Soviets, French Opposing U.S.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) -- Mounting opposition led by the Soviet Union and France threatened Tuesday to doom efforts by the United States to give the U.N. Security Council a try at ending the war in Viet Nam.

The United States claimed it had enough support to win approval by a narrow margin for full-scale debate, but the opposition appeared to rule out any chance of pushing through a U.S. peace plan.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg pleaded with members of the 11-nation council to help the world open a new avenue

He defended the resumption of U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam as the only course open to President Johnson because of refusal by Ho Chi Minh, the North Viet Nam leader, to respond to U.S. peace moves. He proposed that representatives of both Saigon and Hanoi be invited to take part in the council delibera-

But Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko accused the United States of staging a propaganda show in the Security Council, and objected to any council consideration of the U.S. move.

In Hanoi the North Vietnamese government said it would regard as null and void resolutions approved by the council. It declared that only the 1954 Geneva Conference prodived a competent framework for the Viet Nam issue.

Fedorenko's opposition to putting the Viet Nam question on the council agenda got quick support from French Ambassador Roger Seydoux, who said that no progress could be made because neither Communist China, nor North Viet Nam nor South

Viet Nam were U.N. members. Only British Ambassador Lord Caradon supported the United States at the morning council session. Mali was opposed to putting the issue before the council, and Nigeria said it would abstain.

It takes nine affirmative votes in the enlarged council to put the issue on the agenda. The big power veto does not apply, since this is considered a procedural matter. Practically speaking, an abstention has the same effect as a negative vote.

It was plain that any U.S. resolution would run into at least

Thus it appeared that the best the United States could hope for was an opportunity to spell out its peace efforts before the council, and seek to put blame on the opposition for killing any peace

Fedorenko asserted that Goldberg's plea to the council was only further confirmation that Washington had not yet begun to think of a genuine Viet Nam settlement.

He charged that the United States refused to comply with the 1954 Geneva accords, and added, "They refuse to recognize that the solution of the Viet Nam problem can only be effected with the participation of the National Liberation Front, which is the sole genuine representative of the people of South Viet

Outdated Electoral College Ready For Junking, But.

PROBABLY THE MOST OUT-DATED and archaic structure in our whole election system today is also the most difficult to modify or abolish--the Electoral College. Written into the Constitution by the founding fathers as a check against foibles of popular control by the masses, it has changed greatly in function and now is totally unnecessary.

For years, there have been proposals in the halls of Congress to alter or do away with the antiquated structure, but they have met with little success. Now President Johnson has proposed that it be abolished, while continuing to count presidential electoral votes in the same manner.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROPOSAL, in form of a constitutional amendment, would improve the present system to be sure. If passed by the two Houses of Congress and then ratified by the required number of states, it would put an end to the electors themselves.

Such occurances as have happened in Alabama and Mississippi with the unpledged electors in the 1964 election or when several maverick electors voted for Harry F. Byrd for President in 1960 would be avoided.

EVEN IF THE PROPOSED AMEND-MENT does become part of the constitution, it will only be a first step and not really solve the basic inadequacies of the present Electoral College. The most glaring defect of the present system is that it does not meaningfully reflect the popular will of the voters. Presently, a presidential candidate could win the popular vote of a state by the narrowest of margins but would still receive all the electoral votes of that state. The best of all possible solutions, yet the least practical, would be to abolish the electoral college completely and elect the popular vote of the president b

But since would have to pass in form of a constitutional amendment, the smaller states wouldn't be likely to agree to such a change. The fact that politicians don't like to make changes when they don't know what eventual effect it might have on the entire electoral system, makes it even more unlikely.

THOUGH IT IS DOUBTFUL that any of the proposed changes in the Electoral College will become reality, with the exception of the President's recent proposal, the need for reform will continue to confront the nation. Until some travesty occurs in a future presidential election, the status quo is likely to prevail.

Computers Can't Do All!

The Library urgently needs help in its efforts to computerize book lending. A one-year target date has been set for converting to computerized lending. Without the help of students, this date will not be met. In fact, the entire program may have to be shelved temporarily.

When money was appropriated for the project, none was ear-marked for labor. Labor is needed to paste the new pockets into the backs of the books. The labor for such a simple task would cost $62,000.

Since the Library lacks these funds, the program will temporarily grind to

However, if students organize a volunteer corps, the labor problem would be solved and the target date met. Library officials estimate that 80 students each working four hours a week could do the task adequately. Student activists and others have long shouted for improved library facilities. Now is their chance to channel their energy into actually improving the Library. If students can help get this program off the the end result will be a more efficient library, faster service for students, and the savings eventually being spent on more books.

Students who are interested in helping the Library should sign up at the circulation desk.

Anyone can help prevent a jamup that could seriously hamper this important project. Just four hours a week now could mean a tremendously improved library in a few years.

A New Refrain: 'My Country 'Tis Of ME'

Questions following a discussion on the draft last week seemed indicative of an all too prevalent attitude on campus.

Both men and women ignored the questions of whether persons being drafted are being required to take illegal and immoral actions, whether the war in Viet Nam is right or wrong and whether government leaders have been responsible in recent international crisis.

The emphasis in the question, and answer period was on the individual student's chances of being drafted -- regardless of the moral consequences of his action in obeying or disobeying the draft law or of his action in fighting in Viet Nam.

The 200 or more students directed all their questions to Lt. Col. Robert W. Lindquist, chief of operations for the Michigan Selective Service, despite the presence on the panel of faculty members from the philosophy and social science departments.

A few students did question Lindquist on the possible reclassification of students who demonstrated against U.S. policy in Ann Arbor, although he repeatedly said draft classifications were determined by the local draft boards and not by the state office.

Other than this, the emphasis seemed to be on one question: what do I have to do to escape

The misplaced emphasis was not the fault of the panel members.

Vincent Lombardi, instructor in social science, discussed the challenge presented to mankind by man's newfound power to destroy

Harold T. Walsh, associate professor of philosophy, suggested that the government may be forcing men to take part in an illegal war. President Johnson has called the action in Viet Nam a war, although war has not been declared by Congress, Walsh pointed

Even such statements as these failed to challenge the students to stop thinking about their individual predicaments and to start thinking about the national predicament.

"It seems a shame that we were able to bring togther such a diverse group of men and students were only interested in themselves," a graduate assistant in Fee Hall said after the program.

It is understandable that students eligible for the draft are concerned about their personal fate. But it seems unbelieveable that they would be so concerned about their personal fate as to ignore the national dimensions of the problem.

"We have these statistics," the man said.

The pretty dark-haired girl must have nervously edged forward almost as if to better see his voice travel across the massive

"And these statistics," the man droned on, "show that if we let students back in MSU within a year, 40 per cent don't make

The girl had been on the road more than six hours that day, for this--to be classed as a bad risk, a statistic as he put it. Perhaps it's to be expected that this man would be oblivious to the girl's 300-mile trip and the disruption of incidentals like where she will live and work and her marriage plans. But the fact that she's a senior with only two terms left in school should say something for her ability and seriousness of purpose.

This seemed to be completely ignored as was the fact that she is a person. She said she wanted to scream these things to him. But she didn't. It's very unstatistic-like.

His efficiency was a study in time and motion. During the 10 minutes she had been allotted, he answered three phone calls and simultaneously motioned for her to continue.

Outwardly she kept a pretty steady hold on her composure, even as the hoplessness of it all became apparent. She told him that she had been working in her field of study since leaving MSU last summer, and also that she had gone back to school in her home town, pulling A's and B's.

"I . . . I've got recommendations from my employer and my profs," she must have said weakly by now.

'You can get all the recommendations you want," he must have shot back, perhaps a trifle perturbed at the cautious persistence of the pretty dark-eyed statistic. "But I make the final decision, not them, and you'll never," he emphasized, "get back in this school until I say so."

She tried to blurt out another question, but he cut her off as he ordered the intercom to send in the next student.

That very night, President John A. Hannah, paternally and with considerable pride, assured several hundred Michigan newspaper men convening in Kellogg Center that "we here at Michigan State do not consider our 35,000 students as numbers, but we look upon them as individuals with feelings, hopes, fears, goals. We look at them as one plus one plus one, 35,000 times."

Dr. Hannah's goals and ideals are sincere, and I have no doubt he means them to be taken seriously. But so often aspirations nurtured on considerable thought, concern and experience, loose that gut quality where it's needed most--further down the line where ideas become reality.

Without this quality, the highest ideals are meaningless. Realistically, it's often like the man said earlier: "We've got these

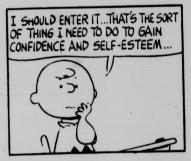

THE PLEASANTRIES of last week's Michigan Press Association convention were mildly disrupted somewhat during Dr. Hannah's greeting and the later appearance of the Spartan Bell Ringers, both of which I had never seen in person before.

Both had something to offer: Dr. Hannah, a sincere word of welcome; the Bell Ringers, talented entertainment and above all--

It was disturbing, however, to note private conversations and gross inattention to both by some members of my chosen profession and their wives. This constitutes rudeness of the highest order. These oblivious people were dismissed as "country hicks" -until I noticed the fellow next to me--from My Town--studiously reading the paper while the Bell Ringers were on.

Apparently the "hicks" are not exclusive to the country.

A total of 1,887 East Lansing residents have signed pledges that they . . will welcome into my neighborhood any responsible person of whatever race, religion or national origin, and I will work with him and our other neighbors to create a desirable community for all.'

The East Lansing Human Relations Commission distributed the cards during East Lansing's Human Rights Week last December. Who but a bigot or a totally apathetic citizen would not take the time to sign such a pledge? These people who did not sign the pledge indicated either indifference or quiet prejudice, an attitude too often present inurban, middle class areas.

By LANCE J. HERDEGEN United Press International

MILWAUKEE (UPI) -- Men paraded in the streets of Milwaukee waving "no draft" signs. Harsh words were spoken in Sheboygan against military conscription. A draft commissioner was stoned in West Bend.

It all happened more than 100 years ago during the Civil War when Wisconsin became the scene of one of the first major draft riots in American history.

The year was 1862, the war was in its second year and President Abraham Lincoln had issued a call for soldiers to fill the ranks of the combat-thinned Northern armies.

Unable to meet federal quotas with volunteers,

Wisconsin Gov. Edward Salomon ordered the enrollment of all men between the ages of 18 and 45. It was not a popular action in a state where

Opportunity comes early at Ford Motor Company. Graduates who join us are often surprised at how quickly they receive personal assignments involving major responsibilities. This chance to demonstrate individual skills contrasts sharply with the experience of many young people entering the business world for the first time. At Ford Motor Company, for example, a graduate may initiate a project and carry it through to its final development. One who knows is David Tenniswood, of Dave joined Ford Motor Company in July, 1961. Assigned to our steering and controls section, he helped develop a revolutionary steering system that will facilitate driving in future Ford-built cars. Currently a design engineer working on suspension design and analysis, Dave has been impressed by the extent to which management encourages personal initiative among recent graduates like himself. Here, management looks immediately to young engineers, like Dave, for fresh concepts that reflect their academic training and special abilities. Moreover, when the idea is accepted for development, the initiator is frequently given the opportunity to see the job through—from drawing board to production line!

The experience of Dave Tenniswood is not unusual. Ford Motor Company believes that early incentive is fundamental to individual growth and a successful career. If you should see a brown, fuzzy animal crawling out of a hole on your way to classes this morning, don't be alarmed.

Today is Groundhog Day. According to legend in many parts of the United States, the groundhog leaves his hole Feb. 2 after hibernation. that spring will soon come. The day probably originated from the Candlemas celebration on Feb. 2. At this time European farmers would begin their spring planting, and it was important to know whether or not there would be an early spring. The custom was brought to America by British and German settlers.

where everyone bid the same and made the same.

This week's hand is exactly opposite. This is one where everyone playing at the University once by West. Duplicate Bridge Club bid it differently and the scores wound up all over the place.

This was the hand, East dealing and neither side vulnerable:

Some of the final contracts Last week we showed a hand arrived at were 1 NT by West; 2 Spades by North; 2 Hearts by North; 2 Diamonds by West; 3 Spades by North (doubled) the doubles coming twice by East and

> The 2 Spade and 3 Heart contracts were made but the 3 Spades was set, doubled, for 200 points and the high East-West score.

The 1 NT, 2 Diamond and 3 Diamond contracts were made by West. Three Diamonds were set one and two tricks for the high North-South score.

Actually, 2 Spades, 2 Hearts and 2 Clubs can be made by the North-South team. Three Diamonds bid by East-West should be set but since either 2 Hearts or 2 Spades made count for 110 points in duplicate, the 3 Diamond set would give East-West the best score.
