

Students weren't involved in choice

The implementation of the Academic Freedom Report July 15 and the phenomenon of greater student involvement in University affairs has made the position of Vice President for Student Affairs a crucial one.

Especially now that ASMSU has been elevated to equal policy-making status with the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs by the freedom report, student government will have to work closely with the vice president. Future regulations as well as general atmosphere may well depend on him.

Yet students were not consulted to any degree after John Fuzak decided to resign and a new office-holder was being sought. In fact, it appears the selection was cloaked in almost total secrecy with little opinion sampled, even among the faculty.

The local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) expressed concern regarding this method of replacing Fuzak in a telegram to President Hannah.

The ASMSU board followed suit with a letter stating the students must feel confidence and trust in the Vice President for Student Affairs.

ASMSU's letter said, "If students are not allowed to express an opinion in selection of this type of administrator, it is felt that they will not have this confidence or trust."

In a similar situation, the selection of ombudsman, student opinion was requested during the search for a man to fill the newly created position.

Even if the person most highly recommended by the students is not selected as ombudsman, students were consulted. And they will have played a role in the selection process.

The policy employed by the University in hiring administrators shows a strain of inconsistency, a tendency that cannot contribute to increased trust and understanding for the administration as a whole.

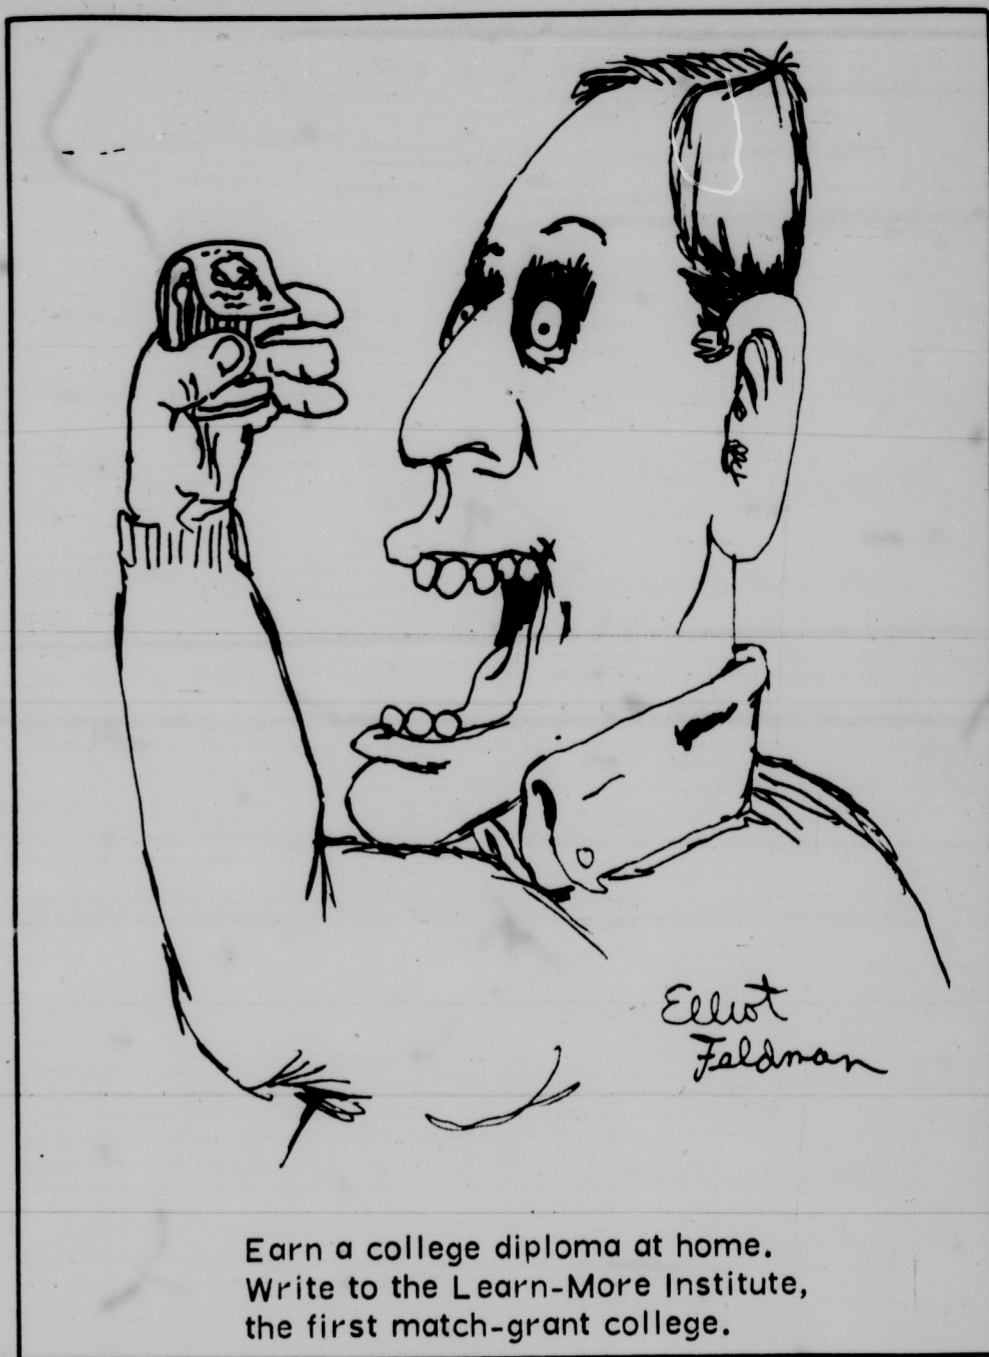

Neither the AAUP nor ASMSU Board was critical of Dickerson's individual appointment, but of the methods used in making that choice.

It is hoped Dickerson will continue in the vein of flexibility of listening and sensitivity to desire for change exhibited by Fuzak. Changes made under Fuzak were never radical, but have generally been regarded as constructive.

But if students are to fulfill responsibly a role in decision making, they must be consulted and actively involved in deciding issues which affect them. Certainly, the selection of a new Vice President of Student Affairs is such an issue.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Still takes two to make a baby

To the Editor:

We've had it with some of the attitudes expressed around here! Specifically, those by Mr. James B. Ewbank in the June 30 State News concerning unwed mothers.

He asks "who is this 'someone' who can take better care of the baby than the hapless girl?" May we offer a suggestion--how about the "hapless boy?" What about his legal and moral responsibility?

It's funny (not really, though), there doesn't seem to be much of a reference to this gentleman (?) in the letter. Surely, Mr. Ewbank, even in Oklahoma it takes two. This seems to imply that the responsibility should be divided by two. (Since math and stat is your field, you should be able to follow this.) You say this girl had sexual relations without thought of the possible results--this is wrong in our book, too. However, let's look at the other half of this pair.

What were his thoughts about possible pregnancy? Did he stop, before the act, to consider what kind of girl he was possibly allowing to mother his children? Did he check her maternal attitudes? Did he review his own financial status to see if he could afford to support a child, let alone a wife?

Did he make her promise to marry him "just in case?" We have our doubts! Perhaps a couple wishing to indulge should have a legal contract drawn up to cover such a situation; at least this would assure some legal and financial responsibility for the child.

Don't get us wrong; we don't believe the girl should get off any easier. It's just that we don't feel that just because she's the one that bulges in the middle (and, by the way, will likely have to drop out of sight for a while) that she is the only one who has done wrong. Perhaps the young man should be forced to quit school and wear a scarlet "A" for the duration, too. Then, perhaps, a few young men would think as long and as hard as you believe the young women should.

Whither the United Nations?

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)--The General Assembly's inability to act in the Middle East crisis focuses attention on U.N. limitations as a peace-keeper.

At the same time, it raises questions about the organization's general effectiveness. What can it do? Why was the assembly unable to find a formula for dealing with the Israeli-Arab problem? The central fact of the assembly's Middle East failure was a rigid division among the 122 member nations. This prevented any of the key resolutions from getting the required two-thirds majority.

But what if the assembly had voted overwhelmingly for the withdrawal of Israeli military forces from Arab territory? Under the U.N. Charter, the assembly can do no more than make recommendations. It is by no means certain that the adoption of any of the pending resolutions would have produced results.

In the event of noncompliance, the question of implementation would have been the job of the Security Council, always reluctant to take enforcement measures. The first instance of mandatory economic sanctions--imposed six months ago against Rhodesia--has failed to topple the white minority government. There has been no move for enforcement of the trade embargoes.

In the Security Council, there is always the possibility of a big-power veto which, in the case of enforcement against Israel, would become a probability if a veto was necessary to block action. The limitations of the United Nations and the whole question of peacekeeping have been under study for several years. The big powers are widely split over procedures, the roles of the General Assembly and the Security Council, and financing.

WITH 'OPEN MIND'

Dickerson quietly steps in

EDITOR'S NOTE: Editor-in-Chief James Spaniolo interviewed John A. Fuzak and Milton B. Dickerson concerning their views on students' role at the University. In the second of two parts, Dickerson surveys his new position of vice president for student affairs.

By JAMES D. SPANIOL
State News Editor-in-Chief

Milton B. Dickerson quietly moved into his new office on Monday. And similarly, he quietly assumed the duties of the seldom-peaceful position of vice president of student affairs.

Replacing John A. Fuzak, who stepped down for health reasons and a desire to go back to teaching, Dickerson will spend the rest of the summer getting acquainted with his new job before the "real action" begins fall term.

Formerly associate dean for graduate studies in the College of Business and an MSU faculty member for 29 years, Dickerson said Monday, "I've got a lot of work to do in the next several months. So far, I know some of the names, but not too many of the people I'll be working with."

He said his first major concern will be in implementing the Academic Freedom Report, which formally takes effect July 14, though some of the changes it created have already been instituted.

"To make it workable, a number of institutions will have to be made functional, like the new faculty-student judiciary, the new judicial structure at the residence hall and house level, and the ombudsmen," Dickerson said. "The ombudsman will be especially important. Whoever is appointed to the position should be more than just an advocate of student rights--it should also be an advisory, counseling position and a referral service, creating another channel of communication."

Dickerson said there has to be more involvement of students as the University grows and matures. The question is not whether students should have these rights, but how. The Academic Freedom Report sets forth these rights specifically in writing, he said.

Dickerson also spoke of change in the University, as he has seen it, of student involvement, and of his own personal philosophy.

"At the University today, we are in a constantly changing situation, and changes seem to be more visible today," he said. "Students are becoming more involved and it's a good thing."

"For example, it will be a meaningful experience for students to be represented on faculty committees for the first time. We now have the means by which student reactions to courses and curricula can be known, and this is a big help to both students and faculty. It would have helped the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs in its deliberations on the Academic Freedom Report if there had been students on the committee then."

But Dickerson added that as a faculty member for many years, he may appear rather conservative because the faculty is inherently a conservative group. He suggested that faculty conservatism benefits the University by providing stability.

"I hope my approach to this position will be flexible enough so I can grow with the job and better understand what students' problems are," Dickerson said. "The philosophy is not one of holding students down or thwarting student rights; nor will it be one of necessarily agreeing with all student-advocated change."

"I hope to be a conservative in the best sense of the word, conserving what is beneficial and making progress at the same time. But I'll have to be convinced of the desirability of change before it's adopted."

"I'm approaching the job with an open mind, to do what is best for students and for the University. It will be my hope not to throw away things that are good in the frenzy of change. But at times, it seems students misunderstand the faculty's desire to see that something will work and is needed before adopting it."

Dickerson noted that one of his goals as vice president of student affairs will be to improve the rapport of the dean of students office with the teaching faculty.

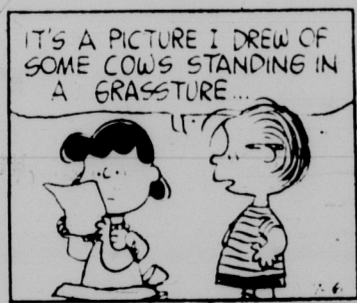

"I think it will be helpful for me to have been a faculty member for many years here and to be able to see both sides," he said.

An authority in business law and administration, Dickerson began his teaching career at Michigan State in 1938 after receiving his bachelor's degree from what was then Michigan State College.

"As a student, I used to pick apples from an orchard where my office is now located in the Student Services Building and sold cider and donuts from the Horticulture Building," he quipped.

He also served as a head adviser in Abbot Hall after World War II and later was in charge of the Brody dining area.

"I've done a lot of things on this campus since being a student here. I've been a janitor, a head adviser, a teacher and an administrator," Dickerson said. "Needless to say, I was surprised when asked to take this position in May. But having been at an institution this long, when there is a job that needs to be done, you do it."

Tshombe capture linked to reward

ALGIERS 4 -- Informed sources said Wednesday Moise Tshombe's plane was hijacked and forced to fly to Algeria by members of his own entourage who probably wanted to collect a big reward offered by the Congo.

For the first time, authoritative sources pieced together what they said was a factual account of the kidnaping of the former Congolese premier the Congo wants to execute on a charge of treason.

They gave this account: A British twin-jet chartered plane took off last Friday from Bizta to Palma de Majorca, both in the Spanish Balearic Islands. Aboard were Tshombe, two Spanish policemen assigned as his bodyguard, two British pilots, a man of French nationality, a Belgian couple, and a Belgian former mercenary in the Congo.

When the hijackers struck, several shots were fired, but no one aboard was wounded.

Tshombe himself did not put up any resistance. The two police officers were as surprised as Tshombe and could do nothing to help him.

The coup was staged by one, or at most two, of the plane's nine occupants, both members of Tshombe's own entourage.

They were believed to have turned against the former Katanga secessionist leader in return for an enormous reward offered secretly by persons connected with the Congolese regime of President Joseph D. Mobutu. The principal conspirator was said to be a man of French nationality. All except Tshombe were ex-

LSD discharges reported by Navy

WASHINGTON 4 -- Navy figures show drug usage among sailors has climbed at a rate more than double last year's. The hallucinatory drug LSD has been involved in 28 cases resulting in administrative discharges since February.

The figures, as well as a new anti-LSD directive issued last month, seem to indicate more and more Navy men are taking psychedelic trips on LSD -- trips that in most cases carry them right out of the Navy.

In response to questions, the Navy said Wednesday that in the first five months of this year, 187 Navy men had been given administrative--nonpunitive but not honorable -- discharges for wrongful possession or use of drugs.

This compares with 176 similar cases in all of 1966. Apparently the Navy began keeping track of LSD cases only this year. No figures were available for 1966, but the Navy said records beginning in February indicated that 28 of the 187 administrative discharges given this year involved some use or mention of LSD.

According to the figures, drug usage among Navy ranks has risen at a monthly rate more than 2-1/2 times that of 1966.

The Navy was unable to say how many had been court-martialed on drug charges this year. Last year there were 13 court-martials involving drugs -- not specified in available records as to type -- with 12 resulting in bad-conduct discharges.

The Navy cited one case in which an officer resigned after admitting he had sampled LSD before the drug was recently banned by a new Navy regulation.

In a campaign aimed at preventing use of LSD, the Navy has directed commanding officers to stress to all hands that the drug, while nonaddictive, can cause serious if not permanent psychological effects.

FCC clamps AT & T profit ceiling to 7.5%

WASHINGTON 4 -- The Federal Communications Commission formally set a profit range of from 7 to 7.5 per cent Wednesday for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. It was the first action of its kind.

At the same time the commission ordered AT&T--the nation's largest corporation, with assets of more than $55.2 billion--to reduce its interstate charges by $120 million a year.

The FCC said also, in a unanimous decision, that it is not requiring any drastic changes in the manner of its regulation of the giant utility.

The FCC order sets a rate of return -- profit -- range on AT&T interstate and foreign earnings of 7 to 7.5 per cent. Earnings on intrastate services--local telephone charges for example--are regulated by individual state public utilities commissions.

The commission said that when the level of earnings approaches either the upper or lower limits it set "we will promptly consider what further action may be required in light of the then-current conditions."

The FCC order, which also shuffles the rate-making base of AT&T's plant--intrastate as opposed to interstate--could result in re-examination by many state agencies of their own regulation of local Bell System telephone companies.

AT&T is the corporation that sits atop what is generally known as the Bell System. The system comprises 28 telephone companies, Western Electric Co., its supply and distribution facility, and Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., its research and development organization.

In 1956 Bell System's interstate earnings rose above 8 per cent. Last year, according to FCC figures, they were 8.56 per cent after adjustments for rate changes and taxes.

TUMOR BEING STUDIED

Gov. Wallace hospitalized

HOUSTON, Tex. 4 -- The director of the cancer clinic where Gov. Lurleen Wallace of Alabama is undergoing tests for a new malignancy said Wednesday it may be several days before they know the full extent of the tumor's growth.

Dr. Randolph Lee Clark, the chief surgeon of the University of Texas-M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute, told newsmen that diagnostic examinations have just begun.

The 40-year-old governor, who underwent surgery for cancer of the uterus 18 months ago and thought the malignancy had been stopped, checked in to the hospital Tuesday.

She brought with her the findings of her own physicians and turned them over to Dr. Clark and members of his staff for evaluation.

Clark, in the first of a planned series of daily medical bulletins, said, "At this time, it is not known what further examinations will be indicated nor how long the complete diagnostic workup will require."

He said Mrs. Wallace is resting comfortably; that the hospital staff is "delighted with her mental attitude. She is a very remarkable person."

In response to questions, Clark said it is possible that the diagnostic tests would indicate as early as Wednesday night whether further surgery is necessary. But, he added, it may take several more days before they reach that decision.

Mrs. Wallace was able to walk around, and visited with members of her family who accompanied her to Houston.

An aide said she had received hundreds of letters and telegrams from well-wishers in Alabama and elsewhere across the nation. So many floral bouquets were received that there was no room left in her hospital suite and many of them were sent to a sitting room across the hall.

One bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums had a "Wallace for President" button stuck in the ribbon. Some letters and name-cards accompanying floral displays also contained gifts of money from admirers.

Higher ed money bill up today

The Michigan House of Representatives will probably consider a version of an appropriations bill for higher education some time today.

The bill, a revision of Substitute Senate Bill 72, was reported out of the House Appropriations Committee Saturday after the $14 million that was cut by the Senate Appropriations Committee was restored.

The final appropriations figure for state colleges and universities will probably be around $233 million, the amount Gov. George Romney suggested early this year.

University officials have said the best MSU can do is receive Romney's original recommendations amounting to $59,404,293 which is $3.5 million short of what the University considers its minimum needs.

One University official has called the governor's recommendations "niggardly."

But with a fiscal reform package passed and a state income tax on individuals expected to go into effect Oct. 1, some legislators feel appropriations to colleges and universities may be higher than was thought.

One legislator said Wednesday he expects MSU will receive about $3 million more than it has reckoned on, with part of that coming from the additional tax revenue.

Arts fest to include guest performances

The eighth annual MSU Fine Arts Festival, July 16-21, will feature everything from a cello-piano team to a three-man panel discussion on "Art and Technology."

Events begin Sunday with a Kresge open house where the Corcoran Biennial - 1967 will be on exhibition. The Corcoran Biennial is a display of the most important trends and styles in American painting.

The Edith Stephen Dance Company will perform at 8:15 p.m. July 17 in Fairchild Theatre. The company has been acclaimed for its new concepts in modern dance.

A faculty trio from the Music Dept. will play at 8:15 p.m. July 18 in Fairchild Theatre. The trio includes Romeo Tata, violinist; Joseph Evans, pianist; and Louis Potter, cellist.

The Gordon Folk Duo will appear at 8:15 p.m. July 19 in Fairchild Theatre. Ray Gordon and his wife, Helen, will sing folk songs from the U.S. and other lands.

The cello-piano team of Zara Nelsova and Grant Johannesen will perform in the University Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. July 20.

Pianist Johannesen is noted for his mastery of works by American composers Barber, Gottschald, Mennen and Thomson.

Zara Nelsova, the third generation of a distinguished Russian musical family, made her debut with the London Symphony at the age of 12.

In a talk entitled "Structures of the Future," the French journalist and novelist, Georges Belmont, will evaluate contemporary art activity. Belmont is currently director of the French art weekly, "Arts Loisirs," and is a former editor of the "Paris Match."

Two other noted Frenchmen, the art critic, Pierre Restany, and the experimental novelist, Georges Perec, will join Belmont at Kresge, at 10 a.m. July 18 for a panel discussion, "Art and Technology: The Realism of a Prospective Culture."

The nationally known Detroit psychiatrist, Dr. Richard Sterba will speak at 11 a.m. in Kresge on the personality of Michelangelo.

The festival events are open to the public without charge.

WANTS JOB IN MAJORS

Robin Roberts: strong again

By the UPI PHILADELPHIA--It was Sunday at Connie Mack Stadium and former MSU star Robin Roberts was pitching. But it was batting practice and it was to the Philadelphia Phillies substitutes. It was ghostlike in the stadium where, with a tireless arm and tireless youth and a big No. 36 on his back, Roberts reared back and challenged them to challenge him. That was a lot longer than a decade ago, longer than a decade and a half ago, when Roberts wasn't 40 as he is now, when he had the kind of job he wants now. And, while the arm pumped, there was the pre-game straggling of patrons into the stands to watch younger present Phillies battle the San Francisco Giants. There's no telling how many glanced at the tail end of the Phils batting drill, how many recognized the "All-Whiz Kid" battery. Richie Ashburn, now a broadcasting voice of the Phillies, who was a fleet foot in center and a batting champion as Roberts' teammate, was Roberts' catcher. It was practically an informal stop on Roberts' dogged trudge uphill on what he hopes is the road back. He came to the stadium to do a television interview with Ashburn. "It wasn't by invitation," Phils' Manager Gene Mauch explained of the workout here.

"He came here to do a TV show with Ashburn. He asked could he work out in batting practice, and he pitched against the extra men. It was hot and he wanted to loosen up. "I was so danged busy here that I didn't have a chance to see how it looked," Mauch added. But, the Giants looked and there was some good natured repartee. Willie Mays, 36, quipped it made him feel old. Roberts grinned back that Willie was good for six more years. And when it was over Roberts gave out with some of the things which had a familiar ring, like half a dozen years ago. His arm, he said, was all right after an operation. He felt OK. The arm was sound. He felt "good and strong." It was Roberts again, the stubborn one, who felt he had the weapons to challenge time, and ball players who would fatten batting averages at the expense of their mothers, hit triples off their grandmothers. It was Roberts, back from what amounted to a self-imposed exile in the minors where he spent two months with the Phils' farm at Reading, Pa., after he was cut by the Astros and Cubs last year. That was to get in shape, he said. It was Roberts, who may have reasoned if the Phils pitched Cookie Rojas in a game and are eyeing shortstop Bobby Wine,

Robin loves game: Kobs

John Kobs, retired MSU baseball coach and assistant to Athletic Director Biggie Munn, was Robin Roberts' coach when Roberts starred for the MSU varsity in 1946-47. Kobs gave this opinion on Roberts' prolonged pitching career in the major leagues during an interview last June. "Robin is a fierce competitor with a strong love for the game of baseball, and I feel this love of the game is what's keeping him pitching," Kobs said. "He doesn't need the money, so I think he's prolonging his career as long as possible, and maybe land a managing or coaching job," Kobs said.

Summer batsmen to play 1st game

By JOE MITCH State News Sports Editor

Summer baseball on the college level gets a big shot in the arm Friday when MSU's newly-formed team makes its season debut. The team will meet VanDervoort's of the Lansing City Public League at 6 p.m. at Old College Field. The team is the first ever for Michigan State during the summer. Varsity Coach Danny Litwhiler conceived the idea of having a summer team and began laying down plans after gaining approval from Athletic Director Biggie Munn. Litwhiler held tryouts for the team last week. Thirty-five students showed up, including six from Litwhiler's varsity team. A line-up has not been determined as yet, Litwhiler said. "I plan to dress about 20 players, though," Litwhiler said. "But I won't be cutting anybody. This is a recreational thing and I hope I can play as many as possible." The team will dress in Spartan baseball uniforms that are no longer worn by the varsity. Litwhiler is hopeful that he can schedule two games a week-- Friday and Tuesday nights. "Right now I don't have any future games set up," Litwhiler said. "But I'm hopeful we can play somewhere around eight games." "But it really depends on the number of players we have for the summer session. Some players are here for only five weeks and others for ten weeks." Players from the Spartans' varsity team who have joined the summer team are pitchers Mel Behney, Litwhiler's son Dick, and Matt Mazza; others are Ken Ewald, Rich Jordan, and Bill Woolley. Behney and Jordan were starters for the Spartans last spring, while Litwhiler, Ewald and Woolley were replacements. Mazza was ineligible last spring. Pitching is one area where Litwhiler feels the team will need some help. "Most of these pitchers are out of shape," Litwhiler said. "And we haven't had much practice to get them in shape. "I don't know who I'll pitch Friday. Behney is going to pitch for a Detroit area team Saturday, so I can't pitch him." Litwhiler said he plans to hold a final practice today. "We haven't had practice since last week and I want to get a final look at some of these players before I make out a line-up." The idea for a summer baseball team has brought favorable reaction from University officials and students alike. Litwhiler hopes the program will arouse a greater interest for college baseball in the summer. "It will give a chance for people to watch a few innings of baseball in the summer--to fill up their leisure time," Litwhiler said. Also the hope still looms in Litwhiler's mind for summer baseball to eventually spread throughout the Big Ten Conference on the varsity level. Supporters of the program feel that the baseball facilities at Old College Field should be used in the summer as well as in the spring, when the Big Ten baseball season is in full swing.

Mays named 'Star' reserve

CINCINNATI (UPI)-- Wondrous Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants, who failed to earn a starting berth in this year's All-Star game for the first time since 1956, was added to the National League squad along with eight other players Wednesday. Mays, who has a lifetime All-Star average of .379, started in 14 games from 1957 through 1966. He finished fourth in this year's balloting for outfielders behind Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente, Atlanta's Hank Aaron and Lou Brock of St. Louis. Willie holds All-Star records for most hits (22), runs (19), triples (3), stolen bases (6) and putouts (47). Also named by Los Angeles Manager Walt Alston, who heads the NL team for the annual classic July 11 at Anaheim, Calif., were veteran first baseman Ernie Banks of Chicago, infielders Tommy Helms and Tony Perez of Cincinnati, outfielders Pete Rose and Jimmy Wynn of Houston, and catchers Tom Haller of San Francisco and Tim McCarver of St. Louis. Banks, enjoying one of his best years at the age of 36, is second in seniority among the added players. The Cub star has appeared in 12 games and has compiled a .290 batting average. Helms, Perez, Wynn and Staub made the team for the first time. Haller, McCarver and Rose will be appearing in their second All-Star game. In addition to Clemente, Aaron and Brock, the starters on the 25-man squad selected by the players were catcher Joe Torre, Atlanta; first baseman Orlando Cepeda, St. Louis; second baseman Bill Mazeroski and shortstop Gene Alley of Pittsburgh, third baseman Richie Allen of Philadelphia. The pitchers chosen by Alston were Don Drysdale and Claude Osteen of the Dodgers, Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, Juan Marichal of the Giants, Ferguson Jenkins of the Cubs, Bob Gibson of the Cardinals, Denny Lemaster of the Braves and Mike Cuellar of the Astros.

'S' cyclists in Pan-Ams

Fred Beckwith, Dearborn senior, and Neil King, Mt. Morris senior, will join 11 other Spartan athletes who will compete in the Pan-American Game Trials. Beckwith and King are members of the Spartan Cycling Club. They will begin competing for berths on the U.S. Pan-American cycling team this weekend at North Brook, Ill. Cycling exhibitions will be held at Minneapolis, July 15-19, the location of the Pan-American Game Trials. Competition for the Pan-American cycling team is to be held at Minneapolis because there is no track at Minneapolis for road races and track competition.

RESOLUTION SOUGHT

U.N. assembly delegates huddle

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) -- U.N. diplomats huddled privately Wednesday in an effort to come up with a face-saving resolution after failure by the U.N. General Assembly to agree on any Middle East peace plan.

When the emergency session was convened 2-1/2 weeks ago. The United States favored a return to the 15-nation council in the hope of working out a step-by-step approach to some kind of stability in the Middle East. This could include the appointment of a U.N. mediator by Secretary-General U Thant to sound out all parties to the Middle East conflict.

U.S. wants Council to end crisis

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) -- Expecting that the Middle East dispute will go back to the United Nations Security Council, the Texas White House hoped Wednesday for a lasting solution. The administration felt the Security Council was the place for a settlement and possibilities for one there still exist.

Canada also supported a return to the council, with emphasis on the naming of a special representative by Thant as the next logical step to take. U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg talked privately with Thant and later told a reporter the United States had not changed its view that the issue should never have been taken out of the council's hands in the first place.

Econ professor in Senate talks

Walter Adams, professor of economics, participated in a discussion before the U.S. Senate Small Business Committee Thursday in Washington, D.C. The session, conducted by Senators Wayne Morse, D-Oregon, and Russell Long, D-Louisiana, centered around Joan Kenneth Galbraith's recent book "The New Industrial State."

PAIN KILLERS OVERRATED

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Federal Trade Commission opened a drive Wednesday to bar deceptive advertising for headache remedies and other pain relievers. The agency proposed a trade-regulation rule aimed at what it called "unfair and deceptive advertising practices which the commission has reason to believe" are being used for non-prescription pain relievers.

A proposed rule and notice announcing the case didn't mention names of products, companies or specific advertisements. But the commission said all such products now offered for sale over the counter appear to be essentially the same in their effectiveness. "It appears," the FTC said, "that each of the various analgesic products now offered to the consuming public is effective to essentially the same degree as all other competing products, supplying an equivalent quantity of an analgesic ingredient or combination of ingredients."

FTC hits deceptive ads, proposes new rules

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Federal Trade Commission opened a drive Wednesday to bar deceptive advertising for headache remedies and other pain relievers. The agency proposed a trade-regulation rule aimed at what it called "unfair and deceptive advertising practices which the commission has reason to believe" are being used for non-prescription pain relievers.

The commission said one of its prime duties was to protect the public from false, misleading, deceptive or unfair advertising, especially for products that might endanger health or safety. It fixed Sept. 15 as the deadline for the filing of written comments on its proposed rule which would label advertisements falling within any of the three target areas as an unfair method of competition or an unfair or deceptive act or practice.

'Ten Days' Friday's film

"Ten Days that Shook the World," this week's Summer Cinema presentation, will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. Friday in the Union Parlors. Directed by Sergei Eisenstein, the film centers around the 1917 Russian Revolution. The two protagonists, Lenin and Kerensky show the opposing social forces each represented. Tickets will be available at the door for 50c.

LITURGICAL DOVES

Churches' Viet protest continues to increase

NEW YORK (AP) -- The churches are generating a swelling chorus in behalf of peace in Vietnam, many of them calling for a halt to the American bombing of North Vietnam. Those urging an end to the bombardment range from Pope Paul VI to a growing succession of Protestant denominational conventions, in addition to the interdenominational National Council and World Council of Churches.

one Jewish congregation from its national organization. From several religious quarters, including the Methodist Council of Bishops, have come calls for a world summit meeting of religious leaders to join their influence in seeking to end the Southeast Asia conflict. Also urging such an assemblage, Rabbi Dr. Marc H. Tanenbaum, of the American Jewish Committee, says it could "symbolize dramatically that the universal conscience of the people of the world cries out for an end to the war." If it continues much longer, predicts the Rev. Dr. John C. Bennett, president of New York's Union Theological Seminary, "we shall have the greatest conflict between the churches and our government that we have ever had in time of war."

Others have appealed for renewed efforts at negotiations. Several have asked a stop by both sides to troop build-ups. Some have simply raised an anxious question mark. It is a gnawing issue at meetings of governing bodies of the churches which assert a responsibility to reinforce the moral stance of the nation. The subject also has caused sharp debate and keen friction in many religious bodies, including the withdrawal of at least

New Soviet gun backs Cong attack

SAIGON (AP) -- A new Soviet-made weapon, the RPG7 antitank gun, backs the latest Hanoi effort to wrest northern territory of South Vietnam from the hands of U.S. Marines. A Marine intelligence officer said Wednesday RPG7 shells knocked out two Marine tanks that sought to relieve two Leatherneck companies in a bloody battle Sunday just below the demilitarized zone against elements of North Vietnam's 90th Regiment. "Those weapons can do the job on any tank we have," he said. "They can penetrate 11 inches of steel." The officer said one had previously been captured "on a special operation in Laos." The Ho Chi Minh supply trail winds south through the Communist-controlled eastern section of Laos. Russian-designed MIG jet fighters and surface-to-air missiles are among other arms used by the North Vietnamese. "We figure the summer offensive is on," the officer told newsmen. "The enemy starts it every year about this time." The strategic area below the DMZ, which the North Vietnamese covet as a springboard for operations farther south, held attention as Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara packed up for his ninth trip to Vietnam. The Pentagon announced McNamara was taking off Wednesday night "to review all aspects of the war."

All of them differ in characteristics and in their reasons for joining STEP.

Some, like Barbara Hicks, a Western Michigan University education major, consider it a teaching challenge. To Barbara it is not a romantic crusade for civil rights.

"I don't think any of us are the type that would demonstrate outside city hall," she said.

"Those days are gone and the Negro students here seem to realize it. Education is the real answer today."

"What surprised many of the young Negroes here was that we do this without any pay and are willing to eat with them and share their living quarters," said Nancy Briggs. "I think some of them have preconceptions of northern whites as all being wealthy. I'm a grad student—and you know they aren't rich," she smiled.

simple matter through breath or blood tests.

One more factor complicating the job of law enforcement officials in their attempts to curb the use of LSD is the simple fact that the drug is non-addictive. The non-addictive nature of

LSD puzzles police

"acid" impedes enforcement of legal restrictions.

In the case of narcotics, the addict is sometimes forced to resort to many extra-legal means to procure his drug. Stealing and other actions frequently lead law enforcement officials to a pusher through the desperate user.

This is not the situation with LSD use. The drug can be obtained at leisure and at a lower price than is typical of narcotics.

At present, the "robber's" obscurity is keeping him out of reach of the "cops." But familiarity with the drug and its effects is growing through research.

Most officials are agreed that it is just a matter of time before traffic fatalities and unsolved suicides are traced to LSD, thus defining use of the drug as a social problem.

Most agree that arrests for possession and sale of LSD will then become more frequent. "I'll be able to tell you more about LSD in six months or a year," Radshaw said.

"I think this is just another novelty, flash-in-the-pan item," said Reissig. "More is being found out about it, and the mystery is wearing off."

Congo emergency

reported landing at Kisumu, which lies 775 miles northeast of Kampala. He referred to his mission without specifying their number.

There was no mention of a new Vice President, once a stronghold for rebels loyal to the late Lumumba who fought the Congolese government.

Although it is not the Congo had appealed to the U.N. Security Council and the secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity against "this aggression."

Urging the people to show unity with the army, he declared: "Our victory is certain, for we have the will to be a free nation, sovereign and independent. This is the guarantee of our victory over the forces of evil."

Officials here said that a wave of sabotage in Katanga was part of a plot by Tshombe's supporters to overthrow Mobutu. They claimed the plotters were backed by international financial groups.

The Congo's press and radio also have been reporting on what they say is a plot to restore Tshombe as head of the government.

Tshombe gave up the fight for secession in January, 1963, after U.N. forces had seized most of his strongholds. He later made his peace with the federal government and in July, 1964, was named premier of a national unity government.

Using white mercenary officers commanding Congo troops, Tshombe broke the back of the leftist rebellion in the northeast.

A Congo delegation headed by Atty. Gen. Aldor Kabeya has arrived in Algiers to seek Tshombe's extradition.

A majority of the Algerian government of President Houari Boumediene is believed to favor Tshombe's extradition to pay the supreme penalties for what officially is called his "crime against Africa."

A minority is reported to have warned that extradition without some recognizable judicial procedure (Algeria has no extradition treaty with the Congo), would blacken the Algerian image abroad.

A group of moderate leaders of former French colonies in Africa, led by President Félix Houphouët-Boigny of the Ivory Coast, have urged against extradition. Spain, where Tshombe had been living, also has urged his release on "humanitarian grounds," Algerian sources said.

In the Middle East deadlock, the Arabs and the so-called non-aligned countries teamed with the Soviet bloc to back a tough stand on Israeli troop withdrawal. The Latin Americans, most of the Western Europeans, and the United States pressed for a more balanced approach. The result was Tuesday's standoff.

The significant factor was the role of the so-called non-aligned countries. Without their votes, the situation would have been as it was in the past: The United States, Western Europe and Latin America would have been able to muster a two-thirds majority. Many of the nonaligned countries are either Moslem or Moslem sympathizers. It is likely that in any future votes on Middle East questions, they can be counted on the side of the Arabs and the Soviet bloc. And together they command enough votes to block any action not acceptable to the Arabs.

candidate in 1968, but it remains to be seen if he will."

Asked whom he would expect to run against if he entered the New Hampshire race, Romney declined to name names. But he said he wouldn't be surprised if California Gov. Ronald Reagan was among the candidates. Romney said he did not expect Rockefeller to run.
