FINAL REPORT ON RULES TUESDAY

Graduation Ceremonies At 4 June 12

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey will speak to 4,735 degree candidates at spring commencement at 4 p.m. Sunday, June 12, in Spartan Stadium.

Processional of the students and faculty will begin at 4 p.m. Humphrey will begin his address at about 4:40 p.m. and degrees will be awarded at about 5.

President Hannah will then deliver his comments at about 5:45 and the recessional will begin at approximately 6 p.m.

Of those receiving degrees, 3,358 will be awarded bachelor, 1,226 master, 33 doctor of veterinary medicine, and 118 doctoral degrees.

Five men will receive honorary degrees. In addition to Humphrey, Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission; architect Alden B. Dow; and Eni Njoku, recent appointee to the vice chancellorship of the University of Nigeria, will receive honorary doctor of laws degrees.

An honorary doctor of science degree will be presented to Mark V. Burlingame, a 1926 graduate of MSU and executive vice president of the Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America.

Also presented at the ceremony will be MSU Distinguished Alumni Awards. This year's recipients are:

Christian E.W. Baker, Class of 1955, president of Cottingham College and Divinity School, Liberia, West Africa.

Robert B. McCurry Jr., Class of 1950, a vice president of Chrysler Corp. in Detroit.

Alvin L. Burrage Jr., Class of 1942, general manager in Tokyo for Winthrop Laboratories, an affiliate of Sterling Drug Co.

John J. Korney, Class of 1931, vice president of Bank of the Commonwealth in Detroit.

William A. McDonald, Class of 1913, retired general manager of McDonald Dairy Co. in Flint.

Seating of the students for the commencement will be done by college, with the oldest--College of Agriculture--highest. The students will be recognized in the same order.

If rain prevents the ceremony from being held in the stadium, commencement exercises will be in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The entire event will be broadcast exclusively on WMSB television.

Dominican Conservative Near Victory

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI)--Conservative Joaquin Balaguer Thursday appeared to have won the presidency in the tense Dominican Republic on the basis of official returns from about 50 per cent of the electorate.

The central electoral board said Balaguer had 340,000 votes--some 64,000 more than his leftist rival, Juan Bosch, who had 276,000. But Bosch did not immediately concede. The other candidate Rafael Bonnelly, was running a poor third with 18,511 votes.

A heavy police guard was mounted around Balaguer's residence as rumors of an impending clash between his supporters and those of Bosch grew. Reinforcements of Dominican troops also entered the central business district after a crowd of about 2,000 formed.

Balaguer, a former president in the era of slain dictator Rafael Trujillo, earlier had claimed election on the basis of unofficial returns and pledged a government of national unity.

He said he would seek withdrawal of the Inter-American Peacekeeping Force (IAPF) after his inauguration, July 1, but said a final decision would depend on the state of public order at the time. The force is made up primarily of U.S. troops.

The newspaper El Caribe, which supported Balaguer, said in a special edition that a "landslide victory" was in the making. The newspaper said its own poll showed Balaguer leading Bosch by almost 100,000 votes--319,374 to 225,776--with about 50 per cent of the vote counted.

Committee Calls For Student Voice

By ANDREW MOLLISON
State News Staff Writer

The final report on a six-month-long probe into the University's regulations and structures will call for a vote, as well as a voice, for students in matters which affect their academic freedom.

The Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, a standing committee of the Academic Council, will report back to the council Tuesday afternoon.

Members of the committee, including students named by ASMSU to conduct a parallel investigation, will be meeting this weekend to put a final polish on the report.

Sections on a revised judicial structure, with greater student participation, and on a recommendation to move ASMSU up to the level of a full-fledged faculty committee are to be completed this weekend. ASMSU decisions are presently subject to veto by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

Previously published tentative guidelines on student rights and responsibilities in three areas--academic affairs, student records and student conduct--have already been re-worked in response to suggestions from dozens of faculty members and students.

'66 Seniors To Donate Unisphere

The class gift of the Class of '66 will be a four-foot-high replica of the Unisphere at the New York World's Fair. The Unisphere will be placed in the lobby of the International Center.

The Senior Council of the Class of '66 selected the gift, which is valued at about $3,500. Don Strange, director of the development fund on the council, was in charge of obtaining the replica, which is being made by an eastern steel company. Delivery should be before fall term.

A spokesman for the Office of Alumni Relations said that the Unisphere "portrays world unity and peace through understanding." Because it is in the International Center, it will be visible to students and will hopefully promote world unity at a time when the Class of '66 must begin to assume world leadership, he said.

Most of the money for the gift will come from refunds of the $1 cap and gown deposit charged each graduating senior, the spokesman said. When each senior returns his cap and gown, he will be asked to donate his refund to the fund for the gift. Members of the Class of '66 who will not graduate this term will be provided with an envelope in which they may place a donation for the gift.

There will be a plaque with the Unisphere in the International Center stating when and by whom it was given.

A new set of guidelines, recommending sweeping structural and regulatory changes in University control of student publications has also been drawn up.

The committee intends to ask that a permanent student-faculty committee on academic rights and duties be established, according to reliable reports.

This committee would see that the guidelines were followed by University organizations, offices and departments.

In order to give added weight to the guidelines, the committee will recommend that the Academic Council approve them and pass them on to the Board of

Apartments, Kedzie Work Still Hampered

Striking Michigan carpenters have returned to work on construction projects, allowing resumption of work on several MSU buildings.

However, striking masons and painters have yet to settle their strikes and have seriously affected the possibilities of finishing the married housing units by fall term.

Work on the new library and the new Holden Hall has been resumed because of the return of the carpenters. Construction on both of these buildings had been halted because the carpenters were needed to build the forms for the cement work.

In addition, the lack of carpenters had slowed but not halted the finishing of the language and math building and the Kedzie renovation.

Still slowed or completely stopped by the strike of the painters and masons is construction of the married housing, Kedzie classroom addition, food science building, natural resources building, plant research laboratory, Holden Hall, the language-math building and the addition to the landscape-architecture building.

Only the married housing and the Kedzie addition are in serious danger of not being completed on time. These are both particularly affected by the mason strike because of a previous shortage of workers in that field.

Gemini 9's Third Try Today

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)--Hard-luck astronauts Thomas Stafford and Eugene Cernan got the go-ahead signal late Thursday for their third attempt to fly the Gemini 9 capsule to one of America's greatest space adventures today.

They had two chances. 96 minutes apart, to get off the ground at last for their rendezvous with a target launched successfully

Wednesday and a spacewalk by Cernan.

Buoyed by the spectacular success of Surveyor 1's soft landing on the moon, space officials reported all was ready for Gemini 9's scheduled launching at 8:39 a.m. If successful, Gemini 9 would mark another giant step in America's bid to land a man on the moon.

Stafford and Cernan spent the day Thursday meeting with project officials and then reviewing their revised flight plan. Officials said the pilots planned an early dinner to get in bed by 10 p.m. EDT.

The mysterious computer system failure which forced Stafford and Cernan to sit helplessly in their capsule Wednesday while a "space window" slammed shut had been traced to transistor trouble probably due to the overheating of two tiny packages of electronic instruments.

Mission director William C. Schneider said "over 100 tests have been run so far and they've all been successful. So we're fairly certain we've cleaned up that problem."

"The weather looks good and the crew is in fine shape, ready to go."

Stafford, 35, and Cernan, 32, will have two "space windows"--the time in which Gemini 9 can successfully take off in chase of the target nicknamed the "glob".

Surveyor Sends Moon Photos

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)--Surveyor, which planted the American flag on the moon, Thursday blazed a trail for space pioneers by sending back a stream of 144 pictures in contrast to the few sent in a 48-hour span last February by Russia's Luna 9.

Space scientists exulted over the feat of the first-try success of Surveyor as a forerunner to American astronauts landing in the same arid Sea of Storms by 1969 and strolling over the dusty flat terrain shown by the first pictures.

A four-by-six inch flag, purchased for 23 cents at a drug store, was furled in a section of structural tubing of the three-legged robot.

The accomplishment of the pinpoint soft landing by the 10-foot high 620-pound robot was hailed throughout the world. Television watchers, including some behind the Iron Curtain, shared in seeing pictures transmitted by the swivel-eyed camera of Surveyor.

In contrast, Luna 9 was two-feet high, weighed 220 pounds and sent back only 27 pictures before its storage batteries failed. Surveyor is equipped with solar panels that provide battery power from the sun and can function for an unlimited time.

"It's not getting there first that counts, it's getting there best," exclaimed Dr. Edward C. Welsh, a White House space agency coordinator.

The close-up, fine-line pictures relayed by Surveyor to the jet propulsion laboratory's tracking station in the Mojave Desert showed what appeared to be boulders, rocks and pebbles covered with possibly an inch of dust.

One picture was aimed at one slender leg of the spacecraft, and a scientist said dust on the surface appeared no more than an inch deep.

When next the moon comes within receiving range of the Goldstone tracking station, as many as 700 pictures will be transmitted for study by teams of scientists guiding the nation's program to put an astronaut on the lunar surface.

Surveyor anticipates sending nearly 10,000 pictures in all before the lunar night falls in 12 days and 240-degree below temperatures freeze the camera. A hazard until that time is the searing heat of the sun.

The pictures were described as "excellent" and of "high quality."

Project scientist Dr. Leonard Jaffe said that by using data returned by Surveyor and that received by Luna 9, scientists "can draw a conclusion that rubble is fairly common over a large area of the moon."

"The area where Surveyor landed would support the weight of man," he said.

Senators Attack Report On CMU

By LEO ZAINEA
State News Staff Writer

A state senate investigating committee's report aimed at bettering faculty-administration relations at Central Michigan University was promptly assailed Thursday as unconstitutional.

The report said "trust and respect" is lacking at CMU and suggested that faculty have a greater role in making policy at the school.

It also said that CMU was unjust in denying pay raises to four faculty members whose criticisms of the administration helped spark a lengthy series of hearings.

In a statement drafted by minority members of the committee, Sen. S. Don Potter, R-Lansing, charged the 86-page report violated the Mount Pleasant school's constitutional autonomy.

Potter added he awaits "with great interest" word from Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley on the "so-called right of the Legislature to investigate a state university."

The report, in the making since last year, was headed by Sen. Edward J. Robinson, D-Deerborn, chairman of the Special Senate Committee on Faculty-Administration Relationships at CMU.

Criticizing the investigation as "not proper activities of a legislature" Potter charged the committee "blithely ignored" the limitations of Senate Resolution No. 88 which authorized the inquiry.

"In my opinion the people of Michigan were lucky," he said.

1965-66 For MSU: Controversy And Problems

IT WAS A YEAR like all years--except not for MSU. If there is such a thing as a typical school year, the year 1965-66 was not one of them for MSU. Diversity, variety, success, failure, progress and setbacks all combined to make MSU an exciting if not always desirable place to be in the last nine months.

In short, MSU was the place where the action was. To begin the year, a graduate student named Paul Schiff filed suit in federal court to force MSU to readmit him after the University refused during the summer, for non-academic reasons.

BEFORE THE CONTROVERSY was over, Schiff was heard by the Faculty Committee of Student Affairs and again denied readmission. Then suddenly in January, Schiff was given permission to return. The University came out of the incident looking a little tarnished.

One beneficial aspect of the Schiff case was a scholarly brief filed in federal court by the local chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP). While criticizing the University's position in the Schiff case, it also praised MSU as an outstanding place of higher learning and free thought.

THE ARREST FALL term of four Viet Nam protestors, three students and one former student, at Career Carnival brought more publicity to MSU. But the real news came when the four were sentenced in Ingham County Circuit Court to 30 days in jail without bail. Then came the sit-in, sleep-in hunger strike in front of Cowles House appealing to President Hannah to take action. Though the judge's decision was overly harsh, and later reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, neither the University nor President Hannah had any responsibility or obligation in the case.

The biggest issue of the year exploded on campus on April, when Ramparts magazine hit the newsstands. In a sensationalized article, MSU was taken to task for its Viet Nam project during the 50's. CIA infiltration, a university buying guns for a foreign government and the nature of the modern university were but a few of the issues raised.

THE PARTIAL VALIDITY of the charges was disturbing to be sure, but the bungled attempts by the MSU officials to cover up and save face with conflicting denials and affirmations have left deeper scars than the Viet Nam project itself.

Just as the Ramparts incident began to simmer down a bit, the Political Science Dept. began to fall apart. Three top men announced their resignations and several others decided to leave MSU. Many reasons have been offered in explanation for the exodus. But no single reason or group of reasons has been substantiated. For sure though, no university or department benefits when high caliber professors depart and certainly the level of instruction must suffer, at least at first.

MONEY PROBLEMS also plagued MSU, as the Board of Trustees was forced to raise dorm and married housing rates, because of increasing costs. And the Michigan Legislature and Gov. George Romney had differences of opinion with the University on how large MSU's appropriation should be. Presently, unless the Legislature appropriates an additional $1.7 million to MSU, the Board of Trustees will be forced to increase tuition and fees to meet minimum operational needs.

On the positive side, a sweeping evaluation of all University rules and regulations affecting academic freedom was started winter term by the faculty committee on student affairs. Still struggling to meet its six-month deadline, the committee has arduously waded into the mire and complexity of student rules. Thus far, several sets of guidelines have been announced. Though the degree of success of the evaluation cannot be determined until the study has been completed, hopefully, a codified and updated set of student regulations will result.

THE NEW CONCEPT of a college within a college became reality when Justin Morrill College was launched last fall in Snyder and Phillips halls. It was hoped to blend the advantages of a small college while maintaining the atmosphere of a large university. Indications are that the innovation has been successful. And there are plans to begin another college in a different area of study in the future.

For the fourth successive year, MSU attracted more Merit Scholars than any other institution in the U.S. By bringing top students to the campus, MSU cannot help but raise its academic standards. But top scholars can't do it alone--without the cooperation and active interest of the faculty and administration.

PRESIDENT HANNAH celebrated his 25th year as president of MSU. Regardless of the criticism that Hannah has been subject to at times, he, more than anyone else, has been responsible for the continued growth and stability of MSU in the last quarter century. Twenty-five years ago, Michigan State was a small agricultural college. Today it is a large and prominent university. John Hannah's contribution cannot be overlooked.

In the realm of student government, ASMSU began its first year under a new structure. It provided consistently more service to the students in areas of popular entertainment, closed circuit television of football games and also received student approval to begin campus radio next fall. But in other areas, like a student operated bookstore, programs were stalled and little progress was made.

The touchy compensation issue for ASMSU officials was handled sloppily by the board, though student approval was given in a referendum last month.

The new board elected this term has gotten off to a slow start. It still faces the problem of overcoming personal pettiness and parliamentary trivia.

And the perennial problem of communicating with students and being effective agents of student grievances and ideas remains a prominent obstacle to effective student government.

THIS WAS ALSO the year of The Paper, the maverick weekly publication which encountered numerous difficulties, many because of outdated distribution and publication policies and the others created by its controversial attitude and actions. Despite its shotgun-like criticism of the University and anything remotely connected with it, The Paper at times offered worthwhile writing to its readers.

At other times, it turned to vulgarisms and four-letter words in an attempt to "stimulate" the University community. The problems encountered with The Paper this year have shown the glaring need to modify and update existing publication and distribution policies. Hopefully next year, The Paper will make its editorial comment more constructive and bring it in line with the caliber of some of its other writing.

AND THE UNIVERSITY continues to grow--both in numbers and the physical facilities. With the growth comes the problems of improving the quality of education and academic standards. The question of whether there is a ceiling on enrollment in the foreseeable future becomes more important than ever before.

So that was the year that was--it's over and gone. It's a year that won't soon be forgotten--though some would like to forget. It wasn't a year that alumni, administrators, faculty or students will look back on with pleasant memories. But it cannot be considered a failure either, but rather a challenge and a preview of the increasing burdens a large university must bear and the increasing interest students take in the type of education they receive.

AS ROBERT FROST'S poem says, "I have promises to keep and miles to go before I sleep and miles to go before I sleep." And so it is with MSU in 1966, looking hopefully to the future.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Campus Editor Jo Bum-barger and Assistant Campus Editor Joan Solomon visited Ramparts Magazine office in San Francisco over the Memorial Day weekend.

In the heart of San Francisco's "topless" district, around the corner from silicone Carol Doda, is a nondescript office labeled simply "Ramparts."

That two coeds in San Francisco for only the weekend should take time to seek out this office seemed extremely peculiar to the magazine staff that thinks of MSU as the home of the Central Intelligence Agency.

"Oh yes, Michigan State," said Art Director Dugald Stermer with a wry grin. "We caused quite a little stir out there, didn't we?"

The office was mostly bare, as the magazine had just moved its headquarters from Menlo Park, Calif. The walls were covered with Ramparts covers and--get this--a copy of the Michigan State News.

All of the people in the office were wearing Scheer for Congress buttons and there were as many Scheer for Congress posters in the windows as there were in Scheer's Berkeley headquarters.

(For those who have forgotten, Robert Scheer is author of the famous-notorious "How the U.S. Got Involved in Viet Nam," upon which the Ramparts article charging that MSU was a cover for the CIA was based.)

It was 2 p.m. and most of the staff was out to lunch. Those who were there, still in their coats, were huddled around the reception desk and talking in hushed tones.

Except for Dugald Stermer, who looked as if he could be as old as 30, most of them were young enough to have just left the Scheer for Congress benefit art show last weekend at the University of California at Berkeley.

Promotions seem to come quickly on the young staff. Sol Stern, another author of the MSU article, was a research assistant when he came to MSU to gather information. He was "research editor" when the article appeared.

They asked whether we knew President Hannah and Wesley Fishel, professor of political science, and were amazed that two coeds at a school overrun with police actually would have been allowed to see the two men. They also seemed to have real suspicions that we had been sent by the University on an official fact-finding mission.

They had heard of The Paper and couldn't understand why we weren't working for it instead of for the State News.

We had wanted to meet Warren Hinckle, the third author of the article, but were told to come back the next day "around 2, when the orgies begin."

Do they have orgies often? "Oh, yes, about every day," one of the group around the desk replied.

We didn't go back for the orgy on Saturday, but we did go to Berkeley where the only places active on the Saturday night before finals were an Indian import store and the Scheer for Congress Headquarters.

They were surprised that we knew Scheer was running for Congress and asked how on earth we could have found that out.

This came from the worker who asked why we went to such a "miserable, odious, ugly place" as Michigan State.

He'd never been here, he said, but he knew what it was like.

OUR READERS SPEAK

This 'Number' Approves

To the Editor:

After six long years of study at MSU it is with a good deal of regret that I leave this university and community. MSU has provided me with much. The things I have learned and done here will be of value to me always. To the students who still carry out their endeavors at this University I leave three thoughts.

1. It is impossible to remain "just a number" at this University unless you wish to do so. I have never had any time or patience with students who sat around and proclaimed the impersonal atmosphere of MSU.

2. With attention and interest it is possible to go through MSU with good grades, but those of us who receive only A's and B's have not truly discovered the limits of your potential. A poor grade is as much an aid to personal understanding as a good grade.

3. There are three areas of "learning experience" at MSU. One is the academic work itself; one is the realm of social and extra-curricular activities. Most students experience these two areas and profit from them.

The third area remains all too often untouched. It is the area of personal development with the faculty and administrators. In four years a student should know personally (as a very good friend) at least three major administrators and/or full professors.

Best wishes to those who seek a real education at MSU, and my humblest thanks to the many administrators, faculty, and personnel who aided me in my quest for understanding about myself, the universe and life.

Need Decent Radio Station

To the Editor:

It seems to me that people have lost sight of the main advantages of a campus radio station.

The simple fact is that there is a crying need for a really decent AM radio station to serve the East Lansing area. I consider the two "popular" radio stations in this area to be in bad taste for several reasons.

One very annoying characteristic of these stations is the repetitious announcement of the name, location and other information which is surely known by heart by at least 99.9 per cent of all listeners. For example, one local station recently, in the span of only one hour, subjected its listeners to 17 playings of a jingle giving the name and frequency of the station. In the same hour, the call letters were mentioned no less than 80 times. This station must think its jingle is No. 1 on the hit parade.

Another annoying characteristic of local stations is their endless concern over relatively trivial details, such as the "public service announcements" heard often. For instance, an alert listener might learn that a local Okemos group is holding a church supper three days hence, or that Lansing Jr. High leads in the latest post-card sending contest.

If one cares to listen to the "local news," he might learn of such earth shattering facts as John Doe of South Lansing crashing his automobile into a telephone pole. Certain Lansing stations have positively the best coverage of automobile accidents of any stations I have ever heard of.

These are only examples. It seems to me that a concentration of 35,000 persons (supposedly of higher intellectual calibre) would desire an entertainment media which would operate on a higher plane of thought. It seems students would want something better than is offered, even at the risk of University propaganda. It seems people would rebel against the junior high atmosphere of local radio stations. But perhaps I am wrong.

DIE-HARDS STOKE REBELLION

Ky Troops Take Over Hue

SAIGON (UPI)—Government troops and armor took over the northern city of Hue Thursday without firing a shot. But militant Buddhist leader Thich Tri Quang apparently sought to keep the rebellion alive by accusing President Johnson of discounting the fiery suicides of Buddhists trying to oust Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

In Saigon, Buddhist demonstrators took to the streets again despite the agreement to bring civilians into the ruling military junta.

Moderate Buddhist leader

Thich Tam Chau tried in vain to prevent the new demonstration by issuing a communique claiming that Ky and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu had agreed to resign when the political settlement reached Wednesday is put into effect Monday.

There was also some question about the loyalty of the troops committed to restore order in Hue, the last rebel stronghold and headquarters of Tri Quang, considered the most powerful Buddhist leader in the country.

As the troops moved into strategic positions, Tri Quang released the text of a bitter telegram sent to Johnson.

The telegram blamed the attempt on the life of Thich Thien Minh Wednesday in Saigon on the Ky government and the United States. It claimed the assassination attempt was organized by the Ky government "with material and spiritual support of the U.S. President."

The telegram, issued in the name of the senior monk in Viet Nam, Thich Tinh Khiet, said the Buddhist patriarch "strongly protests the statement by the U.S. President that self-immolations of Buddhists are useless... that statement by the U.S. President conveys evil intentions and lack of respect."

Tri Quang was referring to the six Buddhist nuns and lay persons who committed fiery suicides in the past week in an attempt to bring down the Ky government.

Johnson said in a Memorial Day address at Arlington cemetery, "It is tragic, in the present turmoil, that some choose acts of desperation to express their political beliefs." He called the suicides "unnecessary loss of life" that only obscure the progress being made toward a constitutional government in Viet Nam.

Within minutes of the arrival of the government troops in Hue, the student branch of the rebellious "struggle forces" closed its headquarters and previously heavily armed students went home.

TEACHERS ON STRIKE--Teachers picket outside Taylor Junior High School Thursday in defiance of pleas by Gov. Romney not to strike. FLINT, DETROIT AREA

Teacher Strikes Hit 5 Communities

DETROIT (UPI)—More than 1,200 teachers boycotted schools in four Detroit suburbs and Flint, Mich., today, defying a state anti-strike law. Pickets patrolled 100 schools and one picketing teacher claimed he was hit by a non-striking colleague.

This mass walkout, called in a militant bid for higher wages, quickly closed about a dozen schools, pushed others on half-day schedules and crippled class operations for most of the more than 60,000 students.

The Flint walkout and those in three suburbs were called in advance.

But about 188 teachers in the Crestwood District of Dearborn Heights, a fourth suburb, caught officials by surprise as they threw up picket lines around six schools and refused to work. The district's six schools sent their students home at noon.

The Crestwood and Flint walkouts were one-day protest boycotts called by local branches of the Michigan Education Assn. The Michigan Federation of Teachers called the strike in the other three suburbs and said teachers would not return to work until their wage demands are met.

All five cities have a week or two remaining in the school year. Simon Kachaterian, school superintendent of Taylor Township, one of the suburbs, announced he would ask a court today to order the teachers back to work under a Michigan Law banning strikes by public employees.

The Michigan Federation of Teachers said about 75 per cent of the more than 1,000 teachers in the three suburban Detroit districts were following the militant strike call despite pleas from Gov. George Romney.

Superintendents of the three school districts said their estimates of teacher absenteeism ran closer to 50 per cent.

World News at a Glance

Convoy Knocked Out

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. Air Force planes knocked out a 27-truck Communist convoy heading for the Ho Chi Minh Trail during the third straight day of massive attacks against North Vietnamese transport lines, American military spokesmen said Thursday.

The spectacular raid on the convoy, which was moving toward the Barthelmy Pass, came during one of 68 missions flown by Air Force and Navy pilots on Wednesday. They encountered heavy anti-aircraft fire which reflected angry Communist reaction to the two previous days of record bomb runs north of the 17th parallel.

Discuss War On Poverty

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The War on Poverty became a war of words Thursday as Sargent Shriver defended the program against criticism from his brother-in-law, House Republican and Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen.

Dragged into the fray was Sen. J. William Fulbright's charge that an "arrogance of power" may be evident in American foreign policy, and the fact that Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Viet Nam, is paid about $34,600 a year.

Need Space Law--Soviets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union said Thursday the soft landings of Soviet and American spacecraft on the moon point to the need for international space law.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said steps should be taken to make sure that exploration of the moon and outer space are used only in the interests of peace and scientific progress.

U.S. Bomb Production Increased

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States plans to produce about a million bombs for the Viet Nam war during the final third of 1966, it was learned Thursday.

This massive output of explosives is expected to be achieved after newly established production lines reach peak capacity in early fall.

Strike Creates Fuel Problems

LONDON (UPI)—The 18-day-old British seamen's strike started Thursday to give this nation a fuel problem.

A chain of nearly 90 gasoline stations in the Southampton and Portsmouth area in southern England reported they were running short because they had failed to get their normal supplies from strike-bound coastal tankers. One station said its supply was exhausted.

Hearings To Be Conducted On Dodd

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Ethics Committee announced Thursday it will begin hearings June 20 into charges of misconduct against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., in his relations with an agent for West German business interests.

In a brief announcement, it was said that the committee is continuing its investigation of other allegations against Dodd. Among these have been charges that Dodd, a friend and close political associate of President Johnson, diverted campaign funds for his personal use.

CONVICTED OF CONSPIRACY

Ex-Congo Officials Hanged

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—Four former cabinet ministers convicted of plotting to murder President Joseph Mobutu died on the gallows Thursday in a sun-drenched field before 80,000 silent Congolese given the day off by the government.

The crowd, summoned to the executions by repeated calls from the government which had declared Thursday a holiday, watched somberly as the four men dropped, one-by-one, through the trap door of the high single-bar gallows.

Three of the men died instantly, but the fourth dangled at the end of the rope until he suffocated.

As each of the condemned, dressed in blue shorts with a white stripe down the side and red bands around the legs, dropped through the trap door, the crowd gasped. Then there was silence, broken only by the wails of fretful babies and children.

First to die was former Prime Minister Evariste Kimba, 40. He was followed in death by Emanuel Bamba, one-time finance minister; Jerome Anany, 47, former defense minister and Alexandre Mahamba, 46, who held a variety of posts in Congolese governments.

It was swift retribution for their alleged conspiracy to murder Lt. Gen. Mobutu and his chief lieutenants and seize power.

In less than four days, the conspirators were captured, interrogated, publicly tried, convicted and condemned to die.

Heavily armed paratroopers and police ringed the wooden scaffold built in a huge field in the African section of Leopoldville known as The Cite.

Each man, hands tied behind his back and his head covered with a black sack, was escorted to the gallows by two soldiers. The black-robed hangman and his assistant tightened the noose around the condemned man's neck, guided him to a red circle over the trap door and held him while four army trumpeters blew the Last Post.

Then the trap was sprung.

Only Bamba was trembling visibly and his legs gave way as he mounted the scaffold. Anany died slowly. Unlike the others, his neck was not broken by the fall and he dangled until he suffocated.

The bodies were left hanging for 20 minutes before being cut down, examined by white-jacketed doctors who pronounced them dead and then placed in gilt-trimmed wooden caskets. The caskets were driven off in army trucks.

Mahamba mounted the gallows even while Anany's body was being placed in the coffin.

Juday, Fuller, Curzi Honored As Top Athletes

By RICK PIANIN
State News Sports Editor

Spartan athletes Steve Juday, Payton Fuller and Jim Curzi were honored Thursday night at MSU's annual all-sports banquet at Kellogg Center.

Juday, who quarterbacked State's football team to a national championship and a berth in the Rose Bowl, was awarded the Conference Medal of Honor. This is awarded annually, at each Big Ten school, to the student demonstrating the greatest proficiency in scholarship and athletics.

Juday, a senior, was named the team's most valuable player in 1965 by his football teammates, after setting 12 MSU passing records. He was named "Back-of-the-week" twice by United Press International and won a berth on the all-academic team.

Juday, who has won six letters at State, was surprised and delighted to win the award.

He was named to various post-season all-American teams.

"I would like to take this chance, probably my last chance, to thank everyone for making my stay here so enjoyable and successful," Juday said. "I'd like to give my best wishes to those for distinguished performance in athletics and scholarship, who possesses a high degree of character, leadership and personality.

This is the first time in history that two athletes received this award.

Fuller was twice named to the All-America team and was also named to All-American scholastic teams as he maintained a 4.0 average.

"I am happy and proud to accept this award, especially after MSU had such a great year," said Fuller.

Curzi was the NCAA high bar and parallel bar champ in 1965 and again parallel bar champ in 1966. He was Big Ten all-around champion and high bar champion in his sophomore year.

Curzi was also greatly pleased with the award.

and thanked everyone "for a great four years at MSU."

Other awards presented included 12 Varsity Alumni Senior Awards.

Recipients were: Robert Speer, baseball; Stan Washington, basketball; Steve Juday, football; Mark Haskell, fencing; Kenneth Benson, golf; Jim Curzi, gymnastics; Tom Purdo, hockey.

Also Nick Krat, soccer; Den-

Gold footballs, watches, certificates and blankets were also presented to various MSU athletes.

Dorm, Frat, Independents Cop IM All-Sports Honors

Another long, grueling year has come to a close for the Men's Intramural program, and all-sports honors have been accorded the champions in the four participating divisions.

Bailey Hall won the residence hall overall championship, and Sigma Chi took fraternity honors. The independent competition is divided into individual and team sports divisions. The Red Trojans reign in team sports, and the Super Hippias are tops in individual athletics.

IM all-sports championships are accorded on a point basis, with more points awarded for participation than for winning. Points are allotted for final standing, league runner-up and league championship as well as for participation.

Bailey rolled up a total of 846.5 points to win the dormitory trophy, under Hall Athletic Chairman Bill Reetz. The men of Bailey were runners-up in dorm basketball and champions in residence hall volleyball.

In dominating the fraternity sports scene, Sigma Chi scored 927 IM points. Sigma Chi athletic chairman is Mike Roach.

SX teams won the all-university basketball championship, fraternity badminton crown and the fraternity golf title. Other Sigma Chi honors include runner-up performances in frat paddleball and basketball.

An oddity of the Sigma Chi season was the fact that the SX's placed second in the fraternity basketball division but came on strong in the playoffs to win the all-University crown.

For the first time in several years, the Evans Scholars failed to pace the Independent sports. Red Trojans edged the Scholars for the team trophy with 500 points to the Scholars' 495.

The Super Hippias tallied 233 and the Evans Scholars finished with 225.

The Trojans, under Athletic Chairman Clark Suchovsky, were block champs in volleyball and softball and placed high in block standings in the other sports.

The Hippias were independent badminton and handball champions. Jim Hardee coached the Hippias.

For the first time since the inauguration of the intramural program, each hall won at least one trophy.

A summer IM program is being planned, with softball, volleyball, golf and tennis to be offered. Registration for softball will take place during the first week of summer term.

Other sports will be included this summer if interest is shown.

Roach Nine Bugs ZBT

A 14-hit attack and a nifty four-hit pitching chore by Jim Shady spelled victory and the all-University softball championship for the Independent Roaches, who whipped Zeta Beta Tau, 11-0, Wednesday.

The Roaches scored in every frame but the second in the five-inning affair. Three walks and four singles brought three runs home in the initial inning.

Four singles, a walk, a hit batsman and a two-run homer by the Roaches' Tom Evans accounted for six runs in the big third frame.

Shady's teammates added insurance runs in the fourth and fifth innings while the Roaches' starter mowed down the ZBT's in going the route.

Larry Koltonow went the distance for Zeta Beta Tau.

Evans and Bernie Cermac paced the winners at the plate. The former had a single and a homer in three trips, and Cermac collected three singles in four tries.

Enroute to the final game, the Roaches scored a 3-0 win over Felloe House of Fee and topped Case Hall's Cameron, 3-1. Bryan Hall's Six-Pack and the Hustlers fell to the ZBT's before the fraternity titlists were welcomed by the Roaches.

Nats Bomb Boston In Wild 12-2 Win

BOSTON (AP)—The Washington Senators packed all their scoring into three innings and capitalized on the wildness of Boston pitchers Thursday in a 12-2 romp over the sluggish Red Sox.

Right-hander Phil Ortega scattered six hits in the first seven innings and retired after his mates built a 10-run lead in the top of the eighth.

Big Ten Counters Ivy On 1.6 Legislation

By ROBERT AYAFIE
State News Sports Writer

The Ivy League contention that the blanket 1.60 grade average requirement for all NCAA-member institutions infringes upon the college or university's policy-making has been emphatically expressed at Harvard.

Last In A Two-Part Series

When a Harvard student falls below three C's and a D, or has a record including two D's or one E, he is automatically subject to either warning or probation, depending on the decision of the faculty.

A student on warning may participate in varsity sports; a student on probation may not.

The NCAA ruling takes this decision out of the University's hands and, according to Harvard's Dean Monro, makes athletics an amputated arm of education.

"The NCAA Council believes that the best place for a student with a grade average under 1.6 is in the library," he said. "I say, how do you know? Perhaps a sport is the one familiar thing which can help his adjustment to a strange environment."

Monro admitted that the NCAA is not gunning for the Ivies, but looking for colleges with low standards.

"An irony in the situation is that basically, we agree with the effort to create some control," he remarked. "But the device they're using is where we live."

Robert F. Gosheen, president of Princeton, has said that the ruling works most severely against students in institutions which have much higher admission requirements than those specified in the legislation. He claims that this will tend to make students "play it safe" in their choice of courses.

In an editorial March 9, the New York Times backed the Ivy stand, citing the group's admission and academic standards as higher than those of most NCAA members, and calling for the NCAA to "get over its rule-or-ruin ways."

John A. Fuzak, MSU's representative to the Big Ten Athletic Council, was one of the seven men who formulated the legislation.

The legislation has been in debate for four years, with plans made for modification at last year's conference. It was the first endorsed at a "conference of conferences" at Denver 2 1/2 years ago.

"I can't see the real basis that the Ivy League is objecting to," Fuzak said. "No one in the Ivy League spoke out against it during discussions. It was the Southeast and Southwest conferences that were opposed to it."

Fuzak pointed out that all NCAA members are striving for certain assurances in regards to the student-athlete.

"We want our athletes to be legitimate college students," he said. "The student-athlete is thought of as somewhat representative of the student population of an institution. We want him to make responsible progress towards a degree, both quantitatively and qualitatively."

There are mixed feelings in the Big Ten towards the ruling, according to Fuzak. He said that some schools are questioning whether the NCAA should be getting into this area, although, generally, they like it.

"The real evils exist when a boy is exploited solely for his athletic ability," Fuzak pointed out.

An institution does not have to accept the nation table, he explained. A conference can work out its own standard, as long as it sticks to the basic national ideas. The same holds true for major independents.

A conference may adopt legislation within major areas. Any conference legislation becomes part of the NCAA's responsibility to live up to.

In reference to the claim that large institutions, such as those found in the Big Ten, do not see athletics as part of the educational scheme, MSU's assistant athletic director, Burt Smith, firmly disagreed.

"Okay, Neander, off to the Library wit yez."

"The whole concept of athletics in the conference is a universal one," he said. "There are those kids who participate and those who attend athletic contests."

Smith cited the Big Ten as a leader in setting up minimum conference standards.

"We've worked on minimum standards for the past five years," he pointed out. "Ours is a grant in aid program, based solely on eligibility by academics. If a youngster is a good enough student and a good athlete, he'll be given aid."

"The Ivy League condones spring practice, yet they recruit just as effectively and emphatically as the large schools do," he pointed out.

The Ivies operate a full-scale freshman program as opposed to a newly-initiated limited frosh schedule created by the Big Ten. "Here, there's a minimum emphasis on freshman athletics," Smith noted. "The first year is one to indoctrinate yourself to college living. By instituting a freshman program, we're trying to increase the scope of participating while putting a little more pressure on the boy to earn grades."

Participation is not mandatory, but is up to those schools in-involved. The rule has gone into effect, so far, applying only to football. A vote must be taken for frosh competition in other sports to be scheduled.

"You're allowing the football team to play two freshman games, as opposed to a full conference schedule in the Ivy League and the Big Eight," Smith said. "Everything in the Big Ten is based on twos, of which only one can be an away game."

The Ivy League, when all is considered, finds itself in an anomalous position by its objection. The gripe, one would think, would be coming from those areas which, prior to the ruling, had no minimum standards to speak of. It leads one to think that the Ivies, finding little satisfaction with the NCAA, are looking for a graceful way out.

Dean Monro, weighing the various consequences of NCAA membership, can see the possibility of the Ivies dropping out.

"As to whether the Ivies leave the NCAA, that can't be determined now," he said. "This legislation forces us to give up things we feel quite valuable. We want to hold our views, not push them on anyone else. We're not trying to kill legislation for anyone else. We're just trying to live under it."

Owners' Greed Cause For Longer Season

This is the last of a three-part series dealing with the length of the professional baseball, hockey and basketball schedules and their effect on the athletes.

By BOB HORNING

Ballplayers lived on trains 15 years ago when Danny Litwhiler was in the National League. Now they travel first class in jets.

This change appears to have made baseball life easier, but it still can be tough, Litwhiler contends.

Now Michigan State's baseball coach, Litwhiler was generally happy with conditions when he played and thinks most ballplayers are satisfied today, too.

He believes, however, that a shorter schedule would help to solve any unhappiness or complaints among players.

Litwhiler suggested that about 140 games a season would be good (instead of the present 162). That way a player could have a couple days off a week instead of playing every day.

Also, a day off could be used to play a rescheduled game, he said.

The way it is now, rainouts and games postponed early in the year are all piled up into doubleheaders late in the year when the weather is warmer, he said.

If there were fewer games, teams would also have a day off to rest after flying to a different city, Litwhiler said.

The owners of professional teams receive most of the criticism when it comes to the length of the schedules.

In the past few years a number of athletes have complained about the length of the season. Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles summed it up, near the end of last year, in a national magazine article:

"They ought to cut a few games off the 162-game schedule so it wouldn't be such a rat race. This schedule will cut a guy's career. A man who plays every day ought to get a raise even if he doesn't have a spectacular year."

"If the owners are making money from the extra eight games, we ought to get some of it. The product is being diluted, but I find it hard to sympathize with the owners because they have brought it on themselves."

Litwhiler also said he thinks the product is being diluted, and that the length of the schedule hurts attendance. As it is now, fans won't come today because they know the team will be in town for a week or more. They can go to a game any time, he said.

If there were fewer games, possibly just on Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday, as in hockey, fans would have to come today because the team would be gone tomorrow, Litwhiler said.

All of the players' and coaches' comments about the schedules certainly don't add up to the fact that ballplayers despise their jobs.

Stan Musial, who wouldn't make an unkind remark about his mother-in-law, said that traveling gets to be a grind during the season, but he also said he thinks most players enjoy the game or they wouldn't be in it.

Nellie Fox, American League most valuable player in 1959, in the same article as Musial, said:

"I have no complaints. As far as I'm concerned, there's nothing tough about my life."

It's only to say that for most players, traveling, being away from home, abuse from fans and writers, etc., can become hard to take over the season.

When San Francisco's Rick Barry, NBA rookie-of-the-year, says the schedule is too long, how long must it seem for the older players?

When four of the five Boston Celtics walk out on the floor in the playoffs with legs that look like advertisements for tape companies, you think they should be in a chair, not in a championship game.

Pro Football War Nears Showdown

NEW YORK P--The pro football war moved closer to a showdown Thursday when Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, said there was concern in both major pro leagues about lame duck players. Rozelle's comments about reported talent raids of men under contract or option were made in an interview while the 15 NFL coaches were finishing their two-day meeting.

DANNY LITWHILER... thinks the pro baseball season should be cut by 20 games.

SANDY KOUFAX... along with Drysdale gang-ed up on owners to get what they wanted.

And it is to say that many think it is a situation that could be solved or partially alleviated by club owners.

But the problem is convincing the owners that a reduced number of games would increase interest per game. Also, that there wouldn't be a loss in the number of fans in attendance over the season.

There are many "maybes" in looking for an answer to the problem.

Maybe a shorter schedule would draw fewer fans and be a financial disaster to owners.

Maybe there won't ever be shorter schedules.

Maybe there will always be enough players who figure that their salary is compensation enough for their troubles.

Or maybe players will follow the lead of Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale in ganging up on owners to get what they want.

Maybe fans will never lose interest in seeing a baseball game every day and of having the three sports overlap part of the year, and will continue to attend enough games to keep the owners happy.

It's a problem that may have a solution—a shorter schedule. Or there may be no solution.

A Protest Against The Viet Nam War By Students Of The Honors College

We believe:

1. That the present war is waged without just cause, and has resulted thus far only in the destruction of villages, the murder of the innocent, and extensive casualties on both sides (including 21,000 Americans).
2. That recent protest demonstrations held throughout South Viet Nam indicate that the United States has utterly failed to meet its long-standing commitments to democratic government. These protests prove the statements that we are in South Viet Nam "to secure the freedom of the people at their request" to be plain lies.
3. That continued escalation of the military conflict will only bring greater suffering, wider dislocation of the economic structure, and further alienation of the indigenous population.

We ask therefore:

1. For an immediate and permanent cessation of the strategic bombing of North and South Viet Nam.
2. For all possible unilateral initiatives on the part of U.S. forces indicating a willingness for a cease-fire.
3. For a statement now from U.S. authorities that, given a cease fire, the U.S. will (a.) request that a general election be held through South Viet Nam, supervised by neutral and diversified U.N. representatives; (b.) accept without prejudice the results of such an election, whatever they may be.
4. For a statement now from U.S. authorities that, given such an election, the U.S. will withdraw all troops, and that order be maintained by a U.N. peacekeeping operation.
5. For open and direct negotiations with the National Liberation Front, and acceptance of the fact that no South Vietnamese government can stand without recognizing them.

WILLIAMS ADDRESSES SEMINAR

Aid To Africa Must Be Increased

By RICHARD M. PHILLIPS
State News Staff Writer

Former Gov. G. Mennen Williams said here Wednesday that American financial aid to African countries must be increased if the Western Hemisphere is to expect African allies.

Williams, who was assistant secretary of state for African affairs from 1960-65, spoke at a seminar on sub-Saharan Africa.

"You can't buy friends," he said, "but in the last 15 years more than 30 African nations have emerged with an expectation that life would be better."

Williams said that many African leaders must discuss finances just to stay in office. The leaders are expected to bring reform for the people, but can't do anything without outside financing.

"The average per capita income for the African is only $120 yearly," Williams said, "and only 15 per cent of the people can read or write."

Africans can get disgusted with their governments quickly when they don't see an improvement in living conditions, he said.

Williams noted that tribal conditions also inhibit social reform in Africa. He described a "share the wealth" tribal culture that keeps Africans from developing their own potentials.

"When a person makes money," he said, "all his poorer relatives come to live with him and spend the money."

Africans with the potential to help their country economically are scared off to other places where they don't have to share with relatives. Many never come back, he said.

Williams said that only 10 per cent of American aid goes to Africa, but over one-third of all the nations in the world are African.

"Africa needs price supports and stabilization more than direct financial aid," he said. "Its primary products don't command a high enough price for economic recovery."

African nations are basically agricultural, he said, and agricultural products can be produced more cheaply in other countries.

He added that the U.S. was helping Africa in areas other than financial aid. The Peace Corps is doing a great job selling the United States and also directly helping the people of Africa, he said.

American and British prestige in Africa may be lost, he said, unless Great Britain satisfactorily resolves the Rhodesian crisis.

When asked about the future of the Rhodesian government of Ian Smith, Williams said, "I wish I did see a collapse of Rhodesia's government, but I don't think it will happen."

He said the major question in negotiations between the two countries is when majority rule comes about. If Great Britain grants independence to Rhodesia, it loses legal right to enforce majority rule. Yet the Smith government won't talk about majority rule until it achieves independence.

After the class was dismissed, Williams was asked about his chances in the coming senatorial race. While avoiding references to Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanagh (who is pitted against Williams for the Democratic nomination), he was willing to talk about the Republican nominee, Sen. Robert P. Griffin.

As a representative to the U.S. Congress, he said, "Griffin has voted against every Keynesian bill designed to get the economy rolling again."

Griffin is against progress, Williams said.

As people filed by, circulars promoting Williams for senator were passed out. These circulars, authored by Williams, gave his position on the Vietnam war. He describes himself as being between a "hawk" and a "dove," saying that both a firm military defense and a vigorous peace effort must be pursued.

June 7 Deadline For Zeitgeist

The deadline for submitting material for the July issue of Zeitgeist has been extended to June 7.

Manuscripts of poems, stories, plays or essays should be sent to Zeitgeist, Box 150, East Lansing.

Submissions for the autumn issue may be submitted any time this summer.

Racial consciousness is the biggest single aspect of African Negro literature today, an authority on modern African literature said here Wednesday.

Emile Snyder, an American-educated Frenchman, related his observations on Negro literature to an African Studies class. He has traveled extensively in western Africa.

Speaking primarily on the influences of the French-Negro upon Negro poems and novels, Snyder said that a racial consciousness didn't actually begin until 1930.

"Negro writers wanted the reader to know the book was written from a Negro standpoint of anguish at a European world," he said.

Until 1930, he said, Negroes were thought incapable of being intellectuals by the white man. Negro authors before 1930 wrote in an "Uncle Tom" style, thus depreciating their own race.

However, a book called "Self Defense," written by some West Indian mulattos in 1930, emphasized the European white man was responsible for suppressing another intellectually capable race, the Negro.

Written from a Marxist viewpoint, as were many Negro books after 1930, the authors blamed capitalism and industrialism for the plight of the Negro race.

"Negro writers began to write of their own culture in an effort to achieve racial pride," Snyder said. "They held the African culture to be separate and dignified."

Some Negro writers wrote that the high Egyptian civilization developed from Ethiopia, a colored tribal empire. This marked an effort by Negroes to disprove the theory that Egyptian rule originated from white men.

"The idea of a primitive Negro is a European invention, some Negro writers say. They wrote that African Negroes had a culture and heritage to be proud of," Snyder said.

"The French-Negro was very instrumental in developing African racial consciousness," Snyder said.

der said, "And the French-Negro intellectual originated from the West Indies."

Negro writers after 1940 began to idealize Africa, making it into a 'Lost Paradise.' This resulted in a 'Back to Africa' movement, Snyder said.

Snyder said that Negro poetry today is no longer quality literature, as the successful techniques used by earlier Negro poets have been codified. Negro poets have restricted their methods, and won't vary.

"Negro poets and writers have been accepted as individual intellectuals today," he said, "and this was the primary aim of their renaissance."

Snyder concluded that Negro poets must turn to other areas in poetry or run the risk of regression intellectually.

Confidence Is By-Product Of Surveyor Success

WASHINGTON (UPI)--Now

will--were right. It has made all of us very happy."

This feeling, stemming from the fact that Surveyor 1 had confirmed many reasonable certainties which had never before been tested in actual space flight, was shared by everybody in the space agency from Administrator James E. Webb who said nothing for the record, to a secretary in NASA's headquarters building who exclaimed:

"This is wonderful. It's just like hitting the moon!"

That, indeed, was what it was just like.

Surveyor 1, which weighed 2,194 pounds when it left the earth and 620 pounds when it landed with fuel exhausted on the moon, is in many respects different from the Apollo Lunar Excursion Module (LEM), or "landing bug," which is to put men on the moon in 1969.

In many other respects, however, it is similar. Surveyor had three thick-shoed landing legs, whereas the 22,000-pound LEM will have four. It did not possess, as LEM will, the rocket power to soar away from the moon if landing conditions had appeared to be inauspicious.

But it was at least as closely related to LEM as man is to the primitive animals from which he evolved. Like LEM it depended on a radar height meter to say when descent rockets should be fired. Its landing gear more closely resembled LEM's than an insect's legs do man's.

Of particular interest to space engineers was the behavior of the main braking rocket, which slowed Surveyor to a safe landing speed, and the three smaller rockets which controlled the direction and final velocity of descent.

Top Debaters Are Honored At Dinner

The MSU Spartan Forensic Debate Squad announced James Hudek, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, senior, and Richard Brautigam, Albion sophomore, are recipients of the Outstanding Debate Team Award at the annual awards and recognition banquet, held at Eagle Restaurant in Lansing.

The Outstanding First Year Student Award went to Michael Anderson, Bozeman, Mont. freshman.

Named as the outstanding seniors were James Hudek and Kermit Terrell, Derby, Kansas. Kenneth Newton, Trenton, N.J. junior, won the Versatility Award.

The Award for outstanding scholarship went for the fourth straight year to James Hudek. Hudek has compiled a 3.8 grade average in the Honors College and will attend Yale Law School next year.

The program included 66 undergraduates from all areas of the university.

Pens For Books

The MSU Book Store in the International Center will give $1 Shaeffer Highlighters in exchange for the two-volume American Mind textbooks. The texts will be donated to southern Negro colleges and African universities.

These ATL books have lost their resale value because of a text change for ATL next fall.

OFF-CAMPUS STUDENTS BEWARE

It's Lease Problem Time!

Off-Campus Council (OCC) cautions students to watch for problems arising with security deposits, contract terminations, evictions and sub-letting.

A security deposit, usually approximately $100, is submitted to the landlord at the beginning of the term to cover payment of apartment damages, unreasonable furniture damages and any cleaning necessary before the apartment can be released.

Landlords have the legal right to evict tenants for failure to meet the rent deadline so it is not a good practice to use the security deposit for the final month's rent, said Jay Shirley, Eaton Rapids senior and OCC vice president.

Most managers have on file a standard for specific furniture items and commonly occurring repairs, he said. But it is not unreasonable to ask the manager for a copy of estimates made by repairmen if their services are necessary, he added.

A second problem is contract termination. Only upon agreement of both parties may a contract be terminated before the lease expires.

A breach of a lease is not the same as a termination of a contract, Shirley said. However, a breach by either lessee or lessor could lead to an agreed termination.

Examples of a breach by a lessor are failure to make major repairs after repeated requests by the lessee or a case in which the apartment leased was not in a clean and liveable condition when lessees moved in.

Failure to pay rent agreed upon by the agreed date or failure to secure advanced written consent from the lessor to sub-let or allow any guest to stay for over three days constitute a breach by the lessee.

Shirley added that if any agreement in the written lease contract is not upheld by either party a breach has resulted.

A recent case in which a breach of lease suit was settled in favor of the students involved, is the case of Robert Fleming and Carl Curchoe who leased an apartment in January. Their landlord notified them that they must make a new lease because the old one was no longer valid. No explanation was given.

The case was settled out of court in favor of Fleming and Curchoe. The court awarded them their $100 housing deposit, which would have been otherwise lost, and $120 dollars for damages to their reputations and integrity.

If a student has his lease broken unlawfully by his landlord, or if his housing deposit is not returned after damages have been subtracted, the student should see an attorney to pursue legal action against the owner, said Allan C. Dewey, legal aid to ASMSU.

Dewey emphasized the fact that the services of a lawyer for legal advice will be available for students every Friday afternoon beginning again the second week of fall term. The fee is $2.

Eviction is the third problem encountered by off-campus residents. If students fail to pay their rent on time they are at fault and may be evicted, Shirley said. But tenants cannot be evicted for reasons not in the contract, he said.

A seven-day eviction notice may be served by landlords for non-payment of rent but a 30-day eviction notice must be served for any other reasons.

The last problem encountered by students has been that of sub-letting apartments. If an apartment is rented for 12 months, lessees must pay for 12 months, Shirley said. Most managers will permit students to sub-let for a specific period of time but this must be done through the managers office, he said. The apartment should be inspected by the manager before sub-lessees move in, he added, or tenants may be billed for damages they did not make.

Academic Freedom

Trustees for final approval. The guidelines and most of the judicial changes would go into effect 120 days later.

After board approval of the guidelines, changes should be made only after they have been passed by ASMSU, the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, the Academic Council and the Board of Trustees.

The report as a whole is based on the assumption that a University is a special type of community with a unique duty to seek out truth and disseminate it and that rules and organization of the University should aid, not impede, the pursuit of this goal.

Using this very general statement and others like it as a basis for their study, committee members have been holding hearings; interviewing administrators, students and faculty members; plowing through stacks of half-forgotten rules and policy statements; conducting committee and sub-committee meetings by the score; and corresponding with outside organizations (such as the American Civil Liberties Union) and other universities.

The committee's battle cry has been "Maximum freedom and minimum order," and it is their attempt to reconcile these two elements which has drawn the most comment.

The Council on Academic Freedom (CAF), an ad hoc student-faculty group, has expressed fear that over-emphasis will be placed upon "order" at the expense of "freedom" once the committee gets down to brass tacks.

Tuesday afternoon is brass tacks time for the committee. Its report will include several CAF suggestions, including a call for eventual Board of Trustees approval. Such approval would legitimize the guidelines, making them harder for a forgetful or hard-pressed administrator to ignore.

The guidelines would serve as a standard against which individual rules could be measured. Future students who feel that rules do not measure up to the standards could appeal the substance of the rules.

This situation does not exist in most universities. At Berkeley, for example, three students admitted they broke the school's distribution rules but tried to defend themselves on the grounds that the rules themselves were unreasonable. Their appeal was ignored.

Psych-Man Is Bat Fan

"Out, out, out! What do you think you're doing coming into my office while I'm running an experiment?" cried Dr. X indignantly staring down at the villain.

"I only wanted your opinion on something, sir," replied the interviewer.

"Well, come back in an hour." In an hour the deflated reporter did return. And again in two hours. And three. Dr. X's door creaked open on its leather hinges.

"May I help you?" he asked warmly.

"Yes, Dr. X, as a psychologist, would you care to comment on the possible effects television programs like Batman could have on the violence in our society?"

"There is far too much violence in our society and I can't stand people who are violent! All our society is wrapped up in violence and aggression, all of it. Of course, I hate to use generalities like that because all generalities are bad, I hate them all, they're all bad!" he emphasized.

"Do you think, Dr. X, that Batman is a violence-inducing program?"

"Batman is actually one of the more intellectually stimulating programs on television today. Not every thinking person who watches it can grasp all the very subtle and artistic nuances which it contains. Quite the contrary, my friend. Just because a program reeks intentionally doesn't mean it actually reeks. Just because it's bad doesn't mean it really is; actually it is very good junk," said Dr. X.

"What was that, Dr. X? Good junk?"

"Certainly, Batman is a sophisticated parody which not all the viewers have the depth of perception necessary to follow. Why do you think more adults than children watch it? Obviously because children, who do watch it only see a hero and excitement and motion while the adults have the maturity and intellectual capacity to more fully grasp the travesty, the subtle connotations and symbolism in the program.

"For example," said Dr. X, leaning forward and lowering his voice, "I have this theory that Batman and Robin are homosexuals."

"No! Really?" asked the shocked reporter.

"Oh yes," replied Dr. X in a most satisfied tone, his statement having achieved its intended effect.

"Dr. X, do you realize the implications of that statement? That's like calling Joe McCarthy a Communist or starting a Christine Keeler-for-president campaign."

"Ah, my friend, we must never fear the truth. Who said that, anyway? It wasn't McCarthy or Keeler, was it? Must have been Roosevelt or Franklin. Anyway, why else do you think Batman would let a little whimpie guy like that hang around when he's got more important things to do (like saving the world from Evil) than to teach an apprentice how to go around saving the world from Evil?"

"Dr. X, getting back to one of the original questions, what about violence?"

"Yes, it has been shown that children who view aggressive responses on television will reproduce imitative aggressive responses. Children tend to imitate what they see and naturally, if they don't view a certain action, there will be nothing to imitate."

"Are you saying that we are indoctrinated to violence via television and other mass media displaying aggression?"

"No more than Chinese are indoctrinated in anti-Americanism."

"Dr. X, why do people go 'camping,' that is, watch Batman?"

"They get pleasure out of a chase and it gives them an outlet for violent wishes which, in this case, are under control since they actually have a passive role."

"Also there is an identification with the evil as well as good. The villain is in control of the situation for the entire episode until he is caught. This is the only time when the good guys are in control. The immediate gratification of seeing the villain escape (and the viewer identifies with his independence of society) is greater than the final reinforcement of a crime rectified and virtue conquering."

"It's terribly exciting for people to see Batman flying through the air, pleasing the audience with his insipid antics. And men particularly get a pleasure out of it because, unlike James Bond, Batman is never seduced—for obvious reasons. He is in total control of his great power."

"Dr. X, does the violence diffuse to—"

From under his desk there emitted a beep. Dr. X jumped from his seat, resplendent in his chartreuse Psych-Man cloak wrapped about him in toga fashion.

"To the attack! The villain who robbed the bank will pay! Besides, the robber was a sociologist. These sociologists better quit pushing society around!" he cried viciously.

"But Dr. X, sociologists don't rob banks, do they?" called the interviewer as Dr. X fell from his basement window.

Diversion Of Pop Audience Is Prime Goal Of Drama

Drama is the product of man's consciousness which reflects the preoccupations of its creators, Oscar Brockett, authority in theater theory and practice at Indiana University, said Wednesday night.

"The prime aim of the drama of any period is to divert the popular audience," he said. "But some playwrights feel they should go beyond this and reflect the problems and pains of life in their works."

All drama attempts to reflect truth as the playwright sees it. It's his vision of what constitutes the human condition.

There is a rebellion in existence today not only on the national level but throughout the world, he said. There are two sides to this rebellion: one side seeks to alter old values; the other seeks to renew them.

"It's the dissatisfaction with hypocrisy that feeds the revolt," he said.

Brockett feels that recent drama is not as guilty of negativism as charged. The playwrights feel a sense of positivism in the sense of trying to substitute a more truthful view in place of ready-made values accepted without question.

Another key idea in modern thought and drama is that the universe is impersonal and irrational. "Some feel it's irrational to want individuality in an impersonal world," Brockett said.

How to achieve individuality and resist the pressure to conform are what causes anxieties.

Many contemporary dramatists feel a marked hostility toward science because it stresses the idea of progress even in this irrational world and it acts as an entranced authority seeking to dehumanize man.

"There's been a move from social anxieties to personal anxieties in contemporary plays," Brockett said. "When the rediscovered individual can join others in the revival of the belief that man is responsible to and for himself and society then social protest will return."

FOR SERVICE TO HALLS

Enzian Initiates 19 Men

Nineteen men were inducted Wednesday night into Enzian Honorary for outstanding service to their residence halls.

They are: Jim Andary, Detroit sophomore; Dave Bombach, Ft. Wayne, Ind., junior; A. Peter Cannon, Charleston, S.C., sophomore; John Cauley, Bloomfield Hills junior; Robert Centilla, Kalamazoo senior; Ernest Cromartie Jr., Columbia, S.C., sophomore; Richard Hnatek, Berwyn, Ill., junior; Stuart M. Jones, Mendon junior; Jeffrey A. Justin, Watervliet sophomore; Harry C. LaBelle, Conshohocken, Pa., junior.

land junior; Alan C. Van Dyke, Grand Rapids junior; Laird Warner, Dearborn junior; and Roger Williams, East Lansing freshman.

Induction ceremonies were conducted at the Alumni Chapel by Jim Sink, Chicago junior and president of Enzian, and John Mongeon, Fairfax, Va., junior, pledge master. Don Adams, director of the residence hall programs, gave the invocation, and members of Circle Honorary assisted in the ceremonies.

"The charter members have a great deal of faith in the potential of this group," Sink said. "It is not just the quantity of time and devotion which they have demonstrated; it is also the quality, the concern and the commitment which they have shown."

"Your accomplishments," he told the inductees, "have proven that there is apathy in student programs only when leaders provide the kind of programs students will be apathetic about."

Enzian Honorary was conceived at the Big Ten Residence Hall Conference at Northwestern University on April 24, 1965. It was granted a charter by ASMSU in May, 1965 and tapped 28 student leaders in June with Sink and Mongeon as founders. An enzian, a small blue flower which grows in the Swiss Alps, was chosen as its emblem because it is a symbol of achievement.

"Enduring and worthwhile change comes out through the realistic efforts of informed and thoughtful individuals," Sink said. "Enzian can supply this kind of responsible leadership."

Following the induction ceremonies, a reception was held at the home of Don Adams. At this time officers were elected for next year. They are: president, Al Foodym, San Francisco senior; vice president, Roger Williams, East Lansing freshman; secretary, Beverly Twitchell, Romulus sophomore; and treasurer, Rich Hnatek, Berwyn, Ill., junior.

Also discussed were Welcome Week information booths for coed dormitories with Circle Honorary and a program explaining dress regulations to freshmen. The meeting ended with what Enzian members hope will become tradition. Past president Jim Sink was wrapped in the ribbons from the pledge paddles and was deposited on the steps of the Library, singing "MSU Shadows."

Veterinarians Attend 'Dial-A-Class'

MSU's latest venture in off-campus learning via electronic transmission has proved successful.

Through a special eight-city telephone hook-up, veterinarians from 108 Michigan cities have been able to continue their education this spring.

Offered by the College of Veterinary Medicine and Continuing Education Service, a new "Small Animal Medicine Tele-Lecture Series" has attracted 124 of Michigan's 348 small animal practitioners within reasonable traveling distance of the eight locations.

"Although we felt the mechanical arrangements for a statewide hook-up were sound, we naturally were somewhat apprehensive as to how the lectures would transmit and how they would be received by the participating veterinarians," said Bruce W. Alderman, conference consultant from the Continuing Education Service.

"After ironing out a few mechanical bugs in the early meetings, the remainder of the series went off without a hitch."

The program consisted of eight evening lectures on various aspects of small animal medicine at 10 locations in Benton Harbor, Detroit (3), East Lansing, Flint, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Saginaw and Traverse City.

Four faculty members of MSU's College of Veterinary Medicine and one each from the Purdue University and Ohio State University clinics delivered the lectures. Their presentations were supplemented with slides shown at each location.

Following each hour-long session, there was time for a 30-minute question-and-answer period with the instructor.

Dr. Robert G. Schirmer, director of the MSU Small Animal Clinic and one of the tele-lecturers, said the biggest problem for him was getting accustomed to talking to a microphone instead of a live audience. Once this was overcome, the rest was easy, he added.

He thinks tele-lectures have tremendous potential for binding together people from the veterinary profession throughout the state. He also adds that as far as MSU veterinary faculty members can determine, this is the first time that a telephone education series has been offered anywhere for veterinarians.

"Through this program, veterinarians can continue their education without having to take time from their practices or leave their homes for extended periods of time," Dr. Schirmer said. "They can also put into immediate use the information they receive from the lectures."

The lecturers also benefit from this kind of program, he noted. By being able to teach in a comfortable, familiar atmosphere, with all needed reference materials close at hand.

Other lecturers in the series were Drs. Ulreh V. Mostosky, Donald A. Schmidt and Richard R. Bennett, all of the MSU Veterinary Clinic; Dr. Andre Lavignette of Purdue's Veterinary Clinic, and Dr. Robert Hamlin of Ohio State University.

Alderman indicates that the program will be continued next fall, with the possibility of also offering a similar series for large animal practitioners.

Tapes and slides of the current program are now being developed, and will be available for distribution to other schools and veterinary associations sometime next fall.

Rights Group Backs Housing Ordinance

East Lansing's Human Relations Commission unanimously backed a proposed anti-discrimination ordinance Wednesday evening at City Hall.

The controversial ordinance, which is expected to be voted on by City Council Monday evening, has recently been drawn up in legal form by City Attorney Daniel C. Learned.

The ordinance declares the opportunity to obtain employment and housing and to use public accommodations ranging from billiard parlors to escalators "without discrimination solely because of race, color, religion or national origin" a civil right.

"It shall be unlawful for any person to deprive any other person of this civil right," the ordinance reads.

The proposed ordinance sets up a procedure where a person claiming that his civil rights have been violated may complain to the Human Relations Commission, which, if discovering a violation did in fact occur, will attempt to conciliate the matter.

ISSUES CHALLENGE

Billy Graham In London

LONDON (UPI)—Preacher Billy Graham opened his Greater London Crusade Wednesday night before a capacity crowd of 18,380 filling Earl's Court Stadium by calling Britain to a new "finest hour" in which the nation that helped save the world at war would lead it to spiritual victory in peace.

Speaking from a flower-banked platform, in the well of the huge exhibition hall, the American evangelist raised an audience clearly representative of the many races of the Commonwealth to enthusiasm with a fiery call to the world to halt the "psychopathic madness that could mean racial suicide."

It was Graham's first crusade here since 1954 and he was warmly welcomed by crowds which had gathered long before the doors were opened.

A choir of 2,500 drawn from the churches of London heralded Graham's appearance with hymns which proved that the devil does not necessarily have the best songs.

Then the chairman of the executive committee of the crusade, Maj. Gen. D.J. Wilson-Haffenden, introduced "our beloved visitor." He recalled that it was 12 years since Graham last spoke in the capital and said that despite some skepticism about the success of that earlier crusade there were at least 50 priests in London who would not have been clergymen if it had not been for the 1954 campaign.

In a reference to heckling during a visit to Oxford University earlier this week, Graham said,

"A young man at Oxford said: 'We don't care. We are living for today.' What a tragedy. People of Britain, you have meant too much to the world. I challenge you tonight to turn back to the God of your fathers before it is too late. I challenge you to set a moral and spiritual tone for a world that badly needs your leadership."

"I challenge you to look about you and see what is happening, both in America and Britain—the rebellion against authority, the sexual immoralities, the secularism and materialism of the people, the lust for pleasure, the silver-chromed gods that have been erected since the war."

"There are those who say that since the empire has broken up and since you have become affluent that you no longer have a world challenge. I disagree. You have a missionary challenge that is greater today than in any time in your history. Forty per cent of the world goes to bed hungry at night. Millions cannot read or write and many more millions have no spiritual hope."

"This could be your finest hour! What a moment to be alive! What a thrill to live at this momentous hour in London when the people of every continent are crying for help. There are no people in the world better equipped to answer this world-wide plea like the British people," he said.

Graham warned that Britain was in danger of losing the Christian faith that helped make it the world's greatest nation and this was posing a challenge that would call for greater sacrifice than it displayed in the last war.

If Britain failed, he said, the world would move "toward a rendezvous with a frightful destiny."

"What do we expect from this crusade?" he asked.

"Let's not make the mistake of expecting too much but let's not make the mistake either of expecting too little."

"We are not expecting London to be dramatically changed overnight in its moral and spiritual life."

But he said that he hoped thousands would be encouraged immediately both to "determine not to surrender to the secular and immoral tide that is running."

REVEREND BUDENTHAL

Budenthal To Head Chaplains

The Rev. Theodore K. Budenthal, pastor of Martin Luther Chapel and Lutheran Student Center, has been elected to serve as president of MSU's Religious Advisors Assn. for 1966-67.

The Religious Advisors Assn. takes in all pastors, priests and rabbis of the churches, synagogues and religious centers serving the University.

The religious advisors work with and through the Vice president of student affairs on campus and co-ordinate religious activities.

The Concept Of 'Total Man' Employed By Medical Men

By RICHARD M. PHILLIPS
State News Staff Writer

Man is no longer considered a being with only physical illnesses to be treated by only physical instruments by the medical profession.

Man is recognized as an integrated personality with tensions that can often worsen his total health.

The American Medical Assn. recently set up a dept. of Medicine and Religion to work with this new concept of a "total man."

"Man is a whole being," said Dr. Richard L. Rapport, chairman of the Michigan State Medical Society's (MSMS) new Dept. of Medicine and Religion. "Man is physical, spiritual, social and emotional."

"A weakness in any one area can militate toward illness in one or all of the others," Rapport said.

The medical profession takes the attitude that a patient's faith is a vital factor in complete health, he said.

"The confidence the average family places in its doctor and clergyman requires that the two consult whenever necessary," Rapport said.

"Their collective judgment can provide the means for the most effective care and treatment of the whole man."

The Rev. Wallace Robertson, pastor of the East Lansing People's church, said in a recent speech to MSMS that the clergy and physicians share a common interest in man.

"We are trying to bring men into a meaningful participation in their society," he said, "to introduce them to the abundant life."

"Man finds himself as a member of the 'lonely crowd,'" he said, "with a growing awareness that nobody cares."

Robertson said that a man must be convinced that his physician and clergyman consider his continued existence both meaningful and worthwhile.

"Man is sicker than he has been in generations," said John J. Weaver, former dean of St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral in Detroit.

"In 1963, there were over 300 suicides in Detroit," he said. "If those 300 had contracted smallpox instead, Detroit would be declared a disaster area."

Suicide is reaching epidemic proportions in the United States because man is suffering from "give-up-itis," Weaver said. This is sufficient reason for religion and medicine to be concerned.

"The great sickness of our age is aimlessness, boredom and the lack of meaning," he said. "Studies showed that almost 81 per cent of the students on some American campuses confess feelings of absolute absurdity."

These people need more than pills, he said. They need the "medicine of meaning."

Modern medicine must include the clergy to administer the medicine of meaning to patients, Weaver concluded.

This is what the AMA means when it says the "total" man must be cared for in hospitals.

Soon after the AMA set up its dept. of Medicine and Religion all of the 50 state medical societies were freely participating in the program.

Michigan itself has 30 county medical societies active in attempts to achieve closer communication with the clergy, said Ralph T. Wills, community relations director for the MSMS.

"The program includes all religions," he said, "and the response from Jewish, Catholic and Protestant leaders has been tremendous."

Ralph H. Ruhmkorff, staff physician at Olin Health Center, said, "Physicians on the whole are very enthusiastic over the dept. of Medicine and Religion."

100 Years Of Healing Seen In Christian Science Book

A report on the impact of spiritual healing on the lives of men and women in many parts of the world has been published in connection with the Centennial of Christian Science.

Issued as a contribution to the revived interest in spiritual healing among many of the traditional churches, the book, "A Century of Christian Science Healing," draws on thousands of published and tape-recorded testimonies, volunteered and verified by witnesses, which have become part of church records.

The book was prepared by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and is published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, which also publishes The Christian Science Monitor.

"With contemporary developments in physics, biochemistry and psychotherapy challenging men to explore more vigorously the relation of matter to mind, the practical experience of Christian Scientists yields a kind of datum not to be found elsewhere," The Christian Science Board of Directors says in a foreword.

The directors emphasize that the book has a broader purpose than the commemoration of a denominational anniversary.

"It opens up," they state, "an area of religious experience still not generally understood, bears concrete witness to the healing dimension of present-day Christian discipleship, and presents the phenomena of spiritual healing not under the category of miracle but at the level of a reasoned understanding of spiritual law."

Documented healings recorded in the book, 100 of which are described in some detail, extend from wartime prison camp experiences to healings of alcoholism, drug addiction, cancer, tuberculosis and cyanide poisoning.

However, the healings chosen for inclusion "are not necessarily the most striking," say the directors. "A conscious effort has been made to strike a balance between healings that would ordinarily be accounted 'miraculous' and those closer to the level of common experience."

The occasion for the book is the Centennial of Christian Science, which traces its origins to a healing experienced by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866.

Reformed Study Merger

HOLLAND P.—Clarification of a proposed union with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. is among principal items for discussion June 9-15 in Holland at the general synod of the Reformed Church in America.

Officials of the Reformed denomination note that the recent Presbyterian assembly voted to continue the authorization of the plan of union, but voted also to become a full participant in the consultation on church union. The Reformed church is not a member of the consultation.

Another major matter awaiting adoption by the general synod is the revised liturgy with new forms for Holy Communion, baptism and orders of worship.

GUARDED VOTE--Troops of the Organization of American States guarded polling places in the Dominican Republic, as elections were held Wednesday to pick a constitutional president. UPI Telephoto

Four Active Seniors Feted

Being honored this week are four outstanding seniors, William A. Burdette, Baltimore; Kenneth D. Benson, Cret, Ill.; Fred M. White, West Branch; and Mary Aletha Skrocki, Saginaw.

Burdette has been a member of four campus honorary societies--Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary; Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering; Tau Beta Pi, engineering; and Phi Kappa Phi honorary. He also is treasurer of the MSU Student Branch of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers Inc., and West McDonell Hall Scholastic Committee.

Burdette has been on the president's list for the past seven terms; he has maintained a 4.0 grade point average while on the president's list.

Benson is captain of the golf team and a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, Varsity Club and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Benson, a pre-med student, is enrolled in the School of Zoology. He plans to attend medical school after graduation.

White is a member of Alpha Zeta literary fraternity and the Agricultural Club. He was membership chairman of the Agricultural Club in 1964, vice president in 1965 and president in 1966. He will become a member of Alpha Tau Alpha when an MSU chapter is organized.

White is an ordained minister in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He is married and has a four-year-old daughter and a four-month-old son.

Mary Skrocki is a member of three literary societies--Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Kappa Phi and Alpha Lambda Delta and is treasurer of Kappa Delta Pi.

She also is vice president of Phillips Hall, former scholarship chairman of Phillips, Circle honorary, former Tower Guard secretary, resident-of-the-year of Phillips, and former AUSG representative.

Fellowships Deadline Set

The deadline for applying for the U.S. Office of Education fellowship program will be June 10.

The program is offered to recent college graduates or other college graduates who have not taught in recent years who are interested in secondary teaching.

The fellowship will support a two year program starting this September. Completion of the program will qualify the student for a secondary certificate and an MAT with a major in social science or one of the social science disciplines.

During the program students will not be required to have any teaching obligation. They will be required to take from 33 to 36 credit hours in the social sciences and 15 credit hours in education.

Eight fellowships will be awarded based on the need, grade point average and the student's background.

The fellowships were made available through the Higher Education Act passed in 1965.

Those who are interested should contact Daniel Jacobson (355-2368) or Edgar Schuler (355-2369). Announcements describing the program in more detail are available in 253 Erickson Hall.

Students who are interested should apply immediately.

CAN THE COLLEGE GIRL COPE?

In June Redbook, college girls from nine colleges tell why they question the sexual codes of their parents...what they hope to gain from their so-called "freedom"...and how the "sweetness and terror" of this moral liberation has created new problems to replace the old. It's Uplifting

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- What does a lady motorist do when she gets to an automatic barrier on a toll highway and finds she doesn't have a coin to drop in the metal basket so the barrier will lift?

One solution was disclosed recently at a House Public Works Subcommittee hearing on toll roads by John Pershing, executive director of the Richmond-Petersburg (Va.) Turnpike Authority.

"Well," asked subcommittee counsel Walter May, "Don't you ever find things other than coins in the machines?"

"Oh, yes," replied Pershing. "We had one-half of a rubber brassiere in one."

1. How are you planning to get engaged?

I'm on the brink of giving Jane my Beethoven sweatshirt.

3. What about money for your children's education?

My Uncle Henry is very fond of me. He owns a steel mill.

5. I know something that can help you meet almost all your financial needs. And be independent, too.

Nothing can do all that.

2. How are you going to guarantee security to your family when you're married?

I have a rich aunt you know.

4. Who'd pay off your mortgage if you should die?

You never can tell. Every time I help an old man across the street I give him my name and address in case he doesn't have anyone to leave his money to.

6. Living Insurance from Equitable can. It can even give you a lifetime income when you retire.

I wonder if Uncle Henry has it?

Year's Pluses, Minuses Leave MSU Uncowed

By JOAN T. SOLOMON
State News Staff Writer

The Golden State of California was out to get MSU this year, and it succeeded—twice. Headlines originating from the Rose Bowl in Pasadena and the Ramparts office in San Francisco appeared in newspapers and magazines and on television all over the country, and, for better or worse, made Michigan State the scene of nationwide attention.

The University's run-in with the UCLA team was perhaps less confusing than with the Ramparts affair, but the end results were almost as damaging to its ego.

The explosive magazine article attacking MSU's aid project in Viet Nam during the 1950's touched off a series of charges, countercharges, defenses and debates and finally culminated in a legislative hearing which did little more than reiterate the already heavily clouded issue.

While these two events brought the world to East Lansing, the war in Viet Nam made MSU students feel very much a part of world affairs. Male students worried as draft call-ups were increased, and hundreds participated in the national Selective Service tests given on campuses around the country.

This year was a question of "Am I in or out?" for graduate student Paul Schiff and for The Paper, an off-campus publication.

After much controversy and red tape, Schiff was readmitted to the University. But The Paper, after first being indicted by Student Judiciary for violating its ASMSU charter and later censured by the Board of Student Publications for being "smutty," still isn't sure of its status.

Associated Students of MSU began its operations this year by initiating an expanded legal aid program and telecasting of football games via closed circuit television. It also started the Popular Entertainment Series, bringing to campus such top names as Al Hirt, the Highwaymen, Dave Brubeck and the Serendipity Singers.

Famous personalities in other fields also came to Michigan State this year. The Rev. Martin Luther King made his second recent campus appearance to launch the 1966 Student Education Project's fund-raising drive to support another summer's work at Rust College in Mississippi.

Herbert Aptheker, who broke the travel ban to visit North Viet Nam, spoke on campus, and so did former governor G. Mennen Williams, astronaut Donn Eisele, State Democratic Chairman Zolton Ferency, and author-journalist Carl Rowan.

Less well known, but more numerous visitors were the farmers, alumni and parents who came for the traditional activities of Farmers' Week, Homecoming and Parents' Weekend.

Two student referenda narrowly approved an all-campus radio, to be in operation next fall, and the controversial compensation for ASMSU officials.

Campus landmarks were torn down this year, and several new buildings are under construction. Wells Hall was razed to make way for the long-planned addition to the Library, and the old quonsets behind the International Center were removed for construction of a language-math building.

Despite strikes by construction workers, work is well underway for new apartments in Spartan Village, a classroom addition to Kedzie Hall and the Holden Hall dormitories on south campus.

MSU's two-year College of Human Medicine is scheduled to admit its first 25 students next fall, and there was talk in the state legislature of starting a law school here.

Liberalization of rules governing academic and personal freedom got a head start this year, with abolishing sign-outs for coeds, relaxing dress regulations and a rules study by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

This was the year for power failures. While the east coast had only one major blackout, Michigan State had three. Two were traced to a malfunctioning of a boiler control in the new power plant.

It was also the record year for demonstrations on campus. Four students were jailed for picketing at fall term's Career Carnival, and spring term some—many non-students—protested this action by staging a "sleep-in" at Cowles House.

Entertainment this year was provided by the Performing Arts Company and the Lecture Concert Series. Among the plays performed were "Judith," "The Beaux' Strategem," "The Lovers," "Billy Budd," an Indonesian shadow play and the musical "West Side Story."

Other cultural attractions, brought here by the Lecture-Concert program, included the Royal Danish Ballet, the New York City Opera, Van Cliburn, Mantovani, and the Moscow Philharmonic.

The College of Social Science attracted thousands of students to its discussions of birth control, LSD, abortions, the draft and drinking.

MSU students bled nearly 5,000 pints worth for the year's three blood drives, and the legislature seemed to be asking for even more with a fee increase and a possible tuition hike.

The STEP project, the MSU People-to-People Association's drive to build a medical clinic in the Vietnamese village of Long Yen and a Strike City rally to provide funds for a water well in the Mississippi community all attest to the desire of Michigan State students to play an active role in the world outside the campus.

Six professors died this year, including J.A. Clark, professor of English; Kenneth Stone, professor of chemistry;

Terrill D. Stevens, chairman of forestry; Edward A. Brand, assistant dean of the Undergraduate College of Business; Helen L. Hollandsworth, chairman of home economics education; and John J. McNicholas, assistant professor of administration.

Students killed were: Beverly Schultz, Grosse Pointe freshman; Lee Seeger, Jackson junior; Doug Henaire, Drummondville, Quebec, senior; and William Millich, Detroit junior.

This year America became smaller and cheaper as MSU students joined the youth movement by taking advantage of the airlines' new half-fare program. It was also the year for "God is dead," Batman, UFO's, Snoopy, motorcycles, pierced ears, "Would you believe?" and anything camp.

This academic year will culminate four years of study for some 3,000 seniors who will attend next Sunday's commencement exercises. For nearly 30,000 others, however, the year's end is merely a stepping stone to summer jobs, vacations and another year at Michigan State.

TRADITION PERPETUATED

Honors For 50 Senior Coeds

When Tower Guard, Mortar Board and Associated Women Students honor the 50 top senior women at Lantern Night ceremonies Sunday, they will be perpetuating a 43-year-old tradition at Michigan State.

Lantern Night was originated in the spring of 1923 by Mrs. Herman Halliday, the wife of a former administrator, and members of Sphinx, the forerunner of Mortar Board.

It was the coeds' answer to the now forgotten Spring Cap Night when freshmen men paraded around campus in their night shirts and stopped at a huge bonfire in "Sleepy Hollow," the area between Beaumont Tower and the music building.

When the men reached the bonfire the freshmen tossed in their green beanies and the seniors supposedly tossed in textbooks.

Cap Night was discontinued in the 1930's, but the tradition of Lantern Night grew.

In the early years Mrs. Halliday would pass out Japanese lanterns to the girls who gathered in front of her home, which is now the Hannah's residence. She would then accompany the girls as they sang and wound along the old campus walks.

Originally Lantern Night honored class officers, introduced new officers, and featured the tapping ceremonies of the women's honoraries.

Symbolically, the lantern represents the light of womanhood and the responsibilities the quest for knowledge brings.

It was the first all-college women's activity.

During the years the emphasis of the ceremony has changed from service to the class to service to the University.

It was in the 1950's that the idea of honoring the 50 outstanding graduating women was implemented due to the growth of the college community.

The first Lantern Nights began with a sunset procession and concluded with the exchanging of lanterns and class responsibilities the same evening.

During the procession other women from the dormitories would join in honoring the graduates. Today such a procession would be impossible, but invitations are extended to all women to participate in the Sunday activity.

Wednesday evening, as a prelude to Sunday's ceremony at Cowles House, members of AWS, Mortar Board and Tower Guard serenaded the living units and left a lantern on the lawn of the residence where an outstanding senior woman lives.

Sunday the women will be named and feted at a reception given by President and Mrs. Hannah.

U.S. Praises Dominican Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI)--If all goes well, the 5,700 American peacekeeping troops still serving in the Dominican Republic may be withdrawn by July 1, ending a controversial chapter in U.S. diplomacy that began more than a year ago.

With results of the Dominican presidential elections in complete at mid-day Thursday, the State Dept. expressed encouragement over the fact the voting went smoothly. It noted that neither of the main parties reported any fraud or disturbances.

Similarly, President Johnson sent a message to provisional

Dominican President Hector Garcia-Godoy praising him for leading his people "from the turbulence of civil strife to the tranquility of free elections."

Johnson added that "few presidents have had a more complicated task than the one you successfully accomplished yesterday. . . on behalf of the United States government and people, I express sincere admiration for your wisdom, courage and tenacity."

The State Dept. said: "The United States is gratified that its hopes and those of all hemisphere nations for peaceful, free and democratic elections in the Dominican Republic were fully justified by the exemplary demonstration of civic responsibility by the Dominican people at the polls yesterday."

U.S. officials said the timetable for withdrawing American troops, which form the bulk of an 8,400-man Inter-American Peace Force, would depend partly on whether the aftermath of the election is as orderly as election day.

U.S. Approves Teacher Corps

A national education project, The National Teacher Corps (NTC), functioning along the Peace Corps concept, has received federal appropriations and will begin its initial training program this summer in 26 participating states.

Wayne State University in Detroit is the participating school in Michigan.

Joseph Newman, of the communications division in the United States Office of Education, Washington, said that 1,600 college graduates are needed to work as members of five men teaching teams in educationally depressed areas.

The applicants must be graduates of a recognized four year college in any major, but with an interest in teaching and a desire to work on a master's degree.

The National Teacher Corps, created in the legislature, works in conjunction with state universities and local school systems to train the "new teacher," who deals with the disadvantaged child, and implement him in the community.

The tour of duty in the Teacher Corps is two years. This includes the ten week summer training program, during which the trainee receives $75 per week and fulfills the requirements to teach in the specific state he requests.

During this training period he is taught specifically to deal with children from disadvantaged psychological and sociological environments. The two categories of disadvantaged are urban and rural.

The three major objectives of the program are to decrease the teacher shortage, to help the underprivileged, and to produce the special teacher, Newman said.

While working with the Teacher Corps the graduate student will be classified as a teaching intern. He will work two full academic years at the salary of a regular teacher in the district.

Four teaching interns will work under the leadership of a master teacher. Their work in the school system will be considered an education lab. Half of their time will be free to take graduate studies, tuition free, in any concentration.

Newman noted that master teachers for the corps are also needed. To qualify a person must hold a master's degree, a teaching certificate, and have five years practical experience.

At the completion of duty the intern and the master teacher are free to follow any pursuit. The interns will be recognized as qualified teachers.

Newman said that applications for the Teacher Corps, which will have 44 different training programs in 26 states, can be secured from the Placement Service here on campus.

Applications may be requested directly from the Office of Education in Washington.

Additional information about the Michigan program can be received through Richard Wisniewski, project director of the NTC at Wayne State University, 331 Education Building, Detroit.

Newman said that to date the returned applications approach 3,000.
