led the 1964 Free Speech Movement which disrupted classes as students sought greater on-campus political liberty.

Savio was one of six nonstudents arrested by police when they protested the presence of Navy recruiters in the Student Union. He was freed on $440 bail when he made his talk.

Last month Savio had been turned down for readmission because he allegedly violated Berkeley's literature distribution rules. He is appealing that decision.

At a morning news conference before classes began, the Council of Campus Organizations, a successor to the Free Speech Movement, demanded that police never again be called to the 27,500-student campus.

When the warrants were issued Wednesday, activity shifted from a sit-in to a near-riot. Campus policemen had open wounds from bites. A Berkeley officer was hit in the face. Policemen got rough with spectators who tried to interfere.

Controversial card table

Ten persons were arrested. Most were charged with assaulting police and resisting arrest. Bail was set at $3,520 each. Four of those arrested were students.

Savio was charged with trespassing, but was freed on $440 bail. The Navy recruiting team had long left the scene. Five nonstudents were charged with trespassing and creating a public nuisance.

The students arrested were charged with interfering with police.

The trouble started when Corinne Goldstick, a nonstudent, and Reiss Erich, a student member of the Students for a Democratic Society, set up a card table next to the Navy recruiting table.

Student groups are not ordinarily permitted political tables inside the student union building. Nonstudents are not allowed to man tables anywhere on the campus.

Campus Policeman Dino Airale asked Miss Goldstick to remove the table of the newly formed Berkeley Draft Information Committee.

Nonstudent issue cited

The group flopped on the floor, and Airale called for reinforcements.

"Navy must go! Navy must go!" the demonstrators shouted as campus police locked all the doors to the building.

University police, backed by two busloads of Alameda County sheriff's deputies, waded into the demonstrators with night sticks and riot helmets, dragging out the nonstudents. An estimated 3,500 students jeered police.

Savio said the issue was whether nonstudent recruiters should enjoy on-campus privileges denied to nonstudent political groups.

Will You Go Peacefully . . . ?

Uniformed and plainclothes policemen attempted to remove leaders of a sit-in protesting a Navy recruiting table at the University of California Student Union Thursday. The attempt at peaceful removal resulted in struggles requiring several officers to remove each person. University officials said they believed about eight persons were arrested on warrants, mostly non-students. UPI Telephoto

Car safety code released, tougher policy is hinted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Commerce Department made public today the fine print of its 23 proposed auto safety standards and hinted at a much tougher code in the years ahead.

The proposals themselves were outlined in Detroit Tuesday night by Dr. William Haddon Jr., director of the National Highway Safety Agency. The 76-page document spells out the proposals in technical detail.

They range from a ban on winged nuts for wheels to brake and tire standards and the amount of "give" which must be incorporated into the steering mechanism.

Many of the standards are derived from those used by the General Services Administration for government vehicles and from the auto industry itself.

The department fixed Jan. 3 as the deadline for receiving comments on the current proposals and Alan S. Boyd, under-secretary of commerce for transportation, said the proposals could be changed in the light of any comments received.

"The proposed initial standards should not be taken as indicative of the scope or contents of the revised standards to come later," he said.

The industry has already called laudable but impractical at this time at least two of the provisions in the interim list to be published in the Federal Register — one for arm rests and the other for head rests.

The industry said last month that further research is needed to determine the effectiveness of head rests as a protection against whiplash injuries.

One performance factor requested by the government was a collapsible steering column or some sort of collapsible steering wheel. The standard merely spells out how much "give" should be incorporated into the mechanism.

Part of the proposed hydraulic brake standard would require that failure or rupture of the brake master cylinder, wheel brake cylinders or brake line or hose should not result in complete loss of the brake system.

If failure of one of these components causes a loss of pressure in one part of the system, the remaining portion would have to provide enough braking power to bring the vehicle to a stop without swerving off the highway.

The same proposal also calls for a red light on the instrument panel which would illuminate in the event of a partial brake system failure.

Another provision would bar instrument light reflections into the windshield.

INVESTIGATION SET

No hope seen for more survivors from sunken freighter Morrell

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. (AP)—With icy Lake Huron reluctantly yielding the bodies of one crewman after another, authorities said Thursday there's little, if any, hope that more than one member from a crew of 29 survived the sinking of the Daniel J. Morrell.

Rear Adm. Charles Tighe, commander of the U.S. Coast Guard's 9th District at Cleveland, Ohio, called for an investigation of the sinking of the 66-year-old ore carrier—the worst Great Lakes disaster in eight years.

The 603-foot Morrell snapped in two during a storm Tuesday morning and sank in 145 feet of water 200 miles northeast of Harbor Beach, a town near the tip of Michigan's Thumb area.

The storm concealed its fate until the first body was found some 34 hours later.

The Navy made available to the Coast Guard aircraft and ships equipped with sonar gear. The ships will try to pinpoint the position of the Morrell to aid search operations and to determine if the sunken hulk is a menace to navigation.

Rescue forces, braving gales and heavy snow, recovered 11 bodies Wednesday.

Nine more bodies were recovered Thursday after the storm let up enough to permit aircraft to rejoin the search.

Asked whether there was any hope more survivors would be found, Sheriff's Deputy Robert Swackhamer said, "No. . . none."

The Coast Guard said any crewmen not in a lifeboat would have died within three hours in the 36-degree water. The lone survivor was adrift for 36 hours in a raft.

Deck watchman Dennis Hale, 26, clad in undershorts, pajamas and a pea jacket, was plucked from the raft by a helicopter Wednesday. He was lying beneath the bodies of three mates who had died of exposure.

Hale was reported in a good condition at a Harbor Beach hospital.

WIN

Cagers whip Broncos, 77-55; Lafayette, Aitch lead attack

Michigan State's powerful basketball team, picked by most as No. 1 in the Big Ten, scampered to 77-55 win over the Western Michigan Broncos Thursday night in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The victory avenged last year's 85-82 opening loss, the only Spartan defeat at home last season. Matt Aitch, 6'-7" center, carried the Spartan attack in the first half, scoring 11 points. He ended the game with 14 and 16 rebounds.

But it was all Lee Lafayette in the second half. The 6'-6" sophomore forward, pumped in 13 points for a game total of 20 to lead all scorers. Forward Reggie Lacey led the Broncos with 11 points.

The Spartan defense was impressive, frequently stealing the ball from an occasionally brilliant, but more often error-prone Bronco offense.

A record first game crowd of 12,481 was on hand for the action.

All told there were 35 fouls called, 18 on the Spartans and 17 on the Broncos. Both teams shot for a 33.3 field goal percentage.

The Spartans were on top in rebounds, 71-47, and that made a big difference.

"I am more than satisfied," MSU Coach John Benington said after the victory. "We did a good job on them defensively, and Aitch was tough on defense. He has a great sense for playing defense."

"I was pleased with all the sophomores, and I was especially happy for Lafayette."

NO CHANGE FOR STUDENTS

Draft quota cut for January

By JEFF STONE

Michigan draft calls for January have been cut 45 per cent, from nearly 1,900 to 977.

Monthly draft quotas averaged about 2,000 in 1966 for Michigan.

The action by the Selective Service System came as a result of a Defense Department announcement that fewer men will be needed than planned in early 1967. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara announced the cut in a public statement last week.

College students will not be affected by the cut. "There will be no change in policies concerning student status," said Col. Arthur Holmes, staff director of the Michigan Selective Service System.

Michigan local boards are requiring college freshmen to take physical exams and are placing eligible men in I-A status until the end of their academic year.

Holmes expressed some doubt that this change in draft quotas would continue. "This happens almost every year, draft calls are lowered in January, enlistment drops off too, then in March draft calls are raised again," Holmes said.

Enlistments usually follow draft calls, Holmes said. More men will enlist when draft calls are high because they know they will probably be drafted. When draft calls drop, men feel safer and will rather take a chance than enlist, he said. It is at this point, when both draft calls and enlistments are down, that draft quotas will rise again, if the need is steady, he said.

Induction methods included in the Selective Service Law will be up for congressional review in 1967. The methods are reviewed every four years.

Although several groups have appeared before the commission appointed by the President to recommend Selective Service changes, Holmes feels no changes will result from it.

Similarly, in the House and Senate Armed Forces Committees, which deal with Selective Service legislation, probably no revision will appear, Holmes said.

Draft calls in 1968 will probably rise as the 24,000 Michigan men drafted in the large 1966 buildup complete their two-year tour. For the months following January, 1967 though, Holmes could make no predictions. Too many changes can occur in U.S. policy and international affairs, he said.

Finals package offer traced to U-M student

By BOBBY SODEN
State News Staff Writer

An MSU coed said Thursday that the "MSU Student Committee" which offers gift packages for exam-taking students does not exist.

Barbara A. Bailey, Triadelphia, W. Va., sophomore, explained that the chairman of the alleged committee, George Hazlett, is a University of Michigan law student. She said all arrangements for the packages were being made in Ann Arbor.

Parents of freshmen recently received letters signed by Hazlett, as chairman of the MSU Student Committee, offering a $3 gift package for their "bleary-eyed" son or daughter during finals week. The letter said the package included "flowers, fresh fruits, candies and hot chocolate." Miss Bailey said that Hazlett, a personal friend, asked her to rent an East Lansing post office box, to which orders could be sent.

"I really don't understand it," she said. "He was very vague."

Miss Bailey added that she had assumed the packages would be made up by students at Ann Arbor, but that Hazlett was not "very specific." She said she did not know exactly what the packages would include.

"I was supposed to forward the mail to him before December second," she said.

Hazlett could not be reached at his room in the U-M law quadrangle.

U-M students may hold sit-in at administration offices

University of Michigan students were scheduled to meet Thursday evening in a mass teach-in to discuss further actions over student participation in University decisions.

Feelings on the U-M campus are that the teach-in might produce enough student support for another sit-in of a disruptive nature in the administration building offices today, said several spokesmen for VOICE, the campus chapter of Students for Democratic Society.

Tuesday about 1,200 students sat in the building's lobby and corridors during the noon hour in protest over University President Harlan Hatcher's announcement that he would create three advisory committees to study student involvement in University decisions, a recent sit-in ban and a draft referendum.

Students voted not to continue class rankings for selective service purposes early in November, but the administration has not considered the referendum binding.

Student feeling is that such concessions by Hatcher are token, since the committees will be advisory in nature and their findings will not be binding on the adminis-

U-M stalling action

One of the most important issues facing colleges today is the role students should play in determining University policy.

At the University of Michigan this question is currently being disputed.

In what was regarded as a face saving move, U-M President Harlan Hatcher Monday announced the formation of three committees to be composed of students, faculty and administrators.

The committees are to advise the administration. Apparently, they are to help answer this student participation question.

One of the committees will study the structure of student government and its voice in University affairs. Another will consider the University's rule against "disruptive demonstrations." The third is to review the compilation of class ranks in light of the recent student referendum.

The significance of Hatcher's suggestions hinges completely on whether the administration respects students' views.

If the University has for some reason learned to respect and honor the views of its students, then the committees should be successful.

If the University still does not respect its students, then all the committees and formal procedures for listening to students in the world will not aid the situation.

From the timing of Hatcher's recommendations, it would appear the latter is the case. The administration got itself a bigger confrontation than it bargained for. Hatcher's committees appear merely to be an attempt to cool it.

Ring out there, bells

When the joyful bells of Christmas celebrate the birth of Christ this year, they will mark a Viet Nam truce proposed by the Viet Cong.

The U.S., despairingly, was rather skeptical about the idea. It seems we don't trust the enemy.

But, when one's official position favors peace, what is one to do?

Ring out the thousand wars of old? Not likely this time.

When the wild bells ring out 1966, they too will mark a Cong-proposed period of truce.

But, ring in a thousand years of peace? Hardly. As far as Viet Nam is concerned, we're lucky to get a lull of 48 hours.

Because, tragically, through circumstances partly of our own making, all officials are resigned and resolved to at least another year of war.

Another year of ravaged coasts, napalmed villages and muddy, bloody jungle fights, another year of dead and wounded, both Americans and Vietnamese.

But a 48 hour peace is better than none at all.

And the year after that... Perhaps if every day were a holiday... Ring out there, bells.

Leaders' hour.. time to think

It's almost as if students chose to paraphrase T.S. Elliot this term at MSU, "Do we dare disturb the university?" they asked. And so fall term evolved as a time of controversy, student involvement and response to that involvement.

Some of the discontent has been between students and specific departments -- the ATL firings. Some of the trouble has been between students and ASMSU--the referendum to spend $1,000 on the question of the 18-year-old vote. But there are still questions which students want answered but, up to this time, had no way of getting answered.

Last week ASMSU once again asserted the dynamic attitude it has assumed toward campus problems.

ASMSU is currently looking into the possibility of sponsoring a campus program patterned after the national television and radio program, "Meet the Press." The program will seek to inform and clarify issues of general interest to the university community.

Although the specifics of the program have not yet been formulated it is clear that ASMSU has an influence unique unto itself. It is a link between students and faculty -- with an influence on both.

The program is not intended to put administrators on the spot--although it might do just that. The program will, however, invite controversy.

As the plan now exists, members of the press and/or student government would question key administrators or persons currently involved in campus news. The meetings would be open to the student body.

Even though "Meet the Press" will be sanctioned by ASMSU it is possible that its leaders also be questioned on their policies and programs.

It sounds like a good plan--what is needed now are students who are interested enough to make the plan work.

ASMSU is looking for someone to be the chairman and to organize the program. The chairman will need help -- he will need a committee. And the program itself will need the support of the student body.

The success of "Meet the Press," like the success of the Great Issues Series, depends largely on the integrity and imagination of its leaders.

The present program is flexible -- anything is possible at this stage. How often it meets, who comes before the panel, whether it be broadcast over radio are questions still to be answered.

THE READERS' MINDS

Misuse of law causes friction

To the Editor:

It has often been said that the closest situation will ever get to a police state is here on the Michigan State campus. Recent actions by the campus and local administrators of justice reinforce this notion.

As case in point is the ticket scalping situation. A co-ed was arrested for scalping tickets, only after a great deal of effort on the part of the campus police. She was fined for her violation in a township court, then the university took over by revoking her right to buy tickets for future games.

The night of her conviction Donald L. Reising, Ingham County Prosecutor, stated on television that all ticket scalpers would be similarly arrested and fined. Now it is revealed that six persons, only one of whom was a student, were arrested during the Notre Dame game, but not prosecuted for scalping. The prosecutor suddenly has a change of heart when those people arrested might possibly vote for him on election day. He says, "The situation was not as outrageous as we'd anticipated," and "I feel we accomplished our purpose without prosecution."

The purpose Mr. Reising refers to is that students must be treated with a firm hand, not because he wants to make them better individuals, but because their convictions let the citizenry know that their prosecutor is doing his job keeping the university population in order.

Equal treatment under the law means that equal treatment, not just for the voters of Ingham County, but for all the people.

Another miscarriage of justice is the way drinkers on campus are dealt with. Automobile trunks and the rear windows of buses are filled with liquor bottles for the whole world to observe, but these thousands of people are never seen by police. However, let a student get near the stadium with even a taint of alcohol on his breath, and, whammo, he is in the clinic. Once again another blatant injustice to the student body.

Still yet another case in point happened to me personally. I preferred to keep quiet until I read about these latest misuses of police power. I was held by a campus police officer against my will, because I would not give the officer my student I.D. He gave no reasons whatsoever for pulling me over or wanting to see my private property. It was only after he and another policeman spent 45 minutes looking through two ordinance books that I was told why I was being held. I then promptly showed them my I.D. By the way, I was ticketed for not riding on the bike path when instead I was riding in the street next to the curb.

There is little wonder why an animosity exists between police and students. How can one honestly respect law when one sees a constant misuse of it? What we are taught about equal treatment is a lie. When they call MSU a farm school, they don't mean agricultural-wise, but instead ANIMAL FARM-wise, for indeed the Napoleon Pigs are more equal than the sheep.

I extend a challenge to not only the prosecutor of Ingham County, but to the campus police as well. I challenge you to explain why students do not receive equal treatment under the eyes of the law. Are we weak? Are we unorganized? Are we under 21 (which I am not)? Are we all of the above, some of the above, or none of the above?

Students are not scapegoats for frustrated policemen who are heckled, nor for publicity seeking district attorneys. We are human beings and want to be treated as such; fairly. Maybe only then will the possibility for law and order be looked upon as reality, not as a farce for all to see.

Technicalities

To the Editor:

The letter from Mary Niedermeyer in Nov. 23rd's State News was unbelievable.

Ticket scalping (selling a ticket for more than its listed price) is illegal. Miss Niedermeyer seems to imply, however, that if you can find some way to get around the law, then scalping is all right. It reminds me somewhat of the showdowns in western movies; they can't get you for murder if you can make the other guy draw first.

As far as technicalities are concerned, they are not the means by which the police force traps unsuspecting persons, but are rather the means by which lawbreakers can get around the law. It is still criminals, and hardly the police, who perpetuate crime. Technicalities failed to provide an escape for Miss Niedermeyer and it's a shame that they don't fail any other lawbreakers.

Finally, since Miss Niedermeyer has such a distaste for our police force, wouldn't it be nice if no crime was committed so the police would have nothing to which to put their time to profitable use?

SN stinks

To the Editor:

Hurray for Linda Roling -- may her tribe of perceptive readers increase! And may the long-ballyhooed myth of the State News's excellence wither and die under their penetrating gaze. It has long been apparent to me that the State News misquotes (e.g., letter from Prof. Ehrlich, 22 Nov.), misconstrues (conf. letter from Linda Roling, 22 Nov.), and just plain misses on three-fourths of the material it publishes.

Another case in point: Mr. Seeger's appearance last month, which was reported under the headline Former Nazi Speaks on German Politics. Mr. Seeger was never a Nazi, but as he explained -- in perfect English -- at the outset of his lecture, was one of the first political prisoners arrested after Hitler's takeover. Through the discerning reporting of the State News a former prisoner of the Nazis became a former Nazi. Brilliant!

Or yet another: at least two articles during the past few months in which the draft consignment for the state of Michigan was reported as 26,000 instead of 2,600 and 22,500 instead of 2,250. A mere decimal place, you say? One such mistake might be excusable, two make me wonder if it's not intentional rabble-rousing. In fact, reading the puerile propaganda which so commonly graces this paper's pages, I am often compelled to wonder whether it is not wholly the tool of small, vociferous, special-interest groups, who espouse freedom, free-love, fraternalism and all other equally worthy causes. Where is any glimmer of professional pride on the part of the news staff? Where is any indication that these future standard-bearers of journalism are concerned at all with factual, objective, impartial reporting of the news?

For each of the past two years the State News has headlined a story about being cited for the "quality" of its publication. Who sits on such a panel of judges? The editors of Police Gazette, Ramparts and Messrs. Lawless, Groat and Fogarty? Awake ye dreaming would-be-news-paperns. The laurel bed on which ye repose doth rot, yea, doth fairly stink. Would that ye should read again Miss Roling's worthy challenge and then with trembling, reverent fingers clip and paste it to the outside covers of your as yet unopened Bibles of Journalism.

In the interest of a special group of one (myself) interested in a better student paper and in any further comment this letter might evoke from your readers, I challenge you to print this under the heading State News Stinks. (No need to publish this postscript.) Also, though I hope you will publish the letter in its entirety, if you must edit it anywhere please simply cut out the item about Mr. Seeger and leave the rest intact. Thank you. And for heaven sakes don't change the spelling of fraternalism.

Debate begins over Provost's proposals

By ANDREW MOLLISON
Executive Reporter

The "discussion and debate" Provost Howard R. Neville expected to stir up with his statement Wednesday before the Academic Senate, began Thursday.

Warren Huff, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said he wanted to see a copy of Neville's statement before commenting upon specifics.

Huff did express doubt that anyone other than the legislature and the State Board of Education could limit the size of the University.

Neville said Wednesday that he believed the time has come "for management of size at Michigan State University, management based on available resources."

Neville charged that MSU's growth had been achieved at the cost of increased faculty loads and of restricted budgets for library, supplies and services, labor, equipment and all-university research funds.

The deans of two widely divergent MSU colleges each amended Neville's comments in this area, and a third declined comment only because "I just never comment publicly on anybody's speeches."

Paul A. Varg, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, commented:

"I couldn't agree with him more on this notion that we're going to have to establish priorities, especially in moving to new programs. The resources of the University are limited."

Alfred L. Seelye, dean of the College of Business and the Graduate School of Business Administration, said his college definitely needs more faculty and more clerical help.

"For example, on the undergraduate level we clearly went to teaching courses on television because of the numbers problem. We also have lecture sections with up to 500 students."

"We in the business school are now running larger classes on the graduate level than any other college in the University."

Seelye emphasized that he thought his college had received its fair portion of the funds that were available, but maintained that more money was needed.

"Quite simply, we have not received additional faculty positions in relation to the expansion in the number of students. We're not afraid of bigness. We would, however, prefer to have enough funds to deal with it."

Varg, commenting on Neville's suggestion that "we hear the responsible students as well as the irresponsible" on matters of policy affecting students, had this to say:

"I am personally very sympathetic to the idea. But it's a complicated problem. Are students in a position to make decisions in areas of tenure or promotion? No, I don't think they are."

"Where we need student participation is in broader areas: the kinds of teaching they are exposed to, the students' needs, where and how we can meet those needs."

Both Seelye and Varg cited programs within their colleges which indicate that some of the problems mentioned in Neville's speech are already being dealt with.

Seelye mentioned the "drastic overhaul" of the business school program five years ago, and further changes just a year ago, as signs of his college's willingness to change to meet new conditions.

Varg said that the "radical major" program, now in its third year, is viewed by the Arts and Letters faculty as effective. Under this program, the student uses an elaborate handbook to help him organize his electives into three cognates of nine to twelve credits apiece. These cognates, each in an area related to the student's major, are intended to broaden his education without scattering his electives.

Thomas K. Cowden, dean of the College of Agriculture, answered when asked what points he considered important in Neville's statement:

"Nothing personal. But when somebody makes a speech, I don't go around shooting my mouth off about it in public."

He did say that student-faculty relations in the college were personal, and that organizations such as the Agriculture Council also served as sounding boards for student opinion.

"I know a number of department heads that have seniors in their office to evaluate their classes each year," Cowden said.

Ex-minister succeeds Brandt as mayor

BERLIN (AP) -- Heinrich Albertz, a Protestant minister turned politician, became acting mayor of West Berlin Thursday when Willy Brandt was sworn in as West German vice chancellor and foreign minister.

Brandt had been West Berlin mayor since 1957, and Albertz his deputy since 1963. Both are Social Democrats.

The new mayor is 51 and the father of three. As a Protestant minister during the war, he once was imprisoned by the Nazis for two months because he held a service asking God to protect all political prisoners.

BRANDT FOREIGN MINISTER

Kiesinger new chancellor

BOON, Germany 1 -- Kurt Georg Kiesinger, once a Nazi, was named chancellor Thursday to head a government wading his Christian Democrats to the Social Democrats in a coalition without precedent in West Germany. He promptly named a Cabinet with a pro-French tinge.

The vice chancellor will be Social Democrat Willy Brandt, who ceased to be mayor of West Berlin when he was sworn into the Cabinet. Brandt also will hold the post of foreign minister and this may be able to brake any policy shift toward France that might damage U.S. relations.

As head of the Social Democratic party, Brandt is a strong advocate of firm ties with Washington. His party has been the chief opposition to the ruling Christian Democrats through the 17-year history of the Federal Republic.

Kiesinger, himself known for his attachment to France, named as finance minister Franz Joseph Strauss, the former defense minister.

It was Strauss's criticism of Germany's drift away from France that helped bring down Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's government after three years in power.

There are nine Social Democrats, including Brandt, in the 19-member Cabinet.

Kiesinger was elected by secret ballot in the Bundestag, the lower house of Parliament. He got 340 of the 496 votes. A surprising 109 deputies voted against him and another 23 cast blank ballots. This indicated that about 50 of the 202 Social Democrats broke party discipline and did not support him.

The only opposition group in the house is the Free Democratic party.

Strauss was ousted in 1962 as Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's defense minister over his role in what became known as "the Der Spiegel affair." This involved the arrest of a news magazine's editors on treason charges. The charges were later dropped.

Until a few hours before the ministers' swearing-in, there was doubt Strauss would be in the new Cabinet. He is said to have asked for guarantees that he would have the government's full support in any unpopular financial measures he may introduce to balance the budget.

There was only one surprise in the Cabinet list, the retention of Kai-Uwe von Hassel, Erhard's defense minister, as minister of Refugees.

The new defense minister is Erhard's foreign minister, Gerhard Schroeder.

As the new ministers were sworn in, Bundestag Speaker Kimberly Ann--died Sunday. The Eugen Gerstenmaier thanked fourth, Marci Jill, died Monday, the outgoing ministers and Er-Their tiny lungs were not well-hard, who resigned Wednesday, enough developed to sustain life.

Fifth quint losing struggle for life

PITTSBURGH (AP) -- The only surviving Aranson quintuplet was shaken by a convulsion Thursday and her doctor said she appeared to be slipping toward death.

"Roni Sue's outlook for life is very poor," said Dr. Lee Bass, the infant's pediatrician. "It is the feeling now that she will not live."

Bass said the 5-day-old baby was having difficulty breathing--the same problem that took the lives of her four sisters--and had suffered apparent brain damage.

"Her condition," he said, "is very grave."

"Until about 6 a.m. she was doing very well, but at about that time she had a convulsion that lasted for a short time," Bass told newsmen.

"The convulsion along with the breathing difficulties that are now present make it almost certain that there is brain damage now," he added.

The quintuplets were born Saturday, 2-1/2 months prematurely, to Michael Aranson, a law student, and his wife, Patti, a former kindergarten teacher.

Three--Amy Beth, Susan and sworn in, Bundestag Speaker Kimberly Ann--died Sunday. The Eugen Gerstenmaier thanked fourth, Marci Jill, died Monday, the outgoing ministers and Er-Their tiny lungs were not well-hard, who resigned Wednesday, enough developed to sustain life.

Roni Sue, the first-born and largest at one pound 12 ounces, at first appeared unaffected by the respiratory problem so common in premature babies.

But Wednesday the infant stopped breathing several times and the optimism that had prevailed among Bass and other doctors' battling to save her turned to doubt.

Roni Sue also suffered from jaundice, a yellowing of the skin symptomatic of the system's inability to properly cleanse the blood of dangerous impurities.

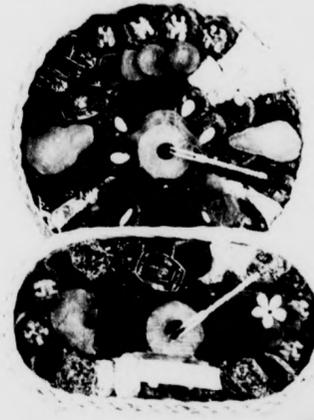

To combat the jaundice, which doctors had said could lead to brain damage, 75 per cent of Roni Sue's blood was exchanged Wednesday for fresh whole blood.

The infant came through that operation in good condition, doctors said, but about 12 hours later her condition again worsened.

"It has not been determined," Dr. Bass said, "whether the convulsion was caused by brain damage stemming from the jaundice or from the breathing difficulty."

CORNER KICK

Booters take overtime loss

BERKELEY, Calif.—Michigan State University's soccer team got a bitter taste of California sun last night as the Long Island University Blackbirds swooped down and upset the booters...

The final score was 2-2. But the Spartans were declared the loser under a tournament rule which says that in the event of a tie after all the overtimes have been played, the team with the most corner kicks is the winner.

The Blackbirds took a 2-0 lead on the Spartans, the pre-tourney favorites, on goals by Carlo Tramontozzi in the first period and all-time leading LIL scorer Dov Markus in the second period.

Third period goals by Barry Fleman and Guy Busch sent the game into overtime.

At the end of two overtimes the score was still tied and each team had been awarded five corner kicks. At the end of the fourth overtime LIL was declared the winner on the basis of a corner kick awarded in the third overtime. And that was that.

For the Spartans it was their first loss of the season after 10 victories and a tie. LIL is now 15-1.

The Spartans lost in the NCAA finals in 1954, and to St. Louis in 1955, by identical 1-0 scores.

For Long Island, the first New York City school to reach the semifinals since 1959, it was the first time they had got past the opening round.

No. 2 in 'revenge' week: cagers tackle Miami

By BOB HORNING State News Sports Writer

Off to their best start in years, one year to be exact, the Michigan State basketball team goes for its second straight win over a Mid-American conference team at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Miami of Ohio comes to Jenison for the second date in what MSU coach John Benington calls his "revenge" week. Last night's victory was revenge for the loss to Western Michigan last year. Miami's coach Tates Locke beat Benington's St. Louis University team in the NIT in 1965 when Locke was coaching Army.

Next Saturday, Benington renews a rivalry with Wichita State, another team that gave St. Louis trouble in the Missouri Valley conference.

Miami was Mid-American champ last year with an 11-1 mark, 18-7 over-all. But this year things are expected to be a little more difficult for the inexperienced Redskins who hope to replace height with hustle.

Gone are 6-6 center Jim Patterson and 6-5 forward Jerry Pierson who combined for 29 points last year. That's not a lot of scoring, but Miami didn't usually need much with its defense.

Benington expects the Redskins to be the best defensive team to appear here this season. He didn't say if that includes the team that appears here for every game. Tom Slater will start at center for the Redskins. A pair of 6-4 forwards, Fred Foster and Frank Lukacs, will be the forwards. They were the top reserves a year ago.

At the guards will be 5-10 Jim Hallihan and 5-7 Phil Snow, a Little All-American. Richie Jordan should be glad to see him. If they can spot each other.

Snow is the top scorer among the returnees with his 13.8 average from last year.

Miami made the NCAA tournament last year because of its Mid-American title, but were knocked out in the first game with Dayton.

This will be the second game for the Redskins. They opened last night against Villa Madonna, Villa Madonna. The school in Covington, Kentucky.

Kentucky Wesleyan No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Kentucky Wesleyan, minus only one player from the team which swept to the NCAA semifinal college championship a year ago, today was accorded the No. 1 position in the pre-season ratings of the United Press International board of coaches.

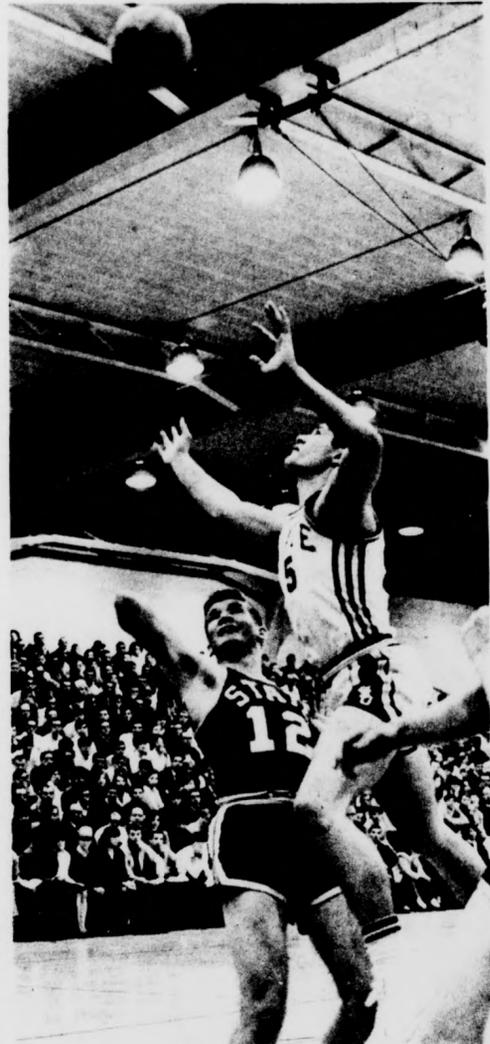

March after losing two games to the Salukis during the regular season.

Perennial contender Evansville, which has won four of the last eight NCAA tournaments, was ranked third with four first place votes and 191 points. Other teams receiving first place votes were Indiana State (2), Oklahoma Baptist (2) and Cheyney State. Pan American and Wheaton with one apiece.

North Dakota, which was runner-up to Southern Illinois in last year's final ratings, ranked fourth followed by Akron, which finished third in the NCAA Tournament.

Cheyney State, whose dreams of a perfect season were dashed in the NCAA east regional by Long Island U. 67-64, was sixth, with Grambling seventh and Indiana State, which tied Evansville for the Indiana Collegiate Conference crown, eighth.

Miss Gloor is one of two women bowlers who have bowled every game in the World's Invitational Tournament since it began in 1957. She has been a finalist every year and won the title in 1959.

DUFFY TO COACH

Spartans place four on East Shine team

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) -- All-America ends Jack Clancy of Michigan and Gene Washington of Michigan State and All-America halfback Nick Eddy of Notre Dame headed the 26-man East squad announced Thursday for the 42nd annual Shrine East-West football game at Kezar Stadium Dec. 31.

A total of five players from the all-America first team and one member of the second team were picked to play in the annual benefit game for crippled children. The other all-American first team players were linebackers Jim Lynch of Notre Dame and George Webster of Michigan State while halfback Clinton Jones of Michigan State was named from the second team.

To add balance for both offense and defense, the squads for this year's game were increased to 26 players each, according to game managing director Bert Jacobs. The West squad will be announced on Dec. 6, and it, too, includes a number of All-Americans.

Notre Dame and Michigan State, the nation's No. 1 and 2 college football teams this year, as expected, dominated the East squad, with three and four players, respectively.

Besides Washington, Webster and Jones, MSU also will be represented by Dick Kenney, the bare-foot kicker from Hawaii, who scored 45 points on 30 conversions and five field goals and averaged near 40-yards as a punter and kickoff specialist this past season.

Notre Dame's third player aside from Eddy and Lynch is defensive end Alan Page.

The East will be coached by Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State, Murray Warmath of Minnesota and Paul Dietzel of South Carolina.

Stocky fullback Dave Fisher of Michigan, halfback Bob Davis of Virginia and quarterbacks Benny Russell of Louisville and Danny Talbot of North Carolina complete the East offensive backfield.

Over the past two seasons, Russell has passed for nearly 3,800 yards and broke the Louisville record set by Johnny Unitas, now of the pro Baltimore Colts.

Talbot was injured most of the season but came back strong toward the end of the campaign and is remembered for having carried the Tarheels to victories over MSU, Ohio State and Michigan in his three previous seasons of play.

In Clancy, Washington and Ken Last of Minnesota the East boasts three outstanding ends. Clancy caught 76 passes for 1,076 yards in his senior year and 52 for 762 yards as a junior, while Washington, in addition to his fine pass-catching ability also served MSU as an exceptional blocker. Last holds the Gopher school record for receptions.

Don Parker of Virginia joins

Page at defensive end. Parker stands 6-3 and weighs 240 pounds but is not the biggest man on the squad. That honor goes to middle guard David Rowe of Penn State, a 6-6, 260-pounder.

Rounding out the squad are tackles Tom Stangel of Dayton and Mike Currant of Ohio State, Guards Tom Schuette of Indiana State and Bob Hyland of Boston College and center Charles Illinton of Mississippi on offense, and tackles Bob Rowe of Western Michigan and Tom Fussell of LSU, linebacker Stan Juk of South Carolina, and backs Phil Clark of Northwestern, Robert Bryant of South Carolina and Rick Volk of Michigan on defense.

Bearded Brown

Jim Brown, fullback turned actor, looks over the script for his next movie part. The beard is part of the preparation for the movie "Dark of the Sun" which will take Brown to Jamaica early next year.

Hockey team opens against Minnesota

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

MSU's hockey squad, defending national collegiate champion, opens the 1966-67 season with games tonight and Saturday at Minnesota.

The Spartans, with possibly the most potent offensive attack in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. will play a winless Minnesota team which has been shy on defense in its first four games.

Minnesota, which finished second to Michigan Tech in the WCHA last year, has lost 8-6 and 5-3 to Colorado and 8-1 to Minnesota-Duluth in league games after dropping a 10-6 decision to its alumni at the beginning of the year.

Part of the Gophers' problems may be at the goalie position where two sophomores and two juniors are vying for the position.

The Gophers, in Spartan Coach Amo Bessone's words, "have a fast, aggressive team, and there's no doubt they can score. Their defense has been leaky thus far, but much of that can be expected as early season mistakes."

Minnesota's offense ranks with the best and is bolstered by eight lettermen. The spearheads of the Gopher attack are juniors Gary Gambucci and Chuck Norby who had impressive sophomore seasons last year. Gambucci was selected to the WCHA All-Star second team and as the league's sophomore-of-the-year.

MSU's goalie Gaye Cooley, voted the most valuable player in the NCAA tournament and co-holder of the team's most valuable player award last season, will be out to stop the Gopher attack.

Defending WCHA scoring champion Doug Volmar, who heads the MSU offense, will be looking for a fast start in his quest to become the second WCHA skater to repeat as top scorer. The All-American and All-WCHA selection led MSU in goals (26), assists (28) and points (54) last year, with 18 goals and 23 assists coming in league play for his winning total of 41 points.

At left wing opposite Volmar will be Co-Captain Mike Jacobson, who set an MSU record of 29 goals in the 64-65 season and then had 13 goals and nine assists for 22 points last year, despite being out for most of the season with injuries.

Bill Faunt finishes out the all-senior front line for MSU at center. Faunt contributed eight goals (one an unassisted score in MSU's NCAA championship win) and 23 assists to the Spartan totals last year. Faunt replaces co-captain and center Tom Mikola, who is expected to be sidelined until January with a wrist injury.

Rounding out MSU's starting line-up will be senior Bob Brawley (a football linebacker) and junior Dick Bols on defense. Lack of defensive depth was reported to be MSU's main weakness by preseason experts, and this opening series could prove or dispel the observation.

Juniors Wayne Duffett and Bob Fallat will be on the wings for MSU's second unit with sophomores Nelson DeBenedet and Bob DeMarco at defense and sophomore Ken Anstey at center.

Completing the Spartans' 17-man traveling squad will be wings Sandy McAndrew, Nino Cristofoli and John Schuster, defenseman Doug French and Brian Glennie and goalie Jerry Fisher.

Scoring Champ

Doug Volmar, Spartan hockey scoring leader eyes the first game of the season with Minnesota tonight. Volmar, who lead not only the Spartans but the whole Western Collegiate Hockey Association in scoring last year also is looking for a chance to become the second man in history to repeat as conference scoring champion by equalling last year's performance.

Region's best gymnasts in Oak Park Midwest Open

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

There'll be a preview of the best in the Midwest Saturday when regional gymnasts gather at Oak Park, Ill., High School for the Midwest Open.

The meet, an annual invitational affair, brings together collegiate competitors from four of the top five teams in the nation -- Southern Illinois, the '66 NCAA champ; third-place Michigan State, Iowa State and Michigan -- as well as 10th-place Colorado.

The rest of the Big Ten will be there too, along with representatives from Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado State, Oklahoma, Minnesota State and the California Gymnastics Club.

Spartan Coach George Szypula anticipates a great meet, pointing to the outstanding individuals who will be competing.

He doesn't have to look far to find them. Headlining the group are Spartan Big Ten chams Dave Thor and Dave Croft and NCAA title-winner Ed Gunny.

Fred Roehlisberger, formerly of Wisconsin and ranked as the No. 2 gymnast in the country, will be there. So will Wayne Miller of Michigan, the conference and NCAA trampoline king.

The varsity entrants do not compete as a team. Of the group, Thor is working all-around.

Running down events, the competitors are: floor exercise -- Toby Towson, Haynie and Bill Diggins; side horse -- Dennis Smith, Ed Witzke, Jerry Moore; high bar -- Gunny, Hayate, Cliff Diehl.

Also, parallel bars -- Diehl, Haynie, Smith or Diggins; rings -- Gunny, Larry Goldberg, Croft; vault -- Towson, Gunny, Smith; trampoline -- Keith Sterner and Ray Walker.

A major feature of the meet is its function as a showcase for freshman talent. A trio of MSU frosh will get their first collegiate taste of competition.

Heading the list is Joe Fedorchik of Belle Vernon, Pa. Fedorchik, a former all-around champ, will be working that event Saturday. Szypula considers him one of his best future prospects.

Craig Kinsey, no relation to the varsity's Dan, will compete on side horse. Rich Merahata of Boulder, Colo., a national merit scholar, is slated for floor exercise and trampoline.

Also working with the frosh will be Ron Aure on floor exercise and trampoline and Den Kinsey on rings.

Football draft considered

NEW YORK (UPI) -- National and American Football League owners shoved aside plans for the Super Bowl Thursday and wrestled with the mechanics of the first common college player draft on the fourth day of their fall meetings.

It took three days before league officials settled upon a formula for the re-alignment of the NFL's two divisions and prospects for a speedy solution to the draft dilemma were dim.

"We won't get to the Super Bowl until the matter of the draft is settled," a league spokesman explained.

That could take quite a while. The draft, which will include 25 teams for the first time, is being discussed behind separate closed doors by the NFL and AFL owners and no indication has been given as to the problems being encountered.

"They are discussing the same thing separately," the spokesman said. "When they reach their conclusions they will match up the results."

Among the roadblocks are the date and site of the player selections, the form the draft will take and the place of the new franchise, insofar as their part in the draft is concerned.

"The re-alignment took a little longer than we expected but we're not really too far behind schedule," the spokesman added, Wednesday the NFL decided on four four-team divisions -- the Central, Coastal, Capital and Federal.

The Eastern Conference will be comprised of the Federal and Capitol divisions, with St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and New York in the Federal and Dallas, Philadelphia, Washington and New Orleans in the Capitol for 1967. In 1968, New York and New Orleans will switch divisions.

The West's Coastal Division will be Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Atlanta while the Central will have Green Bay, Chicago, Detroit and Minnesota. This matchup will remain through 1968.

Post season playoffs will involve divisional games before the NFL title game for the league championship. That winner will meet the champion of the AFL in the proposed Super Bowl.

Williams blames manager for Nov. 14 loss to Clay

HOUSTON (UPI) -- Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams, who lost to heavyweight champion Cassius Clay in three rounds Nov. 14, said Thursday his manager harassed him so much prior to the fight that he was mentally unfit to enter the ring.

Williams referred to Hugh Benbow, a long-winded oilman who supervised Williams' training on his ranch near Yoakum, Tex., the last two months before the title fight.

Williams said Benbow harassed him by calling him frequently at midnight, talking incessantly while he was trying to concentrate on training, and by taking his wife and daughter from the training camp.

Committee says nix to spitter

PITTSBURGH (UPI) -- For the umpteenth time in as many years, Baseball's Playing Rules Committee refused Thursday to legalize the spitball.

Each year, a number of baseball officials petition for the return of the spitball, which is used liberally anyway but illegally in the majors, and each year the Rules Committee turns down the proposal.

MSU wrestlers participate in elimination matches in practice as they ready themselves for their season opener this Saturday night against the Air Force Academy. Coach Grady Peninger has 11 men returning from last year's Big Ten championship squad. State News photo by Karl Scribner

SEASON OPENER

Matmen battle Air Force

Final weight class eliminations have been made as the MSU wrestling team awaits their season opener against the Air Force Academy at 7:30 in the Men's IM Arena Saturday.

Coach Grady Peninger has been holding elimination matches this week in an effort to determine starters in three weight classes. Winning were George Hoddy, 115; Dave Campbell, 152, and Rod Ott, 160.

Other wrestlers starting against the Air Force who Peninger feels should turn in top performances are Don Behm, Dale Anderson and Dale Carr, all previous Big Ten champs. Behm is in the 130-pound class, Anderson, 137, and Carr, 145.

Mike Bradley, 177-pound Big Ten champ last year, will not participate Saturday because he was a member of the Spartan football team and has not yet gotten into shape.

Jeff Richardson, heavyweight champ two years ago, has made plans to play in the North-South football game and will not be wrestling until mid-January.

Jack Zindell, another football player, will be wrestling Saturday, but will be in heavyweight class.

Instead of his normal 177-pound class.

Others who will be competing against the academy are Gary Bissell, 123; George Radman, 167; Mike Johnson, 177, and John Schneider, 191.

Hoddy, Bissell, Schneider and Zindell are all sophomores. Keith Lowrance, considered the most promising sophomore after a stand-out season on the freshman squad last year, had a knee operation recently and will not be in action this year.

George Smadnas, a sophomore in the 152-pound class, is recovering from a knee injury and is expected to start again in about three weeks.

In two previous meetings with the Air Force, MSU won, 27-3, in 1965 and, 36-3, last year. Peninger figures the Air Force to be stronger this year.

The meet takes on special interest to him, as Kark Kitt, the Air Force coach, coached Peninger in high school in Tulsa, Okla.

Swim team previews season with Falcons

There follows at least one meet every weekend after that until late February. The season ends with the Big Ten and NCAA Championships, which will both be held at MSU in March.

Coach Charles McCaffree said that the most interesting home dual meet should be against the University of Michigan Jan. 21.

U-M placed third in the NCAA and second in the Big Ten last year--in both cases just one position ahead of MSU.

Reviewing this year's prospects, Coach McCaffree said, "We have four or five men of national standing, but we bring 18 men to the championship meet and a lot depends on each of them."

McCaffree's first line of swimmers is strong. Gary Dilley, Ken Walsh, Pete Williams and Ed Glick were all among the team's top five scorers last year.

Gary Dilley, a senior, from Huntington, Ind., was a silver-medal winner in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. He was last year's NCAA and Big Ten champion in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events.

Ken Walsh, a senior from Ponte Verde, Fla., has been an excellent dual meet competitor in the freestyle events. Especially strong in the middle-distance events, Ken was third in the 500 freestyle and fifth in the 100 freestyle at the NCAA last year.

Pete Williams, a junior from Pittsburgh, Pa., has been a strong addition to the team. He finished third in both the 200- and 400-yard individual medley events in the Big Ten, as well as fourth in the 200-yard backstroke.

Ed Glick, an extremely versatile swimmer, is a senior from Huntington. He finished second in the Big Ten 1650-yard freestyle last year.

But, as McCaffree said, a team may bring 18 men to the Big Ten Championships, and must score with all of them to have much chance for success.

It is these other men--the rest of the 18--who will have to prove themselves in such meets as that of Dec. 10 against Bowling Green.

Returning lettermen Fred Whiteford in diving, Rolf Groseth and Dan Pangborn in freestyle, Bob Wolf in backstroke and Jack Marsh in breaststroke should see increasing service this year.

Sophomores like Don Rauch and Gary Langley, freestylers, and George Booth, butterflyer, will get their first chance at varsity competition.

Duane Green and Doug Todd, two sophomore divers, should provide increased strength in the one and three-meter diving events.

Gowling Green should provide a test for the depth elements of the MSU team.

Beaumont strings set for today

The Beaumont String Quartet will perform at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Music Auditorium.

The quartet, rated as one of the country's most respected chamber music groups, is composed of MSU faculty members Romeo Tata, violin, Theodore Johnson, violin, Lyman Bodman, viola, and Louis Potter, cello.

The program will consist of one of Beethoven's early works, the "Quartet, Opus 18 No. 2 in G Major," followed by Samuel Barber's "String Quartet No. 1, Opus 11."

Barber's work contains the slow movement that was later arranged into the familiar string orchestra piece, "Adagio for Strings."

Following an intermission, the quartet will perform the popular Impressionistic "Quartet in F Major" by Ravel.

The recital is open to the general public.

Beaumont String Quartet

Music faculty members Romeo Tata, violinist; Lyman Bodman, violinist; Louis Potter, cellist; and Theodore Johnson, violinist, will perform here today.

People to People to sponsor dance

The MSU People to People Assn. will hold a dance tonight in the multipurpose rooms of Hubbard Hall. Admission is 25 cents and the band will be the Loose Ends. The money will be used to sponsor a South Viet Nam village and for various civic projects.

Today is the deadline for organizations wanting their winter term events listed on the Union Board calendar. Send the name of the organization, date, time and place to the Union Board office.

The MSU Science-Fiction Club will meet from 2-4 p.m. Saturday in the Oak Room of the Union.

The Humanities Dept. will hold its Record Concert Series at 7 tonight in 114 Bessey. Selections will be Vivaldi's "Sinfonia for

It's what's happening

Strings," Haydn's "Symphony No. 101," Chopin's "Piano Music Selections," Debussy's "La Mer," and Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin."

The International Club will hold a Christmas party at 8 p.m. Saturday in the U.N. Lounge of the Union. There is no admission charge, and there will be dancing, refreshments, entertainment and door prizes.

Delta Sigma Theta will hold a dance from 9 p.m.-midnight Saturday in the Union Ballroom. Admission will be 75 cents, dress will be casual, and the theme will be "Deltas in the Limelight."

Akers Hall will hold a dance 9 p.m. - midnight Saturday in its classrooms.

The Hillel Foundation will sponsor a Hannukah party at 8 p.m. Saturday. Latkes will be served, and guests will be welcome. R.S.V.P. at 332-1916 or 332-2902.

Delta Tau Delta and Pi Beta Phi will hold their annual Christmas tree lighting at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Union. There will be caroling and the ceremony is open to the public.

The Moslem Students Assn. will hold a general meeting at 3 p.m. Saturday in 22 Union.

Air Force qualification exam set

The Air Force Officer Qualification Test for the Air Force ROTC two-year program will be administered at 8:15 a.m. Saturday in Bessey Auditorium.

The two-year program, available to any male student with two years education remaining at MSU by fall term of 1967, can qualify the student for a commission in the Air Force Reserve, a spokesman said.

Applications for the programs are now being accepted. Applications for the test are not necessary, but they are encouraged, the spokesman said. Both applications can be picked up at Air Force Quonset 67.

To qualify for the program, students must pass the qualification test and a medical examination, the spokesman said.

Qualifying students will attend a six-week field training course at an Air Force base next summer in preparation for on-campus training. The students will receive travel expenses and $120 for training time.

Beginning September, 1967, the students will attend class three hours per week for two academic years, receiving $40 per month. Upon completion of the program, the students will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Force Reserve.

LAST FLING

Have fun before finals

Guaranteed to help your grades go up: get a date (or two or three) this weekend and have a great time before starting to study for finals.

"Saint Joan," by George Bernard Shaw, is being presented in the University Theatre tonight through Sunday. The live performance is a refreshing change for TV-score and movie-worn eyes. To be sure of seats, better call in advance. Many performances are already sold out.

Tonight for the ninth week in a row Shaw Hall will sponsor a mixer.

The Toniks will entertain from 9 p.m. until midnight. The Loose Ends will play at the Hubbard mixer tonight from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Butterfield Hall is sponsoring a mixer in the Brody cafeteria, also tonight, from 9 p.m. until midnight.

Tonight there's a jazz symposium co-sponsored by the ATL Dept. and the United Campus Christian Fellowship. The seven musicians, most of them ATL faculty, will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the McDonel Kiva.

Entertainment This Weekend

By ELLEN ZURKEY

The Beaumont String Quartet will perform at 8:15 p.m. tonight in the Music Auditorium.

Saturday Emmons Hall will sponsor the Brody mixer from 9 p.m. until midnight.

There will be a varsity wrestling meet in the arena of the Men's IM Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The Spartans will face the men of the Air Force Academy.

James Metcalf will narrate the film "Puerto Rico" Saturday in the Auditorium.

"Dr. Zhivago" continues its successful run at the Gladmer.

Dean Martin and Joey Bishop star in "Texas Across the River," a comedy now showing at the Campus.

"Years of Lightning, Day of Drums" is an historical documentary about the presidency, life and death of John F. Kennedy. The much acclaimed film is now playing at the State.

"The Blue Max" is now showing at the Michigan. It stars George Peppard, James Mason and Ursula Andress in a story about World War I.

Monday through Friday of this week students of the speech department will present a series of one-act plays. Two plays a night will be performed in 49 Auditorium.

Monday at 6 p.m. "A Slight Ache" will be performed and at 9 p.m. it will be "The Lesson."

Tuesday at 9 p.m. "The Glory and the Flower" will be presented Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. "The Dumb Waiter" is scheduled and at 9 p.m. it's "The Bear."

Thursday at 7:30 p.m. the students will do "Hello Out There," and at 9 p.m. "This Property Is Condemned."

Friday at 7:30 p.m. "The Zeus Story" will be told and at 9 p.m. "The Chairs" will be done.

All performances are open to the student body and are free.

LANSING SYMPHONY

Concert to include Dvorak symphony

The music of Jolo, Mendelssohn and Dvorak will be included in the Lansing Symphony's second concert of the season at 8:15 p.m. Monday in Sexton Auditorium.

Under the baton of conductor Hugo Vianello, the orchestra will perform Jolo's "The Triumph of St. Joan," Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto" and Dvorak's "New World Symphony."

The "Violin Concerto" will feature violinist James Oliver Buswell IV, the youngest violinist ever to perform with the New York Philharmonic.

Following the concert the Lansing Town Hall will host a reception, in honor of conductor Vianello and soloist Buswell, at the new Pear and Partridge Restaurant, Capital City Airport.

Tickets for the reception will be on sale during the intermission for $1.75.

New bus passes now

New bus passes will go on sale Dec. 12, announced Henry Jolman, general foreman of the Campus Bus System.

The new passes will be honored immediately on purchase while the old ones are good until Jan. 4.

The bus passes will be sold at the International Center Book Store, the Union Ticket Office, Owen Graduate Center, the Married Housing Office and at Landon, Mason, Abbot, Akers, Fee, Hubbard, Holmes, Case, Wilson, Wonders, McDonel, Shaw and the Brody living units.

Loving thy neighbor: there's nothing easier

Taoism-peace in harmony

Taoism, one of the ancient philosophical religions of China, teaches that a man finds peace and truth by putting himself in harmony with the course of Nature.

That is the way of Tao, the way of Heaven. Tao is the source of all active power in existent things.

In Taoism a man's final goal is to be absorbed into the quietude and truth of Tao.

The following readings are from the Tao Te Ching, The Treatise of Tao and Its Power.

Look at the things that have been flourishing; Each goes back to its origin.

Tao begets One; one begets two; two begets three; three begets all things.

Therefore the Sage embrace the One.

Nature does not have to insist, Can blow for only half a morning, Rain for only half a day,

Without going out of the door One can know the whole world...

The further one travels The less one knows.

There is nothing in the world more soft and weak than water, yet for attacking things that are hard and strong there is nothing that surpasses it...

If a great kingdom humbles itself before a small kingdom, it shall make that small kingdom its prize.

He who attains Tao is everlasting, Though his body may decay he never perishes.

Urban boom seen in cards

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Christmas is "coming to town" more than ever this year as the background for greeting cards.

Country landscapes with white fields, horse-drawn sleighs on snow-covered roads, little churches and other rural scenes are popular, but big city skylines, lights and parks are cropping up more and more in card illustrations.

It's all part of the "urban explosion" that by 1980 will see the nation's city population twice that of 1950, according to the American Artists Group.

ATL, CONSTRUCTION

Hannah talks about MSU

President John A. Hannah answered a variety of questions which ranged from the ATL controversy to campus construction at West Shaw Hall Wednesday night.

At the well attended question-and-answer session, Hannah discredited the rumor that the residence hall would soon be converted into office space. Hannah said it was "economically unfeasible. After all," he said, "an office building doesn't pay for itself like a living unit does."

Apologizing for turning an informal hall visit into a speech, Hannah emphasized the influence of education on the civil rights movements. He said as the only president of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission he has seen some of its recommendations turn into law, and afford better opportunities for young Negroes.

He said that the commission is currently working on a report for President Johnson about the effect of desegregated schools on the white and Negro student populations. Hannah said the president may incorporate his findings into his annual message to Congress.

Hannah said he felt that in large city schools a "1 to 1" student base could not be achieved because of the numbers in the population. He said he would suggest a "public school park" which would supply all the educational and necessary social services in a large urban school district. Hannah said that pairing of white and Negro school districts, or bussing students into new districts would not work.

He stressed that need for letting the individual select and achieve a future for himself without apologizing for his race or background.

Other questions raised generated comment on the ATL issue, the size of the University, and future building projects.

Hannah explained the tenure system at MSU and felt that there was nothing unique about the terminations in the ATL Dept. He said as far as the insinuations concerning Zeitgeist were concerned, he had never read the magazine, but felt that "four letter words for the sake of four letter words" were not scholarly, but were not morally corrupting to a college student who by the time he is 20-years-old knows all the words anyway. "If I had my way, there would be a soapbox set up somewhere on campus for who ever wanted to use it," said Hannah. "I feel every dissenter has the right to dissent--as long as he doesn't interfere with the workings of the University," he continued. Commenting on the construction on campus, Hannah said that the most unsatisfactory building projects are in married housing. He said more units are needed rapidly.

Hannah added that because of financial consideration, every building on this campus can't look like "old college gothic". He said when you speak about "dollars per cubic foot," the money is spent on living or working space, and not on an attic.

Responding again to a question on the finances involved, Hannah said that construction costs are rising. He said that the plumbers working on the new $6-7.5 million complexes receive a yearly income of $12,000. This, he added, is more than aspiring young professors receive for working in the academic area.

Hannah dwelled on the aspect of student-faculty relationships, and said it did not matter what the size of the institution, a faculty member is available to everyone, but that most students just don't take the time to see them and get to know them.

A student volunteered that his professor said that after teaching here for 25 years he still has yet to meet President Hannah. Hannah summarized his feelings by retorting, "Well, tell him it's his own fault."

Concerning the Phi Beta Kappa chapter query, Hannah said that although MSU has several key holders on its staff, a chapter is not established on a "technologically" oriented campus. He said that going strictly by the requirements, MSU's colleges of Arts and Letters and Social Science would qualify. But he added that chapters are established according to University programs and not college or department programs.

College Bowl hit by low participation

ASMSU's College Bowl is lacking in student participation as several units forfeited matches, causing scheduling problems, said Gary Posner, ASMSU's vice-president of academic affairs.

When two competing teams both fail to show up at a match, the set schedule is thrown off-balance, leaving one victorious team with no competition, Posner said.

On-campus matches scheduled for Sunday include W. McDonel - E. McDonel vs. Bryan-Williams

Kindness to kitten costs grad student

By CHRISTINE O'CONNOR
State News Staff Writer

Taking pity on a poor little kitten costs -- a Gull Lake graduate student discovered the hard way. Driving home at 4:30 a.m. Monday morning Nov. 14, (after putting in his shift in the Notre-Dame ticket line) Gary Fischer hit a kitten that ran in front of his car.

Well, he couldn't just leave her there so he spent the next few hours trying to get the kitty's wounds patched. About 6:30 a.m., he and his furry gray friend found the small animal clinic.

And he left the kitten there--with a broken left hind leg, penicillin, a tranquilizer and the kind clinic staff. When Fischer returned that afternoon, the kitten had already rolled up a tab of $12, which later rose six fold "for the whole business."

Was it worth it? Well, the kitten has a friend now. "I had carried it around for about two hours that morning," Fischer said. So he knocked on doors on Beech Street where he had hit the kitten, found the owners, found the owners didn't care and was back where he started.

He couldn't call out the Marines and the Mounties are used to bigger game. So -- he called the sororities. The girls of Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi and Zeta Tau Alpha agreed to help pay the tabby's tab. But the bill ran higher than anticipated, so Fischer's still seeking aid.

The kitten was operated on Tuesday and went 'home' Wednesday. Her leg has a pin in it and she's wearing a splint, so "we may call her Chester," Fischer said.

He can't keep a cat in his apartment and has the problem of finding a new home for his "$75 feline" as soon as the leg is healed.

Fischer thinks the funniest part of the whole thing is that "I don't like cats and I was sober."

Short-term loans stopped until Jan. 5

No more ASMSU loans will be given out to students until the first day of classes winter term, announced Cliff Kolbus, ASMSU's comptroller.

Students with outstanding loans are to go to 326 Student Services Building before early registration to repay the loan and obtain a release card for their hold in registration, Kolbus said.

The loan service has been in operation for at least 15 years, he said, and the office loans out approximately $16,000 per year.

Any full-time, undergraduate student is eligible for a loan and no reason needs to be given when applying for one.

A student need only present an ID card to receive a maximum of $15 for three weeks.

The loan must be repaid within three weeks or the student will be charged $1 per week penalty for each week over-due up to five weeks, when the case will be referred to the dean, Kolbus explained.

The loans are generally repaid on time. The heaviest periods of loans are during spring term and vacations.

There is now approximately $6,000 available for student loans, he said.

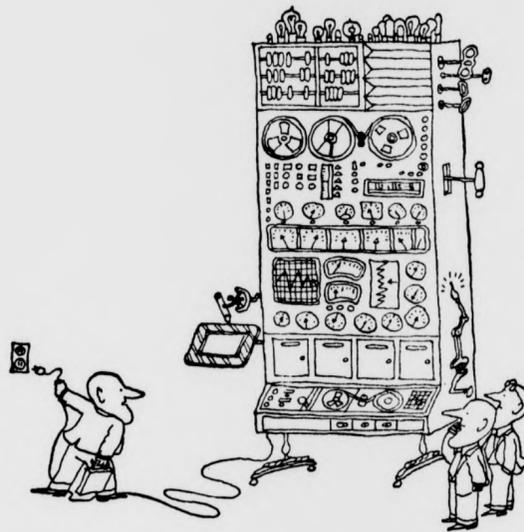

The money was originally allocated from the Student Board and the ASUG Congress.

According to Kolbus, the office loses money on the proposition. Two loan officers are hired.

Approximately $450 per term is used just to operate the service, Kolbus said. The costs include officer's pay, postage, paper and other necessary items.

The comptroller's office will be open Monday through Friday of finals week from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 - 5 p.m. for loan repayments.

"Let's unplug the computer, boys! Start thinking!"

A lot of people believe that someday computers will do all their thinking for them.

Well, a funny thing is going to happen on the way to the future:

You're going to have to think harder and longer than ever.

Computers can't dream up things like Picturephone service, Telstar® satellite, and some of the other advances in communications we have made. Of course, we depended on computers to solve some of the problems connected with their development. But computers need absolutely clear and thorough instructions, which means a new and tougher discipline on the human intelligence.

And it will take more than a computer to create a pocket phone the size of a matchbook, let's say... or find a practical way to lock a door or turn off an oven by remote telephone control, or to make possible some of the other things we'll have someday.

It takes individuals... perhaps you could be one... launching new ideas, proposing innovations and dreaming dreams.

And someday, we're going to have to find a way to dial locations in space. Makes you think.

The Notre Dame debate team was able to accomplish what it's football team couldn't -- it beat the Spartans.
 In the "Great Debate" held at the University of Detroit theater Wednesday night, judges from U-D and Wayne State handed Irish orators Patrick Rahe and Jim

Rice a 2-1 decision over Spartan debaters Ken Newton and Dick Brautigam on the topic "Resolved: our football team is the No. 1 team in the nation."
 Newton, a Trenton, N.J., senior, said that MSU outplayed strategically and statistically, gaining more yards on the ground, more yards on the air, and more first downs, adding that "MSU played like a No. 1 team. No team steeped in a winning tradition plays for a tie."

 Rice, for Notre Dame, listed four points why Notre Dame "deserves the lofty rating it holds in the polls today." The Irish lead all colleges in scoring (36.2 points per game), lead the nation in defense (allowing only 3.8 points per game, plus six shut-outs).

 Also, Rice argued, Notre Dame has more outstanding personnel -- seven All-Americans to MSU's three, and it emerged from the Nov. 20 game dominant on the basis of its comeback and its penetration and putting the MSU goal in jeopardy more times.

 Brautigam, an Albion Junior, dismissed the polls as "politically motivated and not based on actual games" and since MSU and Notre Dame play such different schedules, the only way to judge them is in games against common opponents -- Northwestern and Purdue.

"MSU consistently outplayed Notre Dame against Purdue and Northwestern" he said, "and the better personnel argument falls through when you consider that in 1962, State had more All-Americans than any other school but had a 5-5 season. A great team like the Spartans is built on teamwork, not individual all-stars."

Rahe claimed that MSU had an easier time over Purdue because there was nothing left of them when we got through with them." He also restated the four fields of superiority, adding that "MSU may be No. 1A, but it isn't No. 1."

University has really failed in its responsibility to the students to keep prices low in the University's own bookstore. Here is a chance for the University to take a position of strong leadership and it has not done so.

Sink cited the example of the University of Illinois giving students a discount of 4 per cent in the university bookstore, which in turn forced prices down in privately-owned bookstores. Speaking for the business interests in the East Lansing area, Jonas explained that such things as high taxes and high rent contributed to a soaring overhead for many local businesses.

the high rate of occupancy in area housing units and allows landlords to keep rents high.

Leslie B. Sims, assistant professor of chemistry, will be the main speaker at a workshop at Ohio University in Athens, The mass spectrometry workshop, Dec. 9-10, will be sponsored by the Upper Ohio Valley Section of the American Chemical Society.

U.S. team is to serve in an advisory capacity only, Ryder said. Sponsoring the project is the Midwest Consortium for International Studies. The consortium is comprised of Michigan State University, plus the universities of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, and is supported by a grant from the Ford Foundation.

During Ryder's absence, Lawrence VonFersch, associate dean for academic programs in engineering, will act as dean of the college.

Louis F. Twardzik, associate professor in the Department of Resource Development, presented a paper, "A Method of Assigning Market Value to Unique Recreation Resources" at the 25th annual meeting of the Southeastern State Park Directors Conference recently held in Tennessee.

MSU will be represented at the 59th annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers Dec. 4-8 in Detroit by five chemical engineers.

Environment expert sets lecture today
 John Phillips, a noted African ecologist, will give a public lecture here at 3 p.m. today in the Natural Resources Building.
 Phillips, a member of the faculty of the University of Natal, Union of South Africa, is currently a visiting professor of ecology at the University of Pennsylvania.
 An authority on interpreting landscapes to learn their past and future potentials for resource expansion, he is serving as coordinator of the study group on the Delaware River Basin.
 Next, he will head a United Nations study group in Thailand which will study the hill tribes of the country in relation to their resources.

Prof to advise U.S. Ag Dept.
 James D. Shaffer, professor of agricultural economics, has been named a member of the Human Nutrition and Consumer Use Research Advisory Committee by Secretary of Agriculture Orville R. Freeman.
 Shaffer will first meet with the committee Monday through Thursday in Washington.
 The committee advises the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture on all aspects of research aimed at improving food quality.
 Shaffer is also a member of the American Farm Economics Assn. and the American Economics Assn.

COMPUTER TUTORS

Who will teach in 1970?

By LAUREL PRATT
State News Staff Writer

Imagine a teacher who is an expert in your field--and a good many others as well; a teacher who holds virtually continuous office hours, knows you by your first name, and can tell you at any moment how you are doing in his course and all your other courses.

He knows what you need to know and has set up a specific program to fill in the gaps in your knowledge, using courses from other universities as well as your own.

It's not impossible. A team of planners from MSU, the University of Michigan and Wayne State University have been meeting for over a year to plan a computer network that will soon give students at all three schools the opportunity to use C A I--Computer-Assisted Instruction--in a common store of courses.

Computers on each campus would be hooked up so that anything in one would be immediately accessible to the others. Each would control a number of student stations (the planned beginning figure is nine).

A student station will include a cathode ray tube, something like a TV screen, for visual displays by the computer. There will be a light pen hooked up so that the student can point the pen at the screen to answer the computer's questions. A random-access slide projector will present whatever additional visual information the student needs. He will communicate with the computer via typewriter-like keyboard. The computer will talk to the student through an audio-tape recorder.

Frank N. Marzocco, director of the MSU Human Learning Research Institute and chairman of the planning group, emphasized the ability of the computer system to tailor a course to the individual.

The computer can evaluate what a student has and what he lacks, and make up a program that fills in the gaps so that he doesn't have to learn what he already knows or what he doesn't need in view of the purposes for which he is taking the course.

The computer can also set up a study program for the student, and may even send the student off to the library for further information.

The computer will be used in addition to and not in place of the kinds of instruction now used in the university, said Marzocco.

Lectures will be given when lectures accomplish the learning purpose best; but for areas in which optimum learning takes place in a student's being faced with a body of knowledge, the computer may be able to present the knowledge better than the presentation could be done in a one-teacher, one-student situation, he said.

Three functions are projected for the computer in this kind of system: tutorial, which is helping the student as he needs help; simulation, as in laboratory experiments more efficiently done by working with the abstract numbers involved than by actually working with the materials of the experiment; and testing, which directs the student to learning activities he needs.

The simulation function has been used in a few college science courses such as chemical qualitative analysis. The student asks the computer for specific information and the computer gives it to him to work with instead of doing long, complicated experiments. The "dry lab" allows a student to "mess around" with the data and change the experiment as he wishes, since the computer responds instantly to any student change in the problem.

This kind of computer system is also to be used in teaching school counselors how to handle situations in their schools, said Norman T. Bell, associate director of the Institute. A course is being worked out now which simulates, through written information and pictures, a counseling problem in the form of an interview with a hard-to-reach student.

It is also being used in medical schools, where the medical student is given data concerning a patient and asked to make a diagnosis and order treatment. He is immediately told whether the patient lived or died from his action, since information is taken from actual records. The "real-life" situation fills the need for practice without becoming a real matter of life or death.

The Michigan computer network, which will be open to any college in Michigan with the interest and the equipment to participate, may eventually be part of a nation-wide system.

"We want to get the resources, wherever they happen to be, to the student, wherever he happens to be," said Marzocco.

The planners are meeting this week in Jackson to plan specifics and possibly to discuss financing. The group has planned to file a million-dollar-plus joint request to the state to finance the project.

This kind of project may mean that in a few years professors will know what kind of teaching can be done by computers and what kind should be done only by machines. Then, said Bell, the computer will be doing what the professor shouldn't have to do, and "human beings will be free to do human work."

Finals package offer

Some 1,300 orders are at the East Lansing Post Office awaiting pickup and payment of the business reply mail fee, it was learned Thursday. Post Office officials said they could not release information on persons who rent boxes.

Hazlett cannot be prosecuted if he lives up to his promise of the package contents, police officials said.

Eidon Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, explained how students and their parents had been cheated on a $5 "Panic Kit" several years ago.

It had been advertised, Nonnamaker said, that the student would receive assorted candy and fruits and a variety of jellies.

"The packages the students actually received contained a roll of assorted life-savers, a tiny apple and orange, and nickel cups of jelly," he stated. "But this fulfilled the agreement."

Nonnamaker advised Wednesday for students and parents to "investigate carefully before placing an order."

LONDON, (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson flew to Gibraltar Thursday night for a last-ditch meeting with Rhodesia's white minority leader Prime Minister Ian Smith to end Rhodesia's rebellion. Wilson promised Parliament before leaving there will be no surrender of Britain's principles in seeking a settlement.

The British and Rhodesian prime ministers, with their advisers, are expected to board the British cruiser Tiger and then, somewhere in the Mediterranean, try to thrash out differences that have brought Southern Africa almost to the flash-point.

Smith left Salisbury on a British military jet with Sir Humphrey Gibbs and Sir Hugh Beadle, the governor and the chief justice of the breakaway colony. The extraordinary rendezvous at sea stripped both leaders of the need in the next few days to adopt public postures. For a while they will be out of the reach of newsmen.

A day packed with drama produced a variety of reactions to the summit-at-sea, reactions ranging from relief to hostility.

There was, in the main, general approval when Wilson told an overflowing House of Commons of his government's "utter determination" not to relax Britain's terms for a settlement.

"It is a slur," Wilson emphasized, "to suggest that we are likely to depart from the principles laid down."

But later, explaining why he had consented to meet a man branded as a rebel against Queen Elizabeth II, he asserted the two sides "are within hailing distance of a possible settlement."

After Smith's takeoff, reports

Seniors of the Week

John Mongeon, Fairfax, Va., (standing) and Dick Sharkey, Detroit, are the honored seniors this week for their activities. Mongeon is a member of Honors College and Excalibur and served as president of Men's Halls Assn. Sharkey was captain of this year's cross-country team. State News photo by John Castle

Mongeon, Sharkey chosen for honors

An honors college student from Fairfax, Va., and cross-country runner from Detroit have been chosen Seniors of the Week.

John Mongeon, who devotes much of his time to dormitory and student government activities, and Dick Sharkey, who devotes much of his time to winning races are in the spotlight this week.

Mongeon has been a member of Frosh-Soph Council, Spartan Spirit and the Water Carnival. As previous president of Men's Hall Assn., he served as one of the original members of the ASMSU Student Board. He is also a member of Excalibur, Blue Key, Enzian, Tau Sigma and Omicron Delta Sigma.

In spite of giving such a vast amount of time to these groups Mongeon has maintained an overall 3.56 grade average.

"One of the most satisfying jobs I have had at Michigan State is that of a resident assistant," he said. "It is challenging and rewarding."

In his spare time Mongeon enjoys showing Great Danes, swimming and writing. He has been majoring in English, but plans to attend law school in the Washington, D.C. area.

Sharkey, a social science major, is proud of being a member of the cross-country team. "MSU has had a winning tradition in distance running," says Sharkey, "and I am glad to have had an opportunity to run for my college."

Sharkey, who runs primarily in the two-mile event, prefers indoor running to outdoor running. "Indoor running assures that the elements and conditions for running will always be consistent and prepares a runner for the outdoor events," he said.

One of the benefits received from athletics has been the chance to travel. "Track has allowed me to see different parts of the country while still in school," he commented.

In the past Sharkey has been a canoe enthusiast and for this reason would like to go canoeing in Canada. He is also interested in music and can play the trombone, baritone and piano.

PMs try for end to rebellion in Salisbury said the Rhodesian prime minister had a tough time winning his Cabinet's approval for the conference. Right wingers were said to have opposed the mission. There were suggestions that Smith actually threatened to quit if he did not get his way.

Among some Negro Africans, a sense of shock and suspicion was evident at what some saw as a possible white man's deal at the expense of Rhodesia's four million blacks.

Huff says ATL case still alive

Reasons for the change in procedure in the reappointment of instructors at the last Board of Trustees meeting became more confused Thursday.

At the trustees' meeting last week, a section listing the names of persons whose contracts with the University are being terminated after this year was literally cut off the agenda.

The list included the names of three ATL instructors.

University Secretary Jack Breslin said Wednesday that the Board of Trustees omitted from the agenda names of non-tenured faculty not being rehired simply to avoid unnecessary criticism and controversy.

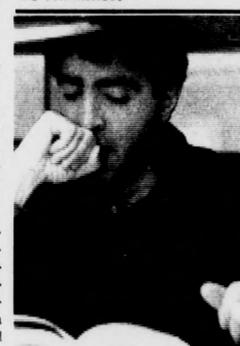

But Board of Trustees Chairman Warren M. Huff, D-Plymouth, said the item was eliminated so that the administration or department could reconsider action on the cases of Ken Lawless, W. Gary Groce and Robert S. Fogarty if they wanted to do so.

"I fully expect that item six (the section in question) will be put back into the agenda for the December meeting," he said.

"I feel this is an appropriate thing to take more time on and this is precisely why we did exclude section six from the agenda."

Huff said, however, that any reconsideration of the case must come from the administration or the department.

"In light of recent statements by Dean Carlin, such a motion seems unlikely," Huff said.
