Sen. Fulbright Proposes Asian Neutralization

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., proposed Tuesday that the United States and Red China agree to a mutual military withdrawal from all of Southeast Asia and that the entire region be neutralized as a buffer between the two powers. That is the only way the current crisis in Viet Nam and elsewhere in Southeast Asia can be resolved permanently, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said in a major

Johnson Moves Solidly Supported

House Votes $4.8 Billion For New War Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Senate overwhelmingly upheld Tuesday a resolution supporting President Johnson's authority to wage with U.S. forces the war against Communists in South Viet Nam.

And the House, in a swift, one-sided vote, approved $4.8 billion in new war spending.

Johnson himself aimed a new peace appeal at Communist North Viet Nam. "Negotiate peace and let war stand aside," he said, while the people of Viet Nam choose their government.

In the Senate, cockpit of the great congressional debate on war and peace in Viet Nam, five lawmakers backed a move to repeal the 19-month-old resolution approving the use of armed force against Communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

Johnson's allies said the decision put the Senate squarely behind the President's policy in Southeast Asia.

Like most evolutionary processes, the growth of MSU's distribution policy has been gradual.

It has been formed by a series of pragmatic responses to "crisis" situations. These responses have formed a set of rules which cannot be explained by a neat theory. Today a significant minority of MSU students is affected by the University's policy on distributing printed matter on campus.

Despite Quick Move ASMSU Deserves Pay

WE REAFFIRM OUR stand in favor of compensation for ASMSU board members. However, we disapprove of the speed with which the motion was passed, and more important, the absence of involvement of the student population.

The repeal of the compensation motion is ample evidence that ASMSU acted too rapidly and did not consult beforehand with a meaningful number of students.

THE FACT THAT ASMSU erred in the manner it used in passing the compensation motion is no reason for depriving board members of adequate compensation. As we have said before, the members deserve a gratuity for their work.

Many have asked why ASMSU passed the resolution so quickly. The present board will receive no benefit from the motion. However the new board, to be elected spring term, will benefit from it. The present board wanted to avoid the situation of the new board voting itself compensation.

THE BOARD'S SENTIMENT in wishing to take responsibility for the motion since it would receive no benefits does not justify its speedy passing of the motion; for infollowing this course it sacrificed a more important principle--student involve-

Any resolution giving student leaders financial compensation must receive the sound backing of the student body. If the students approve of the board receiving a gratuity, then it will be irrelevant whether or not the board passing the motion will be the one receiving financial benefits. Any talk about pay should be first carefully examined and discussed by the students. Action to initiate such a study has now been started.

ASMSU MADE A serious, but not irreparable, error when it did not consult the students on the original compensation motion. However, the basic principle of board members receiving a gratuity for their work is just and much needed. Students should judge compensation for board members on its own merit, and not be influenced by the overly swift actions

ALL IS NOT WELL with organized labor and President Lyndon B. Johnson. Or at least that's the indication given by labor leaders, especially George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO.

In a recent convention in Miami, Meany unleashed a bitter verbal attack against the Johnson administration, in the person of Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz, It seems that Meany, along with many other labor leaders, are unhappy with the policies the administration is either pushing too hard or not hard enough.

The first complaint was that LBJ hadn't pushed hard enough for the repeal of section 14(B) of the Taft Hartley Law when it had to be shelved a few weeks ago because of a lack of support. Evidently, Meany has forgotten that even Lyndon Johnson can only twist a given number of arms for just so long. The needed. number of votes to secure repeal was simply not present.

THEN MEANY COMPLAINE Dabout the new White House guidelines for wages which suggest a limiting of wage increases to 3.2 per cent annu-

With the U.S. sending money by the millions to Viet Nam every day and the approaching near full-employment level, the danger of inflation cannot be cast aside. President Johnson has in recent months persuaded several key industries from raising price rates on their products. It seems only logical that under present government policies attempting to keep inflation at a minimum, that labor should also be expected to Labor has also been asking for a 50-cent rise in the federal minimum wage law from $1.25 to $1.75 by 1968. The administration and Congress have had somewhat lower figures in mind, again with the hope of holding down inflation. Though a raise may be needed, it is doubtful that it should be as much as labor is requesting, under present conditions.

ALL THIS SEEMS to indicate that many labor leaders are interested in their own benefits alone. By blasting the administration and Congressional Democrats, they have made it quite apparent that labor is willing to cooperate only so long as Democrats produce favorable results.

In the future, labor leaders, especially George Meany, would do well to occasionally consider the national interest even before self-interest.

SN Editorial Helps 'Knowledge Pot'

To the Editor:

THE STATE NEWS is to be commended for devoting editorial space to the problem of student participation in behavioral research.

Too often, there is general misunderstanding among students concerning the motives and goals of such experimentation, misunderstanding that in turn leads to resistance and negativism regarding research participation. Unfortunately, these conditions can usually be traced to a failure on the part of the researcher to specify clearly the circumstances surrounding the research. As one who has been guilty of this shortcoming on more than one occasion, I can vouch for its undesirable consequences.

Once students realize that most of the "knowledge pot" of the behavioral sciences-incomplete, imperfect and restricted though it is--has been built through participation by past generations of college students, they are usually willing to contribute their chips to the pot. In addition, they cease to regard behavioral research as a personal inquisition and develop an appreciation for the fact that such research aims at developing generalizations about the behavior of larger groups or people.

In looking back over this note, I am aware that it stems from a twofold motivation: to admit my own frequent failure in communicating the purposes and importance of behavioral research to student participants and to thank all of those students who have contributed to my efforts even in the face of this failure on my

Olin has often been the brunt of jokes concerning the services rendered. We never accepted these jokes entirely until recently one evening around 11:30 we suddenly found ourselves in need of medical assistance. Having called the only doctor who was familiar with the case, we received a terse, unconcerned refusal to even consider listening to our plea. "Look . I can't be bothered at home. I got off

In spite of the fact that we made it known that he was the only doctor who had handled the case, we still received a curt reply that we were infringing on his right to privacy. New and unfamiliar complications had arisen and we wanted the assurance that it wasn't anything serious or it demanded immediate attention. The circumstance only warranted the doctor's advice, not his services.

We realize that it is an inconvenience to the doctors to be called at home. However, being laymen how can we be expected to explain an involved case history to doctors completely unfamiliar with it. Traditionally, physicians must live by the Hippocratic Code of Ethics to help people when the need arises-not just during office hours. Supposedly, they realize this when they receive their M.D.'s. Or does becoming a staff member at a University hospital alter this code and erase a doctor's responsibility to his patient?

Olin is established on campus for the sake of rendering services to the students. However, a doctor enters his profession to render services to his patients. By rudeness or inefficiency doctor is a poor credit to Olin, the organi-Pation he represents. How can we put our trust in the most convenient medical service set up to serve students, if we cannot place confidence in the resident doctors?

> Patrick Carpenter Vice President & P.R. Director

Certainly Mr. Stefanoff's death is regrettable, but it is no more so than the deaths of the many other MSU students who have died as the result of automobile accidents, and I see no reason why he should have been singled out for memorialization. But since he has been, and since the money has already been collected, I feel that it should at least be applied to some purpose nobler than that of providing a portrait to moulder on the walls of the ASMSU Offices.

I can conceive of no one who would benefit by such a purchase, but I can well conceive the benefits which would result from the creation of a scholarship fund, or from a contribution of the FULL amount to medical research.

I ask that IFC attempt to cut through the eulogistic fog which evidently surrounds them and reconsider their decision, not with the sentimentalism of death, but with a recognition of the living present: the world is full enough of graven images, but dreadfully short on charitable works.

Idea For Memorial

To the Editor:

It seems to me that it would be more appropriate to donate all of the Stefanoff Memorial Fund to leukemia research. The value of a gavel or a $395 painting of the late James Stefanoff hanging in an ASMSU office is questionable. Perhaps an inexpensive plaque telling of the money donated in Stefanoff's name could be placed in an appropriate location.

RON KARLE Who Ain't Got It, Boy?

SOME OF THE SEGREGATIONISTS have gone superpatriotic lately and, in addition, one particular group has seen fit to shroud itself in a cloak of academic respectibility.

An enlightening booklet -- not for its contents, but for its approach -- was sent to this office recently and was written by a Ph.D. named Henry E. Garrett. Invoking elements of momism, apple pie and the flag, Garrett's "How Classroom Desegregation Will Work" is published by an outfit called the Patrick Henry Press out of Richmond, Va. And to soften us with implications of Good Guvism, the cover displays a black and white checkered school house with the inevitable flag.

In his academic, yet kind and paternal manner, Garrett, in essense tells the Negro: "You just ain't got it, boy."

GARRETT CITES IQ TESTS which he says measure "native intelligence" and relates that Negro schoolchildren always are about 20 points behind the white children. This harms both races

Being a non-expert in this area, I still would like to be shown a test that measures native intelligence. And don't say the muchmisunderstood IQ test does. IQ tests often only measure reading ability either directly or indirectly, and if you don't read so well, it could make you look pretty bad. And whose fault is that?

It seems if tests of this sort are to be used with such authority, then the people tested should own similar cultural benefits. Some of these kids don't find the folks home every night, watch TV, rarely get down to the corner drug store with a dime for an ice cream cone. Yet they're expected to be on equal terms in the classroom which of necessity must draw upon real life experiences.

And Garrett says his booklet doesn't minimize the factor of environment in determining achievement, but holds that heredity is vastly more important.

He goes on to say that the Negro's unproportionally high crime rate is not environmental but they have inherited a tendency toward crime. Also, says Garrett, these inborn traits have "brought a consistent pattern of civil disobedience previously unknown in this country." I submit sir, the American trade union movement. The late Sam Gompers, first president of the AFL; John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers; Walter Reuther, of the UAW; and, of course, the Teamsters Jimmy Hoffa would possibly contest such a statement -- if they ever stopped laughing.

In the final chapter, Garrett tells us there is "strong evidence" --but fails to produce it--that the Negro race is less advanced in an evolutionary sense than is the white race; perhaps by 200,000 years. "The Negro's brain, on the average," we are told, "is smaller, lighter, less fissured and more primitive in many respects than the white's brain."

Again, a rhetoric of conclusion without supporting details or

This civil rights thing--I prefer human rights because it includes me, too--has been overworked from both sides. We're getting work at 5, so call Olin.", said the doctor tired of rehashing the same tired arguments. The problem, however, still exists.

> NOW SUPPOSE GARRETT sincerely has a valid point, His solution seems in line with old Nazi Germany. He in effect, says: let us whites keep those Negroes in their place lest we be tainted. If instead, he would have said, let's help our people, or even, selfishly, if we help others, we're helping ourselves for a stronger community -- if he would have said that, he would merit some respect even though his ideas are misguided.

Where Oh Where, Can Teacher Be?

Ironically, the ability to teach cannot be measured in terms of a professor, associate professor or assistant professor's contribution to the University. No one but the students in the classes can say whether a faculty member is a teacher.

Unfortunately, among the means for measuring faculty contributions to the University is the amount of publications the faculty members do. Other data are also considered, such as number of classes taught; number of students, undergraduate and graduate, advised; the extent of research done; recognition by other authorities in the field.

But publications are still a focal point since publications are considered "sacred" indications of a faculty member's productivity.

Publications are measureable, at least in quantity. But what about quality?

If a teacher suggests a theory, he's made a "scholarly" contribution. If he puts the theory into practice, he's experimenting.

The student is the only person capable of judging whether he has learned from the instructor -- whether what he has learned will affect his outlook on the subject and on his "place" in society for the rest of his life.

Learning is a personal evaluative process, the result of good teaching. And good teaching also includes the instructor's ability to motivate. "Success equals ability times motivation, squared," Gordon A. Sabine, vice president in charge of special projects, maintains. But learning success, the supposed goal of a college student, equals the student's ability times the student's motivation, squared.

Expanding the teaching definition, then, would mean an instructor should also be able to motivate his students far past the minimal requirements needed to just "pass a course." This does not include "loading on the work," but it does include making the student want to search more, to develop an interest in the subject To the Editor: beyond the realm of "formal" education.

Teaching is an art. Learning is an art. The good student is rewarded for learning--the fourpoint dinner, the high grade point average which is stressed in our society as a means to a better job, praise by parents and friends for high achievement, a diploma for doing the job.

But what do we do to reward the good instructor? He may receive a distinguished faculty award to show recognition for his teaching ability by his peers in the academic community. He may also be rewarded by having fewer hours cellence who are members of the departmental of classes and more graduate assistants. More staff. "free time" is his reward-this, compliments

But if the instructor is a teacher, why take him from his job and call that a reward? His talent is teaching, yet the reward is less teaching. A student recognizes teaching ability, yet he can't get the teachers, because they are being "rewarded."

If a teacher can teach, if he can motivate, let's place the rewarding process on the shoulder of the students, the ones qualified to evaluate. Let's re-emphasize that students are at a University to learn and that we will not stand for anyone shunting out purpose in being here.

The University may evaluate its staff as it will, but the student pays the money, his for your continuing success. parents pay the money, the taxpayers pay the money and all to educate an up and coming generation of citizens.

SAIGON, SOUTH VIET NAM (AP)--U.S. Marines slashed a 1-mile strip from Communist holdings and U.S. air cavalrymen seized a mountain top Tuesday in coastal operations with Vietnamese troops reported to have cost the Viet Cong 141 killed.

Ninety-four of the Red enemy were captured in two drives, one in the Bong Son sector 300 miles northeast of Saigon and the other on a canal-laced peninsula 100 miles farther north.

A battalion of about 800 Marines said they stirred up elements of the Viet Cong's hard core 1st Regiment, killed 115, captured six and seized nearly 100

Ski Club In NCAA's Thursday

Members of Michigan State Ski Club are at Crested Butte, Colo., for the NCAA skiing championships Thursday and Friday.

State's team, which qualified for the nationals by placing second in the regionals at Houghton, Mich., earlier in the season, includes Jim Olson, Traverse City junior; Eric Hansen, Manistee junior; and Jim Huckle, Cadillac sophomore.

Since the Spartans are entered in only two of the four events, they will not figure in the team scoring. The team will compete in the slalom Thursday and the downhill Friday, but will pass up Summers is State's top threat jumping and cross country.

Defending national champion Denver University will have its usual strong team, but it is expected to have some tough competition from the University of Colorado. Colorado has three Olympians on its squad: Billy Kidd, Billy Marolt and Jim Huega.

Western ColoradoState at Gunnison is holding the race.

Malnutrition Affects Child Development

There is plenty of food in the United States, yet nutrition is still a major worry of those concerned with the growth of children, the dean of MSU's College of Human Medicine said

Speaking before a seminar class in foods and nutrition, Andrew Hunt, spoke on food deprivation and resistence to dis-

A child goes through two environments in which nutritional deficiency can affect growth patterns, he said.

The first stage is the embryo, the second the infant and those people surrounding him, Hunt

Premature births and congenital defects producing susceptibility to infection and abnormalities of intestines are examples of the effects of nutritional deficiencies during the first environmental stage, Hunt said.

Diseases, such as mongolism, are genetically transferable during the development of the embryo, Hunt said. Other diseases, such as measles, can be dangerous within a population which has never experienced them.
