ASMSU Student Board drastically revised election campaign procedures at its meeting Tuesday night. New rules passed by the group go into effect at 8 a.m. today.

Regulations altered by the board are concerned with the presentations, rallies and posters candidates use. The new rules place the burden of finding out about specific presentations and rallies upon the candidates, rather than upon the groups sponsoring the meetings.

Specific changes in the rules make it possible for the candidate, or a group supporting the candidate, to organize rallies for himself. These rallies must be registered with the elections commissioner at least 24 hours in advance, but the organizers may refuse to allow other candidates to speak since the rally is in favor of a specific candidate.

However, presentations by groups such as house councils must be open to any candidate who wishes to participate. Presentations do not have to be registered by the sponsoring group with the elections commissioner and it is the responsibility of the individual candidate to call and invite himself to these meetings.

Before the rule changes, all candidates had to be invited to any meeting, or debate, and be given equal time to speak. Debates had to be registered with the elections commissioner and all candidates invited two days before the debate.

The new regulations eliminate the concept of a debate and substitute the new classifications of rallies and presentation. Majority agreement among the board members at the meeting that previous regulations had stifled to a great extent the candidates' campaigning resulted in these changes.

Further revisions in the election procedures involve distribution of election materials. The new rules allow candidates to distribute the materials not only within certain buildings, as formerly, but also within and without buildings, including classroom buildings. Regulations concerning size, set-up and removal of posters and displays remain the same, however.

In further action, the board received a report from STEP that the group had approximately broken even on the recent Martin Luther King speech. However, several churches have agreed to support STEP's program this summer, so that no additional funds were required.

The board also discussed the Popular Entertainment Committee's report that the John Gary-Highwaymen show was expected to lose approximately $7,000. Plans were also announced to have seven programs in the series next year—four in the fall term, one in the winter and two in the spring.

The Off Campus Committee recommended to the board that students in supervised housing off campus be allowed to open their rooms to guests once each week, similar to the present procedure in Van Hoesen Hall.

Rhodesia Still Waits For 'Petro'

LONDON (UPI)—The British Government redoubled its massive diplomatic offensive Tuesday to prevent the landing of oil for Rhodesia at the Mozambique Port of Beira.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson called a meeting of his cabinet's Defense and Overseas Policy Committee to deal with the crisis.

The Greek-owned tanker Ioanna V, loaded with 18,000 tons of crude oil, has been anchored in Beira harbor for the past 36 hours. If it fails to dock at the unloading point at Wednesday night's high tide, Wilson will have gained valuable time to prevent a breach in the oil embargo on rebel Rhodesia which could wreck his sanctions policy.

Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart called in South African Ambassador Dr. Carle De Wet to warn the South African government of the danger of breaking the oil embargo.

Informed sources said Stewart warned De Wet that if the oil embargo was broken Britain would be unable to halt a United Nations security council decision to make sanctions against Rhodesia mandatory under chapter seven of the U.N. charter.

This, he warned, could lead to the use of force in Southern Africa which might embroil both South Africa and Portugal.

According to the foreign office the Greek-owned Ioanna V is carrying oil owned by a South African company.

Wilson sent Lord Walston, minister of state at the foreign office, on a special mission to Lisbon to urge the Portuguese government to keep the Beira-Rhodesia oil pipeline closed and deny unloading facilities to the Ioanna V.

May Will Be Less Drafty

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Defense Department announced Wednesday a June draft call slashed to the lowest level since the Viet Nam buildup began last August.

It asked Selective Service to induct 15,000 young men in June, all for the Army.

This is less than half the May draft quota of 34,600 and the lowest since the 16,500 last August.

"The decrease in the June draft call is primarily due to the fact that voluntary enlistments normally increase in June at the end of the school year," the Pentagon said.

W. Berlin Off Limits For Soviets

BERLIN (UPI)—U.S. and British authorities Wednesday night blocked a Russian attempt to exercise authority in West Berlin by sending in armed Soviet soldiers to guard a Russian jet that crashed into a British Sector lake.

A MIG 21 jet trainer, one of the Russian jets that for days has harassed the city, plunged into Lake Stoessensee.

Its two-man crew was believed killed.

The Russians sent 14 armed soldiers to the scene of the crash in a suburban Spandau district.

The British barred them from leaving their bus. A British spokesman said that the Acting British Commandant, in a meeting at British headquarters, severely reprimanded a Russian colonel and demanded withdrawal of the Russian force.

The British spokesman said the Russian soldiers then returned to their posts at the Russian War Memorial in the Tiergarten Park in the British sector near the wall.

At the same time American soldiers at Checkpoint Charlie at the Friedrichstrasse crossing point for foreigners at the East-West Berlin border backed up the British action.

They held for 40 minutes a Russian bus carrying 20 Russian soldiers to relieve the guard at the monument. They also held a sedan with three Russian officers.

The American made it clear they would hold the Russians at the checkpoint until the other Russian force withdrew from the lake.

The American allowed the Russians to proceed at 9:30 p.m. (3:30 p.m. EST).

Power Failure Repeats Itself

The second power failure in two days cut off electricity on about one-fourth of the campus Wednesday morning, but power was restored in an hour.

The failure, which occurred at 8:45 a.m., was caused by the same thing which temporarily extinguished lights all over campus Tuesday afternoon, a malfunction in the boiler control at the new power plant.

Theodore Simon, director of the Physical Plant, said Wednesday that the failure has been corrected.

Classes scheduled for the Computer Center Monday night had to be moved to other buildings when a malfunction in the controls for that building occurred. Power was restored by Tuesday morning.

Wednesday's failure affected the south science area, including the Bio-Chemistry Building, Plant Research Building, Conrad Hall and Fee and Akers halls.

Other buildings that also lost power were Berkeley Hall, Jenison Fieldhouse, Student Services and Demonstration Hall.

A project in which volunteer students read books to blind students in a special area of the Library was halted when the Library lost its power.

The blind students easily negotiated around the usual obstacles as other students bumped into chairs and desks in the total darkness.

Simon expressed his appreciation for the co-operation given by students in helping conserve the power.

Negros Hit Hiring Practices

By RON KARLE
State News Staff Writer

CLEVELAND—A long line of witnesses dramatized the subtleties of Northern racial hiring practices before the U.S. Civil Rights Commission here Wednesday.

The four-day hearing moved into both its third day and the federal courthouse.

The stern oak-paneled courtroom held a capacity crowd which heard of Negro disillusionment with training courses in public courses were not long enough, that equipment was poor and sometimes insufficient and that they were unable to obtain jobs in their training areas after completion of the courses.

Emden Schultz, director of the Ohio State Employment Service, which arranges the training courses with the public school, agreed that "There is a disparity here."

"Most employers are looking for a high school graduate but MDTA courses are designed for dropouts," he said.

The said that time is needed for the 16-week courses—especially for what he termed "disadvantaged youth." He noted that some of the trainees are unable to read and write when they begin, but reading training has been worked into all the programs.

"But the big need," emphasized Schultz, "is to fill the training courses."

Seeking to uncover responsibility for equipment deficits and, in some cases, the inadequate time span allowed for the courses—in other words, where does the trainee register a complaint—commission member Erwin N. Griswold, dean of the Harvard Law School, asked:

Bonn Firm On French Army Exit

BONN (UPI)—West Germany warned France Wednesday that the 75,000 French troops now garrisoned in Germany can remain there only so long as they are willing to accept a specific mission under integrated NATO command.

The declaration was issued after a special six and one half hour cabinet meeting devoted exclusively to the current crisis in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Alliance. It was Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's answer to French President Charles de Gaulle's decision to withdraw his troops from NATO beginning July 1.

In Washington, U.S. officials were expected to tell France within the next day or two that the United States is ready to discuss arrangements for pulling American troops, bases and headquarters out of France.

Authorities said that a note on the American position had been completed and was being communicated to other NATO allies before its submission to Paris.

It was expected that the note would seek to have France pay the major part of the withdrawal cost since the pull-out was triggered by De Gaulle's decision to pull his troops out of NATO.

Expansion Of Air War Near Haiphong

asked about the situation Wednesday.

A study of the bombing pattern over North Viet Nam this week shows that the air campaign is moving closer to the Hanoi-Haiphong area, and also is bearing down on transportation lines north of the Communist capital.

After the 37-day bombing pause, initial strikes were launched against supplies and transports nearest the points of entry to Laos and South Viet Nam, and then the bombing expanded northward.

From a political standpoint, it apparently was assumed that this pattern would give Hanoi inducement to open negotiations and would avoid provoking Red China to greater support of the war.

Nuclear War On Horizon

THE INEVITABILITY OF war between the United States and Red China has been expressed again and again by Red Chinese leaders. Their militaristic doctrine bears no immediate threat to American lives, but China is working at break-neck speeds to develop long-range missiles and hydrogen bombs.

It is fairly certain that within the next decade the war-oriented policies of Red China will have a definite effect on most American lives. Increasingly, western leaders are realizing that moves must be made soon to take the fever out of the situation.

One of the first steps in attempting to cope with the mounting Chinese threat must be to educate westerners to the values and culture of the Red Chinese leaders. Lack of understanding of the Red Chinese values is the root of the problem.

To the western mind, it is inconceivable that a nation would seriously seek a nuclear war. Thus, it is difficult for Americans to take the Chinese threat seriously. This lack of American understanding could prove fatal.

In a nutshell, Chinese culture, which bears few similarities to western culture, has developed continuously over the last four millennia, and today's Communist leaders are as much a product of that culture as Western

SPECIFICALLY, THE DIFFERENCES between American and Chinese culture are greatest in the areas of society's attitude toward the individual, rules gov-remember, whenever a new philosophy has been introduced in China, be it Buddhism or Communism, it has become incorporated into Chinese society, rather than China being altered to fit it.

Since the various pegs by which man judges reality, such as society's attitude toward the individual, and one's general environment, are different for Chinese leaders and American leaders, it becomes easier to understand how their values and perception of reality can be so different.

In regard to the individual, the physical environment in China--the lack of space, the constant war with nature for enough food and the overflow of humanity in recent years has caused Chinese officialdom to value the individual far less than do American leaders. This alone largely accounts for the difference in attitude toward nuclear war.

Ironically though, the factor that may contribute just as greatly to China's starting a nuclear war someday is found in all cultures--the devastation potentiality. It rears its ugly head only when a nation faces insurmountable problems as China does today through overpopulation.

It's that monster that says, "If we have to die, we'll drag everyone down with us. After all, there's always the chance that we will come out on top."

American experts have not been able to convince the Red Chinese that nuclear war will not benefit them. The Chinese have seen statistics which clearly indicate that hundreds of millions of Chinese would perish in a nuclear encounter.

Though such arguments are convincing to a westerner, they do not impress the Red Chinese because the Chinese have different values. It is time that we Americans understand the values and culture of China's leaders.

Only then will American spokesmen have the tools to see the world from the Chinese viewpoint.

Only then will Americans be able to communicate with the Chinese leadership meaningfully.

And only then will Americans be able to make a meaningful effort to dissuade the Red Chinese from their suicidal policy.

By 1975 the Chinese will have long-range missiles with nuclear warheads. Then it will be too late to talk.

leaders are a product of their own culture.

The veneer of Westernization in China is misleading. Even Marxism is interpreted from a Chinese viewpoint, centering its focus on the peasants as opposed to the Soviet theory which centers more on the industrial workers.

erning interpersonal relationships, structure of the law and structure of society in general. It has been argued that Communism has changed Chinese values.

Yes, China is being modernized outwardly, but a culture rooted in 4,000 years of history is not wiped out in one generation. And

Free University Support Doesn't Reject MSU Merits

To the Editor:

Students and other members of the MSU community who read the announcement in The Paper and the circular which was available in the dormitories last week will know that the Free University of East Lansing has begun offering courses this term. The role of the Free University consists chiefly in coordinating the fortuitous concurrence of students and faculty who are interested in topics which for one reason or another are not covered in the MSU curriculum. As members of the MSU faculty our participation in this venture reflects our conviction that the Free University is a healthy response to that unbounded intellectual ferment which ought to prevail on any large university campus.

However, our participation should not be construed as endorsement of everything which has been said or written on behalf or in the name of the Free University. In particular we object to and dissociate ourselves from the gratuitous, inflammatory, pretentious and, in some respects, inaccurate remarks made in the circular which announced the Free University courses. The assertion, for example, that 15,000 students are imprisoned in the MSU dormitory system has no more validity than the comparable assertion that millions are imprisoned behind the Iron Curtain in Eastern Europe.

In short, while we affirm the value of the Free University our participation in it as private individuals does not imply a rejection of the goals and methods of the University which we have chosen to serve in our professional capacities. In our judgment the Free University of East Lansing will make its true contribution as a complement (and complement) to Michigan State University rather than as a substitute for it.

AWS Asks 2-Day Study Period

To the Editor:

Last term the men of Green Helmet initiated and gave support to the idea of having a two-day reading period before final exams at MSU. The women of AWS very strongly support this idea and would like to see such a reading period enacted before our finals week this spring term. Too much pressure is placed upon the student when his last class period is on Friday and there is a possibility that his final exam will be the following Monday. Most students exhaust themselves reviewing for their finals the week-end before exams and, therefore, begin finals week in a nervous, fatigued mental and physical condition. A two-day reading period would allow the students to learn, not cram.

I have researched the problem and found that the University of Maryland, State University New York at Geneseo, Ashland College, University of Rhode Island, Muskingum College, Alma College, Albion College, University of Rochester, Otterbein College, Eastern Michigan, and SUNY at Potsdam, to name a few, all have a one-day reading period before exams. Lycoming College, Douglass College, Bowling Green State University, and University of Michigan all have two reading days before exams. Bucknell University has a four-day reading period before exams. How about it MSU???

Youth Offender Needs New Law

ABOUT 6,000 college-age persons become "accidental criminals" each year in Michigan alone, but a bill to go before the Michigan Legislature this spring would keep them from having adult criminal records.

These "accidental criminals" are the people who fall into the gray area of the law, such as a minor accepting a ride in a stolen car with a friend. Present punishments, however, are just as severe on accidental crime as on premeditated crime.

"The problem in sentencing these youthful offenders now is that the very nature of an adult criminal record may undo what we are trying to do to help these people," says Alfred C. Ball, head of the Michigan Council of Crime and Delinquency.

Persons with adult criminal records may not serve in the armed forces and are not eligible for some jobs. This can almost force them to return to crime.

YET IN EVERY STATE but New York, persons over 17 are sentenced in adult criminal courts. New York has a special, alternative Code of Criminal Procedure for persons under 19 which is similar to the proposed Michigan act. New York's law also avoids a criminal conviction and has been successful but underused, according to the National Council on Crimes and Delinquency.

If Michigan enacts the model sentencing act, drawn up by 50 judges, it will be the first state to do so. It specifically states that "No determination made... shall disqualify any youth for public office of public employment, or operate as a forfeiture of any right of privilege...."

Court records and photographs would be closed to public inspection except at the discretion of the court. In other words, criminal convictions could not be used against the youth in later life unless he is convicted of a second crime. In this case, the act says that his prior record as a youthful offender may be considered.

Ball emphasizes that not all of the persons in this age group would be granted non-criminal trials.

"This is at the judge's discretion," he says. "Some of our most dangerous criminals are in that age group."

He estimates that from 40 to 60 per cent of the persons apprehended would be eligible for the non-criminal trial.

THOSE WHO ARE convicted would go to institutions to be specifically designated for only youthful offenders by the Dept. of Corrections. Youthful offenders are presently imprisoned with adult criminals, but a separate bill, recently introduced, would prohibit this.

More Action, Less Talk On Voting Age Change

TOO MUCH TALK and not enough action. This seems to be the fate of the perennial proposal to lower the voting age from 21 to 18.

Now it has been offered as a constitutional amendment, introduced by Rep. Charles L. Weltner (D-Ga.). Weltner, better known for his membership on the un-American activities Committee, is now attempting to solicit public support around the country for his proposal.

Giving 18-year-olds the right to vote usually receives widespread support among public leaders and politicians. Such personalities as President Johnson, G. Mennen Williams, former governor of Michigan and now a candidate for the U.S. Senate, and Gov. Romney have at one time or another voiced their support of such a proposal.

A BILL HAS SEVERAL times been introduced in the Michigan Legislature, and presently one is in committee with little hope of being reported out to the floor. So far, whether on the state or national level, there has been considerable talk, but little action.

We think it's time for some action, and affirmative action at that. But by nature, politicians are reluctant to initiate changes, especially when they don't know what the results might be and even more so when the results could directly affect them.

The arguments both for and against lowering the voting age are well known. Opponents claim that 18-year-olds are not mature enough to take on the added responsibility and make meaningful choices. Those who favor the measure assert that if a person can be asked to serve in the armed forces and even die for his country at the age of 18, he should also have a voice in choosing the government that could determine his fate.

BUT PERHAPS THE STRONGEST argument for lowering the voting age is that with students becoming more interested and active in public affairs and receiving more extensive training in school, they can now be brought into the electorate at a younger age and be capable of making the needed decisions.

It has been shown by political research that the age group which votes the least is the one from 21 to about 30. This three-year period in between the time a person leaves high school and becomes 21 often leaves him with no attachments and voting is many times not begun until later in life--if at all.

It seems inevitable that some time the minimum voting age will be lowered. But the question is, why not now?

Pass-Fail Gives Partial Solution

Grade point fears prevent many students from receiving well-rounded educations.

No simple solution exists that will elevate education above grades, but if grades could be eliminated in certain courses, students could take these courses without having to worry about their grade point. This would at least be an improvement.

Such a system, where students take a certain number of courses (not in their major) for credit only, has been successfully tried at several schools.

THE PASS-FAIL SYSTEM, as it is known, has been used at Princeton with some very encouraging results. Students are taking courses on a pass-fail basis in fields quite apart from their majors.

THE DEPT. OF ART AND ARCHITECTURE, which has the fewest majors of any department at Princeton, currently has the most students enrolled in courses on a pass-fail basis. Courses such as modern European painting and modern architecture are rapidly becoming more popular.

Students at MSU have the same pressure for getting good grades as do students at other schools. The desire to get into graduate school or just to stay in school forces many students to avoid interesting but difficult courses in which they do not have a strong background or aptitude.

MSU NEEDS a system that would permit students to take a few courses a term for credit only so that they would be truly free to explore new fields and become more well-rounded. It has been so successful at other schools that there is no question about such a system being feasible.

If the administration earnestly believes in a well-rounded curriculum, it should try the pass-fail system at least on an experimental basis, for this system has been shown to be a means to a better education. We hope MSU will not be one of the last schools to try the pass-fail system.

NO TROUBLE TO SET ANOTHER PLATE

President Stays To Dinner

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON--Backstairs at the White House: By now most of the world knows that President Johnson dropped in for a few minutes at the Indian Embassy the other night. After talking quite some time with Mrs. Indira Gandhi, the visiting prime minister, the President decided to stay for dinner.

And the world knows, too, that Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was supposed to be the guest of honor, but at the last minute the table had to be rearranged and another starring appearance by the vice president was shelved.

What the world does not know, however, is what went on behind the scenes at the Indian Embassy as the start of dinner was delayed and the household employees nearly flipped their turbans. In fact, a private eye who operates under the name of Tashkent, Ltd., taped the kitchen conversation, all in flawless Hindi, of course, and here is what purports to be a translation:

Chief: "President or no President, my spenot placintee (spinach pancakes) are getting hard as manhole covers."

ister can't shove him out the door. He might be on the verge of offering her another hundred million dollars."

Chief: "For all the money in the world, I can't stand here cooking these things forever. As it is, I'm almost out of palacintees and this isn't the sort of stuff you pick up at an all night drug store."

Butler: "Why don't you stretch it with soy sauce?"

Maid: (entering excitedly) "The President has decided to stay for dinner. Madame says to fix the place cards at once."

Butler: "What do I do with the card that says Humphrey?"

Maid: "Move it down."

Butler: "We can't have Johnson and Humphrey sitting side by side. What will they talk about?"

Maid: "Put one of our countrymen between them."

Butler: "That will put the vice president below the salt."

Maid: (exiting excitedly) "Don't worry about it--he's been there before."

I am a member of the Air Force, in which, I am proud to say, segregation is virtually nonexistent. However, almost five years of my career have been spent in the North where Negro servicemen are frequently refused housing because of their race. I could mention numerous incidents of racial strife in the North which are evident even though they don't make the headlines.

Granted, the outward manifestations of discrimination are characteristic of the South, but prejudice is a condition of the heart and mind which is not peculiar to the people of the South.

The difference lies in the fact that the South is being forced to accept an entirely new way of life, and rebellion is a natural instinct. I do not condone the violence and bloodshed which is taking place, nor do I condemn anyone who is making an honest effort to improve the situation.

However, having an intimate knowledge of the South and its people, I know that the present generation will not accept integration gracefully. It will take time and patience. But, most of all, it will take constructive endeavor rather than aimless and sarcastic criticism.

Two Mistakes Made About Mrs. Close

To the Editor:

After reading Mrs. Sher's and Mrs. Johnson's letters, I believe that some mistakes have been made. It was said that Mrs. Close called Spartan Wives first about Viet Nam and only secondarily about civil rights. I think someone must have made a mistake about this, because while Mrs. Close is very concerned about the Viet Nam situation, she is not and has never been actively involved with it in any way whatsoever.

She is, on the other hand, one of the most actively committed people in this community when it comes to helping those southern Negroes who were fired, evicted and made destitute when they struck for decent wages.

Therefore, I find it not only improbable but also illogical to imagine that such a person as Mrs. Close would call for help on an issue in which she is not actively involved.

Secondly, a mistake is made to think that Mrs. Close spoke out openly about Spartan Wives' board members' attitude because they felt their organization could not shoulder a new commitment mid-year. Such an explanation for Mrs. Close's behavior leaves one with the impression that Mrs. Close is demanding unfairly that a group do what she wants.

When Spartan Wives told Mrs. Close that they could not undertake a new commitment now, Mrs. Close then asked only for a few minutes at a meeting in order to tell the members about the situation and give out the name and address of the person to whom the members, purely as individuals, could send clothing, food and money if they so desired. It was the refusal to permit these innocuous few minutes to Mrs. Close that prompted her to speak up about Spartan Wives' board members' attitude.

Marines Withdraw

into Da Nang Monday to "liberate" the city from what he said was communist control. But following talks with Maj. Gen. Nguyen Man Chuan, commander of the 1st corps area which comprises the five northernmost provinces, Ky apologized and returned to Saigon.

On his return, Ky said he "had a personal look at the situation and had talks with Gen. Chuan" and that he found this was a problem which was basically political in nature and for which a political solution may be found without having to use force.

"Consequently, on the one hand I have given instructions that everything possible be done to check extremist actions on both sides so that nothing regrettable happens while a political solution is being sought. On the other hand, . . . I am positive we will find a solution very soon."

Moving the Marines out of Da Nang was announced as the first step toward resolving the crisis without causing unnecessary bloodshed. Anti-government elements, including many of Chuan's own troops, had thrown up roadblocks and machinegun posts and were prepared to fight if the Marines moved out of the Da Nang air base.

Chuan conferred in Da Nang Wednesday with Gen. Nguyen Huu Co, deputy premier, and U.S. Marine Lt. Gen. Louis W. Walt, commander of the third Marine amphibious force. All agreed that the withdrawal of the Vietnamese Marines would help ease tensions in the area.

As for the rebellious soldiers and rangers under his command who joined the dissident forces, Chuan said he planned to do nothing about them right now.

MSU Against Inn Request To Rezone

Leland Carr, attorney for MSU, opposed Tuesday night an inn firm's request to rezone property south of the campus for a motel development.

Hospitality Motor Inns, of Cleveland, Ohio, requested at the City Planning Commission meeting 12 1/2 acres at the southwest corner of Collins Road and I-496. The firm had previously been refused a request for 43 acres.

The highway is a "natural barrier" for the University, contended Carr, and the area could be used later for the proposed headquarters of the Michigan State Police.

The attorney for the Inns, Archie C. Fraser, claimed the University was holding up other projects with hints of using the land for other purposes.

SECOND IN MICHIGAN--Spartan Guard Drill team placed second in the Michigan Drill Championships in Detroit Saturday. The guards received 1,004 out of a possible 1,100 points, which was only one point behind the winning team from Michigan Technological University. Antismog Device Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congress was told Wednesday the Justice Department is investigating charges that the automobile industry conspired to suppress installation of antipollution devices on auto engines.

Chairman Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., of the Senate Commerce Committee, made the disclosure at hearings on traffic safety measures. He read into the record a letter from Donald F. Turner, assistant attorney general, confirming the investigation.

The disclosure came after Sens. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., urged legislation to force automobile makers to notify car owners of design defects found in vehicles after they reach the market.

They said that a driver had the right to know if his car had a built-in safety defect that might cause him to have an accident. The auto industry claimed Tuesday that it was hampered by antitrust laws in making progress in a joint development of antipollution devices.

Speaking on behalf of the industry, Ford Vice President John S. Bugas asked the committee to make it immune from the antitrust laws to permit more cooperation. To support his argument, he said that the Justice Dept. was investigating to see if the industry had violated antitrust laws.

But Turner, in writing to Magnuson, said, "The charges being investigated by the antitrust division are of cooperative efforts to suppress—not to promote—the utilization of auto emission devices; a possible type of abuse which hardly strengthens the case for a grant of antitrust immunity."

Recent standards set by the General Services Administration (GSA) forced auto makers to install the antipollution devices on all 1968 cars.

State Police Withdraw From A&M

LOMAN, Miss. (UPI)—State troopers withdrew from the campus of Alcorn A & M College Wednesday, but remained on standby alert in the event further demonstrations develop at the Negro school.

The troopers used tear gas Monday and Tuesday night to break up protests over the administration of the school by President J.D. Boyd, a Negro who has been accused of being "only concerned with pleasing the white folks."

There was no official explanation for the withdrawal of the troopers, but the state college board had asked integration leader Charles Evers, organizer of the demonstrations, to call a "breathing spell" until the board can study the complaints against Boyd.

About 100 troopers had been assigned to the campus, but only a few patrol cars remained late Wednesday and most of the troopers were withdrawn to Port Gibson, about 17 miles away.

The company of National Guardsmen ordered in by Gov. Paul Johnson also was withdrawn.

The guardsmen were never called into action, but Tuesday night state police used billy clubs and tear gas to rout 2,000 young Negroes who gathered along a highway leading to the campus and ignored orders to disperse.

GRAPE STRIKE Union Recognized

Striking grape workers on the march from Delano, Calif., to Sacramento have cause for rejoicing. Tuesday Schenley Industries Inc. agreed to recognize the National Farm Workers Assn. (NFWA) as their bargaining representative.

They have been on strike against 33 growers since Sept. 8. Schenley is the first to agree to negotiate with the NFWA.

The lengthy dispute has been marked by charges, counter-charges and various tactics of "The Movement," a loose coalition of church organizations, civil rights groups, student groups and national leaders who support the strikers.

The Schenley-NFWA agreement was announced Tuesday in the office of the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor. It was signed by Cesar Chavez, executive director of the NFWA, and Sidney Korshak, attorney for the firm.

It stipulated that negotiations for a written collective bargaining agreement would begin within 30 days and that both parties agree to conclude negotiations within 60 days.

Immediately after the agreement was announced, Chavez disclosed that the strike against Schenley has been called off.

A nationwide boycott of Schenley products, organized by strike supporters, will probably also be canceled.

Chavez said that the Di Giorgio Corp. will be the next main target for the organization. Di Giorgio, as did Schenley in the past, has so far refused to negotiate with the NFWA on the grounds that it does not represent the workers.

The dispute resulted in a series of congressional hearings in California last month. At the conclusion of the hearings in Delano, a 25-day, 300-mile march on the state capital began.

Recognition of the NFWA represents a sharp about-face for Schenley. Less than two weeks ago, James C. Woolsey, West Coast vice president of Schenley Industries Inc., told a State News reporter in San Francisco, "None of our employees are on strike. There are, however, a few of our former employees, who quit voluntarily, picketing one of our ranches."

At that time Woolsey blamed the dispute on "outside agitators and misguided clergymen."

Housing Rule Mixup

The Off-Campus Housing Office has been deluged by students under 21 who misread the recently issued ASMSU booklet, "So You Want To Live Off Campus."

Under-age undergraduates have apparently been misled by the lead sentence in the booklet's second paragraph: "Any eligible student under the age of 21 must have parental consent and waiver to live in unsupervised housing."

Patrick B. Smith, director of the Off-Campus Housing Office, says that the key word in that sentence is "eligible."

"The only people eligible to live in unsupervised housing are those who will become 21 during the school year or who will reach senior status before the end of registration for fall term," Smith said. "Anybody else needs special permission from this office."

A senior is a student with 130 term credits. The academic year is defined as Sept. 15 to June 15 inclusive.

Sophomores and juniors who live off campus have to live in a supervised rooming house, or in Campus View Apartments, the only supervised luxury apartments in the area.

Frozen Sperm Impregnate 18

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (U) — A University of Michigan biologist reported today that 18 women have been made pregnant by male sperm which has been frozen up to 2 1/2 years.

The eight children already born show no defects traceable to the frozen sperm, Dr. S. J. Behrman told the Michigan Society of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

The U-M medical center said its program in this new field is one of "no more than half a dozen" known in the world. It also is believed to be the largest and to have succeeded in freezing live sperm for the longest period.

Of the 18 made pregnant, 6 are still expectant. Four women lost their babies.

Discussing implications of his work, Dr. Behrman mentioned a future when the sperm of "an Einstein or a Beethoven" could be preserved for reproduction, but said this "is still a long way off."

All the impregnated women were volunteers and had their husbands' assent.

Red Wings Face Hull In Playoffs

CHICAGO (AP)—Chicago's Bobby Hull, the National Hockey League's regular season record smasher, will draw a bead on his favorite playoff target Thursday night and Montreal's Canadiens will open defense of the Stanley Cup in a repetition of the 1965 post-season semifinals.

The Black Hawks start their best-of-seven showdown with the Detroit Red Wings, against whom Hull twice has matched the Cup semifinal goal production record of eight—in 1963 and last season.

The Canadiens, who wrapped up the regular season title in the closing days, start their best-of-seven against the Toronto Maple Leafs. The first two games—Thursday and Saturday—will be on Montreal ice and then shift to Toronto April 12 and 14.

Only others ever to match Hull's goal production in semifinal play were Detroit's great Gordy Howe in 1949, against the Montreal Canadiens, and Boston's Gerry Toppazzini in 1958, against the New York Rangers.

Hull will be a marked and weary man as the playoffs begin with Chicago Stadium games Thursday night and Sunday afternoon before shifting to Detroit ice Tuesday night.

The "Golden Jet" fashioned three NHL records that may stand for season to come with his 54 goals, 97 points and 22 power play goals.

The second-place Black Hawks lost only one match out of 14 against the Red Wings during the regular season, beating them 11 times and tying twice.

As might be expected, Hull was the leading tormentor, slamming 10 goals and eight assists.

This will be the fourth time in four seasons the Hawks and Wings have tangled in cup semifinal play and Detroit holds a two to one edge.

Seven Meets Slated For Girls' Tennis Team

A seven-meet schedule, including three matches this month, lies ahead for the MSU girls' tennis team.

Coach Gloria Baker's squad which is now practicing daily due to the inconsistency of Big Ten schools in fielding girls' tennis teams.

MSU's first match will be here April 20 against Hope College. The second will be a triangular with Kalamazoo College and Lakeforest at Kalamazoo April 23, and the third, with Grand Rapids Junior College April 28. Four matches will be held in May.

Usually six singles and three doubles matches are held in each meet, but it will vary with the size of the opposition's team.

Also Sandy Rose, St. Clair Shores freshman; Marcia Strait, Mason junior; Jeanne Davis, Bala Cynwyd, Pa., senior; Dawn Goodrich, Kalamazoo sophomore; and Sara Thorkilson, Jackson junior.

"One or two other girls will also be on the team," Miss Baker said, "but we don't know who just now."

Lacrosse Club Battles U-M

MSU's Lacrosse Club opens its schedule at 2:30 p.m. Saturday against U-M at Ann Arbor. Coach Steve Harrington's stickers will be playing with a predominately veteran team, as only two members of last year's squad are gone.

Another encouraging note is the presence of a few freshmen players who have had lacrosse experience in eastern prep schools.

IM ARENA LITTLE HELP

Baseball Crisis: Sloppy Snow

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

If worst comes to worse, the Spartan baseball team at best will know what it's like.

While Old Man Winter is getting in his last fling of miserable weather, MSU's batsmen have been working out under somewhat milder conditions in the IM Dirt Arena, eagerly awaiting the first of three games with Ball State this weekend.

Though hardly conducive to actual game conditions, the arena does offer the Spartans their only chance to get in some valuable practice time.

"We need the practice and this is the only place we can get it. Isn't this weather awful?" Coach Danny Litwhiler bitterly asked while pointing to a window that showed the falling snow outside.

"Ya, and I'd say we're getting pretty sick of it too," Assistant Coach Frank Pellerin replied.

The Spartans were inside Wednesday for the second time this week since returning from their two-week romp to Florida. They were in the IM Arena Monday, went outside Tuesday, and will go inside again today if the poor weather continues.

"We would have been in here Tuesday had it not been for the electricity going out," Pellerin said. "We just ran a few sprints, though, outside."

"I'd like to get outside Thursday," Coach Litwhiler said. "We need to get used to the cold in case we meet it at Ball State. We've had too much of this inside stuff."

Limited in playing space, the Spartans must contend with the best that is available. At one end of the arena pitchers line up to sharpen their control. At the opposite end batting practice is held under huge nets that catch the ball as soon as it is hit.

There is no infield practice. The dirt floor is too rough for that.

"We've tried it but it gets your timing off," said Dennis Maedo, senior second baseman.

"I'd just as soon not have it in here."

There is no outfield practice either. The ceiling of the arena wouldn't allow fly balls to be hit.

"And our pitchers aren't being helped either," Pellerin said. "They took the mounds out for registration and our pitchers have to pitch from holes and throw uphill. I sure hope that weather breaks soon."

The worst thing the Spartans have to face in the arena is the lighting situation. The soft, yellow lights make even the whitest of balls hardly visible.

The Spartans will break practice Thursday and will leave by bus for Ball State Friday morning. They meet the Cardinals that afternoon and will play a doubleheader Saturday afternoon.

Jim Goodrich will go for the Spartans in the opener. The big senior right-hander from Battle Creek was 1-1 on the Florida trip, pitching 15 innings for a 4.20 average.

"If the weather is cold, I'll probably leave Jim in for four or five innings," Litwhiler said. "It depends on how well he's going."

The NEWS In

SPORTS

By DAN DROSKI
State News Sports Writer

MSU's 17-man golf squad will be depending heavily on depth this spring as it attempts to better last year's seventh-place finish.

Coach Bruce Fossum has a fine group of experienced seniors and juniors, and the sophomore crop contains several players who could help considerably.

Leading the Spartans is senior Captain Ken Benson, a consistent performer who is being counted on to pace the team throughout the season. Doug Hankey, also a senior, was expected to add support, but he is out of action with a broken finger.

Junior Sandy McAndrew and sophomore John Bailey have both proven themselves in Florida, with McAndrew firing a 69, one of the lowest scores recorded in the tourney.

Fossum feels that much of the team's success will depend on the overall play of senior Fred Mackey, who he thinks capable of playing sub-par golf.

"Fred hits the ball as far as the pros, and we are counting on him heavily this spring," Fossum said.

Junior Doug Campbell and senior Bob Workman also made the trip south, and both are expected to improve their scores as the season progresses.

Three promising sophomores—Al Theiss, Steve Benson and Jeff Chalmers—have played well in practice, and any one of them could make the traveling squad if they continue to improve.

Juniors Mike Biber, Geoff Lyon and Norm Waara are also expected ed to play a major role in this year's campaign.

The team has been practicing at various local nine-hole courses the last few days because Forrest Akers, their usual practice location, has not opened. Coach Fossum is anxiously awaiting the opening of the Spartans' home course, as the Big Ten opener is less than two weeks away and the team needs practice on a longer course.

The opener will be a quadrangular meet with Indiana, Purdue, Ohio State at Columbus, Ohio April 16.

Fossum believes this will be one of the most important meets of the year, and it could give considerable indication of the team's relative strength.

Goddard Condemns Emotional Drug Ads

BOCA RATON, Fla. (UPI)—The new chief of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration took on the nation's drug manufacturers in their own den Wednesday and bluntly accused some of them of being more interested in profit than patients.

James L. Goddard, a physician who took over as commissioner of the FDA Jan. 17, condemned advertising that exaggerates a drug's effect and makes "emotional appeals," instead of scientific ones, for its use.

"I have seen evidence that too many drug manufacturers may well have obscured the prime mission of their industry: to help people get well," he said.

Goddard leveled his charges in a face-to-face address at the annual meeting of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association (PMA).

Association President C. Joseph Stetler said following the speech that he and his colleagues feared that the talk "might, unfortunately, be interpreted as an indictment of the entire drug industry, because of its overemphasis on isolated instances, without acknowledging the integrity and responsibility which our industry has consistently demonstrated.

"It is an unassailable fact," Stetler said, "that the scientific attainments and standards of performance of the American prescription drug industry have provided an immeasurable benefit to the improvement of health and the prolongation of life."

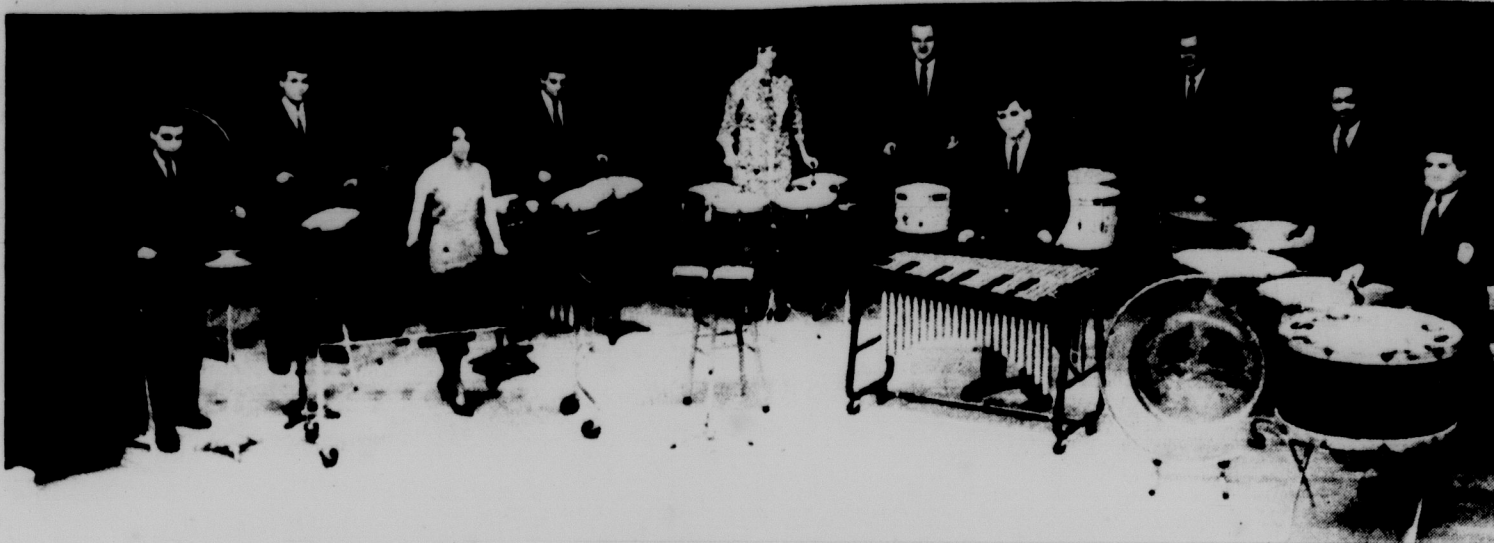

In his hard-hitting talk, the new commissioner warned of rising pressures to bring the industry under tighter federal control unless manufacturers voluntarily put their own house in order.

He said the drug company executives must put patients before profits.

'M' Withholds Class Ranks From Students' Draft Boards

ANN ARBOR 11--The University of Michigan said Tuesday it will not give a student's class standing to a military draft board without the student's permission.

Selective Service intends to re-examine student draft deferments on the basis of their current grades and on tests to be given in May and June.

Ernest Zimmerman, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs, said the university takes its position "because the issue is not between the university and the draft board; it is between the individual student and the draft board."

DETROIT 11--General Motors Corp. gained ground today in its efforts to get back to normal operations in the wake of the railroad strike.

A midmorning check showed four of GM's 127 plants were closed because of parts shortages while six other units were on partial operation. Four of the latter were expected to be back in full production by the second shift Wednesday.

GRAND RAPIDS 11--Beginning salaries of $5,300 per year will be paid new teachers being recruited by the Grand Rapids Board of Education for employment next fall.

The salary decision approved by the board Tuesday represents a $200 increase over the present minimum for holders of bachelor degrees. School Supt. Jay L. Pylman said only 62 teachers had signed tenders to date with up to 250 positions to be filled.

GRAND RAPIDS 11--Prison terms were reduced but fines were allowed to stand today against two California publishing firm operators convicted in an obscene book case.

U.S. District Judge Noel P. Fox ordered a maximum term of 10 years for Sanford E. Aday and a five-year maximum term for Wallace DeOrtega Maxey. Aday also had been ordered to pay a $25,000 fine and Maxey a $19,000 fine.

The original prison terms provided a 25-year maximum for Aday and 15 years for Maxey. Both are free under bonds totaling $85,000 pending further appeal of their case.

GLADWIN 11--The trustees of Clare-Gladwin Community College voted Tuesday to establish the school on a 560-acre site nine miles north of Clare. The land will be purchased for $50,000 from farmer John L. Meyers.

Hiring Program

"Who supervises these courses?"

"I don't know. It is not our job," Schultz replied.

"This looks like another case of everybody being responsible but nobody being responsible," said Griswold.

This situation has been evident in other areas investigated by the hearings.

But there was conditional approval of the program by Leroy M. Berichon, training supervisor of Thompson-Ramo-Wooldridge Co., which manufactures machine parts.

"We've had good results with the program," said Berichon, "because when MDTA graduates come to us we put them on a 90-day trainee program of our own. We then feel they have a good background."

He said his company would not, however, consider an MDTA graduate a skilled machine operator before completion of the company's 90-day program.

The afternoon session dealt with apprentice hiring practices in the craft union--specifically Local 55 of the Plumbers' Union.

George Fink, secretary-treasurer of the union, denied that the plumbers practiced discrimination, but when asked about his feelings on segregation, Fink replied:

"I think people should stay in their places."

Martin Kilban, chairman of the plumbers' local joint apprenticeship committee, admitted that "the union takes care of its own."

He was referring to the practice of giving sons and relatives of plumbers preferential treatment when it came to placing qualified applicants in apprentice positions.

He also noted that the union requires all applicants to submit photos with their applications and he recalled recent cases where persons, including Negroes, had been refused consideration because they had failed to meet this requirement although otherwise qualified.

"But all are welcome to make applications," he said.

Earlier in the day domestic worker Mrs. Geraldine Roberts gave other testimony concerning unions and Negro employment.

Mrs. Roberts, who is attempting to organize a union for domestic help here, said many workers fear loss of their jobs if they should join.

She said that on the average, the city's 12,000 domestic workers average a 5 to 5 1/2 day work week and that earnings of $35 to $40 a week are not uncommon for this week.

Food Processing Machines Hold Key To The Future

Modern food processing machines hold the key to the survival of the world of tomorrow, A.I. Morton of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture told a graduate seminar Tuesday.

Freeze drying is a process by which food is preserved. Although it is a long and expensive system, it reduces weight and thereby cost to the consumer. By placing the food in a tube that is enclosed by a steam chamber and then by a vacuum, the water in the food is evaporated and removed as vapors.

"In a hamburger patty that is totally frozen," Morton said, "the ice has retreated within the meat leaving a rim of meat on the exterior but crystallizing the interior. By using the force of another form of energy the ice can be drawn out of the meat leaving the unharmed hamburger patty."

Wheat, produced at a surplus in America, is now being processed so that it will more closely resemble rice eaten by the people of the Far East.

The process involves a machine which "washes" the wheat in a solution of lye for a few minutes so that it appears closer in appearance to the rice so familiar to the natives of these countries.

The wheat is washed, placed in the lye solution for up to three minutes and then placed in a machine which, operating upon centripetal force and turbulence, strips the color from the kernels.

The wheat, colorless at this point, is again washed and then placed in an acid formula which whitens it. Finally, the product is washed, dried and prepared for consumption.

"We are all aware that many ways are being tried to accomplish the task of reclaiming water from the sea," Morton said. "Through the process of reverse osmosis we have developed a machine that will force a lower concentration of molecules from a higher density."

An example of this formula was used to separate water from tomatoes to produce a thick tomato paste for a commercial concern, Morton explained.

Food is placed in a tube which is circulating at a very high rate of speed. As the food is circulating the water is forced through the walls of the cellulose membrane tube and drained off by a pump.

The potential for this device is to separate liquid from liquid (salt from salt water) and contaminating particles from water.

These three processes—freeze drying, "whirled" wheat, and evaporation—hold out many new possibilities for answering questions important to the world situation: how will we feed the world's masses; what will we do with our countries' surpluses; and is there any way to restore our disappearing natural water?

Soviet Growth Rate Down By 2 Per Cent

MOSCOW (UPI) -- The Soviet Union's top planner Wednesday admitted that his nation's economic growth rate had slipped almost 2 per cent in the past five years. Former Premier Nikita Khrushchev was blamed for the decline.

During 1956-60 the U.S. gross national product (GNP) showed an annual average increase of 4.7 per cent. Since 1961, however, the GNP annual growth rate has been 6.8 per cent per year.

Nikolai Baibakov, chairman of the Russian State Planning Committee, told the 24th Communist Party Congress that "national income" during 1960-65 had increased an average of 6 per cent compared with 8.2 per cent in the previous five years.

Baibakov blamed the growth slowdown on "a certain decline in the efficiency of social production in recent years," an obvious reference to Khrushchev's alleged bungling in economic management.

Iron and Steel Minister Ivan Kazanets told the Congress Russia would have produced more iron and steel in 1965 if it had not been for "subjectivist counterposing of the chemical industry to the iron and steel industry."

Kazanets did not name Khrushchev but the term "subjectivism" has become the recognized word for referring to the former premier. The chemicalization of industry was one of Khrushchev's pet products.

Both thinly-veiled criticisms of Khrushchev came in the wake of a blistering attack on the former leader Tuesday by Premier Alexei Kosygin who depicted his predecessor as an "amateur" who bungled the economy.

Kosygin also attributed the reduced pace of Soviet economic development to the arms race forced on Russia by American "imperialism."

The Soviet leader's remarks were interpreted by diplomatic observers to mean that in the nation's next five-year plan Russia intends to forge ahead with both guns and butter--increasing heavy and light consumer goods industries equally.

During the past five years heavy industry--which denotes arms output--increased at a much greater pace than light industry.

Kosygin promised that by 1970 the gap between heavy and light industry would narrow.

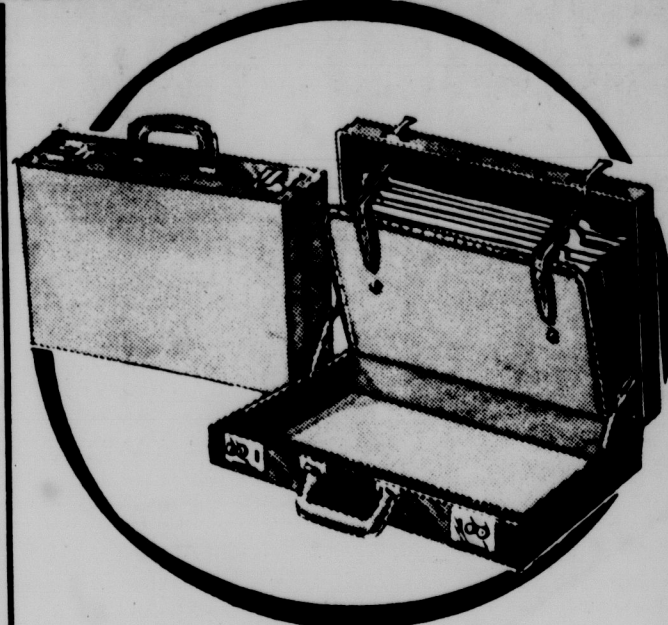

Baibakov said the new five-year plan calls for a national growth rate of 38-41 per cent, with this year's increase pegged at about 6.4 per cent.

I HATE ADVERTISING

I don't need anything.

I don't want anything.

I'm not interested in anything new.

Besides, I'm too smart to fall for the propaganda that advertising is vital to our economy because it moves more merchandise, which makes more mass production possible, and, therefore, raises our standard of living. I don't want everybody's standard of living raised.

I hate advertising.

Forum Boosts 'Beauty Bill'

Billboards and other forms of outdoor advertising have transformed the American countryside from a thing of beauty and contemplation to an "eyesore" which needs immediate attention, it was concluded at an Urban Studies Forum Tuesday night.

Charles Breed, Midland sculptor, said that outdoor advertising isn't voluntary because it leaves the public little alternative but to look at it.

He also said that advertising is a reflection of our culture. John F. Taylor, professor of philosophy, said, "Advertising should be subject to restraint because we are a society. Billboards are an invasion of our privacy and therefore a threat to our freedom."

Taylor said that the problem lies in neglect on the part of the American people rather than in the advertisements themselves.

The common opinion was that the problem will remain until enough people take active interest in it to produce results. The group was optimistic that there is a growing concern with the problem.

Other members of the panel were Robert Alexander, professor of art, and Alexander Butler, professor of humanities.

Scientists Show Tornado Maker

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Scientists at Catholic University demonstrated the first man-made tornado Wednesday.

It is pretty feeble, compared to the real thing, but the scientists hope it will contribute to the information man must have before he can devise means of killing tornadoes at birth. Catholic University's tornado is generated within a whirling screen nine feet high and six feet in diameter. A core of air is made to spin at about 50 miles an hour, creating a vortex like that of an actual tornado.

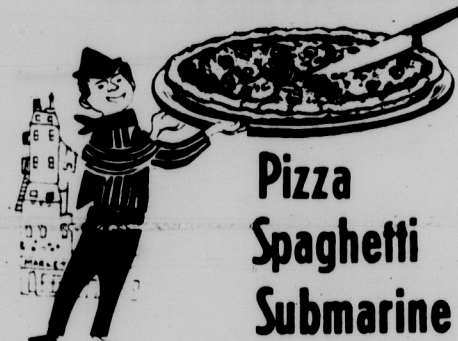

Real tornadoes, such as those which hit Florida this week, achieve rotational wind speeds of 100 to more than 400 miles an hour.

The laboratory model was built under the direction of Dr. C. C. Chang, head of the Catholic University's Dept. of Space Sciences.

His "economy model," Chang said, "represents the first significant progress in generating laboratory tornadoes for study under controlled conditions."

It apes a real tornado in a couple of ways but is not big enough and powerful enough to demonstrate all elements involved. So Chang now wants to build a bigger model, 12 feet by 12 feet, with wind speeds of about 100 miles an hour.

Sharecroppers Prefer Washington To South

WASHINGTON (UPI)--With tent living as good here as in their home state, Mississippi sharecroppers and their families today showed no sign of ending their four day camp-in across from the White House.

"At least we don't get shot at there," said Frank Smith, a spokesman for the group, which is seeking $1.4 million in federal grants to finance three Mississippi housing projects.

The group contends they were thrown out of their farm homes last year because of civil rights activities.

They spent last winter in a tent city, and Smith said they would "just as soon live in tents here in Washington as back in Mississippi." The group has occupied four tents in Lafayette Square across the street from the White House since Sunday.

James F. Kelleher, deputy public affairs director of the office of economic opportunity (OEO), said Tuesday the Negro farm families would not speed up antipoverty funds by continuing the camp-in.

"Efforts to force premature funding in complicated projects like this don't speed up funding," Kelleher said.

GOP Asks Cut In Budget

WASHINGTON (UPI)—House Republicans went on record today flatly opposed to a tax increase to meet the threat of inflation.

Following a private meeting called specifically to discuss the economic situation, the Republicans said in a statement: "We do not want another tax increase." They demanded, instead, a cutting government spending.

The Republican Congressmen said in the past two weeks the administration has taken varying positions on the threat of inflation.

"We again call on the President to end this confusion, to face frankly the growing problem of inflation and use the most direct weapon at his disposal to counteract it by reducing the planned level of federal spending this year and next," the GOP statement said.

The statement was issued by Rep. Melvin R. Laird, R-Wis., as chairman of the House Republican Conference, composed of all House GOP members.

The statement expressed fear that a tax increase would "encourage recklessness in government spending." The Republicans said they doubted it would "produce the fiscal restraint which government should observe in the present economic situation."

They said reduced government spending is preferable to a tax increase because:

--Every dollar cut from spending would be a dollar less of inflationary pressure.

--The government cannot effectively persuade private industry to reduce spending "when it fails to exercise restraint in its own spending."

--A tax increase will not likely produce fiscal restraint.
