Senate Stalls Vote On Peace Corps Head

WASHINGTON (AP)--A Senate critic of U.S.-Latin American policy held up action Wednesday on the nomination of Jack Reed Vaughn to be director of the Peace Corps.

As assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, Vaughn was one of the top officials involved when President Johnson decided to rush troops to the Dominican Republic last year.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., told Vaughn at Wednesday's hearing by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that his record "disqualifies you, and I'll vote against your nomination."

The slender, 45-year-old Vaughn disputed Morse's argument that "when the chips of democracy are down we walk away."

But Morse said "there is no question that you, Mann and Rusk have given bad advice to our President."

In addition to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Morse was referring to an assistant secretary of State, Thomas C. Mann. Mann has been a special target of critics of the Dominican intervention who charge him with carrying out "a hard line" in Latin America.

Morse blocked a committee vote with a point of the quorum. But the committee chairman, J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., expressed certainty that Vaughn and his successor as assistant secretary, Lincoln Gordon, would be approved.

Another critic of Latin American policy, Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., praised Vaughn's record as a Peace Corps official and ambassador to Panama.

"But," he added, "you can't hit every ball over the fence. I think in your present position you have been more sinned against than sinning."

'The Paper' To Go Before Judiciary

The Paper will be indicted before Student Judiciary and may be fined up to $100 and have its charter as a student organization revoked, Student Board voted Tuesday night.

The decision was made as a result of publication and sale of the student-run weekly newspaper last Thursday after its first charter had expired.

It also accepted paid advertisements. Both actions were alleged violations of conditions under which The Paper was chartered by Associated Students of MSU.

The charter for the all residence halls radio also was approved by the board. A campus referendum will be held Feb. 24.

Chuck Stoddard, member-at-large, was appointed ASMSU representative for the campus radio station.

The following were also decided at the meeting:

- Mimeographing prices will be increased 10 cents per 100 sheets of paper.

- Webb Martin, vice chairman of the Student Board, Frances Frei, ASMSU member-at-large, and Rick Hollander, Wilmette, Ill. senior, and vice president of financing, will investigate the question of compensation of student government personnel and report recommendations to the board.

--ASMSU will have direct control over appointments of chairmen of special projects which are recommended by the vice president of special projects. This will also affect appointments for the 1966-67 school year. The decision will be retroactive. Previously, chairmen were chosen by the vice chairman of special projects without approval of the Student Board.

--The general assembly will not begin until the next board session, April 14, and will be subject to board approval.

--The board gave permission for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee to hold a fund raising dance to finance voter registration.

The dance will be held Feb. 23 in the Union.

Dominican University Youths Riot

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)--Police broke up a demonstration outside the National Palace with gunfire and tear gas Wednesday, and officials said two persons were killed and 28 others, including five girls, wounded.

The incident set off a flurry of disorders in downtown Santo Domingo, but they died down after midday.

The palace press office identified both of the dead as brokers and gave the name of one as Antonio Santos Mondos.

Most of the estimated 600 demonstrators were high school and grammar school boys and girls. They had called the demonstration ostensibly to demand that the government restore financial assistance to the University of Santo Domingo. But the demonstration turned into an anti-U.S. protest. One large placard said, "Go home, Yankees."

Capt. German Perez Montas, in charge of the police detail, said the youths provoked the shooting by throwing rocks at police. The shooting broke out as one group of youths unfurled an American flag, and began to burn it.

Montas claimed some of the youths were armed. A military spokesman at the National Palace said authorities had been tipped before the demonstration that some of the youths were armed. One of the wounded was a police officer who was shot in the leg.

Moscow Prof To Lecture

Vladimir V. Alexandrov, history specialist from Moscow State University, will lecture in the Wonders Hall Kiva at 7:30 tonight.

He will discuss "American Scholarship on Lenin and Leninism."

Alexandrov, a visiting scholar at Indiana University, is part of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. cultural exchange program. His specialty is the early phases of the Russian revolution and the works which western civilization has produced on the period.

An informal discussion for faculty and graduate students will be led by Alexandrov at 2:30 p.m. Friday in the Student Services conference room.

The dance will be held Feb. 23 in the Union.

Transit Workers Must Wait Three Years For Pay Raise

NEW YORK (AP)--A judge ruled Wednesday that state law requires city subway and bus workers to wait three years to collect pay raises they won after a 12-day strike last month.

Supreme Court Justice Irving H. Sappel called the settlement that ended the crippling strike "ransom extorted from eight million citizens."

He said it was clear that the state law forbidding strikes by public employees requires that reinstated strikers must be refused a pay raise for three years. Justice Sappel said it was "craven servility" to grant pay increases to illegal strikers, and "if responsible officials cannot stand up in firm resistance, the court will."

Leaders of the AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union promptly issued a statement saying they would insist that the Transit Authority and the mayor live up to the agreement.

The Transit Authority had no immediate comment. There is no doubt Sappel's opinion will be appealed. The Supreme Court in New York is a trial court. The 34,400 workers were granted across-the-board increases of 4 per cent retroactive to Jan. 1, another 4 per cent next Jan. 1, and another 7 per cent on July 1, 1967. The total cost was estimated variously at $52 to $70 million over two years. None of the increase has yet been paid, since the union members ratified the contract only last weekend.

President Johnson denounced the settlement as inflationary, but it was defended by Republican Mayor John V. Lindsay.

The strike, the first city-wide transit shutdown in the city's history, was called a few hours after Lindsay took office on Jan. 1.

Business losses were estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The Transit Authority invoked the state's Condon-Wadlin Act, which forbids strikes by public employees, to obtain an injunction against the strike.

The judge said Weinstein had a clear case for relief, but that he couldn't grant him a summary judgment until he allowed the Transit Authority and the New York City Civil Service Commission 10 days to file answers.

The Condon-Wadlin Act, passed in 1947, has been the subject of hot political debate, and has rarely been invoked because of the harshness of the penalties.

For a two-year period, the penalties were changed to require deduction of two days' pay for each day a reinstated employee was on strike.

LBJ Gets Cash For Programs

WASHINGTON (UPL) - Congressional committees acted quickly Wednesday to give President Johnson the money he needs to carry out both military and economic pledges in the "Declaration of Honolulu."

The House approved, 292 to 80, U.S. participation in the Asian Development Bank. The legislation calls for the U.S. to provide $200 million of the bank's $1 billion capitalization. The bank's purpose is to promote economic development in Asia.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved Johnson's emergency request for $275 million in additional economic aid for South Viet Nam as part of a total supplemental aid bill of $415 million.

In the Senate, the Armed Services Committee unanimously approved a $4.8 billion authorization bill for military hardware. The actual money still must be appropriated.

Although the presidential requests were sent to Congress a few weeks ago, the timing was appropriate in view of the Honolulu conference, Johnson said Tuesday night that his aim was:

"We shall fight the battle against aggression in Viet Nam; we shall fight the battle for social construction; and, throughout the world, we shall fight the battle for peace. And we shall prevail."

Program Outlined At Hawaii

From Our Wire Services

EN ROUTE TO SAIGON--Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey sped across the Pacific Wednesday on a hastily arranged White House mission to spark a "social revolution" in South Viet Nam.

Declaring U.S. determination to help the embattled country "overcome the ancient enemies of tyranny, disease, pestilence and hunger," the vice president boarded a U.S. Air Force Jet Star in Honolulu shortly after 1 p.m. EST.

Flying with him were Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, who concluded talks here Tuesday with President Johnson, and various U.S. officials, including presidential envoy W. Averell Harriman.

Humphrey's plane left Honolulu about six hours after his arrival from Los Angeles where he met hurriedly with Johnson.

Responding to Humphrey's remarks, Thieu expressed the gratitude of his country to American families who have servicemen fighting in Viet Nam. He pledged his country's willingness "to pay the price to bring peace and democracy to Viet Nam."

Humphrey's mission will be to begin implementation of a political, social and economic program outlined yesterday in the Declaration of Honolulu.

"We are determined to implement the aims of the declaration," he said, "and we shall take immediate and continuing action as partners with the government and the people of South Viet Nam to achieve these objectives."

Flanked by Ky and Thieu at a rostrum, Humphrey told a tiny airport crowd that Johnson was "most pleased" with the conference. He called the Declaration of Honolulu "one of the great documents of history."

Johnson said his selection of the vice president to go to Asia was to provide a top-level and dynamic focal point for continuing the momentum generated at the conference here.

Humphrey is scheduled to visit about five other Asian nations during the next 10 or 12 days. His trip was expected to include India, Australia, Malaysia, Thailand and possibly New Zealand and Japan.

Johnson said Humphrey will learn the needs of the nations he visits, will return with recommendations and will be an articulate spokesman for the programs to be established or increased.

Get Tags Now, Motorists Urged

The "biggest deadline logjam" in history will occur as motorists don't buy their license plates before Feb. 15, warns Secretary of State James M. Hare. The deadline is Feb. 28.

"We're ahead of our 1965 sales by nearly 150,000," said Hare, "but we've been gaining more than 200,000 licenses a year."

At the end of January, nearly half of the estimated three million plates had been sold.

Motorists can pick up their plates at 1010 S. Washington or at Don's Music Shop at Pandor.

Motorists are reminded they should have the following when buying their plates: registration or certificate of title, proof of in-effect liability insurance and $1 insured fee or $35 uninsured motorist fee and cash for plates at customary 35 cents a hundred-weight.

Campus Bus System

First Of Two Parts

year's revenue of $156,000 was nearly equalled by the disbursements.

According to Jolman, the system has found it can transport a student anywhere on the campus at four cents per ride.

But the campus bus system found itself in trouble in mid-December, when it appeared there were too many students for the number of buses on hand.

On Dec. 20 the system leased three buses from Dearborn hoping to absorb the heavier loads. As yet they haven't.

Already most buses carry much more than its 56-seat capacity. Jolman said that although there is no legal load-limit, Campus Police have been lenient in view of their plight.

Every attempt at leasing more buses has been futile, thus intensifying the problem.

Operating on a non-profit basis and a tight budget, they can not expect to purchase a bus at the cost of $26,000. Even if they could, shipment from General Motors in Detroit takes from three to four months, Jolman said.

An experienced bus system probably would have found some way to forecast this term's larger number of passengers, Jolman said.

Students wait in melted and refrozen snow outside Conrad Hall and mutter about the bus they just missed and the other bus that's five minutes late. It's a problem.

But the campus bus system has problems too--attempting to get 9,700 students, who collectively ride the bus 47,000 times a day, to their classes on time.

The crux of the problems stem from one obvious cause. This university is growing at an unbelievable rate.

The bus service here must carry more passengers than any other university-operated system in the U.S., according to Ted Simon, director of the Physical Plant which oversees the system.

In the fall of 1964 drivers transported 17,000 passenger-rides a day. Last fall that number rose to 30,000.

This past winter the load was even greater with 32,000 passengers riding. Henry Jolman, the system's general foreman, estimates this winter's daily loads will average 47,000 a day.

Rapid growth can also be seen in the size of the bus fleet itself. It has grown from 12, when it began in the fall of 1964, to 20.

Jolman, a veteran of 30 years in mass transportation, said the University originally intended to have a private transportation system service the campus.

However, the private systems contacted refused to enter into a contract unless they could be guaranteed a profit. So, the University went into the "bus business," the first college in the U.S. to do so.

The bus system began and remains on a non-profit basis. Last

New Bus Line Could Integrate Cities, Campus

ATTEMPTS TO INTEGRATE Lansing, East Lansing and the MSU campus were both speeded and postponed as the Lansing Metro Lines requested the East Lansing City Council to allow it to extend service to East Lansing and the MSU campus.

But because of potential problems in the narrowness of some of the streets and sharp turns in the proposed route, the request was referred to the Traffic Commission, Lansing Metro had suggested a 30-day trial period beginning next week be initiated, but it was postponed pending the decision of the Traffic Commission.

IF THE TRAFFIC COMMISSION consents to the establishment of the route with would run from East Grand River to Hadadorn and to points west of Abbott Road and cut through parts of the campus, it would greatly facilitate student transportation around the Lansing-East Lansing area.

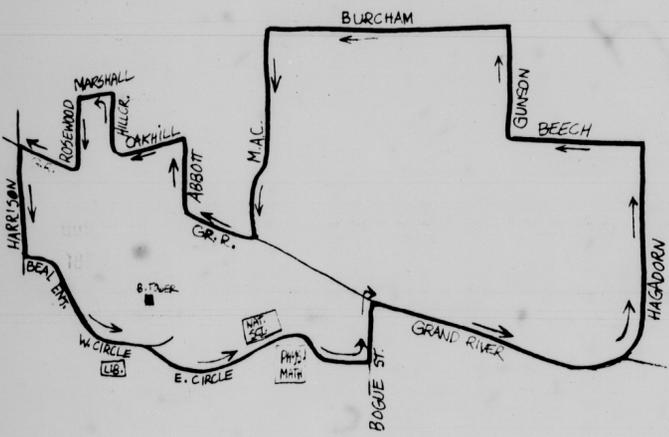

THERE APPEARS TO BE no question of the need for such a route which would assist students who encounter difficulties in finding transportation from the campus to points in the East Lansing area. Presently, there is little opportunity for students to get other than campus transportation.

The major problem with the proposed plan is the question of whether the large buses could negotiate the sharp turns or navigate some of the narrow sidestreets in East Lansing. But even if the Traffic Commission rejects the Lansing Metro proposal, some type of bus route which would help integrate MSU, East Lansing and Lansing should be instituted.

PERHAPS TO MAKE this proposal feasible, it may be necessary to use smaller buses or construct an alternate route to fit existing facilities. But it is quite clear that both campus and off-campus living units need to be more accessible to each other and to the city of Lansing.

Yet to be worked out are the appropriate stops and loading areas and points where passengers could transfer to buses headed for Lansing. The city council, the traffic commission, and Lansing Metro should initiate a trial period and then establish a permanent system as soon as possible.

Regulations Should Keep Pace With Customs

THROUGHOUT THE NATION, the trend has been toward less formality in dress. Short shorts, stretch pants and plunging necklines are commonplace. (Mmmm . . .) Grandmother might blush at the informality in dress today, but great-grandmother might have blushed at grandmother's dress, too.

Colleges are no exception to the nation-wide trend. As customs change, so must the rules governing dress. For this reason, AWS and the faculty committee made a wise decision when they recently liberalized women's dress regulations.

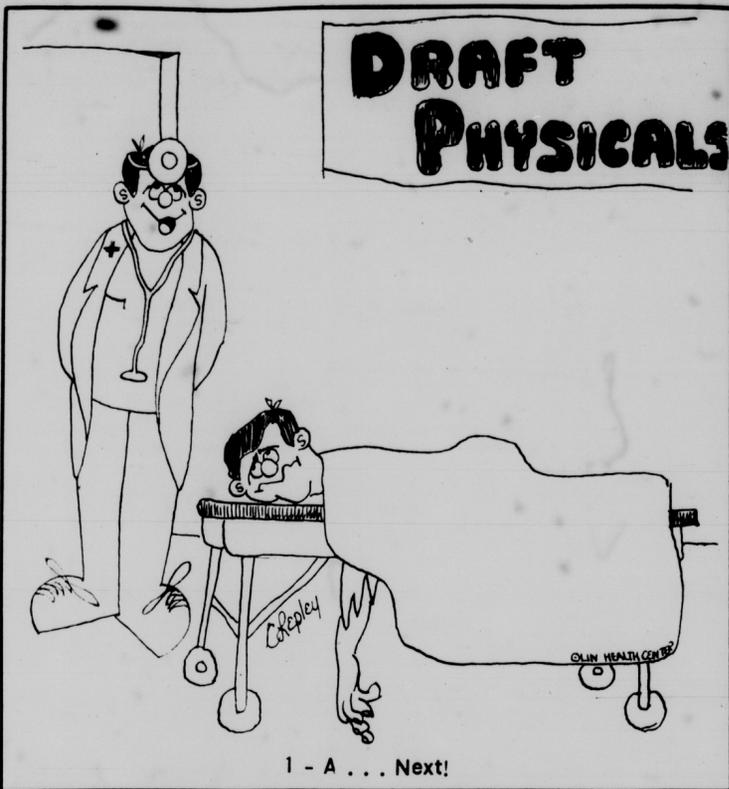

MEN'S REGULATIONS HAVE been evolving also. Not too long ago, men had to wear a coat and tie to dinner on weekdays. Today, more informal attire is permitted.

Unnecessary dress regulations burden the student. They create an inconvenience and waste of time. Neatness is of primary importance. And the dress regulations have placed the emphasis on neatness, rather than formality.

ALSO WOMEN'S HOURS HAVE gone through a state of evolution. Just as grandmother might blush at a coed's dress, she probably would raise an eyebrow when she heard about women's hours. But it has been shown that society will not crumble into moral decay if women's hours are extended and weekend restrictions reduced.

Although some would favor no dress regulations, and no hours for women, we feel that some are necessary because the community is not yet ready for the absence of all restrictions. The evolution of rules must be in accord with the community's customs. We feel that the present regulations for dress and women's hours strike a good balance between community norms, student wishes and tradition.

THESE REGULATIONS ARE adequate for now, but there is little doubt that someday they will become obsolete. If rules are to be effective, they must change with the times.

Shoestring Hangs Them

America's policy toward underdeveloped nations is a prime target for criticism from all quarters. Consequently, many different approaches are recommended for dealing with these countries. Undoubtedly the brain trust in Washington has heard most of these proposed solutions. However, recently I listened to a budding political scientist voice his solution to the problem. I doubt that the State Department has heard this one.

In order that this proposed solution to a major dilemma would not go unnoticed, I have recorded it. The following is his brainstorm:

"What's wrong with America's foreign policy? I'll tell you. We aren't fighting Communism on the right level. These give-away programs are bunk. The Peace Corps is useless.

"Instead of a Peace Corps, America needs a Shoestring Corps. That's right, a Shoestring Corps. The only way to fight Communism is with capitalism--good ole knock-down-drag-out robber-baron capitalism.

"Here's how it would work: We would make thousands of shoestring kits. Then we would send the kits to all the underdeveloped nations. We would teach them how to sell the shoestrings at a profit. With the profits, they would buy shoestring boxes. With the profits from the boxes of shoestrings, they could buy shoestring stands. With the profits from the shoestring stands, they would open shoestring stores.

The stores would become corporations. Huge factories would spring up. This would go on and on. They would establish shoestring enterprises . . . shoe string combines . . .

"Before long, these nations would need new markets for their shoestrings. They would expand and expand. Communism would become strangled, trampled in the mad rush. Communism would drown in the tidal wave of capitalistic expansion.

"The underdeveloped nations would be driven on by that substance that made America great--Good ole cut-throat robber-baron capitalism. Capitalism would become imbued in their hearts, their minds. They would work around the clock.

"No matter how appealing the Communists would try to make their system appear, the new capitalists would not listen. Once they had tasted the sweet success that only the almighty dollar can bring, they will be blind to anything else."

When he had finished speaking, I couldn't help wondering whether suggestions for improving America's foreign policy hadn't gone full-circle.

OUR READERS SPEAK

Why LBJ Fails At Peace

To the Editor:

Your Feb. 3 editorial on President Johnson's abortive peace drive is another example of your newspaper's myopia.

The true intent of the President's desires is, of course, pure conjecture, but the facts behind his peace failure are to me self-evident.

While the United States was making peace overtures around the world, additional troops were added to our "advisory force" in numbers far exceeding those of possible infiltrators; our planes continued to raid areas of Laos and Cambodia, thus another step backwards for international law; the rice fields were sprayed with plant-killing chemicals which may poison the earth for years to come; but the most flagrant error was simply overlooking the wants of the Vietnamese people themselves.

In effect our envoys carried these actions in their attache cases. Words of peace were meaningless.

As long as the United States continues to escalate the war, no possible hope exists for a peaceful settlement on heaven or earth. The carrot should be backed with overt examples of good intent, not by guns.

Give To Each Man His 'Due'?

To the Editor:

The strongest statement found in Randall R. Smith's letter was the proposition that the ASMSU Legal Aid Fund would best serve the students of MSU if its functions were limited to operating as a depository for the three cents assessed from each student during the term.

Foremost in this plan is the principle that ASMSU should guarantee that each student would receive his fair share of the fund when it was refunded. Careful attention should be given to keeping any student from receiving (horrors) more than his three cents. (I trust that any similarity between this doctrine of equal division of wealth and Marxian socialist philosophies are coincidental).

Good. Following this formula we ought to limit the federal government's functions to similar custodial duties. If the Feds collect $100 billion annually in tax money, they should return exactly $100 billion annually in tax money, they should return exactly $100 billion annually in cash refunds to the taxpayers.

This is a sound policy because the idea that public funds should be used when the need arises is probably outdated.

Economics Hinder A Cheaper Bible

To the Editor:

Obviously, Mr. Spiro, one cannot determine the price of given book on the basis of its worth to the reading public; who would say that an edition of Shakespeare or the Bible has the same dollar-and-cents value to every purchaser? While I'm sure "The Would-Be Writer" is worth at least $5.65 to most of the students who use it, I claim no cause-and-effect relationship between its value and its price; pricing is, of necessity, a business matter, not an aesthetic one.

I should have explained previously my "inside information" about a future decline in printing costs; Dr. Burham formed his own company in order to publish this book and found it necessary to charge the price he did because of initial organizational expenses. Not, Mr. Spiro, because of any egotistic desire to write a better Bible--but because of simple economics.

Why Farm Week?

To the Editor:

Is it strictly necessary that we be subjected to this pantomime "Farmers' Week" every year?

That this place was once agriculturally oriented seems to be a poor reason for maintaining a farce. Who decides that farmers over any other group should be granted such recognition? Why not a Detroit week, or an Upper Peninsula week?

Is it necessary that several classes be disorganized to accommodate the "farm folk," I'm glad I'm not majoring in music, imagine having your department taken over by the Michigan muck farmers.

While I'm about it, why not change the name of the main N-S road on campus--Farm Lane? This, I suggest, is a totally inappropriate title. Couldn't we have something a little more in keeping with the 20th century, and a little more representative of this University and state?

A 'Human' On Sex

To The Editor:

In response to the letter of Julie Albrecht (Feb. 4) in which she seemed to feel that the University used sex as an unfair basis for regulation simply because "girls can get pregnant and boys can't." Miss Albrecht, don't you think that having sex or not having sex is mostly a matter of having the proper situation and opportunity, and (to quote you) "for some ridiculous reason, maturity, age and parental permission do not even enter the picture . . . only sex"? After all, we're only partly human.

Perplexing Policy

To the Editor:

Up to now I have withheld any outburst as to some of the more ludicrous realities dealing with "the parking problem." I have kept quiet concerning Parking Lot X and the lashing tongue of Miss Karen Hicks, which admonishes, "We are lucky to have driving permits at all. . ."

Yesterday, however, I went to the quonsets to pick up a temporary permit to park in Lot L one night a week, as I did last term. I live in Holmes, but work one night at Brody because of longevity. To my dismay, the permit, identical to last term's, was denied. Can you figure that one out, Miss Hicks?

Any any rate, the long walk home at 6 a.m. won't kill me, but while my automobile sits in Lot X and while there are empty spaces in Lot L, I wonder, as I'm sure many others do, why the lofty "U" can't be just a little bit more imaginative and reasonable.

To the Editor:

We very much appreciate the efforts of the ASMSU representatives who negotiated the trial reduction of bus fare for MSU students traveling between East Lansing and Lansing. ### Crime More Than 'Cops & Robbers'

By HARRY FERGUSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)--It doesn't get big headlines like Viet Nam, but there is a war under way on the home front, too. The annual casualty figures: killed, 8,500; raped, 16,400; robbed 100,160; assaulted 140,800.

Crime in our streets and homes is a scandal for this generation of Americans. We like to think of crime fighting in terms of the classic confrontation of the good guys and the bad guys in television westerns, but something has gone wrong with the script. The bad guys are winning and there is increasing pessimism that the sheriff's posse ever will be able to head them off at Eagle pass.

They started winning eight years ago and each year their margin of victory increases. Since 1958 the crime rate in the United States has grown six times as fast as the population. Some places are safer than others, but really there is no place to hide. Big cities are dangerous for the law-abiding citizen, but so are the suburbs that cluster around them. The rural resident has a somewhat better chance of living his life unmolested by criminals.

No section of the nation is immune, for crime spreads its blight impartially over East, West, Midwest, North and South. The 10 most dangerous cities in terms of murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery, larceny and auto theft are: Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Miami, Phoenix, Lexington, Ky., Chicago, Great Falls, Mont., Atlantic City, N.J., Denver, Corpus Christi, Tex.

One of the surprising developments in the rising crime rate is that people seem to take it for granted that the police are unable to protect them, especially in large cities. They are arming themselves and learning means of self-defense. A Houston, Tex., store advertised tear gas pens and quickly sold 1,000 of them.

Last summer TV comedian Johnny Carson told this joke: "New York is a summer festival. That means the muggers wear bermuda shorts."

People laughed, but not much. There are too many memories of a man being stabbed when he went to the defense of a woman being molested in the New York subway. And another case when some 30 persons watched or listened while a girl was stabbed to death, but didn't take the trouble to telephone the police.

In most cases fighting crime is the responsibility of local and state governments. But President Johnson, calling crime "a malignant enemy in America's midst," has acted to do something about it. He did what presidents almost always do when confronted by a sprawling, complicated problem. He appointed a committee headed by Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach.

The commission held a two-day meeting here in Washington recently and a dim outline of what it was up to began to emerge:

-Crime is difficult to check because many offenses are never reported by the victims. This is especially true of rape because the woman involved often is too embarrassed to go to the police.

-A study of criminals who have been paroled shows many of them leave prison and promptly commit the same crime again.

-A depressing number of people stand and watch a crime being committed and make no attempt to help the victim or even summon the police. Why?

The two, Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuri Daniel, will be tried on charges of publishing anti-Soviet works in the West under assumed names.

SCIENTIST-POLITICIAN

Augenstein Explains Beliefs

By MARY ULLRICH
State News Staff Writer

A possible Republican nominee for the U.S. Senate says he is "like any other citizen who has been exposed to the tensions of society and is concerned with improvement."

Leroy Augenstein, chairman of biophysics, who spoke Tuesday night at a McDonell Hall cultural forum, said he "doesn't fit any neat political label."

"I'm a liberal in my concern for America. But I would rank as a fiscal conservative in believing that America can't mortgage her future forever," he said.

Augenstein stressed the importance of science in government. "A definite need exists for more scientific experts in the U.S. Senate," he said.

"Science is one of the most important elements changing our society," he said. "Instead of generalists, there is now a need for more specialists in the House and Senate."

"The fraction of the national budget devoted to science is now growing faster than both the gross national product and the budget," he said. "It is important to have an expert knowledge of science to decide what goes where."

Augenstein said that men not trained in scientific fields could not be expected to make laws in this area.

Citing his own background, Augenstein said he has served with the U.S. Space Agency and the National Institute of Health. He is also a consultant for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

He has served on an advisory board of the Atomic Energy Commission and coordinated the U.S. science exhibit at the Seattle World's Fair.

"Senators were faced with the responsibility of writing laws based on the advisory information we gave them," he said. "If we made a mistake, we would not be responsible for an inadequate law, and neither would the lawmakers," he said.

Augenstein said he became interested in the U.S. Senate in September. "I asked myself how I could be most effective," he said. "Was I better off being a professor, or serving in a capacity where I would be held responsible for the laws?"

Augenstein was asked how he could serve as a specialist in government and still make general decisions. "Any specialist must be a human being," he said, "and must see current issues from both perspectives."

"Involvement in moral questions of a scientific nature, such as birth control, cannot be avoided," he said. "I would support the President's proposals of distributing birth control information and apparatus when specifically asked to do so."

He said four major issues will

Project English In New Phase

By JANE KNAUER
State News Staff Writer

The second phase of Project English, made possible through a federal grant extension to the MSU English Dept., to test the best method of teaching writing composition is now underway in English 213 classes.

Worth $60,000, the grant is an allocation of federal funds plus contributions of physical facilities and staff from the English Dept., Clinton S. Burhans Jr., director of the project, said.

MSU's extension came after the first phase of a one year federal grant expired in the spring, 1965. D. Gordon Rohman, dean of Justin Morrill College, was project director at that time.

The project began as a testing ground for new ideas in teaching writing composition. The study was originally conceived by Rohman.

"Rohman felt the principles of good writing -- the processes of thought preceding good writing -- had been established," Burhans said, "and he wanted to test the best means of implementing those principles."

The second grant application was made in the spring, and provisionally approved in August, but shortly after the application was made Rohman became dean of Justin Morrill College. Burhans then became director.

The extension of the grant was not final until Jan. 1, Burhans said.

"We have established six different tracks for testing the best means of teaching writing," Burhans said.

The tracks are various formats which may be used in presenting the materials.

With the help of a government - paid research designer, who also established the methods of evaluating the project, Burhans has included three methods of writing instruction in the experiment.

The traditional method of teaching writing has been maintained in the project as a control section. This method is one of the tracks in the project.

"The traditional approach uses models of good writing such as essays and other readings to teach the concepts and techniques which the student is then to apply to his own writing," Herman Struck, director of the English composition program in Justin Morrill College, said.

"This method hasn't been too successful in the past," he said.

Another approach to writing is termed the Rohman and Struck method.

Struck said his approach is to assume the student-writer has something to say. "The student starts with a rough draft of his paper," Struck said, "and revises his writing according to three basic charts I have drawn from the samplings of 100,000 words of professional writing."

Struck said students may measure their past writing experiences by the charts and find their own weaknesses which help in revising new materials written for the course.

Marines Rout Cong Near Quang Ngai Copter Base

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) - U.S. Marines, bombers and artillery Wednesday killed 27 Viet Cong near a helicopter base of the Leathernecks' Operation Double Eagle 20 miles south of Quang Ngai City. One Marine was wounded.

American air squadrons stepped up their attacks both north and south of the border as ground action generally slackened. Briefing officers claimed considerable success in the double-barreled operation.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was due in Thursday with Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Nguyen Cao Ky from Honolulu, where the Vietnamese leaders had a summit conference with President Johnson. Humphrey expected to make a two-day visit to Saigon as part of an Asian tour.

Bloody fighting last week in the offensive of American and allied forces that swept North Vietnamese regulars and hard-core Viet Cong regiments from the central coast was reflecting in casualties announced by the U.S. military command.

A spokesman said Communist losses soared to 1,541 killed and 245 captured, up from 408 killed and 56 captured in the previous week, and the kill ratio favored the allied forces 5.2 to 1.

American losses were 89 killed, 499 wounded and eight missing in action. That compared with 57 killed, 281 wounded and 11 missing in the week of Jan. 23-29. The U.S. death roll was approaching the 2,000 mark. The Pentagon announced last week the total was 1,902 as of Jan. 31.

Casualties among South Viet Nam's armed forces were down slightly-184 killed and 121 missing. Their losses of the previous week were 209 killed and 185 missing. No figures were given for either Vietnamese or Viet Cong wounded.

LETTER UNDELIVERED

Girl Writes To Ho

CLEVELAND (UPI)--The post office Wednesday put a temporary damper on an 11-year-old girl's personal peace mission to end the war in Viet Nam.

Karen Dillon of suburban Bay Village, a fifth grader, wrote a letter to North Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh asking, "May we have peace please?"

It came back Wednesday marked, "Return to Sender. Service Suspended."

Her letter read: "Dear President Ho Chi Minh: Hello, my name is Karen Dillon.

"There is five in our family counting our dog. There is my father, my mother, my brother Lowell who is 14 and our dog Pepper who is 3.

"The real reason I am writing you is to ask you for peace in the world. I have seen pictures in magazines of little children in Viet Nam and how their father or mother were wounded or have died.

"They didn't ask to be born in the middle of a war. They were born to have peace.

"My uncle was killed in World War II and I wish that Lowell will not have to go to war.

"So I am going to speak for all of the children in the world; we ask, 'May we please have peace?'"

"Yours truly, Karen Dillon."

Student Judiciary Petitioning Starts

Petitioning for positions open on the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) are being accepted in 308 Student Services.

The petitioning will be held until 5 p.m. Feb. 18.

Each petitioner will be interviewed by the members of the present judiciary and have their names submitted to the Student Board for approval by the second week of spring term.

"Since students who become members of the judiciary deal with students in such areas as drinking, theft and obscene telephone calls, it is important that this group is made up of the best representation of students available," said Robert Maust, chief justice of the AUSJ, Grosse Ile senior.

Work with students in these areas of disciplinary problems is not giving out punishment but an exchange of views between a committee of students.

"Stress is put on the educational and informational needs of any individual living within the University community," he said.

1967 Cars Equipped For Safety

DETROIT (UPI) - General Motors and American Motors announced Wednesday all their 1967 models would be equipped with dual brakes and a telescoping steering wheel.

Spokesmen for Ford and Chrysler Corp., the other two major auto makers, indicated their cars would be similarly equipped.

General Motors President James M. Roche announced the details of the two new safety features that would go on the 1967 model cars.

The steering column is designed to telescope under severe forward impact by means of a steel mesh which collapses like an accordion and shortens a maximum of eight inches.

The dual brake system consists of two master brake cylinders, one of which controls the front wheel brakes, and the other the rear brakes. On GM cars, a light on the instrument panel would flash if one or both of the master cylinders failed.

Electronics Aid Agriculture

A MSU program named Telfarm puts at a farmer's disposal millions of dollars of electronic equipment for average cost per farmer of $100. It attempts to tell the farmer how he is doing in relationship to other farmers and past years. The program was set up by the Cooperative Extension Service and Agricultural Economics Department of MSU. Over 1,131 farmers participated in the program in 1964.

Telfarm is used to keep the farmer's records up to date and to answer many of his questions. It might tell him when he should invest in new machinery or how much he should use for family expenses.

Statistics of all types are compiled by computers for the farmers. These range from changes in Michigan farms from 1955 to 1964, to financial comparison of various types of Telfarm record-keeping farms.

The program also keeps the farmer completely up to date on all new laws or revisions which will affect him financially. The new Medicare program is an example of this.

Some of the statistics of Telfarm are as follows: Gross incomes on Michigan farms averaged $34,270 ranging from a high of $42,953 on fruit farms to a low of $22,798 on northern dairy farms.

The rate earned on investment for 1964 was 5.8 per cent an increase of 3.6 per cent from 1955.

Tillable acres per farm has increased from 167 acres in 1955 to 272 acres in 1964. Total acres owned and rented averaged 335 per farm in 1964.

Benefit Bridge Today

Faculty Folk members will sponsor "Heart and Hands," their annual Scholarship Bridge Benefit at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. today in the Union Parlors. The benefit is open to the public. Six scholarships for needy women students are to be provided through the funds raised at the benefit.

Tickets and donations are being handled by Mrs. John N. Moore, 1158 Marigold Ave., East Lansing. Tickets will be $1.50 and donations for a deserving student may also be made.

A nursery for children over 2 1/2 years will be available during the afternoon bridge game only at the University Methodist Church on Harrison Road. The fee will be 50 cents per child. For reservations call Mrs. Gerald Massey, 332-8249 or Mrs. W.R. Hornbaker, 487-5880.

Vets Worked For Bill

The swift passage of the new G.I. Bill through the House of Representatives Monday might be traced to the constant proddings of the Veterans' Association here and other such groups throughout the U.S.

Tom Shane, Vets Club chairman, disclosed Tuesday that the organization here had sent a petition to Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, chairman of the subcommittee on Veterans' Affairs, urging passage.

The proposed bill provides single veterans with permanent education benefits of $100 per month while veterans with dependents will receive a higher allowance not yet stipulated.

The petition sent was one of many made up by the Veterans' organization at the University of Maryland, Shane said. Approximately 60 local signatures were obtained for it at one of their meetings.

Passage of the bill, which covers all veterans since July, 1955, now awaits acceptance by the U.S. Senate. If passed it would effect over 1,000 veterans here.

Shane said that James F. Morse, chief of the Veterans' Administration office on campus, will address the club Feb. 22 on how to file for their benefits.

Don't forget to check the carbon dioxide machine before we blast off or we'll get pretty hungry before we reach the next solar system. It's going to take us four light years, you know."

This may some day be a typical conversation between two astronauts before embarking into outer space.

This is because carbon dioxide provides a suitable atmosphere for growing crops. Extra doses of it are increasing plant yields by as much as 100 per cent. Alteration of plant growth with CO<sub>2</sub> is particularly important for future space travel.

Although it has been known for some time that plants thrive on CO<sub>2</sub>, Sylvan H. Wittwer, director of MSU's Agricultural Experiment station and head of research here on CO<sub>2</sub>, was the first to admit surprise that scientists did not start to investigate the potentially useful gas sooner.

"Carbon is the primary plant ingredient," he explained, "but vast quantities of air, 3,333 parts per volume, must be processed by the plant to extract one part of carbon dioxide. The plant can do this but we are presently concerned with making its job easier."

Wittwer produced almost unbelievable results by pouring several times the normal amount of CO<sub>2</sub> into greenhouses. Carbon dioxide boosted production of lettuce, cucumbers, and tomatoes from 20 to 100 per cent.

Lettuce plants in commercial planting reached market maturity four weeks earlier with a 10 to 20 per cent increase in weight and cucumbers doubled their number of fruit-bearing flowers.

MSU scientists found amazing results with carbon dioxide on tomatoes. Besides increasing yields by an average of 40 per cent, scientists were able to increase the percentage of U.S. No. 1 tomatoes and boost their average sizes by one half to one ounce. The tomato plants also yielded fruit five to seven days earlier.

In addition to aiding the plant growth, CO<sub>2</sub> costs only $50 to $100 a month per acre.

The full potential of carbon dioxide will not be realized until space age scientists begin spending prolonged trips in outer space and eventually on other planets. It is possible that space men will have to grow their own food in plastic greenhouses when they land on another planet.

Since it is doubtful that they will have an oxygen atmosphere, carbon dioxide may be the only answer. Not only does the atmosphere present limitations, but space travel may involve years of flight from one world to the next. It would be impossible to carry a supply of food great enough for the entire trip.

carbon dioxide is present. It should be pointed out that a carbon dioxide level 10 times the normal level is far from being harmful to human beings, because normal levels of carbon dioxide are only 300 parts per million or 3/1000 of one per cent. Even with doses many times this level no harmful effects are experienced.

Grocers' shelves may also be stocked with higher quality vegetables and in larger quantities, thanks to another growth regulator. Called CCC, this regulator was discovered by N.E. Tolbert, an MSU biochemist. CCC makes plants grow with tougher stems, making them harder. This type of growth alteration could be of importance to agriculture since farmers need to increase hardiness for growing plants in areas formerly considered unsuitable for agriculture, Tolbert said.

These smaller plants will also make it possible for mechanical harvesting, which will lead to lower labor costs and possible price reductions to the consumer.

"CCC was modeled after a naturally occurring compound in the plant," Tolbert explained.

CO<sub>2</sub> May Grow Food For Astronauts

ADVISOR IN PAKISTAN

Prof Aids Asians

Nicholaas Luykx, a new faculty member who has been teaching at Cornell University, left Tuesday to begin two years as an advisor with the MSU-Ford Foundation project in Pakistan.

Luykx, associate professor of agricultural economics, will be stationed at the Comilla Academy for Rural Development in East Pakistan, one of two such institutions aided by MSU faculty advisors. This will be his second tour of duty in Asia, since he previously conducted research on rural development in Thailand, the Philippines and Viet Nam.

"Comilla is one of the more well-known and active experiments in development in the world," Luykx said. "In most countries, they have tended to emphasize central planning, but in Comilla they are demonstrating that active involvement of both government and the people in rural development can lead to modernization. The people themselves actually participate in managing the development process."

MSU's involvement in Pakistan began with a survey in 1956 of the need for rural development academies. One year later, two institutions were created at Comilla and at Peshawar in West Pakistan. Before the academies began work, 22 Pakistani development officials enrolled for a year at MSU.

MSU advisors have assisted the academies in their programs of forming cooperatives, strengthening local government, irrigation and other development efforts. The experimental academies have, in their short existence, attracted attention throughout the world because of their unique approach.

Geographers Study New Teaching Aids

Thirty university geographers are meeting at MSU this week to learn how new media can help them streamline geography instruction in the nation's schools.

Another session will be held Feb. 21-25. Each geographer will conduct a summer institute for elementary and secondary school teachers. These programs will reach a total of 1,500 teachers across the nation.

Ted Ward, professor and director of the learning systems institute, will discuss new ideas for learning and college teaching at an agricultural economics seminar at 3:30 today in 31 Agriculture.

A cell-culture approach in solving a plant breeding problem will be the topic of a crop science seminar at 4:05 today in 309 Agriculture.

Cordaro 'Cat'apults State Into Gym Spotlight

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

What makes Bob Cordaro analogous to a neurotic cat? They're both trapeze artists. That's where the similarities end, however, for Cordaro seems to defy the myth of the flamboyant gymnast, calling to mind, instead, a dedicated athlete who likes to win, and works for it.

One of the mainstays of the undefeated Spartan gymnasts, Bob has proven to be one of Coach George Szypula's steadiest and most outstanding performers.

Concerning the cat, he's one of the Gatos twins, property of Cordaro's roommate.

"I'm really mean to them," Cordaro admitted, speaking of the cats. "I started tossing them around and one of them did a fluffus. He's even managed a triffus -- that's a triple front somersault with a half twist. The trouble is, they don't realize what they're doing." If they did, Szypula would have a prime secret weapon in the Spartans' pursuit of the Big Ten championship. Cordaro and his fellow tramp men, Ray Strobel and Keith Sterner, however, provide plenty of that.

While the cats may land on their heads at times, gym fans aren't likely to see Cordaro miss. This season, Bob has taken first in all of the Spartans' four victories, to lead what has been habitually State's poorest event.

"It's gratifying, after looking for trampolists for so long," said Szypula, "to find a boy like Cordaro. His performances have bolstered team morale as they've lifted the event."

Cordaro's top score came against Iowa with a 9.25 performance. He's hit for 9.0 against Ohio State, 8.85 in the opener with Chicago Circle and 8.75 in the Spartans' last meet with Indiana.

A pre-law major with plans for graduate work in political science followed by law school, Cordaro has been competing with some of the top names in trampoline since high school, among them world champ Gary Erwin.

"I was always flipping around on mattresses and anything else I could jump off when I was a kid," Cordaro said. "I started diving when I was in the fifth grade. From there, I got on a trampoline with Ray Strobel and my interest in gymnastics started."

Although great friends, Cordaro and Strobel have been at each other's competitive throats since high school in suburban Chicago, when they were tops in trampoline and tumbling, respectively. The following year, the school was split; Cordaro went to Arlington Heights and Strobel to Prospect. They met in their senior year, Cordaro the victor in three out of three meets.

A transfer student from Florida Southern, where there was only a gym club, Cordaro really worked getting back into shape. He credits Gay Hughes, his coach at Arlington, with instilling the incentive.

"I never worked so hard in my life," he remarked. "Hughes was great, though. He always stressed consistent workouts, with the idea that if you do something you do it well. I was used to being tops in high school, and once you've been up there you don't like to give it up.

"I enjoy gymnastics so much because you've got complete control of yourself and your bodily moves. It's good to know you can handle yourself and not just walk around like a mass. Because gym is a precision sport," he continued, "it's not as easy to watch as, say football or basketball. The average man can't jump right into it."

Cordaro shares the belief that this season can hold a national championship and Big Ten title for the Spartans.

"We've got the raw material," he said. "It just has to be processed. Once that's done, we've got the championship team. But there has to be that unifying factor. I noticed in the Iowa meet that there's something holding us back. We're capable of hitting 195."

Lions Suspend Gail Cogdill

The Detroit Lions announced Tuesday the indefinite suspension of end Gail Cogdill for his criticism last week of Head Coach Harry Gilmer.

Gilmer took the action after making "a thorough investigation of remarks made publicly by Cogdill" at a banquet in Flint last Tuesday.

Cogdill, obviously shocked by the unprecedented action, refused to comment.

"I'm not going to say anything," he said. "I'll take care of this myself. I have nothing to say."

The suspension is seen as an attempt to crack down on players for their loose talk off the field.

Cogdill had been reported as saying that "Gilmer doesn't know how to handle men and he's not ready for a coaching job."

Cogdill later denied criticizing Gilmer in his remarks before the Flint Junior Women's Club, but guests verified his comments.

Gilmer announced the action with a short statement, and refused to elaborate on the meaning of "indefinite" suspension.

Cogdill will probably be hit with a heavy fine when he does rejoin the team next season. At this point, he is not on the payroll because it is off-season.

"I take this action with regret," Gilmer stated. "... but the weight of evidence is that he (Cogdill) did make positive statements detrimental to the best interests of the Detroit Lions management, its coaches, some of its players in particular and to professional football in general."

Cogdill is reported to have been highly critical in his banquet talk. He is quoted as having said about Gilmer, "The men are afraid of him. How would you like to work for someone you can't trust?"

He also belittled fullback Joe Don Looney, when he said "We can't trade him because nobody wants him."

Cogdill also was unhappy with the Lions' salaries. "They told us the Lions were the highest paying team in the league... but the team rates 10th in this department," he said.

The suspension was the first made by the Lions in their 31-year history. Alex Karras, defensive tackle, was suspended by the league in 1963 for gambling.

Cogdill has been one of the Lions' great receivers in the past few years. He missed most of last season, however, when he fractured his kneecap in September. Surgery was performed last month, but Cogdill is still hobbled.

The Spartan 'Red Flash': A Deadly 'Killer' On Ice

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

Each time a Spartan skater is sent to the penalty box, the signal from Coach Amo Bessone is Red-Matt 'Red' Mulcahy, that is.

Red-headed Mulcahy, a 5-11, 150-pound Detroit senior, is a penalty-killing specialist for State's hockey team and has proven his worth many times over.

"He's a real go-getter," said Bessone one day recently while Mulcahy went through his paces at the Ice Arena. "Red" is a tremendous hustler and has a lot of desire."

Despite his small size, Mulcahy has shown that there is room in the rugged sport of hockey for the little man. What Mulcahy lacks in size, he makes up for in speed.

When the referees send a Spartan to the cooler for two minutes or more, Mulcahy rushes to his job along with John Schuster or Doug French. It's the only time he gets on the ice during the game, but it's an important one.

"It's our responsibility to prevent them from scoring," said Mulcahy. "The whole team is counting on us. Amo gave us a job to do and we've got to do it."

Thus far, Mulcahy and his partner have been getting the job done. Last Saturday against Michigan, the penalty-killing team didn't allow a goal at nine different times when State was at a man disadvantage.

The role of a penalty killer might appear unglamorous to those unfamiliar with hockey. Though they seldom score, penalty killers are still considered by every coach to be the life-blood of the team.

"He has to sacrifice himself to the team," said Bessone. "He's got to block shots with his body. Sometimes they get cut up pretty bad."

One of Mulcahy's "scarce" goals came two weeks ago against Minnesota when he intercepted a Gopher pass in their zone and flipped it in between the goalie's legs. It later turned out to be the winning goal in State's 4-3 victory over Minnesota.

"I was pretty excited," smiled Mulcahy, adding that later in his excitement he had left his textbooks and shaving kit at a Minnesota hotel.

According to Bessone, Mulcahy is ideal for the penalty killing position. "He combines good speed and aggressiveness," said Bessone, "and for a little guy he has a lot of courage."

Mulcahy, however, looks at his position in a different light. He regards himself as a ninth forward, who couldn't make it as a wingman on the first three lines.

"It's not that we're so good," said Mulcahy modestly, "because we're not. It's because we're better at killing penalties than anything else. It's just using manpower to the best advantage."

Psychic Bids Can Pay Off

By A.R. DRURY
The psychic bid is a powerful weapon, properly used. But there are some prerequisites if it is to work successfully.

20 points, his own hand holds 19, thus leaving only 1 high card point in his partner's hand. Actually, he should have doubled.

a hand at best, wasn't about to do anything of the kind and left South with his 2 Spades.

Soviets Curtail 'Pads' In Expense Accounts

MOSCOW (AP) - Traveling Soviet officials are being told to get off the gravy train and quit padding expense accounts.

friends or relatives on pleasure trips at state expense.

The magazine comes in the current issue of the magazine of the ruling Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party.

Business trips here refer to officials traveling to meetings or conferences on political, industrial, agricultural or other matters relating to this state-run economy.

His hand suggests that N-S, already vulnerable, have an easy game. To discourage them, he casually opens with a 1 Heart bid.

The magazine said the Soviet Finance Ministry and the State Bank had been ordered to tighten control of state funds for business trips.

North's hand doesn't give him much leeway except to pass. Besides, he isn't unhappy about defending against a Heart bid.

"Sometimes the trips have a business character and turn out to be kind of a tourist trip," it said.

East, who not only has great respect for his partner's sound bidding, but who has been subjected to many lectures on stopping short of game, raises to 2 Hearts, hoping they can finish the leg.

This appeared to be a veiled reference to officials sending

Debate Limiting Ahead?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The successful filibuster against President Johnson's bill to nullify state "right to work" laws brought a Senate demand Wednesday for a tightening of curbs on debate.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., called for rules changes to block what he termed "absurd filibuster tactics." Similar proposals by Clark have been pigeonholed for some time in the Rules Committee.

The new demand followed Senate refusal by a 51-48 vote Tuesday to invoke cloture and gag the filibuster led by Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen against the bill to repeal section 14B of the Taft-Hartley act.

Section 14B authorizes state laws banning agreements between employers and unions that provide for compulsory union membership. Nineteen states have such "right to work" laws.

Tuesday's Senate vote was 15 short of the two-thirds majority needed to shut off the filibuster. Democratic leader Mike Mansfield planned to force another cloture vote Thursday, but there was no chance that the outcome would be any different.

Mansfield has announced that if he fails again Thursday to gag the filibuster, he will put aside the repeal bill for this year and turn to other Senate business.

Scholarship Honors Fox

A scholarship honoring the late Richard F. Fox will be presented to a graduating senior of J.W. Sexton High School in Lansing this spring.

The remaining funds from the Rose Bowl float will be granted to the fund, reported chairman James Sink, Chicago, Ill., junior. This is about $300.

Fox was enrolled here as a sophomore at the time of his death in an automobile accident last fall.

Presently there is over $5,000 in the scholarship fund, which is being handled by a committee of six MSU students. Further contributions may be made payable to the Richard F. Fox Scholarship Committee and mailed to P.O. Box 241, East Lansing, Mich.

40 Pledges Plan Service Project

Pledges of Alpha Xi Delta and Theta Chi will entertain 40 children from the Lansing Public Schools in a Valentine's party 1-3 p.m. Saturday. The event will take place at the Alpha Xi Delta house at 320 Linden St.

Barbara A. Thompson, Royal Oak junior, is chairman of the party and says that 22 Alpha Xi Delta pledges and 18 pledges of Theta Chi will participate in entertaining the children with games and songs, which will be followed by cookies and hot chocolate. The house will be decorated in Valentine tradition. The children will get a take-away at the end of the party.

Alpha Xi Delta has a 79-member chapter with Kathy Holt, Plymouth junior, as its president. Jim Gierach is president of the 80-member Theta Chi Chapter.
