Hannah Violates 'Conflict Of Interest'

By LEO ZAINEA
and
JAMES SPANIOLO

Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley ruled Tuesday that President Hannah had violated the state conflict of interest law because of his business affiliations outside the University and should resign them or risk prosecution.

Immediately, Hannah announced he had stepped down as a member of the Board of Directors of the Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit and of the American Bank of Trust Company of Lansing. He said he would continue to serve as a Director of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., since Kelley's opinion excluded interests in a state-regulated public utility.

At the same time, Philip May, vice president for finance, said he intends to resign from the Michigan National Bank today. He said that he would continue his interest in two other companies, Jackson National Life Insurance Co., and Walter Neller Realty Co., because neither deals with the University.

Trustee C. Allen Harlan, D-Southfield, said Tuesday that he felt the opinion would have no effect on him, even though he is founder and chairman of Harlan Electric Co. of Detroit. He said the firm had no dealings with the University and that it only had part interest in the Central Electric Co. of Lansing which had worked on MSU contracts.

He admitted he served on the board of Directors of City National Bank in Detroit, which had dealt with the University, but dismissed any possibility of conflict of interest.

Trustee Stephen Nisbet, R-Fremont, is the director and vice president of Fremont State Bank, but could not be reached immediately for comment.

Hannah said Tuesday that the decision had come as no surprise to him. He said that he had served on the bank boards with the approval of the trustees.

In a 16-page opinion, the attorney general argued, however, that employment by a labor union would not be in violation of the law. This portion of his ruling was directed at Trustee Don Stevens, D-Okemos, who is an education director with the AFL-CIO.

Rep. William P. Hampton, the House Minority Floor Leader from Bloomfield Hills, had asked Kelley whether Stevens violated the law when he voted on a resolution by the Board of Trustees requiring University printing to be done by union shops.

Kelley excluded Stevens from any violation of the law since "there is no basis to contend that there is any direct or indirect pecuniary or beneficial benefit . . . to him resulting from the board's action" . . . and since . . . "he is not required to disclose confidential information acquired from board meetings to the AFL-CIO."

Hannah asked for the opinion Feb. 14, before the new conflict of interest law went into effect in the spring. At that time, Hannah told Kelley he would resign his outside positions, rather than "knowingly violate any law, regardless of the position's merits or objectives."

Along with Hannah, Rep. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, and Hampton requested an opinion to clarify what many consider an ambiguous and vaguely-worded law.

Conceivably, the ruling would apply to all state officers, including presidents, vice presidents, secretaries and treasurers of college boards and members of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, Highway Department, and Reapportionment Commission.

Faxon authored the law last year as a freshman legislator, after a successful challenge on conflict of interests grounds that led to the resignation of Eugene Power from the University of Michigan Board of Regents.

Faxon said then that he had been "disturbed" that U-M had permitted President Harlan H. Hatcher to serve as director of the Ann Arbor Bank. Hatcher stepped down from the board Tuesday. He made no mention of whether he would resign his positions with the Detroit Edison Co., or with the Tecumseh Products Corp., a refrigeration and auto supply firm. Hatcher will be succeeded as president on Jan. 1 by Robben W. Fleming.

Four of the board members of Eastern Michigan University reportedly serve as directors of banks too and would be violating the new law.

In the opinion, Kelley said that an officer or member of governing boards of state institutions of higher education is a state officer within the Michigan Constitution and that any such person who "simultaneously serves as an officer or director of a private corporation doing business with that institution, violates the conflict of interest law."

"These sentiments do not represent too exacting or old fashioned a standard or moral conduct for public officials," Kelley said.

"While it is conceivable that a corporate officer may hold a title devoid of any apparent substantial interest to himself," Kelley continued, "the title itself must be deemed to have been conferred for the mutual benefit of the corporation and the officer."

Kelley said that if a state officer had only an "empty title" it would be advisable for him to get rid of it. "Such a gesture could hardly be viewed as too great a sacrifice for the opportunity to engage

Wheeler calls for bomb raids on Haiphong

WASHINGTON — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler described as a "peanuts" target the one North Vietnamese port raided by American warplanes and he called for action against the now-forbidden harbor of Haiphong.

Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reported a difference in judgment within the administration on this and said: "I have come down on the side that we could undertake actions against the port of Haiphong." His suggestions on the nature of those actions were deleted by Pentagon censors.

His Aug. 16 testimony before the Senate preparedness subcommittee, made public Tuesday, acknowledged that raids on the harbor could hit Communist bloc shipping and pose the danger of a wider Vietnam war.

"On two occasions," he noted, "our air strikes on target areas near the harbor areas have accidentally damaged Soviet shipping."

But he said militarily, action against Haiphong is one of the most important steps the United States could take.

"The other two ports, Cam Pha and Hon Gai, are peanuts," Wheeler testified. "They are nothing of any great importance. Haiphong is the important port."

Wheeler reported the Joint Chiefs of Staff believed that 70 targets which had not been approved by the administration on Aug. 16 should be authorized for strikes.

"I confidently anticipate approval of other targets which up until this time have not been authorized for attack," Wheeler said.

It was not clear whether this anticipated actions not yet taken, or referred to the early September approval of at least six previously restricted targets.

Wheeler said "an awareness that the air campaign is worthwhile" had led to target clearances which stepped up the pressure on North Vietnam.

"I think it also is a matter of time," Wheeler said. "It is quite apparent that the war is unpopular and that to gain a success we must have additional pressure, or steady pressure, both North and South."

Wheeler said raids on targets advocated by the Joint Chiefs of Staff will "contribute in the over-all to the shortening of the war and the reduction of casualties."

The general said relentless day and night pressure is the only course to successful conclusion of the conflict, then added a word of complaint about criticism of American policy. He said:

"I must say that while I am quite aware of the feeling among a large segment of the populations as reflected both in statements made by congressional leaders and others, by what I read, and of course, by my conversations with a rather wide circle of acquaintances, we are our own worst enemies in this regard."

Fee reduction deadline

Deadline for all students to submit applications for fee reductions for fall term is Oct. 6. After this deadline, all applications will be considered for a fee reduction beginning winter term.

According to regulations set by the MSU board of trustees, full-time, Michigan undergraduates not being subsidized by federal, state or private grants or scholarships will be charged a lower fee when the gross annual parental income is less than $16,700.

Application forms for fee reductions are available in 103 Library. Completed applications should be sent to the Fee Processing Center, MSU Business Office, P.O. Box 3010, East Lansing, Michigan, 48823.

AIDE SAYS

Romney to reveal candidacy soon

DETROIT — Gov. Romney will visit Europe in November and he plans to announce his candidacy for the 1968 Republican presidential nomination before leaving, The Associated Press has learned.

A source close to Romney said the governor will declare formally his candidacy after he returns from a tour of urban centers in the nation this weekend, possibly soon after.

Romney, in Atlanta Tuesday on stop

No. 13 of his tour, commented on the report by saying "I'll make up my mind before the first of the year." He added "I haven't decided" when asked if he had a specific date for announcing his candidacy.

Other Romney aides in Lansing declined to comment on any announcement of Romney's candidacy.

But Jonathan Moore, his adviser on foreign affairs who has been working on details of the European trip, said a sched-

Big Ten opposes 'U' tuition

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a two-part series for which staff writer Linda Gortmaker contacted administrators from Big Ten schools for reactions to MSU's ability-to-pay tuition plan.

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

If administrators from the majority of the other Big Ten universities made decisions for MSU, in-state students would not pay fees on a sliding scale plan.

Questioned by telephone about the merits of MSU's ability-to-pay plan, believed to be the first of its kind in the country, financial officers from Minnesota to Ohio expressed generally negative attitudes.

The new system affecting only in-state undergraduate students provides that students from families with gross incomes less than $11,800 pay $354 tuition per year.

Students from families with an income of more than $16,666 pay $500 per year, while students from families with incomes ranging between $11,800 and $16,666 pay tuition equalling three per cent of their gross family income.

All out-of-state students pay $1,200 a year.

"The ability-to-pay plan has no real merit and the time-honored method of paying a flat rate is better," said Gordon B. Carson, vice-president for business and finance at Ohio State University in Columbus.

Carson stressed that no "human system is perfect," but that MSU's plan does not seem to have its purpose realized. "We're most interested in helping the needy students finance their education," he explained, "and I think scholarships and grants-in-aid do a better job."

Other administrators agreeing with Carson by telephone Tuesday included Elwin T. Jolliffe, vice-president for business and finance at the University of Iowa in Iowa City.

Jolliffe, along with most of the officials questioned Tuesday, commented this summer on the system immediately after its adoption by the Board of Trustees. "I wouldn't favor the plan," Jolliffe said, reinforcing his views expressed this summer. "It's completely contrary to the concept of public higher education."

He stressed that the main idea behind public higher education is to "make education available for many students as possible—without regards to financial ability."

Vice-president and treasurer of Indiana University at Bloomington, Joseph A. Franklin, feels the plan is "not adequate to take care of the really needy students."

"What's it trying to accomplish?" he questioned. He asked who originated the plan and quipped that maybe it came from a newspaper writer.

This summer Jolliffe also asked where the tuition-tied-to-income idea originated. When told Trustee Don Stevens initiated it, Jolliffe questioned whether Stevens had any background with private schools.

CUE recommends dorm, 'U' College improvement

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a four-part series of excerpts and summary of the report of the Committee on Undergraduate Education.

By BEVERLEY TWITCHELL
State News Executive Reporter

Some of the loudest complaints the Committee on Undergraduate Education (CUE) heard from students during its four-month study last spring concerned the non-academic atmosphere of residence halls and a campus with so many things to do that academia is underemphasized. It also heard many complaints on the inflexibility of the University College courses, which are required of all students.

Two chapters of CUE's report are devoted to these topics, and 20 recommendations were made to improve the situation.

"The committee must acknowledge that it has been shocked to learn that some members of the faculty have insulted their students by failing to meet classes with any regularity, that others, in a gesture of arrogance, have announced in their introductory courses that it is only by compulsion that they are teaching at that low level, while still others have abused their position by taking class time to engage in silly and irrelevant attacks upon the University, thinking (we can only suppose) that by so doing they were fearlessly exercising their academic freedom while, at the same time, establishing the superiority of their own scholarly credentials," the report said.

CUE called upon the faculty to play the dominant role in creating an atmosphere of "scholarship and reflection and intelligent dialogue."

At the same time, CUE said, the student must actively pursue the best the University can offer in all phases of his life here.

To aid in creating an academic atmosphere in the residence halls, CUE called for "genuine inter-collegiate units of instruction and residence" in the three major living-learning complexes. One would be devoted to physical, biological and applied sciences; one to the social sciences, business and education; and the third to arts and letters, humanities and related fields.

The committee also recommended that each complex establish a Director of Academic Programs to work in development of complex-wide academic and co-curricular programs. A Complex Coordinating Committee would work with him in each complex.

Last day for adds and late registration

Today is the last day for adding courses, changing sections and late registration. The deadline for dropping courses is Oct. 4.

Drops and adds begun before the deadlines should be handled with the student's academic adviser. After the deadlines, adds are begun with the academic adviser, but require final approval of the assistant dean's office of the student's college.

Dropping a course after Oct. 4 is started in the assistant dean's office. Section changes may be completed entirely within the academic department offering the course.

Students should begin late registration by obtaining their permit to register and section reservation-enrollment card from their academic department or college, and then reporting to 107 Administration Building.

N.Y. school strike settled, classes may start Thursday

NEW YORK (AP)—The massive New York teachers' strike was settled on a tentative basis for the second time in a week Tuesday, and 1.1 million public school children were alerted for a return to regular classes possibly by Thursday.

"It's a fantastically good package," said strike leader Albert Shanker of an accord involving an added $135 million in teachers' wages over a 26-month period. Then Shanker reported back to State Supreme Court for a hearing on contempt charges growing out of the nation's worst school crisis. The walkout of Shanker's 49,000-member United Federation of Teachers, UFT, affiliated with the AFL-CIO, has all but paralyzed normal operations in the city's 900 public schools for 12 class days—since the scheduled Sept. 11 opening of the new fall term.

Once again, Mayor John V. Lindsay, his patience reportedly near an end, played a key role in bringing the UFT and the Board of Education together. He had announced a tentative settlement Sept. 20 and the schools were scheduled to reopen Monday.

However, the accord fell apart in a bitter argument over the reduction of its terms to writing, leading Lindsay to sharply accuse the union and the board of "haggling." Negotiators were summoned to City Hall Monday evening and held in session for eight hours. After a respite, the talks resumed Tuesday morning.

At 3:36 p.m., Lindsay strode into a packed City Hall chamber to announce once more a seeming end to the longest, costliest strike in the history of the nation's largest school system.

Flanking him, their hands clasping the mayor's, were Shanker and School Supt. Bernard Donovan, chief adversaries in a tleup that has affected New York more deeply than any since the 1966 subway strike.

Donovan and Shanker said the formal agreement would be submitted as quickly as possible to the Board of Education and the union rank and file.

The statement added: "It is hoped that this can be accomplished so that the teachers can return to the schools as early as possible on Thursday, following the ratification meeting."

In each case, he acceded to requests by attorneys for the union and the city that he withhold a decision, lest it upset the delicate balance of negotiations.

The city announced at the outset that it was not asking for jail terms for Shanker and his fellow union officers. It did ask for the $10,000 a day fine against the union.

The tentative agreement on wages replaced a former teachers' scale of $5,400 to $11,950 a year, with a new salary range of $6,750 to $13,750.

Reuther offers Ford head bargaining seat to end strike

DETROIT (UPI)—United Auto Workers President Walter Reuther said Tuesday the nationwide strike against Ford Motor Co. is still far from settlement. He suggested that Henry Ford II might want to take a seat at the bargaining table to speed things along.

Reuther said the Ford board chairman had been issuing "inaccurate" statements about the strike which has idled Ford installations in 25 states for 20 days.

Ford's top negotiator, Vice President Malcolm Denise, said he doubted Ford would take up the offer. He said his communications with the auto chief offered "no problem."

Reuther said Ford, if he sat in on the negotiations, would "know a lot more than he does, as is reflected in the inaccurate statements he makes to the press." He said Ford either "doesn't know what's going on" or hasn't been properly informed.

Reuther said he offered a "concession" to Ford negotiators Tuesday in the area of pensions. He said Ford turned it down because the company refused to bargain on the basis of its profits.

"They said their position had not changed," Reuther said. "We've got to somehow get responsible and meaningful collective bargaining under way. And that's not happening now."

Reuther said he would return to the table Thursday morning. "I'm going to come back, come back and come back. And somewhere there's got to be an answer," he said.

Denise said "I don't think we're going to go any place as long as his position remains the same as it has been."

"He (Reuther) has said specifically that he wants to bargain only on the framework of Ford's productivity," Denise said. The company has steadfastly refused to bargain on that basis.

He said the original Ford offer was "still on the table" and had not been changed.

319 E. GRAND RIVER

TEXAS FLOOD WORSENS

Patients removed as Rio threatens hospital

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — National Guardsmen evacuated a state tuberculosis hospital Tuesday as Rio Grande floodwaters swept toward the heart of this South Texas city of 41,000.

The police station stood in eight feet of water at one time. City officials said 800 homes had been flooded.

A Rio Grande levee burst on the Mexican side of the river at Reynosa, putting one-third of the city under water.

The surging Rio Grande has been swollen greatly beyond capacity by 20- and 30-inch rains that accompanied Hurricane Beulah's track inland last week.

Some 20,000 persons in the 40,000 square-mile area of Texas battered by Beulah are still in Red Cross and Salvation Army shelters. Various Texas rivers are still as much as 15 feet above flood stage.

Harlingen was the hardest hit city by the arroyo flood but some smaller communities were warned to be ready to evacuate should conditions worsen.

City officials said 5,000 Harlingen residents, or one out of eight, had been evacuated from residential areas, some leaving only after the muddy water reached the second floor of $50,000 homes.

Others, mainly Mexican-Americans, fled from a low-income area under water.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., charged Tuesday that Gov. John Connally was "playing politics with disaster" by not having applied by now for federal designation of South Texas as a major disaster area.

Connally and his aides say they are waiting until proper papers and damage assessments can properly be drawn up.

State and federal officials had estimated the damage to Texas from Beulah at $500 million last week before the torrential rains hit.

Estimates now exceed $1 billion.

The death toll from the giant storm, one of the most powerful hurricanes in history, remained at 44. Eleven died in Texas, the rest in Mexico and the Caribbean.

Many business blocks in Harlingen were barricaded to traffic Tuesday as National Guardsmen and volunteers sweated to stack sandbags around stores and along wet streets.

A boundary commission spokesman said it appeared that the Rio Grande had crested north of Harlingen.

But he said there was little chance that the big river would have a significant drop anytime soon.

The Rio Grande was five miles wide in places.

At Corpus Christi, 160 miles to the north, residents of north beach braced for floodwaters from the lower Nueces River. Officials said a rise of four to six feet was expected on Nueces Bay.

Britain calls for war's end based on Geneva agreement

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — British Foreign Secretary George Brown called Tuesday for a "balanced settlement" of the war in Vietnam based on the 1954 Geneva agreements. He told the U.N. General Assembly negotiations should start immediately, even before the shooting and bombing stop.

In a 47-minute policy speech in the 122-nation assembly's general debate, Brown complained that North Vietnam "has declined the grasp the many opportunities to negotiate which have been offered." He said his position was similar to the one U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg started in the assembly Thursday.

Brown called for "a balanced approach" also to settle last June's Israeli-Arab war. He said "Israel must withdraw" from Egypt, Jordan and Syria "but, equally, Israel's neighbors must recognize its right to exist, and it must enjoy security within its frontiers." He said a special representative of Secretary-General U Thant should be sent out for "direct contact with the parties." He declared that unless the Suez Canal was reopened quickly, "there must inevitably be damaging changes in the pattern of world trade."

The foreign secretary's speech contrasted with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's remarks to the assembly Friday that "peace can be brought about in Vietnam only as the result of withdrawal" of U.S. troops and Gromyko's charge that "barbarous bombings" of North Vietnam had been the United States' sole answer to a North Vietnamese "readiness to begin negotiations" if the bombing stopped.

Brown also differed with Gromyko's stand on the Middle East to the effect that only after Israel withdrew from Arab territories should all the countries there be "guaranteed peace and security."

Brown said Britain was ready to meet with the Soviet Union, India, Canada and Poland to discuss peace in Vietnam as proposed early this month by Alois Bebler of Yugoslavia, president of the World Federation of United Nations Associations in Geneva.

He said the South Vietnamese people, who had an election early this month, had shown "they want a regime of their own choice." He welcomed the desire of President-elect Nguyen Van Thieu "to try once again to bridge the gap between Saigon and Hanoi."

"There must be a cease-fire and negotiations," Brown declared. "The final solution must be political. . . I see no reason why a balanced settlement embracing these principles should not be achieved on the basis of the Geneva agreements. Both the United States and North Vietnam have said that this basis would be acceptable to them."

Long VC shelling may mean mass Red invasion

SAIGON (AP) — Communist batteries in and north of the demilitarized zone, though reported outgunned 10 to 1, continued their artillery siege of Con Thien for the 26th day Tuesday, a potential prelude to a Red invasion.

U.S. Marine losses in this sustained enemy attack, longest of the war, had mounted to 63 dead and 987 wounded since Sept. 1.

In the air war north of the border, North Vietnam's official news agency said U.S. planes struck again Tuesday in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas. It said five planes were shot down, three of them over the port of Haiphong. There was no immediate comment from American authorities. More than 1,000 rounds of artillery, mortar and rocket fire fell Monday on Con Thien, a sandbagged outpost on high ground two miles south of the DMZ. The Marines reported two men killed and 202 wounded. The Communists' outpouring is the most concentrated since they shelled the French into surrender at Dien Bien Phu in 1954.

The Marines expressed belief enemy losses were running high under a rain of American bombs and shells that Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, has called the greatest concentration of conventional firepower in history. The Red gun crews, working in camouflaged pits so deep that only a direct hit could knock them out, carried on a battle of attrition that some observers consider may be a forerunner of a drive into the strategic northern tier of South Vietnam's provinces by as many as 35,000 North Vietnamese regulars. Three enemy divisions are reported based in and around the zone.

North Vietnamese troops also shelled a U.S. Navy patrol base at Cua Viet and the adjacent Marine Amphibious Tractor Battalion unit eight miles south of the DMZ, with no reported U.S. casualties or damage.

Further north an enemy shell hit the forward stack of the U.S. destroyer Mansfield and killed one sailor and wounded two as she was shooting up coastal barges near Dong Hoi, 40 miles above the border.

Marines are already making comparisons between the battle of Con Thien, a defensive action, and other bloody fights they have survived in wars past, such as Guadalcanal and Iwo Jima.

A senior noncommissioned officer who has been in and out of Con Thien many times complained it is not the kind of fight the Marines, jammed into muddy, sandbagged holes, prefer.

"In the kind of war I'm used to," he said, "when the Marines were bothered by a problem they'd go out and do something about it. They'd go out and dig that thorn out of their side."

Marines made two excursions in force earlier in the war into the southern half of the six-mile-wide DMZ and rooted out some of the enemy, but are staying put in this case. The southern half of the DMZ is part of South Vietnam. There has been no invasion of the north.

Other places in the rugged frontier territory might be easier to supply and defend than Con Thien. But Marine officers feel the muddy red hills on which the outpost is perched can be held. They consider Con Thien a valuable observation point and that a withdrawal would give Hanoi a propaganda victory.

Mexican mystery poison kills 13 as milk is tested

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The death toll from a mysterious mass poisoning affecting mostly children rose higher Tuesday as scientists worked to discover the killer agent.

Thirteen have died and 200 persons are hospitalized, some in critical condition. Two of the deaths were reported Tuesday.

The outbreak began Monday when hundreds of children in this border city of 265,000 were hit by vomiting and nausea. Hospitals quickly were jammed with suffering tots and a few adults.

In San Diego across the border, where health officials were asked to try to isolate the poison, the county health director, Dr. J.B. Askew, said:

"The symptoms indicate an acute food poisoning caused by either chemicals or bacteria, but we cannot say at this point what it is. There is no indication that it is anything but food poisoning."

Authorities in Tijuana said that in every case the stomachs of victims were found to contain milk. All milk and milk products were recalled from retail stores.

Askew's office tested tissue specimens, milk and water. Other specimens were sent to the State Department of Agriculture in Sacramento to see if pesticides were involved.

Earlier authorities questioned about 20 dairy operators, store owners and vendors in the hunt for the source of the outbreak.

Hospitals were jammed. In some cases two children occupied the same bed. Physicians said they were using established antidotes.

Police cars, taxicabs and private vehicles were used as ambulances.

Besides the ban on milk, residents were advised to boil water. Most of the residents of the poverty area neighborhoods receive water from tanker trucks and authorities were checking this source.

Many Tijuana residents crossed the border to buy their milk in the United States. Stores near the border reported milk sales of triple the normal volume. Some milk vendors set up shop at the border crossing point.

Discrimination pops up again

Racial discrimination popped up again two weeks ago in the Lansing area, as if to remind us that open housing and the cause for equal rights are still a vital concern here.

The incident took place when a Negro graduate student, Estelle Ladry, was told by the Hacker Realty Company that there was no apartment available for her. Miss Ladry then contacted Robert L. Green, associate professor of education and a member of the local chapter of the NAACP. Subsequent investigation showed that there were apartments available, and a meeting was thus arranged with the realtor and several NAACP members. As a result, Miss Ladry received an apartment the next day.

The Hacker Realty Company was obviously guilty of blatant discrimination. But Hacker Realty Company is not alone in such activity.

Realty companies have long been a monolithic force opposed to open housing. Particularly when in the business of leasing apartments, they are working as agents for the owners of the apartments, and are asked by the owners to screen out the "undesirables." These "undesirables" are almost always non-whites. Said Green, "It's the same old story," and it must be dealt with as it was in the Ladry case.

The Ladry case was unfortunate in itself, but it also points up a larger problem. City governments in the Lansing area have done little to improve the housing situation. The city of Lansing has no open housing ordinance whatsoever, and East Lansing has but a farcical excuse for one, without provisions even for enforcement.

MSU is especially involved in this issue, with many Negro and foreign students having difficulties obtaining housing in the area.

After the Flint fiasco this summer, when Mayor Floyd McCree, a Negro, threatened to resign because an open housing ordinance was rejected by the city council, Attorney General Frank Kelley ruled that Michigan cities may enact open housing laws with criminal penalties. Kelley also offered the resources of his office to cities to help draft such laws. It was his hope that his opinion would "help encourage municipalities throughout the state to enact new open housing ordinances."

Kelley's ruling further weakens the argument of those opposed to open housing ordinances. It appears that the only reason they have left is prejudice.

The necessity for strong open housing laws with punitive measures is clearer than ever. Lansing and East Lansing should take the lead.

Experimentation in grading system

The Educational Policies Committee has tentatively approved six major proposals for reform of MSU's grading system. The committee's recommendations include pass-no credit grade option, adding pluses and minuses to the regular grades, and several other substantive and administrative changes.

One of the proposals is that experimentation with grading systems be carried out at the departmental level, under the control of the provost.

What seems strange, however, is that the report has been submitted to the assistant dean's group for evaluation, and will be presented to other student and faculty groups for their opinions, before any experimentation will be carried out.

Should various departments carry out some of the plan, faculty, students, and administrators will be able to make conclusions based on experimentation.

If departments and the provost are agreeable, certain proposals, specifically the pass-no credit, could be carried out immediately. Students could notify their departments that they wished to be graded on a pass-no credit basis in certain non-major courses. Professors might try eliminating "D" grades, or including plus or minus grades, or both.

Carrying experimentation out now will enable the faculty to consider the report for implementation, rather than tabling it as did the Academic Senate in 1964.

Grading has long been an inflexible and unimaginative part of the educational process; it is encouraging to see that grading is finally being discussed in other than absolute terms.

But there is no substitute for actual experimentation.

Viet braces for civil unrest

DANANG, South Vietnam--Nothing could be more revealing than the current excitement at home about Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's plan for an electronic barrier along the miscalculated demilitarized zone. And what it reveals is the sheer, dismal ignorance that characterizes most discussion of this strange war's problems back in Washington.

This is not to say that McNamara's project may not be useful and effective at some future date, when the whole pattern of the war may change very drastically. The point is, rather, that there is not the remotest possibility of any such barrier being installed, either now or in the future, unless President Johnson and McNamara are ready to call up the reserves.

There is no such possibility, in turn, because here in the 1st Corps area the Marines and the local units of the South Vietnamese army (which are excellent, by the way) already are stretched to the very utmost. They have not a man or a gun to spare for the immense task of building an electronic barrier across a long stretch of forbidding mountains rather heavily infested with North Vietnamese troops.

The "trace"--the strip of cleared land running from Gio Linh to Con Thien on the flat coastal plain at the end of the DMZ--required a heavy investment of men whose lives were lost to clear it. The electronic barrier may well be vastly better than the "trace." But that will always remain pretty academic until there are forces available to install such a barrier. There are none today.

No forces are available for barrier installation, in turn, because the northern tip of South Vietnam, roughly from Danang to the DMZ, has become the primary battlefield of the whole war since this reporter was here only six months ago. The change occurred just after that visit. The battle continues. And instead of talking about electronic barriers that may or may not exist in the remote future, it is more useful to try to understand the battle's current outlines.

Briefly, the Hanoi war planners took three steps last spring which have changed just about everything in this area except the wonderful courage and tenacity of the Marines. First and most important, the Hanoi planners began to exert heavy and persistent pressure on the most northerly province, Quang Tri, with a considerable part of their formerly disengaged home army.

This was not an absolute innovation. Last year, the home army's 324th Division invaded across the western end of the DMZ, only to be thrown back with fearful losses. But now the reconstituted 324th Division, the 325th Division and the approximate equivalent of a third division made up of the 270th Regiment and other elements have begun to be employed simultaneously. Their pressure continues, moreover, and is growing greater.

This has drawn off for the defense of the DMZ no less than seven Marine battalions and a special landing force. Although Gen. William C. Westmoreland has somewhat reduced the area of direct Marine responsibility, the heavy commitment on the zone plus the obvious need to defend a whole series of fixed points like Danang have left the Marines with no real margin of power.

Beyond the essentials noted above, the able new Marine commander, Lt. Gen. Robert E. Cushman, has no men to spare. Indeed, the event may well prove that he has not enough men for the defense of the zone itself, when and if maximum enemy effort develops there. For this very reason, the "Indian country"--the part of the 1st Corps area where the enemy can operate with relative freedom--has grown greater and greater in total extent.

To exploit this result, the Hanoi war planners took to diverting to the 1st Corps area the lion's share of their total southward flow of replacements. This was intended to beef up the main force units and local force battalions operating in the provinces just below the DMZ. Step two finally was reinforced by step three, which was the introduction of certain new weapons.

The AK-47 Russian assault rifle has given the enemy's main and local forces substantial firepower superiority over the South Vietnamese army and militia, which are mainly armed with carbines. A Russian antitank rocket has been introduced with devastating effect, since it can destroy any of the bunkers so toilsomely built to protect province towns, district headquarters and the like.

It may well get hairier simply because the Hanoi war planners have so obviously been executing a long-term plan. It was probably started last winter and is due to culminate in a really major battle on the DMZ this autumn when the local monsoon season largely grounds U.S. airpower.

The cost of the plan to North Vietnam already has been enormous. If the plan fails in the end, that failure may perhaps be decisive. Watch the DMZ for the outcome and, above all, do not expect the outcome to be affected by electronic barriers or other contraptions. Marine bravery and Marine proficiency are all that can be relied on.

State's not so great

To the Editor

I have been a resident of Lansing all of my life, am a transfer student from Lansing Community College, and at present am a sophomore at this "great" institution of higher learning, namely MSU.

I put "great" in quotes. Why? Because I am not so sure that it is so great. Sure, it has great scholastic standards, new and great facilities of instruction, a great number of clubs and activities in which students can enroll, and great athletic teams. Well then, what's not so great? This so-called "ability-to-pay" system of tuition.

This past Tuesday, September 19 at 10:00 a.m. there was held in the Capitol building, a committee hearing on the pros and cons of this system of tuition. During the course of the three hours the meeting took, there was presented by Jack Breslin, who is University Secretary to the Board of Trustees here at MSU, a summary and basic outline of the graduated system of tuition here at the college.

Of all eight of the trustees personally and individually invited by the committee he was the only one who deemed it important enough to show face and make his views known in public. As a matter of fact, it was acknowledged to me and five others, by the committee chairman, (after the only one courteous enough to acknowledge that he had received an invitation ledge that he had received an invitation and would be glad to attend.

In fact, the other trustee members didn't even reply except for President Hannah, who also was invited by written invitation. Unfortunately he also couldn't make the meeting because he had another which he had to attend at Houghton, Mich.

After Mr. Breslin finished, the chairman put the issue out on the floor for personal testimony to the general public of which there were eleven. In the general breakdown, nine were against the system, one for it, and one who was undecided. Such topics were raised as to the validity and workability of such a plan, the invasion of privacy and the fairness of such a plan.

All in all, it was a very worthwhile meeting to attend, and I was surprised as well as disappointed that there were so few people in attendance. There were two MSU students who voiced their opinion, one gentleman from Battle Creek, and others from various parts of the state who came to take part and voice their opinions.

It is my honest feeling that if anything can or will be done about this policy of tuition, it is up to the students and faculty to voice their views either in this newspaper, or through advisors or counselors, or by letter directly to President Hannah or the Board of Trustees, and by so doing, once again make MSU a GREAT institution.

EDITORIAL DISSENT

BOBBY SODEN

Sign not ad for student spies

EDITOR'S NOTE: Campus Editor Bobby Soden dissented from an editorial in Monday's State News. Any editor on the five-member editorial board may disagree with an editorial and write a column explaining why he or she dissented.

The posters which unfortunately have provided the first controversy of this academic year have been taken down. "Suspicious?" the green and white sign reads. "Help us with your eyes and ears. Report suspicious activities on campus."

Due to various complaints, mainly centering around the use of the word "suspicious," University Police decided to call in the posters.

In an editorial Monday, four of the five State News editors joined a small group of student leaders denouncing the sign, calling it "thoroughly disgusting" and stressing that implications of the sign could only widen the gap between students and the University Police.

I dissented from that editorial. The controversy is unfortunate because the sign is apparently merely a request to members of the University community to report crimes. It is not an advertisement for student spies.

My colleagues admit that "Certainly the police depend to a large degree on students for help in spotting petty thievery and similar crimes on campus, and it is only in the students' best interests to cooperate with the police."

My argument for the use of any type of sign urging cooperation with area police is for informational purposes. The sign should have served as an encouragement to report crimes and inform new students of the services of the University Police.

A sizable portion of MSU's student population does not realize that the University is not a crime-free utopia.

In fiscal year 1966-67 University Police received 3273 criminal reports on campus, an increase of 12.2 per cent over the previous year. Property losses for the same period totalled $150,037.10.

Although the campus is remarkably free of crimes of violence, such as murder and rapes, statistics indicate that smaller offenses are at a much higher level than in a city of this size.

My colleagues on the editorial board question the motives of the police in posting the signs.

Certainly there is a demonstrated need for help in spotting the growing number of crimes on the campus. Thirty-four police officers cannot police the campus single-handedly.

The editors question the wisdom of their means, the use of a sign, and particularly, this sign.

A small group of students and faculty have been offended by what they call the "Big Brother" attitude projected by the poster, which displays a face with alert eyes and ears and the word "Suspicious" in large type.

Perhaps a sign reading "Help Fight

Crime" or "Help the University Police" would have been more appropriate for a University community, and might not have offended certain groups to the extent this sign apparently has.

It is inaccurate to charge that "revulsion was the overwhelming reaction to the signs" when the sole articulate opponents to this date have been the 12 ASMSU board members, an assistant professor of psychology and The Paper. If others are opposed to the posters, they have not voiced their opinion publicly.

It is disturbing that many of the criticisms have been not only against this particular poster, but against urging cooperation with authorities.

To cooperate with the police does not mean to spy on friends, roommates and acquaintances. But if a crime is committed it is, to use a phrase we forget too often, "a citizen's duty" to report it. After all, it is the citizen who will ultimately be hurt by public apathy in reporting crimes.

With growing crime rates and a growing university community it is not unreasonable for police to ask for help from citizens.

A campus can easily become a paradise for deviates. Where else can 20,000 cars be found parked in a small area? And residence halls, with their unlocked doors and students' freedom to come and go much as they please, attract many criminals.

It's a big job, keeping the campus a pleasant and safe place to live. And 34 police officers can't do it alone.

Rushees hustle

One rushee shoots pool while another stands by with their host at the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity house Monday night. MSU fraternities held fall term open rush for interested men earlier this week.

Fraternities to end open house rush

Tonight will be the last night of open fraternity rush. Rushing on Thursday night will be on the basis of invitations extended by the houses to individual rushees.

Thirty-three houses are participating in fall rush and the Inter-fraternity Council estimates that 1,200 men are rushing this fall. This is significantly higher than last fall's total of 750 men.

"The draft laws are easier this year and men don't have to worry as much," said Al Rose, chief justice of IFC. "All undergraduates are deferred as long as they're full time. There's no grade point requirement, so the number of men going through rush will increase."

Fraternity rush is held three times a year, with the fall rush involving the smallest number of rushees. Fall rush is not open to first term freshmen and most of the men participating are transfer students and those who did not have the grades necessary to pledge last year.

The grade point requirement is a 2.2 for the term previous to pledging and a 2.2 all-University average. Rose estimated that 320 men will pledge fraternities this fall. Last winter, the fraternities took 420 pledges and 262 men pledged last spring.

Each fraternity will have a rush party this weekend on either Friday or Saturday night. Formal pledging will be on Monday night for all of the fraternities.

Rose said that the cost of pledging varies greatly from house to house. He urged rushees to consider carefully the financial aspect of fraternity membership.

Vietnamese await protests

SAIGON — South Vietnamese government police are steeled for possible student and Buddhist demonstrations reported to be planned for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

If the students and Buddhists take to the streets they would pose the most serious threat to the government since the militant Buddhists tried to topple the military government in the spring of 1966.

Wednesday morning, militant Buddhists at the An Quang pagoda in Saigon, headquarters of Thich (Venerable) Tri Quang, plan a mass meeting, possibly followed by a march into the street, informed sources said.

Students and Buddhists marched in Saigon, Hie and Da Nang Sunday to protest that the Sept. 3 presidential and senate elections were rigged.

The Buddhists want Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, the president-elect, to rescind a new national Buddhist charter he signed in July.

The charter recognizes as the official Buddhist Church of South Vietnam a nonmilitant sect with which the militants are at odds. The militants called Roman Catholic Thieu a traitor for signing the charter.

The government clamped down Tuesday on another form of political opposition, closing the Saigon newspaper Thoi Dai Epoch for printing a story that said the National Assembly was going to invalidate the election of Thieu and his vice president-elect, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, because of irregularities.

The nationwide demonstrations, if they happen, are scheduled for Thursday, when monks and nuns from the An Quang are to march to Independence Palace, where Thieu and Ky have their offices. They plan to present a petition to Thieu demanding that he rescind the new charter.

On Friday, police sources say, students and Buddhists are planning demonstrations in South Vietnam's major cities, among them Saigon, Da Nang, Can Tho, Nha Trang, Hue and Dalat.

Friday is the day when the National Assembly is scheduled to begin debate on whether or not to validate the Sept. 3 elections.

4 RUNNERS GONE

Dittrich seeks replacements

By STEVE LOKKER
State News Sports Writer

Fran Dittrich, MSU cross country coach, has three objectives for the coming 1967 season.

The first is to make his tenth year as head coach as successful as his first nine, the second is to fill four vacancies left by graduation and the third is to uphold the tradition of the cross country team.

During Dittrich's first nine years as cross country coach, his teams won the Big Ten title six times and finished second three times.

Possibly the biggest problem for his winning the title this year is replacing Dick Sharkey, Eric Zemper, George Balthrop and Art Link, Roger Merchant, Dean Rosenberg, Pat Wilson and Dale Stanley whom he has replaced. All four are juniors back from last year's squad.

According to Dittrich, there are eight sophomores trying for a starting spot. James Bastian, Gary Bisbee, William Bradna, Ken Leonowitz, Mike Murphy, Richard Stewart, William Wehmel and Dave Newly will all have a crack at the lineup.

"The team looks as strong as last year's team but with more depth," said Dittrich. "Practice is going well and there are very few injuries. The boys all look pretty good."

Dittrich will have no seniors on the team this year. It will be comprised of all sophomores and juniors.

There are 14 boys on the varsity squad and 11 on the freshman team.

Dittrich feels the success of the team will rest on the shoulders of the group of sophomores. They must fill the vacant spots and provide the competition for the starters.

Although he has not held a practice with the squad running against each other, Dittrich feels there will be no individual standouts. He did add that competition will do different things to different runners.

As far as competition, Dittrich feels there are three or maybe four Big Ten teams that will be tough to beat.

"Iowa, defending champions,

will have a real good team," he said. He said that Minnesota and Wisconsin will also have fine squads.

"Indiana is coming up," he concluded but added that he wasn't sure if this was the year for the Hoosiers yet.

The Spartan coach will have a chance soon enough to find out what kind of a team Indiana does have. The Spartan harriers open the season against their southern neighbors at home on Saturday, Oct. 7. Starting time is 10:30 a.m.

When the starting gun goes off, there will also be a new Big Ten rule going into effect. As of this year, all cross country teams will have to run a five mile course, one mile longer than in past years.

Dittrich said the reason is a result of the six mile distance the runners have to travel in the National meet. This distance also has been raised one mile in recent years.

The cross country team has been one of the most successful of all Spartan teams. In its fifteen year history, the team has never finished lower than second in the Big Ten meet.

Coach Dittrich will have an indication of whether or not the team will be able to uphold the tradition after the first meet.

- The 1967 schedule:
Oct. 7 Indiana (H)
Oct. 14 Wisconsin (A)
Oct. 21 Eastern Michigan (H)
Oct. 27 Notre Dame (A)
Nov. 4 Oakland Invitational at Rochester
Nov. 11 Minnesota (H)
Nov. 18 Big Ten Championship at Evanston, Ill.
Nov. 21 IC4A Meet at New York
Nov. 28 NCAA meet at Laramie, Wyo.

Harris scores 3 in 'S' soccer win

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Trevor Harris continued his high scoring soccer play Tuesday, scoring three goals as the MSU soccer team defeated Calvin College here, 7-1.

Harris scored five goals in the season opener Saturday against Purdue, and added an assist yesterday to give him nine total points for the season.

He scored first for the Spartans against Calvin, kicking in a shot from his outside left position at 19:50 of the first quarter. He added another goal in the second quarter and finished his scoring on a hard shot late in the third period.

Co-captain Guy Busch scored his fourth goal of the season by drilling in a pass from Harris in the second quarter. Calvin's John Lansma managed to beat the Spartan defense and goalie Joe Baum to make it 2-1, MSU, at 10:29 of the second quarter. That was as close as the Knights ever made it.

Co-captain Peter Hens headed in a corner kick at 14:25, then Harris followed with his second goal and sophomore Ernie Tuchscher scored on a sharp 45-foot kick to make it 5-1 at half time.

Harris gave the Spartans an insurance goal in the third quarter. He added another goal in the second quarter and in the final stanza with his first goal of the year.

A strong wind also was a factor in the scoring, as goalies had trouble clearing the ball on goal kicks and wind-blown shots often carried over the goal.

"Several different player combinations were used," Kenney said, "and we should be in good shape for the weekend game at Pittsburgh."

SWITCHES ROLE WITH JORDAN

Bailey to face top USC lineman

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

The kind of a job that faced MSU's defensive right tackle Nick Jordan last week belongs to his counterpart on the left side, Charlie Bailey, Saturday. It's the kind of job no defensive tackle looks forward to.

The problem is to get past a potential All-American offensive lineman into the opponents' backfield and then catch and bring down a back who runs the 100-yards in less than 10 seconds.

Last week Jordan found himself contending with Houston's Rich Stotter, an All-American candidate at guard, and trying to catch Warren McVea and Paul Gipson.

This week Bailey has the same job, with Southern California's

All-American tackle Ron Yary and backs O.J. Simpson and Mike Hull as the opposition.

Jordan fared quite well last week, getting credit for six assists on tackles.

Bailey made four unassisted tackles against Houston and was singled out by Coach Duffy Daugherty for playing an outstanding game.

This week he'll need another great effort, because Yary outweighs him by nearly 30 pounds. Bailey put on 10 pounds between seasons to reach 218 this year.

"You don't try to do anything different against guys like Stotter and Yary," Jordan said. "You just try to do the same things the best you can. It isn't a real big problem to be outweighed by a guy either. It's when they are big and have a lot of ability too, like Yary."

Jordan knows what it's like to be smaller than his opponent—he's only 233 pounds, not heavy for a defensive tackle. Yet, he is the Spartans' largest regular on defense.

Jordan and Bailey were both strong performers last year for the Spartans in their sophomore seasons.

He came to MSU from Ashland, Ky. where he was co-captain of the Paul Blazer High School team and an All-State selection in 1963.

He sat out a year here when he broke a foot before the season, but was granted an extra year of eligibility.

"Sitting out that year was a help to me, because I was a year older and a year stronger and I'd learned a lot about college ball," Jordan said.

Bailey turned in a sophomore season which nearly equalled Jordan's.

Playing for 185 minutes, Bailey ranked seventh in defensive statistics with 14 solo tackles and 24 assists.

Bailey is a native of Dayton, Ohio, where he was a high school teammate of Spartan Co-captain Drake Garrett and a friend of Garrett's since grade school.

At Dunbar High School in Dayton he played guard, gaining All-State and All-City honors.

Jordan's biggest asset is his strength, especially in the forearm which he uses to batter an opponent. Bailey is probably MSU's fastest interior defensive lineman and uses his speed to good advantage.

Yary is the key man in Southern Cal's offensive line, an All-America selection by United Press International, Time Magazine, the Sporting News, the Football Writers and Football Coaches.

USC's McKay expects close game with MSU

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Coach John McKay said Monday that the University of Southern California expected a close, hard game against Michigan State Saturday despite the Spartans' lopsided loss to Houston.

"Michigan State from our film viewing of the game against Houston dominated in every phase except scoring touchdowns, which is all important," McKay told the Southern California Football Writers Assn.

"I can't believe that 37-7 score," he added. "Michigan State moved the ball very well and lost. Fumbles, of course, played a key role and that doesn't mean that Houston didn't play a good game. It's a fine team and Warren McVea is an outstanding player. Every coach in the country has known that since he was in high school."

McKay said his Trojans were fortunate to win over a fine Texas team which displayed a strong defense and could "really dish it out."

But McKay said the Longhorns had set up their offense to run against the defense the Trojans had used the previous week, and his team changed it for Texas.

"The key to the game was that we were able to control the ball more," he said.

'S' 1-point underdog to Southern Cal

NEW YORK (UPI)—Top-ranked Notre Dame was made a 13-point favorite Tuesday over eighth-ranked Purdue in college football's top game Saturday.

Odds makers also made second-ranked UCLA a huge 21-point pick over twice-beaten Washington State while No. 3 Southern California surprisingly rated only one point better than Michigan State tied for 18th.

Fourth ranked Houston, which routed Michigan State last week, was a prohibitive 30-point choice over Wake Forest in a Friday night game. In another Friday night contest, Miami of Florida is a 10-point choice over Penn State.

The victory left the Twins one full game ahead of the Chicago White Sox, who played a night game against the Kansas City Athletics, and the Boston Red Sox, who lost 6-3 to the Cleveland Indians. Both Minnesota and Boston have but three games left.

Twins win

A meeting will be held for all freshmen interested in freshman basketball 4 p.m., Friday in Room 209 of Jenison Fieldhouse. Anyone not able to attend the meeting should contact Freshman Coach Bob Nordman.

A Varsity Club meeting will be held 7:30 tonight in the Varsity Club room.

Women graduate students and faculty women, who are interested in participating on recreational teams for volleyball and basketball on Thursday evening (games will be scheduled between 7-9 p.m.) are asked to call the Women's Intramural office for further information. The last day for joining a team will be Thursday, October 5 at 5 p.m.

A general meeting for all MSU coeds interested in the Green Splash will be held at 7 tonight in the Women's IM Building. The meeting will take place in Room 106.

The Green Splash is a women's synchronized swimming honorary. Membership is based on the ability of the individual girl.

The team holds an annual water show each spring followed by practice for intercollegiate competition. Last year's team placed high in the collegiate meet and will need new talent to make a repeat performance. At the end of the year will be an outdoor steak fry for all members.

For those interested, practices will be held Oct. 4 and 11 at 7 p.m. Tryouts will take place Oct. 18.

Grad Council to get complete constitution

The Committee for the Council of Graduate Students will meet tonight to draw up a final constitution, announced Stuart A. Bremer, chairman of the committee.

All interested grad students are invited to the meeting which will be at 8 tonight in 101 South Kedzie Hall.

Earlier this summer the committee was formed and an interim constitution drawn up.

Any department with graduate students will be entitled to have a representative on the council. "The purpose of the council will be to promote the academic, social and economic aims of grad students at MSU," Bremer said. "We hope to work out salary differences between departments for graduate assistants, work out the tuition scale for grads and get a good representation of the graduate students on the faculty committees."

The problems to be worked out

Wednesday include establishing a method of ratification for the constitution, working out guidelines for electing representatives and working out a final constitution, Bremer said.

'Mock riot' staged at Guard Armory

University police joined the mid-Michigan law enforcement chain earlier this week in a riot control exercise similar to one cancelled Sunday in Jackson.

Jackson City officials apparently were alarmed when it became known that the "mock riot would be held on city streets.

Committee posts open to students

Petitions for the All-University Student Judiciary and the newly formed Student-Faculty Judiciary will be available through Friday in 101 Student Services Bldg.

Positions for two juniors and two seniors on the Student-Faculty Judiciary and up to four students from all classes on the All-University Judiciary are available. Petitions are due Monday.

"We hope to establish a functional organization with as loose a structure as possible," he explained. "With such a structure we can expand and modify the council as the need develops."

Similar opposition arose in Lansing. The two day program was held at the National Guard Armory in Lansing.

An unruly, highly spirited mob composed of National Guard actors gathered at one corner of the National Guard Parking lot. At another corner were University police, joined by the East Lansing Police, Michigan State Police from the East Lansing Post, Lansing police, the Ingham County Sheriff's Dept. and the Michigan National Guard's 40th Infantry Division.

They approached each other; the officers in cadence, the demonstrators chanting, "Get the fuzz, get the fuzz," and swinging three foot long wooden clubs. The police and National Guard dispersed the mob, handcuffing a few and hauling them off.

The program also included "tear gas," in this case talcum powder, tactics and exercises in sniper fighting and fighting under riot conditions.

On the air

Jack Sanders, Okemos Junior, announces during a WMSN remote broadcast from the basement of the International Center Tuesday: WMSN broadcasted from the location from 1 to 5 p.m. during Welcome Week and also this Monday and Tuesday.

WMSN BEGINS SECOND YEAR

WMSN's experienced staff expands coverage

The all-campus radio station, WMSN, has opened its second year of operation with fresh ideas and expanded coverage.

John DeGroot, WMSN program director, has announced that the Michigan State News (MSN) now reaches all of the residence halls with the temporary exception of the Mason-Abbot, Phillips-Snyder complex which was completely rewired this summer.

"We're now in the process of tuning the dorms," DeGroot said. MSN is a network of the four on-campus radio stations tied together for better coverage. WMSN is the central station with WERS (Brody), WKME (Shaw) and WEAK (Wonders) serving as affiliate stations, DeGroot said.

MSN's expanded program schedule now includes the popular "Super six plus four" survey balanced with easy listening music during the weekday evenings. News is broadcasted on the hour with 14 minute reports at noon and 11 p.m. with an in-depth coverage report at 6:30 each evening.

The weekend's programming begins with "Dateline," 7-9 p.m. each Friday. "Dateline" combines rock and roll music with a matching service to help dateless male students to meet dateless coeds.

Next comes the "Feedback" show with Shane Miller playing popular music intermixed with phoned-in opinions and comments in the Joe Pyne tradition.

Saturday's music offers a mixture of rock and folk and winds up with the 9-12 p.m. "Radio Roulette" program which combines the efforts of the four network stations in playing requests.

The beat slows for Sunday with easy listening and classical music making the day's programming.

Sunday evenings feature the "Uniscene" program covering the significant events and questions on the university scene plus special features and guest interviews.

Asian plan gets fund aid

WASHINGTON — President Johnson asked Congress today to authorize a contribution of up to $200 million for new special funds of the Asian Development Bank.

The bank, a creation of Asian nations, sponsors industrial and agricultural projects.

Johnson attached some strings to his proposal. The money would be provided over four years, and none of it in the present fiscal year.

The United States must put in less than one-half of the total for the special funds.

U.S. contributions would be made available only for buying American goods and services for use in Asia, because of the balance of payments problem.

It is to be understood, Johnson stipulated, that self-help will be the watchword in programs to be undertaken and there must be an understanding that the special funds will supplement rather than supplant efforts of Asian countries to help themselves.

Johnson said the special funds he is requesting would go into such things as the development of the Asian equivalent of the Erie Canal, a transcontinental railroad, a land grant college system, and the Mekong River Basin.

Marriage on its way out, says British psychologist

LONDON — Engagement rings are doomed. White weddings will be rituals of the past. Couples will wed only after they've lived together. Who says all this? Psychologist James Hemming in "Marriage Guidance," official publication of Britain's Marriage Guidance Council.

Dr. Hemming says that to the next generation marriage will no longer be regarded as the only respectable way of having any sexual life.

"Social emphasis will not be on maintaining chastity at all costs," he contends.

Instead, couples will concentrate on "sincerity, mutual concern and responsible mate selection."

He does not prophesy that marriage will go completely out of style.

He says marriage will become "a social statement of intent, if and when partners desire it."

Miss Michigan tours 'U' campus

By PHYLLIS ZIMBLER
State News Staff Writer

"I should really call all my friends here," Miss Michigan, Toni Jo Abbenante said as she arrived at Student Services Building Tuesday.

Miss Michigan is on campus as part of the final two days of East Lansing's "Spartantown U.S.A." celebration.

Miss Abbenante graduated from Grand Rapids Junior College in June. She won the Miss Michigan contest held in Muskegon on June 24.

Since then she has made public appearances throughout Michigan. She represented Michigan in the Miss America Pageant held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, the first week of September.

Miss Michigan is majoring in speech and drama. She said she started in this field when her mother adamantly insisted she enroll in a junior high school speech class.

"I was against taking the course, but my mother insisted. I took two years of it and loved it," she said.

"Then I worked in a workshop for the Civic Theater in Grand Rapids. One day the director called me to take the place of a girl who had dropped out," she continued.

"After that first play, 'Enter Laughing,' I was in love with being in front of people and knowing I was pleasing them."

Miss Michigan said she wants to be a secondary teacher in speech and drama. She also hopes to continue her acting in community theaters.

"The one thing that I have learned since participating in the pageant is that people don't think. When I came back from the pageant, people would ask me why I hadn't won."

Miss Abbenante attended a two week speech and drama clinic at MSU the summer between her sophomore and junior years in high school. She stayed in Campbell Hall.

She hopes to enter Western Michigan University in January. She had enrolled there for this fall, but her participation in the Miss America pageant kept her from starting on time.

Now she has too many appearances scheduled to attend school this term. If she can keep her appearances to weekends after January, she said she will be able to go back to school. "I really miss being at school, especially in the fall, which is my favorite season. I love football and I haven't been able to see one game this year," she said.

Miss Abbenante toured the State News offices and the student radio station Tuesday afternoon. Greg Hopkins, president of ASMSU, presented her with a dozen long-stemmed roses when she visited the student government offices.

After touring the campus, Miss Michigan visited a Speech 101 class and answered questions concerning her reign as Miss Michigan and her participation in the Miss America pageant.

Miss Abbenante will be on MAC Avenue this afternoon to meet people and to help with the drawings for "Spartantown U.S.A."

Pensive Miss

Toni Jo Abbenante, 1967 Miss Michigan, was in a thoughtful mood during part of her tour of the State News editorial office Tuesday. She is in town to participate in "Spartantown" festivities.

Earn credits in living room

MSU is currently offering credit for television courses over several CBS stations.

Robert Magidoff, professor of Russian at New York University, will teach Comparative Literature 436. The course will trace the origins of Russian literature with an analysis of the major works of Dostoevsky and Tolstoy, among others.

English 862 will study the stream-of-consciousness novels in order to examine the inward-turning of fiction in our century. Leon Edel, Henry James professor of English and American Letters, New York University, will teach the course.

Further information can be obtained by contacting one of the continuing education centers or by writing University of the Air, 14 Kellogg Center.

Positions open

The Academic Coordinating Committee of ASMSU is looking for students to fill two of its positions. Petitions are available in the ASMSU main office, 308 Student Services Bldg., and must be returned by Oct. 6.

The coordinating committee will recommend two students from those petitioning for approval by the ASMSU Student Board. They are looking for students with time and interest in helping to establish student advisory committees in the various colleges and departments. They have already established such committees in the Colleges of Arts and Letters, Social Sciences and University College. Approximately five other colleges are in various stages of formulating committees.

Students are preferred with faculty and student contacts outside the colleges which already have committees.

Fire truck burns

Fire trucks responded to a call at Kedzie Hall Monday noon, but the fire was not in Kedzie Hall.

It was in one of the fire trucks. Wiring under the dashboard had caught fire causing about $50 damage, according to University police.

COLLEGE VOLUNTEERS

Students teach part-time

The Student Education Corps (SEC) is an organization of MSU students who devote some of their time to teach Michigan public school students and adults. Now in its sixth year, SEC was founded by David Gottlieb professor of sociology and education. It is the first and largest program of its kind. SEC was originally formed to aid under-achieving students, but has expanded to work with young people and adults on all intellectual levels. "Volunteers work about three hours per week usually," James Tanck, former director of SEC, said. In addition to working in 72 Michigan elementary, junior high and senior high schools, SEC volunteers have set up a training unit under the auspices of the Michigan Department of Corrections and an adult evening school in connection with the Lansing Board of Education. There are two themes underlying the philosophy of SEC, "One of the benefits of a college education is to share it with a little boy," and "the loss of an individual is too great a loss." So SEC volunteers stress sharing knowledge on a personal level. Not only is SEC work personally satisfying for the volunteer, Tanck pointed out, but it may also be a factor in improving town-gown relations. "We want to show the University community that college students do engage in worthwhile activities during their college careers," he said. About 1500 students participated in SEC last year.

Trio fined under liquor, litter laws

University police arrested three students Saturday morning. Monday, two men were arraigned and charged for being minors in possession of alcohol and the third for littering. Robert H. Kahl and Paul T. Patten, Flushing sophomores, were sentenced to three days in jail and paid fines and court costs of $50 each, University police said. Roger S. Werner, Kalamazoo senior, was fined $35 for littering, police said.

Free University enrollment opens

By ROGER ANDERSON
State News Staff Writer

The Free University offers informal, free, no-grade, non-credit courses in any course requested. Michael Lopez, New Haven, Conn., junior, and head of the Free University, announced that he is now seeking students with ideas for interesting courses and instructors with courses they would like to teach. The Free University is a semi-autonomous unit under the ASMSU Board. It will soon become an agency under the Student Academic Committee (SAC), a branch of ASMSU parallel to the Cabinet and concerned with all academic functions of ASMSU.

The Free University will help set up courses by passing out sign-up forms, setting up the course announcements, helping to obtain classrooms and providing a mimeograph service for those classes that need it. Class formats, where, when and how often the class meets, will be up to the students and the instructor of each course, he added.

"When students request a Free University class, it is hoped that a teacher will volunteer to teach it," Lopez said. If nobody does, the Free University office will try to find a volunteer instructor.

Professors, graduate students, or anyone with specialized knowledge who would enjoy teaching, may volunteer to the Free University, Lopez said. "We will try to find enough students interested in the course to make it worthwhile, in the teacher's opinion, to teach it," he said. "The theory behind the Free University," he said, "is that there are a number of topics which professors and students alike want to talk about."

Some of these topics are of a type not suited for a regular university course, such as a discussion of a single book, Lopez said. Others will be subjects not offered at MSU or subjects that students may not be able to work into their regular curriculum schedule.

"The course setup is a double volunteer system," Lopez said. "The teacher is unpaid and the students aren't getting credits."

"Our goal is to help students realize that learning and talking with faculty is not limited to the classrooms," Lopez said. "Our goal is also to make it as easy for a group of students to set up a class in an academic subject of interest to them as it is for them to form an intramural football team."

Past Free University classes have included Polish, a debate on the philosophy of Ayn Rand, a course on contemporary art, a poetry workshop and discussions on various books, novels and plays, he said.

Courses can be a single discussion or a series of meetings during the term. It's up to the students and instructors, Lopez added.

"In the past we have had more difficulty getting students to sign up for courses than in obtaining a teacher. Only one course has been cancelled for lack of a teacher," Lopez said.

Interested students and instructors with ideas for courses can contact Lopez at 326 Student Service Bldg., 3-6 p.m. Thursday or Friday, or at 353-2785 between 10 and 11 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Friday last day for IDs in Union

Students who had their identification card photos taken during registration should collect their IDs on the second floor of the Union before 4:30 p.m. Friday. After this date, the IDs will be distributed in Vault 3 of the Administration Building.

He will be tried in Ingham County Circuit Court Friday.

University police also reported that James W. Silbey, Flint junior, pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of being drunk and disorderly at the MSU-Houston game Saturday.

He paid $30 in fines and court costs at his arraignment in Lansing Township Justice Court.

Med school gets support

MSU's plan for a four-year medical school received further support today from the House of Delegates of the Michigan State Medical Society.

In the first major action on the medical school since last January, the delegates approved a resolution urging that Gov. Romney and the state legislature immediately implement proceedings and funds to make MSU a full college of medicine. The University currently offers only a two-year or "pre-clinical" program. In order to begin the four-year program, however, MSU officials have asked the Legislature for at least two major facilities, a clinical science building and a teaching hospital-outpatient center of about 300 beds. MSU officials consider these the minimum additions to the currently-planned Life Sciences Building needed to support a four-year, clinical program.

The State Board of Education last January approved the MSU request to expand to the four-year, degree granting school. However, there has as yet been no sign from Romney that he intends to put the MSU request on the agenda for the legislature to consider. The resolution of the House of Delegates of the Michigan State Medical Society was that "the Governor of the State of Michigan and the Michigan State Legislature be respectively requested to make the appropriation recommended by the State Board of Education at the earliest possible date to enable Michigan State University to proceed immediately with the expansion of the two-year College of Human Medicine to a complete college of medicine granting the degree of Doctor of Medicine." The resolution was introduced by Dr. Lawrence A. Drolett, delegate of the Ingham County Medical Society. Currently MSU medical students, numbering about 50, must finish their last two years of medical school at some other institution.

CUE reports on dorms,

 An all-University Committee on Residence Hall Programs, chaired by the Provost and consisting of representatives from the Offices of Student Affairs and Dormitories and Foods Services, and the Directors of Residence Hall Programs from each complex, would insure all-University coordination.
 To retain upperclassmen in the residence halls, CUE recommended that room scholarships be awarded to outstanding students who would assist in planning and conducting co-curricular programs.
 CUE was also quite aware and concerned about the overcrowded and often noisy situations in residence halls and urged the University to try every alternative within its financial means before overcrowding the residence halls in the future.

 It also recommended redesign of the halls for better study facilities, including separation of study rooms from sleeping quarters and properly equipped study carrels on each floor of a hall.
 CUE further recommended that the library be decentralized to serve the specific needs of the students in each complex.
 Because the committee felt that "a major hindrance to the further development of the University's programs in the fine and performing arts can be found in the inadequacy of the physical facilities provided for them," it called for the construction of a Fine Arts Center at the earliest possible time. First priority would be given to a theatre and large lecture-concert hall.

 Despite the many criticisms of the University College, the Committee on Undergraduate Education strongly supports the idea of a liberal and general education.
 "Not only are such programs vital to the education of free men and women, but they also serve to lay necessary foundations for the professional programs conducted by the University," it said.
 But the committee felt that the general education requirements should be more flexible and thus called for revision in the University College offerings.

 It suggested that a student be given an opportunity to choose between American Thought and Language (which should be revised to place more emphasis on writing skills) and a 100-level composition course conducted by the English department.
 CUE further recommended that a student be required to take only two other University College courses (from Natural Science, Social Science and Humanities).
 The remaining 12 credits of liberal education should be completed by taking the third University College sequence or in a liberal education field outside his department. The English or ATL course would be taken in a student's first year, the two University College courses in his second year, and the remaining 12 credits the third year.

'U' tuition opposition

 struck to me," he said.
 Carson also compared the program to tuition refund plans at private schools.
 "Trustees set the tuition level proper to maintain financial stability and then students from lower income families can apply for grants-in-aid," he said. "In a sense, this is what MSU is doing under its new tuition plan."
 "The system has much merit, and I personally like the idea," said John Hicks, assistant to the president at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., when questioned this summer.
 "The cost of higher education has become extremely burdensome on lower and middle income families and this seems to lighten the load of these groups."
 Max M. Hulliner, comptroller also at Purdue said he didn't know "if the additional income generated by the new plan would be worth the extra work and cost of implementation."

He added that the Board of Trustees should have reviewed the plan with other public Michigan universities before they approved it to insure a "somewhat compatible approach to financing higher education, in the whole state of Michigan."
 Neil C. Cafferty, vice-president for business and finance at the University of Wisconsin in Madison said he wanted to lower fees, but on a uniform basis.
 "We try to hold fees at 20 per cent of the cost of instruction," he said. "Then students with need can get help from scholarships and work programs."
 He added that MSU would have to experiment a little and only after a year could the plan be honestly evaluated.
 Officials at the University of Michigan declined to comment on the plan. The vice-president and chief financial officer, in his office when telephoned, referred the question to the vice-president of student affairs, Richard Cutler.

 Cutler's secretary said he preferred not to make a comment because of the similarity in problems between the two schools.
 William S. Kerr, vice-president and business manager at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., stressed that Northwestern's problems differ from the rest of the Big Ten schools, because it is not state-supported.
 With the cost of running large universities "skyrocketing," Kerr believes "MSU's new system might well set a pattern that other state schools could follow."
 Kerr also feels that the $1,200 tuition charge for out-of-state students is "fair enough."
 Northwestern charges $1,800 tuition for all students, with students paying an estimated 48 to 50 per cent of their education costs, according to Kerr.
 Officials at the University of Minnesota in Minnea, Minn., said they hadn't studied the plan fully enough so they "couldn't really make an evaluation."
 Laurence R. Lunden, vice-president of business administration at Minnesota, called the plan "intriguing" and said he had never encountered a similar plan before.
 Thursday: Comments about implementation of the plan and whether administrators would consider it at their universities.

Conflict of interest

 in public service," Kelley added.
 Hannah had asked Kelley specifically about interests in a public utility. Kelley ruled that since the rates of a utility, like Michigan Bell, are regulated by the state, and since it is legally required to provide a service upon request, no conflict of interest could be found.

One of the laws Kelley cited which prohibit state officers from areas of conflicting interests, a 1931 act, provides that anyone found violating it would be guilty of a felony and must resign his state job.
 However, Kelley cautioned against hasty prosecution, since legal clarification of the point by him has been pending for so long.
