

Draft dodgers range from hippy to Ph. D.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff writer Bob Zeschin recently traveled to Canada to interview men who have left the U.S. to avoid the draft. This is the second of a five-part series on who goes and why.

TORONTO—To say that there is a typical American draft dodger in Canada is like saying that there's a typical American draftee in uniform. There are far too many of them (an estimated 6,000-10,000) with far too many different characteristics to make any generalizations.

Some are bearded, scruffy hippies. Some are Philadelphia aristocrats. Some look as if they came straight from a church youth group meeting.

Some have Ph. D's in physics. Others are high school dropouts.

Some live in lush, high-rise apartment buildings. Some live five men to a $40-per month house, living "mostly on rice and spaghetti."

Some have wives and children. Others are alone.

In fact, the only universal characteristic among these Americans in Canada is an aversion to the U.S. Army.

Even here the motivations differ. Some are ardent pacifists, others are militantly anti-war. Some are ardent black power advocates, others are socialists and revolutionaries. Many just want to live their lives the way they wish, without outside interference.

Toronto is teeming with Americans avoiding the draft, as are Vancouver and Montreal. Most have left the United States permanently, to return would mean risking prison and a fine of $10,000.

Some come after careful investigation of the area, with jobs lined up and life's savings in their wallets. For them adjustment to the Canadian way of life is relatively easy. But many come with nothing at all. For them, the first step in Toronto after acquiring the "landed immigrant status" necessary for Canadian residence, is the Anti-Draft Union hostel on John Street.

The hostel, a large old house with an enormous poster of Bertrand Russell in the window, was begun last summer by Eric and Alma Marks, a young Florida couple. Most draft dodgers use the hostel only as a temporary headquarters, until they can line up jobs and apartments. Some stay with wives and children. The rate is a dollar a night.

Sleeping arrangements are casual. One girl shared a bedroom with three men, while her husband was in the U.S. Some sleep on beds, some on sofas, some on the floor.

The hostel is a good jumping-off spot, according to anti-draft leader Mark Satin. People meet others who have done the same thing and "lose the feeling of having done something criminal."

Bob Holoch, 21, of Brooklyn, came across on October 9. He was "just fed up with the U.S., the whole system." He had decided to come two months before that, but had no definite date in mind. "My parents tried to talk me out of it for weeks and weeks," he said. "But they finally said 'Good luck' and 'We hope it's for the best.' They're going to come up here for Christmas."

Dan Trumpler, 22, who graduated from Oberlin College in June, had similar cooperation:

"My dad gave me $100 and drove me right up to the border," he said. "He didn't agree with me, but he helped out, regardless."

Some had complete parental cooperation with what they've done, but others have been disowned. Most keep in touch with home. Parents are often discouraged from sending money to draft-dodging sons, as this is "aiding and abetting men avoiding the draft" and is subject to prosecution.

The immediate problems are getting established—finding jobs and permanent places to stay. Many firms with heavy American interests refuse to hire the draft dodgers. But many small businesses are sympathetic to the Americans.

"I lucked out," said Holoch. "The people have been very friendly and helpful. I got a job within a couple of weeks at a newspaper distribution center, and I haven't had any real problems so far. I guess I've been lucky."

Some don't work at all, but attend school. The University of Toronto openly admits to having more than 400 draft dodgers listed in their student body.

Most of the Americans questioned there said that they have absolutely no regrets about what they've done.

"I find the Canadian way of life much freer and more sensible," said Bob Katz, an ex-Chicagoan now working as a government employment counselor. "Even without the draft, I probably would have wound up right here in Toronto. I have no regrets."

"The really great thing about Canada," said Holoch, "is the complete lack of tension here. This lack of paranoia about money and communism and 'being different' is what first really hits you. You feel so relaxed here."

"This is the first time in my life I've felt like a human being," said Rudy Guy, 34, a Chicago-born Negro. "When I go to an apartment, the only thing they want to

Overnight policy called interpretative

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

An interpretive statement in the student handbook about "overnight visitation in living quarters of a member of the opposite sex" has been handled like a regulation, Eldon R. Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, said Monday.

ASMCU unanimously approved a Women's Inter-Residence Council (WIC) proposal last week asking deletion from the handbook two sentences that are "an interpretation attached to a regulation," according to Ruth E. Renaud, associate director of residence hall programs.

The two sentences read: "In housing not under the control of the University, students are expected to conduct themselves in keeping with standards acceptable to the University community. Overnight visitation in living quarters of a member of the opposite sex is not acceptable behavior." (p. 12 #3 part C).

Nonnamaker said the two sentences were included to give the University position that "It isn't acceptable behavior for an unmarried man and woman to spend the night together in an apartment."

"It's perfectly legitimate for WIC to ask for clarification," he added. "And now with the Academic Freedom Report, they can follow the suggested procedures."

At last week's ASMSU board meeting, Joan Aitken said there exists no written policy stating that a coed may not sign out to a man's apartment and thus the sign-out policy does not fulfill its purpose of protection for the coed.

Instead, the sign-out "policy" often "encourages dishonesty and results in inability to locate a coed if necessary," she said.

"Just because a coed stays overnight at a man's apartment doesn't mean she goes to bed with him," Miss Aitken said Monday. "And this is what the University is implying in the student handbook."

According to Nonnamaker and Miss Renaud, steps are now established that handle these two sentences as a regulation.

Greece accepts Turkish demands in Cyprus crisis

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—A political leader emerged from a meeting with Premier Suleyman Demirel Monday and said Greece had accepted Turkey's basic demands in the Cyprus crisis. He added that only differences over application of the agreement remain.

Irfan Aksu, chairman of the New Turkey party, and other opposition leaders met with Demirel during a recess in a Cabinet meeting called to discuss the latest Greek proposals. Demirel had called in all opposition leaders to get a national consensus.

Aksu said the Greeks had agreed to the key Turkish demand that Greece withdraw some 12,000 troops Turkey claims are stationed on the Mediterranean island nation in violation of the Zurich agreement setting up the independent Cyprus republic in 1960.

Greece agreed to pay compensation for the 25 Turkish Cypriots killed Nov. 15 in fighting with Greek Cypriot forces at two villages, Aksu added. This battle brought on the latest crisis.

Aksu said the Greeks had withdrawn Gen. George Grivas from Cyprus. The Turks blamed Grivas, a Greek who commands the Cypriot armed forces, for the attack on the villages and demanded his ouster. He has been in Athens since shortly after the crisis erupted.

The latest Greek proposals were brought to Ankara from Athens, by President Johnson's personal envoy, Cyrus R. Vance. Informed officials say the disagreements which remain are a matter of face-saving and timing. The substance of the diplomatic negotiations are being kept secret. However it is believed the remaining issues are:

—Will Greece begin withdrawing the troops on Cyprus first or will Turkey make a gesture to ease its powerful threat to invade Cyprus.

—How long a period will be allowed Greece to withdraw its troops from Cyprus.

Turkey has insisted all along that Greece make the first move.

Turkey made no move to remove the threat of armed invasion.

Turkish jets continued to fly over Cyprus and preparations were reported continuing to load equipment and men aboard the invasion fleet poised at Turkey's southern port of Mersin, 80 miles from Cyprus.

Vance was joined in his peacemaking efforts by NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio. Brosio, who first stopped in

DeGaulle terms Britain unready for Market entry

PARIS (AP)—Charles de Gaulle attacked the United States on two fronts Monday and declared Britain still isn't ready for entry into the European Common Market even though the British government has taken steps for financial order.

Hitting at the United States, the 77-year-old French president demanded a halt to what he called the abuse of U.S. industrial penetration of Europe with inflated dollars. And once more he blamed the lack of a peace settlement in the Middle East on the "odious" war in Vietnam.

U.S. officials in Washington said there would be no comment on De Gaulle's remarks made at one of his elaborately staged semiannual news conferences.

In London, British officials said De Gaulle's criticism would not lead to withdrawal of the application for membership for a place among the six members of the present Common Market.

"We formally applied to six nations for membership," one official said. "We await a reply from six nations."

De Gaulle needed Canada once again by renewing his appeals for French-Canadian separatism, a stand that created a storm when he visited French-speaking Quebec Province last summer.

Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, visiting in London, refused direct comment on that De Gaulle remark but said Canada's problems "are our problems, to be solved by us and not by outside intervention in our domestic affairs."

De Gaulle in effect vetoed Britain's immediate entry into the Common Market by refusing to approve negotiations on its application for membership.

De Gaulle blackballed the British when they first applied in 1963. Membership requires the unanimous approval of all six market nations—France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg.

The news conference—his 16th since he returned to power in 1958—gave De Gaulle the opportunity to present his first public reaction to Britain's devaluation of the pound sterling Nov. 18 from $2.80 to $2.40. Britain devalued in hopes of strengthening its financial situation.

Some French officials have said the devaluation was not enough to meet membership requirements as seen by France.

De Gaulle contended Britain's entry now into the Common Market would wreck it.

"The present Common Market is incompatible with the British economy the way it is," he said. "A radical transformation is needed for Britain to be able to melt into the Continent."

To even begin negotiations, De Gaulle said, would be to give advance approval for breaking up the European community.

"Everything depends, then, not at all on negotiations, which would be the death knell of the six... but on the action of the

U-M president to be speaker at graduation

Robben W. Fleming, who will become the ninth president of the University of Michigan on Jan. 1, will be the speaker at MSU's fall term commencement exercises at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Auditorium.

Fleming will receive the honor Doctor of Laws degree.

Degrees will be awarded to 1,413 students at the ceremony. The total includes 806 bachelor's candidates, 410 master's candidates and 131 doctoral candidates. In addition, the University will award 56 Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degrees, 7 Educational specialist degrees and 3 Diplomas for Advanced Graduate Study.

A well-known labor mediator who has served on several national boards and commissions, Fleming was chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Madison before being named to the presidency at the University of Michigan.

Fleming holds the B.A. degree from Beloit College and the Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Following legal work with the Securities and Exchange Commission and service in the U.S. Army, he became director in 1947 of the University of Wisconsin's Industrial Relations Center.

He joined the staff of the University of Illinois in 1952 as director of the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations and became a professor of law in 1958. He returned to Madison as chancellor in 1964.

Fleming was chairman of the 1962 Presidential Board which helped settle the dockworkers strike on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, and in 1966 he was elected president of the National Academy of Arbitrators.

Music for the commencement will be by the MSU Concert Band, conducted by Harry Begian, director of bands.

Presence of recruiters sparks war protest rally

A rally to protest the war in Vietnam will be held on campus at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

The appearance on campus of U.S. Navy and Marine Corps recruiters at the Placement Bureau sparked the demonstration, according to Brad Lang, sophomore member-at-large.

The rally will take place on the steps of Student Services Building on East Circle Drive. There will be rock and folk music and speakers.

Bertram Garskoff, assistant professor of psychology, and Chuck Larson, president of Wayne State University student government, will speak. Jim Thomas, East Lansing special student who was involved in the recent ROTC controversy, will also speak.

Lang, who said he is speaking as an individual and not as an ASMSU board member, will talk on the University's relationship with the recruiters.

Students for a Democratic Society (SDS)

is sponsoring the rally. In a flyer distributed Monday, SDS said they hope the armed forces representatives will agree to take part in the public dialogue and debate on the issues concerned with the U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

"These are the men who can answer, if anyone can, our questions about the nature of their jobs and their reasons for being on our campus," the flyer said.

"It may be that these men will decline to meet with us on the grounds that they are here not to discuss, but to recruit, and they have no time for students who are not interested in being recruited," the flyer continued. "We cannot accept this reasoning... the tradition of free inquiry is still alive in the University."

"If the Navy and the Marines come to our campus, they must be ready to answer students' questions—all students' questions, not just the questions of those who want to go to work for them."

U.S. military personnel are forbidden by law to participate in political activities.

Later library hours

The library will be open until 1 a.m. tonight through Dec. 6.

All of the resources will be available during the additional hours. The assigned reading room will close at 12:30.

RESIGNATION SOUGHT

Draft director criticized

WASHINGTON, P. --The dispute between Rep. John E. Moss and Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey flared again Monday when the California Democrat rejected the draft director's defense of his actions and called again for Hershey's resignation.

"Your response further supports my opinion that you are no longer fit to serve as the director of the Selective Service System," Moss told Hershey in a letter dated Nov. 22 and released Monday.

Moss, who heads the House government information subcommittee, had told Hershey in a Nov. 17 letter that he should resign for recommending to local draft boards that they remove exemptions of students involved in antidraft demonstrations.

Moss had criticized Hershey earlier for refusing to make public the names of local draft board members.

In making his new attack on Hershey, Moss made public a Nov. 21 letter he received from Hershey in which the draft director argued his action carries out the mandate of Congress. "I believe that had you taken the trouble to have looked into this matter you would have found that all the questions that you have raised were resolved by specific actions of the Congress in the recent extension of the Selective Service induction authority," Hershey wrote.

He added that in administering the draft law "I must be guided to a large extent by the intent of the Congress" as gathered from such things as the committee report, floor debate and a Nov. 16 statement by Chairman L. Mendel Rivers D-S.C., of the House Armed Services Committee endorsing Hershey's directive.

"I know of no more accurate reflection of the intent of the Congress than the statement of the chairman of the committee with jurisdiction over Selective Service," Hershey concluded.

But Moss told Hershey "I am sure you learned long ago that a statement by a member of Congress--regardless of his position--long after the enactment of legislation, is not and cannot be a binding interpretation concerning the law previously adopted."

Moss said that provisions of the 1967 draft act, including those involving interference with draft operations, "should be measured and punished under, and be subject to the criminal procedures and protections of the criminal law; and that neither you nor the local Selective Service boards have any authority to use the draft classification process as a device to punish a person for expressing his views or even for violating the law."

"Again, I believe you should immediately resign and allow one who has respect for, and an understanding of, the principles of our constitutional system to assume the most urgent and meaningful duties which you are now so inadequately performing."

Moss renewed his previous charge that Hershey is acting "as judge and jury in determining whether a person is innocent or guilty of violating a law" and using "Selective Service System machinery to blackmail college students and others into 'conforming.'"

Hershey is 74 and has been Selective Service director since 1941.

MALAYSIA RIOTS

Police break up Chinese leftists

PENANG, Malaysia. -- Police made mass arrests Monday in an effort to break up leftists and gangster-type Chinese secret societies accused of triggering three days of racial riots in Malaysia.

Curfews were imposed in Penang and the capital, Kuala Lumpur, 180 miles south of here, after rioting between Malays and Chinese beginning Friday took 11 lives and left nearly 200 injured, 93 seriously.

The government reported 419 persons, including about 300 Chinese, have been arrested throughout Malaysia under the Internal Security Act, which provides for indefinite imprisonment without trial. Another 270 were detained as curfew violators.

In Penang and the neighboring mainland port of Butterworth, police arrested 29 persons, including 191 Chinese and 78 Malays.

In Kuala Lumpur, where police credited the mass arrests with preventing a general strike, 106 persons, including 99 Chinese, were detained. Eighteen persons were arrested elsewhere in Malaysia.

Tun Abdul Razak, deputy prime minister, told a news conference in Kuala Lumpur that 22 homes, two shops and a factory had been burned in the riots in Penang and Butterworth over the weekend.

He proclaimed the security situation "well under control" in Penang and Kuala Lumpur.

Razak devoted most of his news conference to an attack on the left-wing Labor party, whose top leaders have been arrested, accusing them of instigating the racial riots.

He said numerous subversive documents, including books containing thoughts and speeches of Red China's party Chairman Mao Tse-tung had been found in party offices that were raided by police in Kuala Lumpur and Penang.

He said one poster urged that Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman be hanged.

In Penang, police said their arrests included 64 members of the Chinese secret societies. They confiscated an arsenal of weapons, including spears, long sword-like knives known as parangs, slingshots with metal ball bearing missiles and steel hooks from members' homes. These types of weapons were used during the riots.

Razak said similar weapons also were found in the leftist Labor party offices in Kuala Lumpur.

Thousands of steel-helmeted riot police and soldiers armed with rifles patrolled the streets of Kuala Lumpur, some in armed personnel carriers. But as a general strike called by leftists fizzled out, most of the security units were withdrawn to outlying areas.

Only scattered incidents were reported in Penang and other cities Monday.

Police said they felt tension between Malays and Chinese would likely relax now that action had been taken against the secret societies and leftist groups.

Violence broke out when the Labor party called a demonstration to protest the devaluation of that part of the currency which is backed by the pound sterling. The protests soon turned into racial riots between Chinese and Malays, the two largest population groups.

Israeli recognition key to peace

Peace in the Middle East will not be achieved until the Arab states officially recognize Israel as a political state, members of a faculty panel discussion said Tuesday.

The meeting, sponsored by the College of Social Sciences, included Thomas H. Green, assistant professor of political science, presented the Israeli position in discussion of the Middle East dispute. He said the militarism of the Arab states is one of the main reasons the Arabs have not been able to negotiate with Israelis.

"Arab politicians cannot be moderate toward Israelis or they would be in danger from their own militaristic hierarchy," Green said.

He added that the United Nations Special Commission to Palestine, which was in charge of settling territorial disputes in 1947, was boycotted by the Arabs while the Israelis cooperated with the commission. This resulted in advantageous land distribution for the Israelis, Green said.

Alan W. Fisher, instructor of history, presenting the Arab side of the dispute, said the Arabs, who had inhabited Palestine for more than 1,000 years previous to the 1947 partition, see the Israelis as "race supremacist settler groups."

Fisher added that the United States and British press have not provided the public with the real Arab point of view.

"All the West recognizes is that the status quo must be maintained," he said. "This jeopardizes Western relations with the Arab world."

Britain's Market entry still faces DeGaulle

LONDON — The British government remained firmly committed Monday to seeking Common Market membership despite President Charles de Gaulle's refusal even to negotiate Britain's bid.

"We formally applied to six nations for membership, we await a reply from six nations," one official commented.

There was no immediate formal comment on the general's news conference statement about British efforts to join the six-nation European Economic Community. Government spokesman said a text of De Gaulle's remarks is awaited for a detailed study.

Government officials said, however, that at first glance they found ambiguity and lack of clarity in much of what he said.

De Gaulle at one point said: "The present Common Market is incompatible with the British economy the way it is."

A British informant commented that a long time will pass before the British economy can possibly be merged with the Common Market.

"We are now in the prenegotiation stage," he said. "Then comes the negotiation period, which will be followed by the ratification stage and finally the transition period in which we hope to negotiate for the changes needed in Britain. All that will cover a good, long chunk of time. By that time our economy has got to be in good shape whether we are in the Common Market or not."

The British informant said Britain has no more desire than De Gaulle to destroy the European community but fails to see how negotiations will bring that about.

De Gaulle also said: "All depends, then, not at all on a negotiation . . . which would be the death knell of the community, but on the action of the great English people to make itself one of the pillars of a European Europe."

The British source took this to be a veiled threat to France's five partners in the community, Belgium, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, that if they press France too hard for the start of talks with the British, a breakup of the Common Market might follow.

In London for a luncheon given in his honor by the Lord Mayor, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson of Canada today called France "short-sighted and wrong" in blocking British entry to the European Common Market.

Pearson also indirectly accused President Charles de Gaulle of weakening the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and meddling in Canadian domestic affairs.

Pearson did not mention France specifically in this context, but his meaning was unmistakable.

He made similar indirect reference to De Gaulle's call for a "free Quebec" when Pearson said Canada's problems "are our problems, to be solved by us and not by outside intervention in our domestic affairs."

Cigarette findings released by FTC

WASHINGTON — Marvel filter cigarettes had the least tar and nicotine of 59 brands it tested, the Federal Trade Commission said Monday.

A nonfilter, king-size Chesterfield was ranked highest in tar and the same type Raleigh had the most nicotine, the report showed. But filter types also were among those with the highest tar and nicotine contents.

Two of the five commission members — chairman Paul Rand Dixon and A. Everett MacIntyre — questioned the validity of the findings, however. They said there should have been greater uniformity in the butt lengths to which the same cigarettes were smoked.

And a tobacco industry association called the tests meaningless. The FTC, in the first such study it has made, tested 100 cigarettes of each variety on newly installed laboratory equipment.

The report was made public by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the consumer subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee.

He said the panel is exploring the possibility of having the report findings displayed voluntarily by those selling cigarettes.

VC reject peace plan

TOKYO — The Viet Cong has rejected an offer by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu to hold peace talks early next month, Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency — (VNA) — reported Monday.

The Viet Cong said Thieu was "not qualified to represent anybody," and added: "So long as the U.S. aggressors continue to rule over South Vietnam and a puppet administration remains in power, there can be no real peace even for one day."

But the Viet Cong did not make clear if it was rejecting a possible direct approach from Thieu or was referring to the South Vietnamese president's promise to send a letter to North Vietnam proposing peace talks.

The South Vietnamese government said in Saigon on Nov. 18 that Thieu would send a letter to North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh early in December proposing the talks.

The Viet Cong's rejection, made by its official Liberation Press Agency, did not mention North Vietnam. But it did mention the Nov. 18 date.

"The proposal for holding peace talks in the early days of December made by the Saigon stooge, Nguyen Van Thieu on Nov. 18, is but a replica of the U.S. peace hoax," said the Viet Cong.

VNA, monitored in Tokyo, rebroadcast the rejection. The Viet Cong reiterated its claim that it was the only "genuine" representative of the people of South Vietnam.

North Vietnam has not yet rejected Thieu's proposal.

Complications in Complex proposal

Some students just never tire of the possibilities of playing with MSU's three-year-old student government structure as if it were a tinkering toy.

Certainly there are flaws in ASMSU's make-up, just as there are flaws in any relatively new organization that take time to be sifted out and eliminated.

But it is highly doubtful that the petition currently being circulated to change the make-up of the ASMSU Student Board would do anything constructive to eliminate any of these defects or improve the board.

On the contrary, the proposal to substitute on-campus representatives from each of the five residence hall complexes for the current members-at-large seems to be a hastily drawn-up and ill-conceived plan. The few positive benefits it might bring are vastly outweighed by the damage it would do to the structure of ASMSU.

With five complex representatives and one representative from all unsupervised housing on the board, as proposed in the petition, the balance of the board would be unduly shifted in favor of the on-campus students.

Not only would the petition deprive off-campus, sorority and fraternity students of equal representation, but also it would effectively prevent any qualified candidates living in these areas from serving on the student board. And because most upperclassmen tend to move off-campus anyway, the result of the petition's proposed change would be younger and more inexperienced candidates for the student board.

A further adverse effect of the proposal could come in the area of female representation. Under a change in the ASMSU board structure last year, there is currently one female representative-at-large elected to the board. While giving the West Circle Complex a board member would insure continuation of one female representative, it would unfairly discriminate against qualified coeds living in other parts of the University.

The only real argument in favor of the proposal is that it would tend to tie the board closer to the students in the dorm complexes. But the lack of communication by the board so far is more a problem of individuals than of structure. And there is no guarantee that even a new complex-tied structure would in any way alter the performance of the board members.

The unfortunate part of this petition is that, like almost every other petition that is couched in terms of attacking ASMSU, it is practically assured of the necessary 3,100 signatures required for an all-University referendum. And with the large majority of voting in referendums done by on-campus students, the proposal stands a good chance of passage.

It is only regrettable that students who truly are interested in improving ASMSU, and who have the experience and knowledge necessary to take part in formulating such improvements, were not consulted when this petition for change was drawn up.

Change merely for the sake of change is rarely a sound procedure. In this case, passage of the petition's proposal would seem to have a more negative than positive effect, perhaps giving rise to a narrowing provincialism in student government.

McCarthy and a dignity

Within the next couple of months you will probably be running into people asking who is this Senator Eugene McCarthy and what does he think he is doing. Well he's that scholarly, intellectual peace candidate and he is trying to do something considered impossible by those who believe themselves in the know--challenge the incumbent president in the primaries for the presidential nomination.

In Democratic circles this phenomenon is frightening. At least we can hope it is. With Johnson's record plurality vote in '64 most Democrats grew to believe their position in Washington was rather permanent. But as the 1966 election illustrated the American people had no such thing in mind. Then with McCarthy suddenly standing up and being counted as something more than a Democrat, party leaders see an unexpected fight on their hands.

Commentators, anti-war demonstrators, intellectuals and those with high hopes have urged the Republicans to produce a peace candidate to run against the President, but it had not been expected that the Democrats themselves would become involved in a fight within their party convention. The courage shown by Sen. McCarthy is commendable.

Not only has he openly challenged one of the strongest Presidents of the century, but he has questioned what has become almost a sacred institution--the Vietnam War. Up to this point it appeared that the only consistent group against the government's policies in Southeast Asia were the "hippies," and they have fallen into decline recently.

No single person, in either party, had declared himself "a peace candidate," but McCarthy has done just that. He happens to believe there is something more important than supporting your country's government simply because it is your country's government. He thinks he is obliged to speak out against what he considers injustice. "There comes a time when an honorable man simply has to raise the flag," he says.

McCarthy is a rather experienced man when it comes to elections and he isn't about to waste a good portion of one year running for a position with little support. He has concluded that the American people will support him. And well he may. The people complain of rising taxes needed to pay for the war, engage themselves in a debate over the draft law and demonstrate in the streets in rising numbers.

A man of McCarthy's stature has brought something desperately needed in the protest against the war--dignity. Americans, with and without beards, can now organize their energies behind one man, rather than among a hundred disorganized groups. And a protest within the Democratic Party and in direct competition with the man who represents the Vietnam War to Americans will count much more than what the Republicans will probably produce for the election.

Presently he plans to enter at least four primaries next spring, including the nation's first in New Hampshire. Some of his opposition within the Democratic party estimated last week that by the time McCarthy enters the convention in the summer he may have over a third of the total votes. That's cheering news.

It will be nice to see a national figure indulging in something else than waving the flag for all to see. Some believe that the Vietnam issue has been well-aided. But it hasn't. The McCarthy candidacy will provide the means for that airing.

With a President who is so conscious of his public image and the daily popularity pools it is not inconceivable that generous support for McCarthy may be first noticed, in the changing attitude of the President toward the war. If this does occur then McCarthy will serve his purpose.

Somehow our dating just doesn't seem right.

The making or breaking of a candidate 1968

The die has been cast, now only time will tell if Governor Romney will get stuck in the mud on the banks of the Rubicon.

Until Romney's formal announcement last week that he is officially running for the Republican Presidential nomination, his efforts to make himself a nationally known figure were questionable. The image he presented was at best a hazy one. And several statements have caused him to be characterized more than once with a foot firmly implanted in his mouth.

However the race is still young. The former president of American Motors could pull this one out of the red too. After all, so far he has an undefeated political record. This time, however, it will take a concerted effort amounting to a complete reversal of his present approach.

The major task facing the Governor is clarifying, or rather taking, a stand on the key issues. His current comments on the morality of the nation and the morass of Vietnam are sufficiently ambiguous to mean almost nothing, while confusing almost everyone.

The coming presidential campaign will be one in which the electorate will scrutinize particulars. A candidate will not be able to indulge in the usual generalities, and a man who has had as much trouble as Romney has in making his views clear to the national press is placing himself in a less than enviable situation.

After his re-election last November, Romney was the leading candidate for the Republican nomination. Now he is running second or third and losing his wind.

If Romney is to become as serious a candidate as he proclaims he is, then he will have to emerge somehow from the murky residue of his past public statements. And that will be quite a job, by George.

Take a friend

Students have an excellent opportunity in the next few days to show the need for extended library hours. Under a trial period through Dec. 6, the library will be open until 1 a.m. With term papers due and finals approaching, it might be a good time to start a take-a-friend-to-the-library-between-eleven-and-one campaign.

As a footnote, the library itself has not publicized the trial hours. In examining the hours signs in the library, one finds no indication of the 1 a.m. closing.

Nevertheless, if the response to the experimental run is sufficient, the hours may be extended permanently. This would be invaluable in making the library resources more available to those who need them most--students.

MSU: a political pawn

To the Editor:

This is the time that students, faculty and administrators must stand together against those who would make the University a pawn on the political chessboard. How long must the University be made to suffer while the political non-educators of the Board of Trustees maneuver for control of the University?

Obviously the real question here is not one of conflict of interest, but rather the University's relationship to the state. In other areas of public education special taxes usually on property are earmarked for educational purposes. Consequently, the local legislative body--such as a City Council--has no direct influence over the local board of education. Thus the educational system, while dependent upon the people for its support, is relatively separate from the other branches of government. However, in the case of a public university, the situation is quite different. The University is dependent upon the state legislature for most of the monies used to maintain the educational institution. The University must maneuver for "court (legislative) favor" thus curtailing its intellectual freedom and dignity.

The legal entity of the University is the Board of Trustees--they have the final say in all matters concerning the University. The Board consists of partisan politicians elected by the people of the state--hence the "state university" is controlled by the "people." Further, the Board of Trustees--as the legal body--is responsible for the maneuvering and the image of the University to the legislature. According to Trustee Clair White--the issue (the May conflict of interest) damages the University's relationship with the legislature.

Who has created this issue? Who has dragged Mr. May's name through the mud even before an official ruling by the Attorney General? Who has prejudged Mr. May and tried him in the press? Doesn't Mr. May qualify under the Academic Freedom Report?

In conclusion, we as students of Michigan State University feel that the Board of Trustees has acted in bad faith in this matter and call on them to re-evaluate their position in regard to the people who comprise the University--the STUDENTS, FACULTY and ADMINISTRATORS.

MAY the best man win!

Crazy spelling

To the Editor:

The East Lansing Street Department is not the only one in error about the name of our third president. Theophilus C. Abbot had only one "t" in his first name, though State News of November 21 gives him two while criticizing East Lansing for adding an extra "t" to his last name.

Your photographer might be interested in the spelling of "Forest" along Forest Road between Beaumont Road and College Road, by the WKAR transmitter and the Swine Research Center. Unless the signs have been changed since this summer, there is an extra "r" on some of them but not on others.

BRENNER ELECTED CAPTAIN

Lee named Spartans' MVP

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

Dwight Lee received the Governor of Michigan Award as the Spartan football team's most valuable player for the 1967 season, and Al Brenner was elected captain for next year at the team's annual awards banquet Monday night at the Union.

In other announcements Monday senior defensive end George Chatlos was the only Spartan named to the Associated Press All-Big Ten first team. Four other Spartans were given honorable mention honors.

Receiving honorable mention from MSU were defensive half-back Drake Garrett, Brenner, linebacker Charlie Bailey and center Ron Ranieri.

Other awards presented at the banquet were to team co-captains Tony Conti and Drake Garrett and senior defensive end Bob Lange.

Lange received Dr. Hannah's Award for "perseverance shown in efforts for the football squad," Conti the Patsy Ross Award for the senior who combines athletic and academic ability, and Garrett the Oil Can Award for the player who contributes most in a humorous way to the team.

Garrett received the award for the third straight year, and was the first Spartan ever to do so.

Lee, New Haven senior, was MSU's leading rusher this season with 479 yards and ended a three-year career as a starter for the Spartans against Northwestern Saturday with touchdown runs of 93 and 54 yards.

Brenner, Niles junior, had started at offensive right end, and was the leading pass receiver for MSU this season.

Minnesota and Purdue, two of the three teams who tied for the Big Ten championship, each placed four members on the AP all-conference team. Indiana, the third member of the championship trio, placed three men on the squad.

Purdue selections were quarterback Mike Phipps, half-back Leroy Keyes and fullback Perry Williams on offense and middle guard Chuck Kyle on defense.

Other first team offensive selections were end John Wright of Illinois, tackle Dick Himes of Ohio State, guard Bruce Gunstra of Northwestern and halfback Ron Johnson of Michigan.

Defensive selections were guard Tom Domes of Wisconsin and linebacker Ken Criter of Wisconsin, and defensive backs Ron Bess of Illinois and Tom Garretson of Northwestern.

FCA holds 'Sports Night'

By DON DAHLSTROM
State News Sports Writer

"We all have a calling in life, and our job is to be the best possible at this calling."

This was the message given by junior Bob Super, chairman of MSU's student chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) to the "Big Brothers" and their "Little Brothers" of the Lansing area at the first annual Sports Night in the Men's I.M. building recently.

"We are all given something to attain," Super said. "We must work to perfect this goal. We have to have dedication and want to be the best we possibly can at this job."

"For football players here at MSU, like myself, football is our job for this short time. We want and try to be the best football players possible."

The Sports Night was an opportunity for the "Little Brothers" to meet athletes at MSU, talk to them about sports, and get autographs.

The program consisted of exhibitions from varsity sports given by Fellowship members.

Baseball players, under the direction of Coach Danny Litwiler, gave a sliding demonstration.

Several gymnasts demonstrated movies in floor exercise and still rings.

Fresh Basketball Coach Bob Nordmann had several varsity players go through various warm-up and agility drills.

Football players gave kicking and passing exhibitions.

Wrestling Coach Grady Penfinger had Dale Anderson and Dale Carr discuss and display wrestling holds.

The final exhibition was in diving, performed by six swimming team members under diving Coach John Naricy.

The number of athletes involved in FCA since its beginning at MSU less than two years ago has risen to about 40, according to Rev. Don Ward, one of the group's three advisors.

Rev. Ward is affiliated with the United Ministries in Higher Education and is also the chaplain for the varsity football team.

The other two advisors are Dave Kaiser, coordinator for the Ralph Young Scholarship Fund and Don Adams, head of residence halls at MSU.

The athletes meet on Wednesday nights. The football team members in FCA hold additional meetings every Friday evening in the fall.

The group is completely voluntary and inter-denominational. It has three goals: (1) Christian growth through the two common interests of athletics and religion; (2) service through the church of one's choice; and (3) witnessing to junior high and high school groups.

There are also about 35 coaches and businessmen in the Lansing area who are members of the local group including Gov. Romney, Athletic Director Biggie Munn has twice been the national president of FCA. Basketball Coach John Benington is the chapter's chairman.

TERRY BIDIK

Cougars sign former 'S' booter

Terry Bidiak, captain of the 1966 MSU soccer team, signed a one year contract last week with the professional Detroit Cougars of the United Soccer Assn.

The former Spartan right half-back is currently assisting MSU Coach Gene Kenney as team manager, but will report to Cougar camp in February for a two month training program in Jamaica.

"We saw Terry play in an exhibition team earlier this fall and were very impressed with his temperament and ability to learn and perform," a Cougar official said. "We feel he can work into our plans for the coming season."

Bidiak played three years of varsity soccer at MSU and was named to the All-American team for two seasons. During his varsity career here, the Spartans compiled a 27-1-2 record. He was also named to the NCAA All-star team in 1964 and 1965.

A physical education major, Bidiak will graduate at the end of this year. He will then join the Cougars in their early spring training.

The Cougars have now signed ten players for their 32 game 1968 season, which is scheduled to open in April. Bidiak is the second North American citizen on the team. Under association rules, each team must have at least three citizens.

Cougar Coach Len Julians returned from a European trip and signed four international soccer players. An international player is the equivalent of a 1-2-3 football player in this country.

Bidiak, a native of Toronto, Ont., played for the Ukrainian team that won the Canadian National League title in 1963 and played for the Chicago Wings this past fall.

Pistons trade for 6-8 forward

DETROIT (UPI)—The Detroit Pistons moved to strengthen their rebounding corps Monday by acquiring 6-foot-8 forward Len Chappell from the Cincinnati Royals.

Among the shortest clubs in the National Basketball Association, the Pistons surrendered a third-round draft choice plus cash for the five-year journeyman.

Chappell, who was to join the club in Boston for Tuesday's game with the Celtics, has a 9.3 career scoring average.

Officials critical of gold standard

WASHINGTON — A return to a gold monetary standard as suggested Monday by French President Charles de Gaulle is considered impractical, if not impossible, by U.S. officials.

Such a move, it is felt in some quarters, could lead to a contraction in world trade, increased unemployment and sharp swings in domestic economic activity.

Some officials express doubt that even De Gaulle really would welcome a return to a strict gold standard where currencies can be exchanged freely for gold.

This could create a run on French gold, now the second largest stockpile in the free world at $5.2 billion. The U.S. stockpile is about $13 billion.

At the present price of $35 an ounce, the free world's supply of gold, listed by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) at roughly $43 billion in official government holdings, would be far from sufficient to finance world trade.

Money reserves of the more than 100 nations which belong to the IMF now total $71 billion and arrangements have been made to increase the supply when and as it is needed to finance more trade.

U.S. officials noted that France concurred in that arrangement although the new money, if it's created, would be linked in no way with gold.

At his Paris news conference, De Gaulle said devaluation of the British pound from $2.80 to $2.40 may lead back to the gold standard.

The U.S. Treasury Department declined to comment officially on De Gaulle's remarks.

But U.S. officials oppose any return to the gold standard. In some quarters it is thought De Gaulle's remarks may have been at least partly political since they were coupled with this statement: "There is an American takeover of our business but this doesn't come as much from the structural superiority of the United States as it does from exportation of inflated dollars."

A return to the gold standard could conceivably cut U.S. investments abroad.

Officials said a strict gold standard would mean also that all countries must be willing to buy and sell gold at a fixed price and the United States is now the only nation doing so, at $35 an ounce.

As a country's gold supply dwindles, the amount of its currency would also theoretically dwindle or its value would be cut.

Since 1934 when the United States changed to a modified gold standard, individual Americans have been barred from hoarding gold. Only foreign central banks can exchange their dollars for U.S. gold.

This is called the gold exchange standard and the U.S. policy of buying and selling at $35 an ounce was confirmed by President Johnson only moments after the British devaluation on Nov. 18.

The gold bullion standard is also a part of U.S. policy and now provides that each dollar bill is backed by 25 cents in gold.

Some officials view this as unnecessary and a move is now afoot to remove this gold cover.

The United States, the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland are the only major countries with some type of gold backing for their domestic currency.

The gold exchange standard has given the American dollar unparalleled prestige abroad and many countries hold dollars as reserves.

Gallup poll shows LBJ popularity gain

PRINCETON, N.J. — Approval of the way President Johnson is handling his job has shown an upward trend for the first time since the June summit talks, according to the latest Gallup survey.

According to Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, 41 per cent of persons interviewed in a nationwide poll now approve of the way Johnson is handling his job.

This represents an increase in Johnson's popularity from September and October polls conducted by Gallup in which only 38 per cent of those responding approved the President's performance.

Gallup said that Johnson also seems to be winning back disaffected Democrats.

The subject of this month's column is not a paperback, and, in a sense, it is required reading. Required reading, that is, for all who are concerned about their own and their nation's future: about the quality of American life in the 60's, 70's, and beyond.

To Seek A Newer World, by Senator Robert F. Kennedy, is a book which poses a simple question: "Whether we are prepared to dare" — dare to admit the failure of enshrined policy when necessary, dare to try bold new approaches that keep pace with "the whirlwind of change and hope and progress."

The question is simple, but our problems are awesome and complex. As Senator Kennedy states a few of them:

"We are the most powerful nation on earth; yet our young men struggle and many die in a war in a small, far-off country where our power often seems impotent."

"We have passed civil rights legislation of a reach and detail unknown since the Civil War; yet never has there been a greater sense of alienation and more open hostility between the races."

"We have found material wealth far beyond our dreams of a few years ago; yet perhaps we count the wrong things, for the forms of new wealth seem to destroy many pleasures as they give."

These, and other problems among peoples, countries, and generations, cannot be dealt with in generalities. To Seek A Newer World is filled with Senator Kennedy's specific recommendations for legislative and executive action — and for your individual action. Significantly, the book begins with an appeal to, and on behalf of, youth.

"The gap between generations will never be completely closed. But it must be spanned; for the bridge across the generations is essential to the nation in the present; and more, it is the bridge to our own future — and thus to a central sense, to the very meaning of our own lives."

"Today's young people... demand a limitation upon excessive power. They demand a political system that preserves the sense of community among men. They demand a government that speaks directly and honestly to its citizens."

It is Senator Kennedy's clear-cut demonstration that these goals are possible — through joint and personal effort — that makes To Seek A Newer World one of this decade's most important and wide-ranging statements of national strategy and purpose.

To Seek A Newer World by Robert F. Kennedy is published at $2.95 by Doubleday & Company, Inc., Garden City, New York. You'll find it at one of the best equipped bookstores in the country — your own college store.

METRO: urban game

The METRO project (Michigan Effectuation, Training and Research Operation) is something like a computerized game of Monopoly, only more sophisticated. Falling under the heading of gaming-simulation in urban research, the project tests "real world" problems and solutions with the actual decision-makers involved.

Developed at MSU, METRO proposes to parallel actual conditions of the city of Lansing, with its players assuming various roles such as politicians, planners, educators and contractors.

Anyone can play, according to Richard D. Duke, director of the Urban and Regional Research Institute. "It is merely a matter of role-playing—tell a guy that he is a politician and before long he is behaving just like a politician," he said.

METRO is an outgrowth of a similar gaming project called Metropolis which was conceived by Duke in 1963 and designed for use in training students in urban planning. Metropolis familiarizes the student with some of the primary decision-making roles of a community, relating to growth and improvement.

The first level of decision is private and involves personal gain. The second involves some public issue.

Duke has run Metropolis 125 times in the last two years, including runs at the University of Sheffield, England and in the city of Berlin for 25 mayors of the largest cities in Germany.

METRO, which began in 1965, is a more sophisticated version of Metropolis. Its first walk through was completed last week, Duke said.

He explained that in METRO each year is represented by an hour in the computer. Information is given to the players to enable them to make decisions, such as building schools or bridges, or raising the tax rate. Those who know less select the obvious, while the experts make more complex decisions.

Particular emphasis is placed on changes as they relate to public expenditures, and the linkage between the players, capital improvements and the major political issues, Duke said.

The objective of METRO, in addition to research and adult education, is to find out more about how cities really function, the flow of money, the general economy of the area, moving political issues and people's perception of the world in which they live and how that world responds to them, Duke said.

The next step is to predict future growth patterns, where people in the Lansing metropolitan area are going to move and who is going to move. So far the predictions have been 80 per cent correct, he added.

"We have no crystal balls, but by using certain mathematical techniques, based upon past behavior, we are able to speculate as to what the future holds," Duke said.

Plans are being made to build twelve METRO projects for some of the largest cities in Europe and Latin America, Duke said.

In the near future, METRO will be turned over for public use, Duke said.

U.S. discovers property misused

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is losing millions because defense contractors without authorization use government-owned equipment for private work and engage in self-serving real estate deals, Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats testified Monday.

Moreover, Staats and members of his General Accounting Office, GAO, staff told a Senate-House subcommittee on economy in government, the Army probably has big excesses in its stocks of materiel in Vietnam, but it "doesn't know what it has or where it is."

They did add that the military is making a crash effort to account for and control supplies hastily shipped to Vietnam during buildup.

Staats' testimony brought demands for the names of the contractors involved. He said they will be supplied after the contractors have been given a chance to comment on the testimony and an accompanying report to Congress.

Besides pressing for the names, Rep. Martha W. Griffiths told Staats "I'm not voting for any tax increase as long as this type of stuff is going on." The Michigan Democrat is a member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

The GAO reported on a study at plants of 21 defense contractors and the campuses of two universities where government-owned production or testing equipment valued at more than $944 million had been placed. It said some equipment was being used in commercial operations without government approval "and without, in our opinion, equitable compensation to the government."

The report cited, among examples, an 8,000-ton press costing $1.4 million that had been used 78 per cent on commercial work in the three years since it had been installed. It said ten other government machines in the same plant, costing $29,000 to $141,000 each, had been used 100 per cent on non-governmental work during the first six months of 1966, without advance approval.

In reply to questions, GAO witnesses said that ordinarily when government equipment provided for use on government contracts is found to have been used otherwise without permission, the contractor is merely charged rent for the period involved.

GAO criticized also what it said is an inefficient system of identifying government-owned equipment only rarely used in private plants, so that it could be shifted elsewhere. In some cases, it said, equipment was purchased while identical equipment was lying idle.

Top flicks, drama, variety in holiday TV bill of fare

It's a long vacation this year, and for those who are not heading for some faraway destination in the South, the break will probably include at least a few hours in front of the tube. As a guide to December viewing, here are a few notes on upcoming programs of special interest.

"King Rat"

The seasonal slack in televised flicks due to the networks' policy of exhibiting their best wares early in the fall and not picking up their good stuff again until after the first of the year will let up at least for an evening when ABC presents the 1965 movie, "King Rat." The film is one of George Segal's best, partially due to its fine supporting cast (Tom Courtney, James Fox and John Mills) and partially because of the stark black and white photography expertly employed in telling the story of the "King Rat" who dominates 10,000 prisoners in Changi prison camp during World War II. (On ABC, at 9 p.m., Dec. 3)

"A Charlie Brown Christmas"

Peanuts people will be delighted to learn that CBS has scheduled the animated "A Charlie Brown Christmas" for its third appearance on the network. The program which tells of Charlie Brown's search for the true meaning of Christmas while Lucy, Snoopy and the others busy themselves with the commercial aspects of the holiday, won a Peabody Award following its initial broadcast in December, 1965. (On CBS at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 10)

"The Desperate Hour"

December is a big month for George Segal on network TV. Besides the airing of "King Rat," Segal will star in the ABC "Movie Night Special" broadcast, "The Desperate Hour."

Based on Joseph Hayes' novel, the play ran for 212 performances on Broadway and was made into a movie starring Humphrey Bogart. In this television adaptation, Segal will play one of three convicts who invade the home of a suburban family and hold the occupants hostage.

"Saint Joan"

George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in an original television adaptation serves as material for the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" series. The story of the young Joan leading the French army against the English is the big project for December at NBC. The two hour special will star Genevieve Bujold, a young Canadian actress in the title role, with Roddy McDowall, James Daly and Leo Genn in the other major roles. (On NBC at 9 p.m. on Dec. 4)

"Diary of A Madman"

Nikolai Gogol's "Diary of A Madman," the story of the progressive disintegration of the mind of a lowly government bureaucrat, will be performed as a monodrama by the French actor Roger Coggio. Coggio has done the story, as it will be seen, throughout Europe and the United States, passing the 1500 performance mark. (On CBS at 10 p.m. on Dec. 20)

"A Christmas Memory"

A Christmas memory, adapted by Truman Capote from his autobiographical childhood reminiscence, originally appeared last December. Since that time it has won 19 major awards, including Emmys for star Geraldine Page and Capote, along with the Peabody Award for the year's outstanding television program. It tells the story of the relationship between a lonely woman and a young boy, revealing their love, mutual need and solidarity against time. (On ABC at 8:30 p.m. on Dec. 19)

Cong attack two air bases

SAIGON (AP) — Viet Cong troops attacked two allied air bases deep in the Mekong Delta on Monday night, hitting one with a damaging mortar shelling and the other with a ground assault.

In an apparent continuation of their newly launched attacks on airfields, artillery bases and Special Forces camps, the Communists shelled the U.S. air base at Soc Trang, 97 miles southwest of Saigon, and infiltrated onto the Lac Hong airfield, 120 miles southwest of the capital near the Gulf of Siam.

One American serviceman was killed and five were wounded in the two attacks, spokesmen reported. South Vietnamese casualties were listed as one killed and three wounded.

Funds set up for volunteer drives in '68

MSU students who volunteer their spare time for worthwhile service projects in the community and on campus received an official pat on the back at their last meeting.

The MSU Board of Trustees approved creation of a "Director of Volunteer Programs" position in the Office of Student Affairs, an action officially endorsing and encouraging all volunteer student projects.

The MSU Board also authorized an $8,000 budget for the office which will operate throughout the year.

The Director of Volunteer Programs will be named soon, and his appointment will be effective Jan. 1.

In recommending the Board's approval of the new position, Vice President for Student Affairs Milton B. Dickerson said: "One of the most heartening aspects of student life at Michigan State has been the development of the various volunteer programs by the students themselves."

"It seems proper that the University now indicate its belief in and support for these activities by additional financial support."

Since 1963, MSU student volunteer programs have grown in size and number, beginning with the Student Education Corps (SEC). This organization now enlists more than 2,000 students to carry out its tutoring and teaching assistance programs in 72 schools throughout south central Michigan.

Book thefts jump in holiday season

By JIM GRANELLI
State News Staff Writer

If anyone's thinking of giving a book to someone for Christmas, make sure it's not a stolen book.

With the end of the term and the arrival of mass gift-giving, University police detectives warn students to keep an eye on their books.

"We've found in the past that with the holiday season approaching, more students give in to the urge to take something, especially a book they might be able to use or, more probably, sell," Cpl. William Dunman, head of the University detective bureau, said.

University detectives note that a book thief can receive up to $1,000 fine and five years in jail, depending on the book's worth and from where it is stolen.

That penalty simply adds to the excitement and adventure of the art of stealing books. But the art may be changing to an unskilled practice because detectives are "apprehending more students now than they have in the past," Dunman said.

Roy Swerdfefer of the detective bureau spends an average of six hours a day investigating book thefts.

Swerdfefer takes two hours each morning to check all the local bookstores for stolen books.

Reporter vows to keep silent

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Should a reporter be required to disclose the names of news sources who give information in confidence?

That point will be the issue Tuesday when the Oregon Supreme Court hears the appeal of Annette Buchanan, 20, managing editor of the Daily Emerald at the University of Oregon, from a $300 fine for contempt of court.

Miss Buchanan, now Mrs. Michael Conard, published a story in the Daily Emerald on May 24, 1966, indicating that use of marijuana on campus might be widespread.

The district attorney, William F. Frye, prosecuted her for contempt after she refused to give the seven names to the court.

She appealed, arguing she was denied her rights under the free press provision of the U.S. Constitution. She also contended that Frye could have obtained the information from other sources.

John B. Leahy, who succeeded Frye as district attorney, says that since Oregon does not have a shield law, a reporter can't withhold information from a court.

Briefs supporting Mrs. Conard have been filed by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association and Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic society.

The Sigma Delta Chi brief claims that Frye was angry at the Daily Emerald because the article implied he hadn't been diligent in enforcing the marijuana laws.

"His reaction was impulsive," Sigma Delta Chi says, charging that Frye wanted to prove that the story was a product of Mrs. Conard's imagination.

He spends the next four hours checking any books that may have been stolen.

All bookstores in the area cooperate with University detectives to limit the number of book thefts.

"If the student would write his name and student number in several different places within the book the chances of recovering the book if it were stolen would be greatly increased," Swerdfefer said.

"Most of the books stolen are sold as soon as possible because the thief usually needs 'the money,'" Dunman said.

"If the student would also report the theft immediately, we would have a good chance of getting it back for him," Dunman added.

If a book is valued at $5 or less, the crime is considered a misdemeanor which is punishable by up to $100 fine and/or 90 days in jail. The same punishment is meted out to anyone apprehended who stole a book valued in excess of $5 as long as it wasn't taken from a building or a vehicle.

But if a book valued at more than $5 was stolen from a building or a vehicle, the crime would be considered a felony which is punishable by up to $1,000 fine and/or five years in jail.

Whether one wants to risk a little money and possibly some time for the joy of making five or ten dollars is left up to the individual. But one more warning must be mentioned before the decision is made: Santa's watching you.

'Guild Shop', newest outlet for area artists

A new outlet for area artists, sponsored by two MSU faculty wives, opened Friday in Williamston.

"The Guild Shop" will sell original arts and crafts on a 20 per cent commission basis. The wives of faculty members Charles D. McKinley, instructor in anatomy, and Clifford Welsh, research associate in the department of physiology, are the entrepreneurs.

They are cleaning and painting an empty store at 118 W. Grand River Ave. in Williamston which the owner is renting them for the cost of utilities until the business gets going.

Pottery, unusual ceramics, candles, hand-made children's furniture, weaving, hats, jewelry, and paintings of all kinds are some of the types of articles on sale at the Guild Shop.

"The artists set their own prices," Mrs. Welsh said, "but we have asked them to bring in articles that will probably sell for Christmas; that is, the more moderately priced works. We'll have price ranges from $.50 savings to $100 paintings probably."

Some of the contributing artists from the MSU art department are Louis Raynor and James R. McConnell, professors; Karl Welter, assistant professor; and graduate students Floyd Kemp and Alan Vigland.

International education programs expand

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Of all the messages whizzing over today's communications systems, the most effective and important to international relations is the person-to-person dialogue.

It was with this philosophy in mind that MSU set out in 1951 to expand its international involvement. And today MSU is ninth among the nation's universities of overseas projects.

Michigan State globe-trotting began with the establishment of the Ryukyus Project.

In 1951 five MSU faculty members set out for the Ryukyus Islands in the Pacific in a troop ship with the purpose of helping establish a university. The men were greeted by quonset-hut classrooms and dwellings, according to Miller Perry, campus co-ordinator for the project.

"But the campus has progressed very well," he said. "It now has 15 or 18 new buildings."

And as the campus has progressed, so has the University gone forward by leaps and bounds. It now sports 28 academic departments and 1,098 course offerings. It has a faculty of 220 and a student enrollment of 3,414.

In the beginning, MSU professors traveled to Ryukyu to advise the Ryukyuan faculty in teaching methods, curriculum, research and general administration. Now, however, there is a new dimension to the project. Ryukyuan professors and students come to MSU to teach and study.

"Eventually it will become exclusively an exchange program," Perry said.

Presently there are nine Ryukyuan graduate and seven undergraduate students at MSU. Five of the graduate students are doctoral candidates who are also faculty members.

Four MSU faculty members are serving as advisers and teachers in Ryukyu. They are Forest Erlandson, Paul E. Munsell, Dennis Karjala and John Shickluna.

The Ryukyus project continues under contract from the U.S. Civil Administrator for the Ryukyus. Other aid-to-education projects have been set up in Argentina, Mexico, Central America, Turkey, Pakistan and Thailand.

Bel Carce Project

To help develop a rural agricultural university is the purpose for which the MSU-Bel Carce, Argentina Project was established, according to campus co-ordinator Kirk Lawton.

The college of the University of Mar Del Plata is situated at one of the main experiment stations of the National Institute of Agriculture Technology (INTA) at Bel Carce, Argentina.

MSU was commissioned by the University of Mar Del Plata and the American Agency for International Development (AID) in 1965 to send a survey team to Bel Carce to suggest plans for establishment of a program of agricultural teaching, research and extension.

Nine months later the survey had been made, the plans accepted and a representative of the MSU faculty was sent to help make the proposed Argentine agricultural school a reality.

And within the next six months the program will hopefully be expanded, Lawton said.

"The next six months is the time to move ahead with technical expansion in agricultural economics, agricultural mechanization, soils and management, plant pathology and weed control," he said.

Should the expansion take place, the MSU advisory group in Argentina would probably be increased from its present two members to five or six members, Lawton said.

Those now serving in Argentina are Ronald Nelson and Oscar Taboada. The Argentina project has also become an exchange program in part. There are now three Argentines doing graduate study at MSU.

School Improvement

At the request of the American School of Mexico City, the MSU department of education sent four consultants in 1956 to advise the faculty on improvements that could be made in the quality of instruction and scope of community service of the school.

This developed further into a degree and credit program now under way in American kindergarten through 12th grade schools in Mexico and Central America, according to Fred Vescolani, professor of administration and higher education.

Participating schools are entitled to the services of an MSU consultant on a monthly basis. The school may choose between a month-long consultation or a course for school administrators and staff members on pupil evaluation or a science seminar. In 11 years, 70 MSU faculty members have served in the Mexico and Central America project, Vescolani said.

Business in Turkey

Business schools are the prime concern of the Turkey Project, according to Kullervo Louhi, assistant dean of the graduate school of business.

Under contract of the Turkish Ministry of Education and AID, MSU established a program of assistance to the Academies of Economic and Commercial Sciences at Ankara, Eskisshir, Istanbul and Izmir.

In the fashion of circuit riders, MSU professors travel from one academy to another to teach and to consult with faculties and administrations of the Academies.

Each professor also writes a book which may later be used as a course textbook.

The greatest single achievement to date is taking place at the Eskisshir, Louhi said. There a new nine-building campus is opening and a new undergraduate curriculum will provide for semester rather than yearly examinations, periodic testing and outside written assignments. Plans are now being developed to continue the project until June, 1972.

MSU advisers in Thailand recently began a program to encourage graduate education as the second phase of the Thai Project.

MSU, under the Royal Thai Government and AID, has had faculty consultants in Thailand since 1964. The MSU advisers, in conjunction with the National Economic Development Board, completed a study of the Thai secondary education system and are now laying the groundwork for planning in higher education.

Expansion of graduate studies will mean to Thailand more qualified university professors and elimination of the necessity for large numbers of Thai students to travel to foreign countries for advanced work, said Stanley Wronski, campus co-ordinator of the project.

The two most pressing needs, he said, are for improvements of instruction in the English language and in graduate training in science.

In answer to one of these needs, Ralph W. Barrett, a specialist from the MSU English Language Center, is in Thailand to help establish a program of English education.

Other faculty members serving in Thailand are Archibald Shaw, L. Paul Coburn, Kenneth L. Neff and Ray G. Harper.

Pakistan in the Near East is the scene of yet another MSU international education program.

Established in 1957 under the authority of the Ford Foundation and the Government of Pakistan, the Pakistan Project aims toward development of two academies for rural development, one at Comilla in East Pakistan and the other at Peshawar in West Pakistan.

The approach to achieving rural development is somewhat different in the Pakistan Project than in other projects, according to Richard Niehoff, campus co-ordinator for the project.

The academies train students in social and political science rather than agriculture, he said, under the assumption that the students will then be qualified as communicators. Their field of knowledge will not be agricultural technology but methods of persuading their people to use the newer systems of agricultural technology.

While MSU professors have travelled to Pakistan to serve as teachers and advisers, so have Pakistanis come to study at MSU. In 1958 and 1959, Niehoff said, 42 Pakistanis (20 faculty members and the director from each academy) spent a year in graduate study in East Lansing.

International Research

MSU international programs reach beyond education into the field of research with three projects: the Diffusion of Innovations Project, the Consortium Study in Nigerian Rural Agriculture and the Agricultural Mechanization in Africa Study.

The Diffusion of Innovations Project concerns itself with the difficulty in introducing new ideas in agricultural mechanization and methods, family planning and health to the farming classes of the world.

The AID-sponsored project began in 1964 and is scheduled to end late in 1968, Everett Rogers, director of the project, said. Project work is being done in Brazil, India and Nigeria, Rogers said.

It is divided into three phases: 1) seeking to explain why programs of change are successful or unsuccessful at the village level.

2) determining the characteristics of innovators and opinion leaders.

3) demonstrating and evaluating new techniques of communication.

Teams of two or three Americans and 15 to 20 nationals do field work for a year or so in each country, Rogers said. They then come to MSU to analyze their data and work on their doctoral degrees.

After the project is terminated, its results will be determined by reports from approximately 70 countries. Conferences will be held in late 1968 or early 1969 at which progress will be discussed and explained and an IBM tabulation of the responses of nearly 6,500 villagers to the project's proposals will be presented.

"This will undoubtedly serve as a source for future dissertations and analyses," Rogers said. "Now we can only analyze a small per cent of all of our data."

Nigerian Study

Despite the civil disorders in Nigeria, the Consortium Study in Nigerian Rural Agriculture continues operations, according to Glenn L. Johnson, director of the Consortium.

MSU participates in the Consortium with the University of Wisconsin, Colorado State University and the U.S. Agriculture Department's Research Triangle Institute.

"The purpose of the Consortium is to do research of value to the governments of the U.S. and Nigeria in promoting the agricultural development of Nigeria," Johnson said. Projects include agriculture education at the sub-university level, direct public and private investment in agriculture, research on the economics of agriculture and agriculture marketing.

Between 15 and 20 people are now working in Nigeria, including six MSU staff members: Victor Smith, George Dike, John Whitney, Malcolm Dervis, Herbert Kreisler, and Kenneth Laurent.

"The number of staff members in Nigeria has not been reduced by the civil war there, but some operations have been stopped," Johnson said. "The impact of the civil war slowed up and disrupted work, particularly in the East. The University policy, however, is to continue to carry out commitments to the Nigerian and U.S. governments in an academic and scientific spirit.

"We hope to aid the Nigerians as they settle their problems and keep MSU in a position to help Nigeria after the war. The Consortium, because it is an agency that works throughout Nigeria and is owned by universities in both rebel and federal areas, is in a strong position to maintain these objectives," Johnson said.

Realtors hit open housing bill

LANSING (UPI) — A spokesman for the Michigan Real Estate Association said today realtors oppose a statewide open housing law on the grounds it is a "forced housing" provision.

"Regardless of the label with which such legislation is characterized, the passage of any such legislation denying an owner of private property the control of the disposition of that private property is contrary to our basic concept of ownership," Bruce Annett, spokesman for the real estate association said.

Annett's remarks were contained in a prepared statement for a state house civil rights committee on a proposed open housing law, supported by both political parties and Gov. George Romney. Also scheduled to testify were Elly M. Peterson, Republican state chairman Saginaw's Negro mayor, Henry G. Marsh, and Francis J. Coomes of the Michigan Catholic Conference.

The meeting was described as an "open meeting," not a public hearing. One public hearing was held on the bill Nov. 15. It was sparsely attended.

The proposal would ban discrimination in the sale or rental of most property.

"Such legislation can aptly be called forced housing inasmuch as an unwilling property owner will be forced to accept a purchaser or tenant whom the owner could lawfully refuse under all existing rules of law," Annett said.

Annett, a Pontiac realtor and past president of the real estate association, said open housing isn't the way to improve Negro housing conditions.

The association represents all of Michigan's 2,350 realtors and 10,000 real estate salesmen licensed to the realtors. A "realtor" is a state-licensed broker who has met standards set by the association beyond those required by state law. There are about 11,000 licensed brokers in Michigan.

"Private capital with the assistance of government, if need be, should be encouraged to create new subdivisions, apart from compacted areas, wherein Negroes capable of purchasing housing will have environmental conditions substantially equivalent to that enjoyed by their white counterparts," Annett said.

Proponents of the open housing bill, in an attempt to win its favor, have offered to exempt home owners who do not list or publicly advertise their property for sale or rent.

"This is merely an attempt to circumvent the public policy which the bill is supposed to implement. Its effect will be to encourage development of an underdeveloped real estate market," Annett warned.

He said the proposal would have the effect of denying a property owner his right to advertise and to engage the services of a real estate broker unless he surrenders his freedom of contract with whom he wills.

Akers plans co-curricular arts program

Akers Hall is attempting to create a scholarly environment for liberal art majors through a co-curricular program.

Under the sponsorship of the College of Arts and Letters Office of Residence Instruction, the co-curricular program emphasizes cultural and educational liberal arts events.

Harry H. Kimber, director of Residence Instruction in the College of Arts and Letters, plans the co-curricular program and class supervision.

"The co-curricular program emphasizes scholarly events of the highest quality for the benefit of Akers students enrolled in the Arts and Letters College and for the entire complex," Kimber said.

"Our function is educating not entertaining," Kimber said. "Therefore we do not cater to a student's wants or interests—our objective is to get them acquainted with first rate educational events."

The cultural programs are initiated and co-sponsored by the College of Arts and Letters and are outside hall government activities.

Since the opening of Akers Hall, prominent people have participated in the series such as: Maurice Macmillan, son of England's former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, the New York City Opera Company members, Max Lerner, Rev. Alfred Longley from Notre Dame and Paul Love, professor of art and director of Kresge Art Gallery.

"The co-curricular program in Akers cannot be planned in advance," Kimber said. "Our guests are usually persons visiting campus for a few days, during which we try to have them appear before our liberal arts students. Faculty members have also participated."

The next Akers Hall Series will feature Val R. Berryman, curator of the MSU historical art museum, at 7 p.m. Nov. 28 in 137 Akers Hall.

March at U-I against Dow

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Yale University Professor Staughton Lynd joined between 100 and 150 students in a protest march while representatives of Dow Chemical Co. held interviews on the University of Illinois Circle Campus Monday.

The anti-Vietnam war demonstrators marched around the school's science and engineering laboratory building for an hour until the company representatives completed interviews with four students.

At one point there was a minor shoving match between the marchers and other students, officials said.

ANTI-WAR POLICY

McCarthy's candidacy backed by Oregon Dems

WASHINGTON — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., Monday scheduled a news conference Thursday at which he is expected to announce he will seek the Democratic presidential nomination as an antiwar candidate.

In this connection, McCarthy made public a list of critical statements he had made about President Johnson's Vietnam policies, beginning in January, 1966. This seemed intended as a campaign paper to document his opposition to the presidential course.

McCarthy has given clear indications that he plans to enter some presidential primaries in an effort to muster a significant protest against Johnson. He has said he does not expect to defeat the President for renomination but hopes to influence Johnson to change his policies.

Meanwhile, McCarthy got his first open ally in the House, and his first organized support in the May 28 Oregon primary.

Rep. Don Edwards, a California Democrat, pledged to try to swing his state behind McCarthy.

Howard Morgan of Portland, a former state party chairman, said the group will support

McCarthy against President Johnson because the Democrats "need someone who can take the country with honor out of the Vietnam war."

Morgan said the group endorsed McCarthy "not as a protest but as a serious and earnest attempt to win the nomination for Sen. McCarthy in 1968."

The Minnesota senator listed as his first "significant break" with the President on foreign policy a Sep. 30, 1965 Senate speech in which he complained that he and his colleagues had not been consulted about Johnson's decision to send troops to the Dominican Republic.

McCarthy was one of 16 senators who wrote Johnson Jan. 27, 1966 opposing resumption of the bombing of North Vietnam which had been suspended for a month.

On Jan. 31, 1966, McCarthy first openly ally in the House, and his first organized support in the May 28 Oregon primary.

Rep. Don Edwards, a California Democrat, pledged to try to swing his state behind McCarthy.

Howard Morgan of Portland, a former state party chairman, said the group will support television appearance of not being "as open to negotiations as they should have been."

The next listing was for Feb. 1, 1967, when McCarthy told a Washington meeting of "Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam" that the question had not been answered whether "the evil and destruction required to win the war are proportionate to the good that may be achieved."

He disputed administration contentions that the conflict is necessary for U.S. defense, to contain China and whether there are any legal treaty commitments for the fighting.

The Minnesota senator questioned on April 27, 1967 the propriety of Gen. William C. Westmoreland's appearance before a joint session of Congress. He said the field commander in Vietnam was being asked to make a political, as well as a military, case.

On Oct. 16 McCarthy challenged Secretary of State Dean Rusk for raising what the senator called the "yellow peril" issue. He said that unless the United States readjusts its policies in Asia, from 100,000 to 200,000 U.S. troops might be stationed in South Vietnam for 15 or 20 years.

King starts program for disobedience

ATLANTA, Ga. — Martin Luther King Jr. and his Southern Christian Leadership Conference are gathering this week to map a massive civil disobedience program for Washington, D.C., next spring, a spokesman said Sunday.

Various civil disobedience measures, including a possible "tent-in" across from the White House and sit-down demonstrations in the offices of congressmen, will take place "should Congress fail to enact meaningful reform measures for America's poor," said Tom Offenberg, a King aide.

Offenberg emphasized the protests would be nonviolent.

"We think that the present mood of Congress is not conducive to really meaningful legislative reforms in terms of the poor," Offenberg said in an Atlanta interview.

"What we hope to do is to build up pressure for reforms," he said.

Automation is topic of UAW-GM talks

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers, with new Ford and Chrysler contracts all wrapped up, moved on to General Motors Monday with indications that automation and use of computers would be major problems.

UAW officials distributed a 24-page release in which they accused GM of trying to remove some auto jobs from UAW category by putting them into computerized fields with white collar, nonunion workers.

Setting the battle line for some anticipated hardfought bargaining, the UAW told GM: "The union never has complained of automation. In fact, it has staunchly defended automation, often in spite of membership disbelief that automation is good for the economy and the total community."

"The union cannot continue to defend it if it is coupled with continuous displacement and erosion of the union with the new method arbitrarily assigned to salary."

GM vice president of labor relations Louis G. Seaton had told newsmen earlier Monday as he emerged from a preliminary meeting with the UAW that he was optimistic.

Seaton said, "GM is well aware of the economic dimensions of the Ford and Chrysler settlements and is prepared to bargain within the dimensions of those agreements."

GM's spokesman added that with "hard work and a realistic attitude by both parties these negotiations can reach a successful conclusion."

Seaton said he expected it would take until early next year to resolve all local issues at GM's plants. Currently, some 18,000 such unsolved issues remain from an original agenda of 31,000, he reported.

GM's No. 1 labor troubleshooter also disclosed that the nation's biggest auto firm had submitted to the UAW earlier this month proposed language of pensions, insurance and supplemental unemployment benefits which he said were similar to the language in the Ford and Chrysler contracts.

The UAW said it had made a recent test to determine if the problems of automation and computers could be settled on a local level.

"As a result of the difficulties encountered in attempting to investigate these problems and the complete futility of attempting to resolve this issue in local negotiations, it is obvious that corrective measures must be taken at this national level."

UAW vice president Leonard Woodcock headed the union bargaining team in the absence of UAW president Walter P. Reuther who was sleeping in after a marathon bargaining session at Chrysler which would up at 3 a.m. Monday with a national contract for 8,000 Chrysler office and engineering workers.

The three year Chrysler pact called for salary increases of $35 to $87 a month. The 18 salary classes now range from $82.50 to $262 a week.

It followed the general pattern laid down by the contracts covering production workers at Chrysler and Ford.

DATES ARE 'DUTCH'

Gallic students favor cafe, films

Returning to MSU after a year of study in France, Robert Karstens, Elmhurst, Ill., senior in modern languages, is counting the days until he can return.

Karstens spent his junior year at the University of Aix-Marseille in Aix-en-Provence, a city of 60,000 about 20 miles from Marseilles.

"An American thinks that when he goes to Europe he's going to be different," Karstens replied, when asked about France and the French college students, "but it's not that way when you see how many other Americans are there."

French students have a "kind of a disappointment and a lack of comprehension" as to why the United States is in Vietnam, or how the United States will benefit if it is victorious, Karstens said.

Karstens said in the French university that he attended, he found a wide spectrum of political views. It's not unusual to meet students who say they're Fascists or Communists or anarchists.

"There were a couple of brawls when I was there between the Communists and Fascists," Karstens said.

An interesting aspect of French life is the peoples' interest in movies.

"You may go three or four times a week to the cinema," Karstens said. "The movies become a topic of discussion. Many of the students want to be directors or producers. Movies are discussed in the U.S. but it seems to be on a basis of escape entertainment."

For a typical night "on the town" one starts by going to nearby cafe and having a cup of black espresso, Karstens said.

"The French tend to go out more in groups. It's at the cafe that someone will suggest going to the cinema," Karstens said.

Once at the cinema the girl pays her own way.

"The girl always pays her own way," Karstens said, "unless the date is really special."

The movie ends at around midnight and then everyone heads for a "boite" or "cave," which are basement-like coffee houses.

"The boites open at 9:30 p.m. and close around 2 a.m.," Karstens said. "There's entertainment at the boites in the form of American and British records. Quite a bit of 'soul'."

Karstens participated in a University of Michigan summer abroad program. And has applied for a fellowship to return to France for additional study.

States in the past eight years is equal to the total of American investment in Western Europe," he said.

"France wants to put an end to this abuse in the interest of the world and even in the interest of the United States, which must get rid of this deplorable deficit."

"It is possible that the storm unleashed by the devaluation of the pound will lead to the re-establishment of the international monetary system founded on the immutability and impartiality which are the privileges of gold."

De Gaulle's remarks came at a time when pressure against the dollar was mounting through speculative purchases of gold in some world markets. Record gold dealing was registered on the Paris market Monday.

Although U.S. and all major Western European central bank officials, except France, were pledging that they would uphold the stability of the gold price, and hence the value of the dollar, De Gaulle's comments were expected to contribute to the gold fever.

On the Middle East, he took Israel to task with a renewal of his charge that it started the war against the Arabs June 5-10.

"We cannot see how any kind of an agreement can evolve as long as one of the greatest of the Big Four is not disengaged from the odious war which it is carrying on elsewhere, because everything in the world depends on this. Without the drama of Vietnam, the conflict between Israel and the Arabs would not have become what it is, and if peace returns to Southeast Asia, the Middle East would soon find peace, thanks to the general détente which would follow such an event."

"We get many different cases and sometimes the facts aren't all completely straight," Nonnamaker said. But he added that if a case with proven facts were presented to his office, he would refer it to Robert Fedore, assistant dean of student affairs.

According to judicial guidelines established this summer, Fedore would then ask the student if he wanted an administrator to handle the action or if he wanted a student group, such as the All-University Student Judiciary to handle it.

A clause in these guidelines, part of the Academic Freedom Report's implementation, states "violations of women's regulations pertaining to overnight absences at an unauthorized destination shall be submitted to the area director."

Miss Renaud said when a head resident advisor discovers that a coed spent the night at a man's apartment, she "is supposed to talk to the coed and report that fact to the area director."

The "area director" is a residence hall program staff member, with the responsibility for one dormitory complex.

Miss Renaud reported that no cases have been handled by her office so far this term. She also stressed that with the judicial guidelines, a coed may choose action by an administrator or student group. She doubted if disciplinary action would be prescribed, however.

"Most of the girls choose the administrator," she said. "Although I'm almost sure that no student group has had any cases of unauthorized absences either this term."

Miss Renaud emphasized that the ambiguity in the two sentences rests on the decision whether they are suggestions or regulation.

Draft

know is can I afford the rent. "It's impossible for me to live in the U.S. and not become involved in racial issues, and because of my involvement, there would be no job security nor would there be any peace of mind for my family."

"I moved here without any tears," said Chandler Davis, a mathematics professor at the University of Toronto who emigrated in 1962. "I feel perfectly at home here without being Canadian. I feel Canadian. I don't have this uprooted feeling."

Davis is a "self-confessed political refugee" who says he was fired from the University of Michigan after refusing to answer questions before Sen. Joseph McCarthy's Un-American Activities Committee. He is still a U.S. citizen, and returns to the U.S. frequently. But he has no plans for returning permanently, and supports draft dodging.

Most Americans in Canada have not been there long enough to feel any overwhelming sense of alienation. Most say that they're not anticipating returning to the U.S. for any reason.

"I had a friend who went back after his mother had a heart attack," said Holoch. "He wasn't in the house for five minutes when two FBI or CIA agents came to the front door. He jumped out of a third floor window, onto a garage and into an alley. He started running and didn't stop until he was safely back in Canada."
