More U.S. jets lost in Viet bomb step-up

SAIGON (A)-Destruction of a dozen U.S. jets over North Vietnam in three days suggests that, while the intensified drive claims heavy toll on enemy supply lines, the plane losses may reach a record this week.

The North Vietnamese downed 15 planes in one week last August, the high in an air war that is now in its 30th month. Six of the fighter-bombers, which cost about $2 million each, were lost in raids Monday that centered largely from the Hanoi area to Red China's frontier. Six more went down in strikes Wednesday. Of the 21 fliers manning these planes, three were rescued. The others are listed as missing or captured.

The U.S. Command announced two MIGs were shot down by one pilot, 1st Lt. David B. Waldrop, 25, of Nashville, Tenn., during a series of dogfights Wednesday while missiles from similar Soviet-designed fighters felled two of the American planes, F4 Phantoms.

That brought the dogfighting score to 84 confirmed North Vietnamese and 22 'American planes downed since the first aerial encounter in April 1965. Announced American plane losses over the North from all causes climbed to 659.

The Communists threw everything in their book -- jet interceptors, missiles and withering barrages of antiaircraft shellsinto the sky in an effort to stem the 122 missions Wednesday.

Returning pilots reported spectacular destruction in the railway yards around Hanoi, choked with rolling stock immobilized by the cutting of nearby bridges.

The usual sharp, isolated clashes marked ground operations in South Vietnam. The U.S. Command said action remained generally light. Adding heavy tonnage to the ordnance dropped by tactical air squadrons, U.S. Strategic Air Command B52s carried out four raids in the 4-hour period up to Thursday afternoon. They hit at Communist targets from east of Saigon and through the central highlands to the northern 1st Corps area.

North Vietnamese gunners opened up early Thursday on a brigade command post of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division near Pleiku, in the highlands 220 miles north of Saigon.

They fired about 50 rounds of what were believed to be 122mm rockets, but only seven landed inside the post's perimeter and no casualties were reported. Six artillery batteries supporting the brigade replied with suppressive fire.

While ground action was light and scattered, there were reports across the country of increasing guerrilla and terrorist activity linked with the Sept. 3 national election.

A gunman shot a South Vietnamese policeman dead as he sat with other police officers at a sidewalk cafe on a crowded street in Saigon Thursday night. Though the other police drew their guns, the assassin escaped.

Allied spokesmen disclosed the terrorists' toll rose sharply last week while captured enemy documents reinforced previous evidence that the Viet Cong sought -- through military action, terrorism, sabotage and propaganda -- to disrupt the election.

Guerrilla agents slew 167 civilians last week, nearly three times the 64 killed the week before. Other victims were 52 wounded and 126 kidnaped.

The U.S. Command reported 108 Americans were killed and 883 wounded last week, which was marked by some increase in action in the northern part of the coun-

GENEVA P. -- The United States and the Soviet Union jointly submitted Thursday a draft treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons. But left blank was the key article on enforcement that has been a

Foster and Soviet negotiator Alexei A. Roshchin placed before the 17-nation disarmament conference identical texts for further negotiation here and at the forthcoming U.N. General Assembly in

The President said he has instructed Foster to negotiate further with "determination to ensure that a fair and effrom passing on nuclear weapons or weapons know-how, and required nonnuclear nations to undertake not to manufacture or acquire nuclear weapons.

Article 3 of the treaty, which is to contain the control and inspection procedures, was left blank largely because of disagreement over the role of the International Atomic Energy Agency--IAEA.

The United States and the Soviet Union agreed in principle that IAEA should eventually have responsibility for ensuring that nuclear materials are not misused for weapons purposes by any nation which does not now possess them.

West-Germany and some other European Common Market nations object to IAEA controls and are still seeking a form of inspection through the European Atomic Energy Organization, their own agency.

West Germany fears that IAEA controls could result in commercial espionage if Communist inspectors passed back to their government details of the latest German reactors.

The Russians, always suspicious of Germany's nuclear ambitions, refuse to accept the European agency inspection idea. Roshchin reiterated the refusal at the day's brief meeting of the conference.

The Soviet acceptance of the joint draft before agreement on Article 3 nonetheless represented a major East-West compromise in the five-year-old negotiations.

India, Sweden, Romania and other countries have reservations about the lack of security guarantees for nonnuclear powers. Some also object to the proposed provisions for changing the treaty and to the veto status it would give to present nuclear powers, the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union, France and Red

France is expected to sign the treaty in due course and thereby obtain formal international recognition of its own nuclear power status, informants added.

The treaty draft allowed for possible nuclear explosions for peaceful purposes. The preamble declared that "potential benefits from any peaceful application of nuclear explosions should be available through appropriate international procedures to nonnuclear-weapons states" provided the blasts were kept at low power and could not be misused for weapons development.

Bus system ups price $2; winter pass could cost $20

BY ROBERTA YAFIE State News Staff Writer

After three years of stability, the cost of bus passes has been raised, and with it comes a plan of inducing additional sales. Henry W. Jolman, director of the MSU Bus System, announced that regular passes for fall, spring and summer terms will now cost $14, an increase of $2. The winter term passes, however, will $20, unless the student purchased a fall term pass. If a student purchases a pass for fall term and then decides to buy a winter one, he can turn in his fall term pass and will only have to pay $14.

All passes on the Commuter route have been raised from $6 to $8. Jolman said that the increases have been spurred by the annual boom in passengers winter term and the need to buy additional equipment.

"The cost per bus had risen $1,000, now about $26,000-$27,000 apiece," he said. "When these additional buses are used for only three months, you can see how costly it becomes."

MSU now owns 22 buses. This fall, five will operate on the Brody-Fee route, four on Circle-Fee, four on Brody-Fee Express, four on the Spartan Village route and three on the Commuter route.

have gone up, Jolman said. Drivers will have an increase of over 40 per cent in wages they received three years ago when the bus service began.

"Up until new, to To ween able to buy equipment and remain self-sustaining, Jolman said, "This year, for the first time, we came close to breaking even but still at a loss point."

Last year, Jolman said that fall term he expected 40,000 daily passengers to use the service; he anticipated an increase to 60,000 winter term.

Figures illustrate that, for 1964-65 and 1965-66, bus pass sales increased over 3.000 winter term. Last year, they in-

Sales of commuter passes, however, declined from fall to winter. The first year, there were 154 less passes sold; the second year, 158 less. Last year, sales declined by 94.

Larger losses, however, are incurred between winter and spring. In 1965, sales dropped from 6,164 to 3,232. In 1966, there were 4,101 less passes sold spring term. Last year, the system took its greatest loss, dropping from 11,771 passes sold in the winter to 6.099 in the spring.

During summer term, with the reduced emoliment and warmer weather, saies suffer most. Tickets are sold on three bases--full term, first-half term and second-half term. The former cost $12; the latter two $6 each.

This summer, sales were down to 245. Last year, they dropped to 542; in 1965, losses were down to 586.

Paul V. Rumpsa, University Comptroller, said that at this point it is impossible to determine where the system stands in terms of financial solvency. He attributed this to the "newness" of the system and to the rapidly changing costs of maintaining it.

Jolman anticipates no extension of the service and called the present bus stops adequate. Concerning the opening of Holden Halls, he noted that there is a bus stop directly across from Holden, which should adequately serve all residents.

They plan to campaign against Johnson in forthcoming primaries and, at the same time, try to attract a Republican opposed to the war who, they feel, would gain voter support.

In urging the antiwar demonstration, NSA officials advised delegates to dress neatly and wear their congress badges. The original resolution had called upon all delegates but was amended to include only region representatives because of scheduled workshops.

The congress, which had already adopted militant stands on the draft and black power, called Wednesday night for the abolition of what they consider "outdated laws" against birth control.

The resolution singled out William R. Baird, director of the Parents Aid Society, for his efforts in opposing those laws.

Baird has been arrested three times in three states and faces a 10-year prison term in Massachusetts for violating such

The Congress also passed a resolution calling for an end to government prohibi-tion of maritanta smoking on private premises. It called upon the federal and state governments to evaluate their laws on halluciogenic drugs in light of current scientific research.

In other developments, James Graham, ex-chairman of ASMSU who heads the Michigan delegation here, was narrowly defeated for a seat on the 10-member NSA Advisory Board. The board is similar to a board of trustees of a university or college.

Graham is now seeking the chairmanship of the congress steering committee, which helps plan NSA's summer congress and sets up the agenda.

With only two days left, several MSU delegates said they felt they had benefitted from the congress.

Pete Ellsworth, vice chairman of AS-MSU, called membership in NSA "definitely worthwhile." "The most significant things I gained, was to become more acquainted with available programs in NSA," he said. "We have gotten many ideas from teacher-course evaluation and environmental studies programs here," he said. But Ellsworth said that he felt too much time had been spent in adopting laws that 'don't provide anything worthwhile to the campus, anyway."

The group's statement strongly implied-but did not say-that President Johnson's proposed model cities are far from sufficient. Congress has shown little enthusiasm for even those slum clearance programs.

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, the keynote speaker, won spirited applause when he said without mentioning the war in Vietnam that the American commitment abroad "should not be allowed to weaken our resolve at home."

"If our defense commitment, our commitment to space, or any other commitment made before our urban areas were beset by agony in blocking a vigorous effort to end those agonies, those commitments should be reassessed," he said.

·Henry Ford II, chairman of the Ford Motor Co., called it "the greatest internal crisis since the Civil War-a crisis which demands no less than a massive national response."

What the problem is all about, Lindsay said, is that "the system which has worked so well for most of our citizens is failing the poor."

Whitney Young, moderate Negro leader of the National Urban League, inspired vigorous applause when he argued against elimination of Negro extremists.

Young noted that many racial extremists have not been eliminated from the white community and added: "I insist that the Negro has as much right to his extremists.

The MSU Bus System has come up with a unique plan that can best be described as, "Ride now, or pay through the nose later."

The price of bus passes has gone up, to facilitate a pay hike to drivers, an increase in costs of bus maintenance, and to build up a reserve in the event that additional buses need be purchased winter term.

According to Henry W. Jolman, director of the bus system, if you ride the buses fall and winter term, it will cost $14 per term. If you decide to use the buses only winter term, it will cost you $20. You will be charged $14 spring and summer terms.

Last year, passes cost $12 per term.

The intent of Jolman's plan is obvious. It encourages students to use the buses more fall term, rather than walk or ride bikes. Additional passengers would relieve the cost of maintenance of buses that would otherwise not be in use. Buses that would normally be in storage fall term would be added to the routes.

But the unfairness of this plan is even more obvious. An increase of $8 or close to 70 per cent over the cost of a bus pass last winter is far out of line. Despite the fact that the option is left open to buy a pass fall and winter it's not much of an option. Students are faced with paying a penalty for making the "wrong"

Students are faced with the decision of either purchasing two for a "reduced" price, or one for the price of $20. If they follow the first course, they will be saving $6. If they follow the latter, they will be assuming the additional expenditures required by increased winter term service.

The vast size of the University often makes the bus service a vital utility. It's a service that should be provided to students on an equal basis. Virtually coercing people into buying two passes, even for the sake of the bus system's economic stability, should not be tolerated. Expediency is not a sufficient rationale for this

If an increase in price is indeed necessary, then an across the board hike is most equitable. Possibly $15 per term should be charged to meet the new demands. But it is unfair to penalize students who don't go along for debate over the war power of the President and Congress is the reversal of roles it displays: the conservatives, who usually support the power of Congress as against the Executive, find themselves on Mr. Johnson's side because they are pro-war in Vietnam; the liberals, who have traditionally called for increased Presidential power in crises of foreign policy, now find themselves arrayed against a strong Executive power because they are antiwar. Both groups cut the cloth of their constitutional theory to fit the positions they have assumed on foreign policy.

The point of the debate is the persistent question that troubled so many, not only in America but abroad: how can the United States be waging a war of such magnitude in Vietnam, costing so many lives and resources, without Congress ever having declared war?

The fact is, of course, that wars are rarely declared any longer. Decisions have to be made too fast (witness John Kennedy's decision to use force to stop the Soviet ships during the Cuban missile crisis), and mostly they have to be made by the President. The initiative is his and has to be his.

In the process he may present Congress with one fait accompli after another--which is what happened under three Presidents in the Vietnam war. He tries to explain his actions to the people in press conferences and TV talks and get their support.

If he is politically prudent he will also ask Congress to give him a confirming resolution, as Woodrow Wilson did at the time of Vera Cruz, Dwight Eisenhower for Formosa and Lebanon and Mr. Johnson for Tonkin Bay--and as Harry Truman failed to do for Korea.

In short, while logic is with the Fulbright camp (surely logic demands that if a war is to be protracted for years it should at some point be declared by Congress, to whom the Constitution has given the wardeclaring power), the practice of modern nations and the experience of history is with the Johnson camp.

No matter how much one may hate the Vietnam war, it is not easy to make a strong constitutional case against Mr. Johnson.

This could not have been shown more clearly than in the verbal duel between Undersecretary Katzenbach and the Fulbright committee, especially with Sens. I.W. Fulbright and Albert Gore. I thought that Katzenbach came off well in the exchange, and that Fulbright -- with all his ability and his moral passion -- was not at his best.

Pulbright tries to draw a distinction between repelling an attack (which would require only a resolution by Congress) and waging a war (which would require a declaration of war).

But it is an impossible line to draw under the conditions of modern political and ideological war when the "attack" is interwoven with a whole network of strate-

Fulbright had been the floor manager for the Tonkin resolution. He didn't expect the war to go as far as it has gone. He has changed his mind, as he had a right to. But this does not strip the Tonkin resolution of the broad language it had, nor of its constitutional force.

Sen. Gore came closest to the historical truth when he said, "If Congress acted without understanding such import" (that is, the broad import of the resolution) "then it was the fault of the Congress."

Can Congress undo what it did and withdraw its support from the war? In theory, yes. The strength of a virile Congress, even in the face of a world which favors executive action, lies in its capacity in the end to say "no," whether quietly or in thunder.

The war has certainly changed since Tonkin. The "limited objectives," which Katzenbach insists make it something less than a "war," are harder and harder to discern. Congress could say to the President, "You have led us thus far, but we will go no farther unless you ask us to vote on a declaration."

The trouble is that things have gone too far for such a "no" for most congressmen, and what they could do in theory they will not do in fact. President Johnson knows this, which is why he could safely say -- in his press conference -- that Congress is free to withdraw its consenting resolution. The task now is not to argue further about constitutional questions, but to get out of the war itself, by negotiations, as fast as possible.

War spurs bout of brinkmanship

By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP News Analysis

Moscow's latest statement on the Vietnam war raises an important question: How much control do the two superpowers have over world events?

Neither the United States nor the Soviet Union-at least at the level of civilian leadership -- appears to welcome the idea of another bout of brinkmanship.

Americans have been preoccupied with Red China and the possibility Vietname could bring a clash with that tumultuous nation. The real danger-given no change in present trends-may be of a showdown between the United States and the Soviet Union. Such a showdown is virtually a stated objective of Peking policy.

In this 50th year of Soviet communism, its leaders still have been unable to choose between expansion of the Communist system and true coexistence with the United States. It must be clear to them that they cannot have both.

Moscow continues to pour arms into the Middle East and to arm and support North Vietnam. Washington continues pushing the Vietnam war. Moscow was unable to keep its Arab clients from an adventure risking world war. The Americans so far are unable to thwart Communist designs on South Vietnam. The two superpowers seem powerless to control the course of events.

Now comes a new Moscow statement, warning that "retaliatory steps" against U.S. escalation in Vietnam are possible and that this could "bring the world to a dangerous point."

In Washington, both a critic and a supporter of President Johnson's war policies discounted the statement as more of the same. Chairman J.W. Fulbright, D-

Committee, called it a "mild warning." Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, of the same committee, said it sounded like an echo of previous statements. But neither thought it should be simply dismissed.

The way it was handled, the statement seemed directed as much at Soviet audiences as at the outside world. It suggested sharp differences between Moscow's own hawks and doves, an attempt by the civilian leadership headed by party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin to perform a delicate balancing act. A hawk-dove debate seems to have been going on in Moscow, sharpened by events in the Middle East and the latest U.S. activity in Vietnam which included bombings close to Red China.

Israel's Middle East victory, which left an expensive Soviet-supplied armory in ruins, must have stung highly placed Muscovites. There were signs that the Soviet hawks were becoming more vocal. A month after Israel's victory, Marshal Andrei A. Grechko, the Soviet defense minister, addressed military academy graduates. He spoke of Soviet intentions to balk "Israeli aggression" and linked the Middle East war to American "outrages" in Vietnam.

First versions of this speech in Isvestia, the government newspaper, were far more bellicose than those appearing later. Evidently the published version had been toned down after the Kremlin had time to think things over.

Possibly, hawk elements smarted at Soviet setbacks. There had been the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, a backdown in Berlin, American buildup in Vietnam and other situations for which the Russians found no adequate answers.

Now there is a perilous imponderable. How many setbacks can the Soviet civil leadership sustain without being pushed by hawks into some sort of action? Will Moscow continue withdrawing from the brink after edging up to it? Do civilian leaders--credited with an intention to give priority to the Soviet internal economy in this 50th year of Red rule-feel themselves in peril of being drawn inevitably into showdown or even conflict with the United States?

THE NATION'S PRESS

How much student influence?

The best way to make men responsible is to give them responsibility. The truth of this has been too largely overlooked in colleges and universities around the country. There has been, especially in some of the smaller institutions, an excessive paternalism, galling to youth and in some degree foolishly frustrating. More and more, young men and women of college age have been demanding greater independence and a greater voice in the determination of policies that affect their lives.

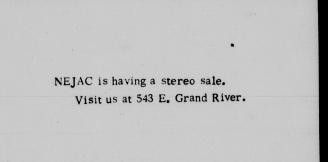

We feel a large measure of sympathy, therefore, with some of the resolutions adopted by the National Student Association's 20th Congress at its meeting at the University of Maryland. If students are granted a major responsibility in framing the campus regulations affecting dormitory hours, social intercourse and student activities, there is every reason to believe that these rules will be sensible and that they will be observed much more faithfully than if they are imposed from on high. Colleges are institutions of higher learning; their students are men and women--not boys and girls-and are entitled to be treated as such.

How much influence students ought to exercise in such curricular matters as course requirements, admissions policies and the selection of faculty is more difficult to determine. The Student Congress called for joint control with the regular university authorities. We have no doubt that they ought to be heard in these matters -- and attentively. They are the persons most vitally concerned. But in considerable degree these involve questions of professional judgment, necessarily governed by considerations other than preference, popularity and current interest. We think the role of students in this area has to be subordinate to the role of the faculty and the university administration.

That youth is not synonymous with wisdom and that exuberance can lead to excess was pretty amply demonstrated in two resolutions adopted by the Student Congress. The body voted to "organize and support resistance to the draft" on college campuses; and it approved a statement asserting that "Black power is the unification of all black peoples in America for their liberation by any means necessary." Lawful action to change the Selective Service Law and orderly programs to protect the civil rights and promote the welfare of Negroes are perfectly appropriate student causes. But these statements, if they are not mere rhetorical flourishes, seem to endorse illegal action and even violence. As such, they are indefensible in a country where the democratic process is in full operation. Students need to learn that the prerequisite for governing is to be able to govern

RON GOOVERT

Goovert's chances good with Lions

BY GAYEL WESCH State News Sports Writer

Former Spartan linebacker Ron Goovert has pursued a job with a professional football team the way he'd pursue an opposing quarterback-and the tactic appears to be paying Goovert decided. he wasn't going to be stopped short of his goal, and now he's almost certain to stick with the Detroit Lions for the coming season as backup man for regular middle linebacker Mike Lucci.

After gaining All-Am-erica honors on MSU's national championship team of 1965, Goovert tried out for the Houston Ollers of the AFL, only to be cut. The Oilers figured he was too small, but offered him a chance on the taxi squad. Goovert wasn't satisfied with that and was released.

The Oakland Raiders made a bid for him, but the Oilers had dropped him too late for a tryout, and once again Goovert was

A season with Charlestown, S.C., of the Continental League, kept him in shape. After getting a recommendation from MSU's offensive backfield Coach Al Dorow, he signed as a free agent with the Lions.

Since then things have been coming up roses for Goovert.

He had an outstanding performance in training camp, including impressive showings in the two major scrimmages (one other involving the entire camp, which kept Goovert solidly entrenched, and even though the Lions were rich with linebackers, Goovert wasn't cut from the team.

An injury to Wally Hilgenberg which sidelined him for the season, moved Goovert to second string but a Lion spokesman said he was never in real jeopardy of being cut from the squad even when Hilgenberg was playing. In the Lions' recent 38-

17 victory over San Diego (the game in which Hilgenberg was injured) Goovert played the second half and was second on the team in defensive points, making five tackles.

Goovert is happy to be a Lion. He's a native of the suburb of Ferndale and has always wanted to play with them.

"I'm real pleased with the way things have turned out," Goovert said Thursday. "Everyone dreams of playing with their home team, and I'll have a better chance of getting a good offseason job around here."

"As far as Iknow, Coach (Joe) Schmidt is going to keep five linebackers for the season, so things look real good."

"The Lions have given me a good chance to prove myself during camp, and I'm glad I haven't let them down." Goovert said. "I think we're going to have a good team this year. Schmidt's doing a tremendous job and everybody's been working hard for him."

the charge.

Schmidt may be a major reason why the Lions aren't as concerned about Goovert's size as Houston was. He was a perennial All-Pro linebacker at 6-0, 220, an inch taller but the same weight as Goovert. Goovert's playing weight at MSU was 205, but headded the extra 15 to enhance his chances for pro ball.

"Whether I'm big enough has always been the big question, but I know I've got enough size now, and my speed and strength are as-sets," Goovert said.

"Jesse is in good academic standing with the University and I know he conducts himself in an exemplary way off the field. Any mistake he has done deserves to be rectified. Daugherty explains that he wasn't inviting Phillips back for fall drivers in the Red Cedar complex face a long, long walk to their cars this fall.

Because of an increase of graduate assistants and buildings in South Campus, about 500 student drivers will be forced out of the 1,000-space Shaw ramp and sent to commuter Lot Y, at Farm Lane and Mt. Hope Road. Grad assistants, under University parking regulations, have priority to available parking spaces. The Dept. of Public Safety

A marching band practiced on Old College Field Thursday, and guests at Kellogg Center sat outside enjoying the sunshine.

Inside Dixie Harvey talked about coups, counter-coups and mass murder.

Miss Harvey was among the eace Corps volunteers evacuated from Nigeria in late July because of the civil war. She is at MSU for the quarter of study that will finish her study for a master's degree in education.

She was teaching in a girls' secondary school in the south eastern part of Nigeria near Port Harcourt.

After fighting broke out in early July, the schools were closed by the Ministry of Education. The Minister called the principals of the schools and told them to close, rather than give the North a propaganda weapon with a public nnouncement, she said.

Then, she said, the Peace Corps volunteer teachers had no work; neither didtheagricultural volunteers, since the army confiscated their vehicles and made them unable to get to their proj-
