'GIVE PEOPLE OPTION'

Rockefeller joins race, vows fight to last vote

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) -- Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, reversing his previous position, threw himself into contention Tuesday for the Republican Presidential nomination and vowed to fight Richard M. Nixon for it, "right up to the last vote."

"I now commit myself to seeking this office, and so serve our nation, with all my heart and mind and will," he said. Rockefeller's expressions ranged from jut-jawed determination to breezy optimism as he made his announcement and then replied to questions in a news conference.

Just 40 days ago, in another news conference, the New York governor took himself out of the race for the nomination. A number of the men who persuaded him to change his mind were present Tuesday.

In a conversation at his official residence later, Rockefeller said to a reporter, "The country has changed. Never in history has so much changed in five weeks. Now I am giving the people an option."

In a statement which he read before the questioning began, he set forth four reasons for reversing himself:

1. "... the gravity of the crises that face us as a people."
2. His conviction that "to comment from the sidelines is not an effective way to present the alternatives."
3. He said many persons, "within the Republican party and outside it," urged him to get in the fight.
4. "Personally, I am deeply disturbed by the course of events, growing unrest and anxiety at home, and the signs of disintegration abroad."

Comments promptly came from Nixon, the apparent front-runner for the GOP nomination, and from Gov. Romney, whom Rockefeller supported until he dropped out of the race in early March.

Nixon's statement said in part:

"I think Gov. Rockefeller's announcement will make for a more exciting convention and will result in a more meaningful discussion of the issues... I'm glad to have him in. I have thought all along that it would be very helpful for the Republican party to have another active candidate in the contest."

Romney echoed this thought, adding: "Because no other candidate in either party can match his executive experience in national and state government, every American should give his availability for the President the same careful consideration that the Michigan delegation will in determining which candidate it will finally support at the convention in Miami Beach."

At another point, Rockefeller said he has been edging toward his decision to run over the past 10 days.

Clarification statement issued by black athletes

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Editor

The Black Students' Alliance and black athletes issued joint statements Tuesday to clarify "the vast distortions, misquotations and adverse publicity" that resulted from the settlement of a two-day boycott last Friday.

The joint statements said the black athletes called off their boycott of all spring sports because the University agreed to "act immediately" on the demands of the black athletes.

The two groups said the mass media, and particularly the State News, falsified and misinterpreted the purposes of the seven grievances submitted to the University and the intentions of the black athletes leading to the boycott.

"The boycott was not a 'misunderstanding' nor were the grievances 'alleged,' said the statement by the Black Students' Alliance.

The two groups said the black athletes returned to all spring sports Saturday after a meeting with Big Ten Faculty Representative John Fuzak Friday indicated the University was interested in "rapid alleviation of our grievances."

The black athletes and Black Students' Alliance said the boycott was necessary because the initial response of the University was apathetic and Athletic Director Biggie Munn, in particular, failed to respond to the black athletes' demands after he received a list of their seven grievances Thursday.

The Black Students' Alliance said the University made the following concessions to the black athletes:

- to move toward hiring another black football coach. Don Coleman has already been hired for the coming fall season. The University is already in the process of hiring a black track coach and it has agreed to do everything to have a black basketball coach by September of this year.
- to make efforts to recruit black baseball players and swimmers.

--to immediately and actively seek black employees for Jenison Fieldhouse, the Intramural Building and the Ice Arena and give on the job training if necessary. The University will also bypass the Personnel Office in the hiring of these employees because the Personnel Office moves too slowly; --to move immediately to obtain black physicians and trainers;

--to have black cheerleaders by September of this year; --to discuss the question of a black counselor;

--to meet with black athletes and students on June 1 to discuss the progress toward fulfilling these commitments.

Fuzak, representing the University, declined to comment on the concessions released by the Black Students' Alliance, saying only that "this is an internal matter."

"If the proper steps had been taken in the first place," he said, "the boycott would not have been necessary."

The black athletes said also "that not a single black athlete regrets the boycott" and that "scholarships, personal gain or public acclaim did not prevent us from standing up and asserting ourselves as black men in this racist society."

Council accepts sections of revised grading system

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council approved additional parts of the proposed grading system revision Tuesday afternoon and unanimously accepted "in principle" recommendations made by President Hannah's committee of 16 in a report on race relations at MSU.

This race relations report will now go for consideration before the Board of Trustees May 16, although any administrative actions that may result are still open for discussion by the Council.

Some specific actions that the committee suggests MSU make include:

- a full-time staff position in the Admissions office to increase the enrollment of Negro students.
- an "aggressive" search for Negro faculty members.
- a "conscious and continuous" effort to increase the number of Negroes in administrative positions.
- establishment of a Center for Race and Urban Affairs that would focus on new curricula in racial and urban affairs, community action programs, and "direct work with the white community to promote a better understanding of the total situation involving the Negro."

Council action on the proposed revision to the grading system consisted of approving five more specific recommendations in the report submitted to the council winter term by the Educational Policies Committee (EPC). Five more recommendations remain to be considered by the Council.

The Council approved April 10 parts of the grading report calling for a numerical system of 10 grades and a credit/no credit (Cr-N) plan in general. If the council approves the report at its next meeting, it will go to the Academic Senate for final consideration.

The most significant council action Tuesday was opening the (Cr-N) system of grading to all undergraduate students. Instead of the original EPC recommendation No. 8 of just juniors and seniors.

The Student Academic Council (SAC) had asked at the Council's last meeting that the Cr-N system be opened to all undergraduates and that students could take 12 courses in all during their college career (one a term) instead of the six recommended by EPC.

Chuck Burns, Edwardsburg junior, and Nathan Dickmeyer, Concord junior represented SAC again Tuesday and the council accepted their recommendations, but said students could take a maximum of 30 credits on the Cr-N system, instead of SAC's desired 12 courses.

The council also moved that EPC study a suggested amendment to recommendation No. 8--that the problem of students repeating courses be considered.

"The council didn't want an interchange of grading systems," explained John F. A. Taylor, professor of philosophy and chairman of the steering committee.

"In other words, if a student flunked a course on the numerical system, he couldn't retake it on a Cr-N basis and vice versa."

Police storm Columbia, break up week-long sit-in

NEW YORK (AP) -- New York City police stormed five occupied Columbia University buildings in the dead of night Tuesday and broke up a week-long student sit-in, which had paralyzed the Ivy League campus.

"We anticipate a full schedule of classes Wednesday," a university spokesman announced.

However, even as he spoke, undergraduate militants sought to promote an all-out strike of students and faculty. Their target was Columbia President Grayson Kirk, who called in the police to smash the disruptive demonstration.

Kirk said he had no intention of resigning.

In the club swinging, fist fighting, pushing and kneeling that marked the violent subjugation of the Columbia demonstrators, 100 youths and 15 policemen were reported injured, none seriously. There were 628 arrests, on charges of trespassing.

There were complaints of police brutality against the 600 to 700 students whose sit-in began April 23. Columbia has an enrollment of 25,381.

However, City Human Rights Commissioner William H. Booth watched the removal of about 100 Negro demonstrators from Hamilton Hall, and said he saw no police brutality. Most of the Negroes walked out as directed, their hands in the air.

Police Commissioner Howard R. Leary congratulated his policemen on "an excellent job." However, Mayor John V. Lindsay asked Leary for a report on the brutality charges.

Lindsay said in a statement: "Regardless of the merits of their cause, a few hundred students cannot be allowed to impose their will on a university of some 20,000 students through destructive, illegal tactics."

Kirk told a news conference his decision to call in the police was "obviously, the most painful one I ever made."

GOP leaders welcome Rocky's candidacy bid

NEW YORK (AP) -- Republican leaders across the nation welcomed Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller into the presidential race Tuesday.

Many felt he would not be able to overcome Richard M. Nixon's lead. Some wondered how Rockefeller's action will affect Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, who is so far only a favorite-son candidate.

Rights group explores faults in Negro aid

MONTGOMERY, Ala. -- Welfare programs, health services and employment practices were on the Tuesday agenda of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission (CRC), as it opened the third of its five hearings in this deep South small town to explore the denial of equal opportunity to the Negro in rural areas.

The commission adjourned into executive session Tuesday night to explore the possibility of criminal intimidation of these witnesses.

The two witnesses, Frank Penderson and John D. Barn, said that the general manager of the American Can Company told them that he, "might not be able to rent houses to either black or white employees." The manager, identified as H. Floane, said he would let the employees know later of his decision.

William L. Taylor, staff director, of the U.S. CRC said it might be considered intimidation of a witness.

TO MEET WITH ROMNEY

Subpoena issued to publisher

DETROIT (UPI) -- The publisher of the Detroit News was handed a subpoena Tuesday and ordering him to meet with Gov. Romney and union officers in a session Romney called in an effort to end Detroit's newspaper strikes.

The nation's fifth largest city has been without its regular daily newspapers for 167 days, a record newspaper blackout for a major U.S. city.

Romney postponed the meeting from Tuesday until Wednesday when News Publisher Peter B. Clark declined to attend on grounds the best way to settle the strikes was through negotiations supervised by state and federal mediators.

Then the Governor asked a special Senate committee to issue the subpoena. The committee had been created by the State Senate to investigate the newspaper shutdown, which began Nov. 16 with a teamsters strike against the News.

The Detroit Free Press suspended publication the day after the strike against the News began, and neither newspaper has published since. By the time the two newspapers settled with the teamsters in February and March, the contracts of 13 other unions had expired and four of them were on strike.

Romney, in calling the meeting last week, threatened to seek legislation ordering compulsory arbitration of the dispute if it were not resolved by the end of this week.

Free Press Publisher Lee Hills, in saying his newspaper would honor Romney's request for the meeting, emphasized that both newspapers were determined that a settlement be "on terms acceptable to both."

Sen. Robert J. Huber, R-Birmingham, chairman of the special Senate committee, said all of the unions invited had accepted the Governor's invitation, providing both publishers would be represented. Romney invited officers of the teamsters, and the four striking unions representing typographers, pressmen, photoengravers and plate handlers.

U.S. press undermining war effort in Vietnam

By BONNIE MILLER
The American press is undermining the U.S. war effort in Vietnam by playing up the great sacrifices of the war and the dissent of the public, Marine Major Howard V. Lee said in a speech on campus Tuesday.

Lee, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner, themed his talk on Americanism. "I regret that I have but one life to give for my country," he said. "I am a 12-year veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps."

Lee was awarded the Medal of Honor by President Johnson last October for rescuing his platoon by helicopter after they had been attacked and surrounded. He was also wounded in his effort.

Lee spoke of the "challenge facing the young men of the United States today," the challenge to face and fight the war in Vietnam.

"The men of the Marine Corps and all the fighting men in Vietnam are meeting this challenge squarely," Lee said.

"These men are fighting with deep patriotism alongside tough determination, black and white soldiers alike, maintaining a sense of humor and the capacity to enjoy life too," Lee said.

"The American soldier is the ambassador from freedom to Vietnam. They must show by their actions there is one simple objective in this war: to allow the people of South Vietnam to live in peace and pursue their own destiny."

"There are some people in this country who ask if the price we are paying in American blood shed in Vietnam is worth it. Yes," Lee said. "There are forces in this world with the ultimate goal of destroying the United States and all it stands for, to fight this is worth anything."

Some people who oppose the war advocate withdrawal, Lee said. "How does a nation go about withdrawing from an inevitable war in any other way besides postponing it and allowing it to grow larger for our children to fight in 20 years?" Lee asked.

"Some others say we are not and we can not win the war militarily, this is simply not true," Lee said. "They point out the Tet offensive as a military defeat. I can assure you this was not the case, but press coverage made it into a political defeat."

"The press, in some respects, is working against the U.S. effort by telling of the discouraged soldier, the corrupt South Vietnamese Government and playing up the great sacrifices of the war," Lee said. "North Vietnam can wait for dissent in this country to become so great so as to give them a victory. We must now allow this to happen."

Speaking specifically to the draft-age students in the audience Lee said, "You have grown up in a nation that has given you more advantages than any other nation possibly could. Now will you turn your back to the challenge facing this country? I say to you, accept this challenge."

In answer to a question concerning "an honorable way to avoid the draft" Lee said, "There is no honorable way out. Our system is based on majority rule and anything actively contrary is treason, although I support your right to protest all you want."

Lee maintained the only way to win the war was to show the Communist aggressors that the people of the United States are 100 per cent behind our fighting men and have no intention of giving an inch.

The crowd of over 200 gave Major Lee a standing ovation at the conclusion of his talk.

Early tabulations strong for Rocky

BOSTON (AP) -- Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York won surprising write-in support Tuesday as early returns were counted in the Massachusetts presidential primary--on the very day Rockefeller announced his candidacy for president.

The first scattered returns showed he was running ahead of former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, and close behind Gov. John A. Volpe of Massachusetts, whose name was the only one on the GOP ballot. Volpe is running as a favorite son candidate with his eye on the vice presidency.

The first returns, with 89 of 1,734 precincts counted on the Republican ballot gave:

Volpe 1,201
Nixon 856
Rockefeller 951
The Republicans gave Gov. Ronald Reagan 63 write-in votes in the same precincts.

And 189 Republicans wrote in Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy D-Minn., as their preference. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy D-N.Y., got 28 Republican write-ins.

On the Democratic side McCarthy easily was the front runner in the same 89 early precincts. McCarthy's name was the only one printed on the Democratic ballots.

The returns gave:
McCarthy 2,369
President Johnson 93
Sen. Kennedy 1,100
Vice President Humphrey 684

Paul Counihan of Cambridge, state chairman of the McCarthy campaign, said a turnout of more than 500,000 persons would mean that McCarthy had "generated tremendous interest."

Democrats also chose 80 delegates to cast the state's 72 votes at their national convention in Chicago. Of that number, 56 are elected at large and two will be selected from each congressional district.

The Republicans are sending 34 delegates, each with a full vote, to their convention in Miami Beach.

Police hold former student with drugs

A former student was arraigned Tuesday in Lansing Township Justice Court on a charge of conspiracy to violate the narcotics law.

Harry John Lewis, who was last a student here in 1962, asked for an examination, to determine if there is enough evidence for trial. The court set the examination for July 18 and placed bond at $3500.

Police arrested Lewis Monday night at his home at 520 Spartan Ave. charging that he "agreed, conspired, or condescended" to the illegal sale of marijuana.

Lewis is also out on bond for illegal possession of marijuana.

Heart attack hospitalizes Ike, reported in 'excellent spirits'

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower was reported resting comfortably and in "excellent spirits" at the base hospital Tuesday.

Eisenhower was brought here Monday suffering from chest pains, and the announcement at an afternoon briefing that he had suffered a "myocardial infarction" was the first word on the seriousness of his illness.

When his condition permits, Eisenhower will be transferred to Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington. He had been due to return to his home at Gettysburg, Pa., in a few days.

"He has had a good day with no chest pain," the hospital bulletin said. "Blood pressure has remained normal. He has no fever. He has been visited by Mrs. Eisenhower."

This was the third heart attack for the man who led allied forces to victory in Europe in World War II then served two terms as the nation's chief executive.

His others were in 1955 while he was president and in 1965 while he was vacationing in Augusta, Ga.

The retired five star general is in a cardiac care unit "where all modern conveniences for treatment and available together with nursing service," the base said.

Two heart specialists were flown here from Walter Reed late Monday night.

The statement said Eisenhower is on a light, low-calorie, low-sodium diet. It added: "A general prognosis cannot be made at this time."

The diagnosis said simply "A thorough evaluation of studies which have been conducted has indicated that Gen. Eisenhower has sustained a mild cardiac infarction."

AGE PROBLEM

Frenchman lives 2 days following heart transplant

PARIS (AP)—A 66-year-old French grandfather, the oldest man to undergo a heart transplant, died Tuesday 51 1/2 hours after he received a new heart. The doctors who grafted it said the patient's age had been a major problem.

Clovis Roblain, a retired truck driver called "Pop" by his friends, succumbed to an insufficient flow of blood to the brain, never regaining consciousness after a nine-hour operation Saturday night, doctors at La Pitie Hospital said.

They had given Mr. Roblain, who suffered a cardiac attack last year, the heart of Mihael Gyppaz, a 23-year-old metal worker who died of brain injuries Friday from an auto collision.

Dr. Maurice Mercadier, who headed a 10-man surgical team, said "we must have a patient sufficiently resistant to have a chance of success" in operations the team plans to perform in the future.

"We will attempt a new transplant if the conditions of the patient who would undergo it are more favorable," he said.

Dr. Leon Schwartzberg, the team's immunologist, said that if the patient's age had been 30 instead of 66, his chances of survival would have been four times greater.

But even with his death, the doctors noted that the transplanted heart functioned well.

Only one of the seven persons to undergo transplants since last December has survived. He is Philip Blaiberg, the South African dentist.

Mercadier said the Roblain family reaction "was very simple. They considered him as lost. They considered that we were giving him a little hope. They accepted this very well."

Doctors had been extremely conservative from the beginning about Mr. Roblain's chances of survival. In his first health bulletin, published Monday morning after word of the operation had leaked out, Mercadier said that "neurological complications made the prognosis very reserved."

It was explained that Mr. Roblain suffered a brief cardiovascular, or circulatory, collapse and for a short period his brain was blood-starved, inevitably causing some damage. At the time, the cerebral difficulties were described as "not yet irreversible."

Early Tuesday, Mercadier reported that urinary problems had arisen and that "neither the quantity nor the concentration of urine was satisfactory."

Two hours afterward, Mercadier summoned newsmen again to announce: "What we feared has come about. Mr. Roblain died at 10:30 a.m."

The doctors who performed the operation considered that Mr. Roblain had no chance of recovery from his heart ailment unless the transplant was attempted. A new technique, in which Dr. Christian Cabrol and Dr. Gerar Guiraudon were able to preserve the donor heart by constant injection of liquid, was employed in the operation.

Poor People's March: some prefer to forget

A Texas Representative described it as "intimidation by invading hordes."

And C. C. Fisher, D-Tex., could not have chosen a phrase less enlightened, less reflective of the "American ideal," less concerned, for his reaction to the coming Poor People's Campaign and march on the capital.

The vanguard of lobbyists for the Campaign in Washington D.C., arrived Monday and met with top government officials to present their demands.

Caravans and marches are now forming across the nation and are to converge on Washington next week... the nation's poor who want improvement of their lot. Hopefully the march will retain the spirit of dignity and peace advocated by the late Dr. Martin Luther King, to whom the march was of primary importance.

"Give me your tired, your poor... but America has its own tired and poor. And we read the reports "On Capitol Hill, some members of Congress were annoyed at the campaign." Annoyed? At being reminded of unfulfilled commitments, of neglect and of inefficiency, perhaps.

More, much more, time and energy and money are devoted to the war in Vietnam. Welfare isn't the answer to any long-range goal. Much of the funds allocated for various forms of aid is lost to the bureaucracy and never reaches those in need. It's all a huge, hard-to-change problem; the kind we'd somehow rather forget.

No, some Congressmen don't want poor people bothering them with their presence in Washington; it's more difficult to overlook something so obviously in existence.

Fisher's attitude is virtually the worst possible. A legislature antagonistic to its own people is hardly something of which to be proud.

Perhaps some of the demands of the marchers will be economically unrealistic, that is, some recommended steps will not yield intended results.

Nevertheless, Congress must listen. And Congress must be willing to make major and massive commitments to those workable suggestions in order to meet the needs of internal America.

Your hordes, Mr. Fisher, will not cease to be by closing your eyes to what brought them there.

"Put not your trust in princes." This agonized cry has been repeated down the centuries by men who discovered too late that power and "reason of state" could play havoc with human trust. The case of Arthur Goldberg is only the latest episode in this long history.

Here was a smart, tough, knowledgeable man who had three careers: in the labor movement, the Cabinet and on the U.S. Supreme Court. He had reached the dream post of every lawyer and administrator, a lifetime tenure of independence on the court. But Lyndon Johnson needed a man of great prestige to take the United Nations post when Adlai Stevenson suddenly died, and he needed him badly. He soft-talked and blitzy-talked Justice Goldberg into it.

No political innocent
Goldberg was no political innocent, and no one's patsy. It was a brilliantly imaginative appointment, made by a master of the dramatic, surprising move. But Goldberg, a restless, mobile man who had always gravitated to power and excitement, felt too cramped and safe on the bench. He wanted to be where the action was, and in our time it has been in global politics. Who can guess what the President promised the Supreme Court justice, expressly or tacitly, when he took him up on a high mountain and showed him the plains below? Who can guess what

HHH, Rocky enter race

The pundits have been saying that it was inevitable and although their record in this topsy-turvy political year didn't commend them to our confidence, they were right this time. New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Vice President Hubert Humphrey have entered—officially, as they say—the race for their respective party's Presidential nomination.

Humphrey threw his hat into the ring Saturday in a rather gushy affair, surrounded by his friends, in Washington, calling for unity of the Democratic party and the nation. Rockefeller formally announced his candidacy at a news conference in Albany, surrounded by his friends, calling for unity of both the Republican party and the country.

The parallel doesn't end there. Attending both announcements were unlikely supporters of either candidate. Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., spoke at the luncheon meeting where Humphrey announced his candidacy. He had formerly been rumored as a possible running mate for Robert Kennedy.

But most striking was the attendance of William Miller, Barry Goldwater's running-mate in 1964, at Rockefeller's news conference. When Rockefeller was asked whether he thought the party's "conservatives" would support him, Sen. Thruston Morton, R-Ky., who supports Rockefeller's candidacy, made a sweeping gesture toward Miller. Later he said, "I sure hope the TV cameras caught that."

phrey have been under pressure from party colleagues to enter the race, and certainly their support must be significant. But both realize a hard fight ahead of them.

Humphrey represents to many the Johnson administration. His stand on the war will surely be difficult to articulate as his own and not the President's. But as Humphrey said previous to his announcement, "I am my own man. I have my own personality." He will certainly continue to stress that theme.

Rockefeller as yet has not expressed his views on Vietnam, but has a speech scheduled for today before the World Affairs Committee luncheon in Philadelphia, where he has indicated he will speak on the U.S. position in Vietnam. Already, Rockefeller has advocated a $150 billion program over ten years for the cities.

Of course, Humphrey suddenly found himself in the spotlight after the President's March 31 address in which he stated he would not run, nor would he serve if nominated for the Presidency. Thus he has had a shorter time to fully conceptualize the views he will express in the campaign.

Neither Rockefeller nor Humphrey is planning on participating in the remaining primaries, but their entry into the race rounds out the slate of national candidates. The field is now balanced, the alternatives are set. Ahead looms what may well be one of the most vivacious and exciting campaigns in American political history.

Goldberg bows out

dreams the justice dreamed on his own? when he left his safe Supreme Court perch and took that U.N. post with all the tempest swirling around it. He knew it, but he may have thought he had some immunities that others had not possessed.

His constituency

He had what he used to call privately a "constituency"—a considerable measure of support from labor and minority groups and from liberal opinion. He may have felt that this strengthened his bargaining position inside the Administration and gave him a leverage to influence the President and his policies. The threat of a dramatic resignation at the right moment, with all the noise it would make, was one that could not be brushed aside.

But that was not how it worked out. The ambassador turned in a superb performance at the United Nations, but it was really a more cramped post than the Supreme Court had been. He became more and more isolated from the Washington military and political power centers. The brief he had to make for his government at the United Nations didn't do him any good with his "constituency" at home, and it eroded some of the influence he had carried with liberals. Finally, the President withdrew from the political campaign, and Goldberg's political bargaining strengths all but evaporated.

The worst blow was the decision to use diplomatic channels outside Goldberg's U.N. post—through Harriman, Vance, Sullivan and others—as the primary channels for beginning peace negotiations with Vietnam and the bogging down over the choice of a site. It all added up to Goldberg's decision to go, and go fast.

Less than generous

I feel that President Johnson was far less than generous with him in announcing his resignation "with regret" and with no word about his skill, his devoted work, his sacrifices. Doubtless he provoked the President by his urgency, but after his own generous gesture in throwing away a safe judicial career to serve the nation he deserved more than the chary, almost churlish dismissal by a President not notable for his grace.

Fortunately, the final word on him will not be spoken by the President, but by the historians. On three areas—on labor history, on constitutional history, on U.N. history and world diplomacy—he will have left a considerable mark.

Just as he was restless as a public servant, he is likely to be restless as a private citizen. His withdrawal is bound to be followed by a return of some sort. But mostly what I shall remember about him is the courage he showed and the kind of gamble he took when he left the Supreme Court and decided to go for broke—even if it didn't work.

Black athletes cite distortion, misquotation

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following are the statements made Tuesday by head football coach Duffy Daugherty, the steering committee of the Black Students' Alliance, and the black athletes of MSU on the boycott last week by the black athletes.

Black Students' Alliance

In light of the fact that MSU has released a false report as to the causes for and the termination of the boycott by the black members of its athletic teams, we must bring to light the following facts: The boycott was not a "misunderstanding" nor were the grievances "alleged." Also, the agreement with the black athletes is not "entirely an internal matter." The concerns of the black athletes are the concerns of all black students and citizens. It is important that the public know the full details of what transpired between the black athletes and the University. The boycott was necessary because the University and in particular Biggie Munn had failed to respond to black students. There was no "misunderstanding" and not one single black athlete regrets the boycott. The boy-son Field House, the Intramural Bldg. and the Ice Arena and the University will give on the job training if necessary. The University will bypass the Personnel Office in the hiring of these employees because the personnel office moves too slowly.

1. The University has already hired a black football coach. It has agreed to move toward hiring another football coach. The University is in the process of hiring a black track coach. The University has agreed to do everything to have a black basketball coach by September of this year.
2. The University will make efforts to recruit black baseball players and swimmers.
3. The University will "right away" actively seek black employees for Jennings.

The boycott was effective and the athletes returned to their teams only because the University agreed to act immediately on the demands of the black athletes.

The Steering Committee of the Black Students' Alliance of MSU.

4. The University will move "right away" to obtain black physicians and trainers.
5. The University will have black cheerleaders by September of this year.
6. The question of a black counselor will be discussed.
7. The University has agreed to meet with black athletes and students on June 1 of this year to discuss the progress made toward fulfilling these commitments.

Black athletes' statement

Due to the vast distortions, misquotations and adverse publicity regarding the boycott of the black athletes of MSU, we, the black athletes feel that the mass media and especially the State News falsified and misinterpreted our intentions leading to the boycott. We feel that certain persons took it upon themselves to interpret our feelings as black athletes and highlighted these falsehoods with belittling statements as to our integrity and sincerity.

The University seems to feel that the boycott was not necessary, but in light of the obstinate and dogmatic stand that the University took, we felt that the boycott was our only avenue of expression for grievances that had disturbed us for a long time.

We returned to the athletic teams after only two days after our demands were presented, but as stated before, our actions were predicated on the University's response to our grievances. We boycotted because the initial response of the University was apathetic and we returned because the University's later response indicated a rapid alleviation of our grievances.

It should be known that not a single black athlete regrets the boycott. Let it also be known that scholarships, personal gain or public acclaim did not prevent us from standing up and asserting ourselves as black men in this racist society. We, as students, athletes, but most important as black people, want it known that our problems are just a segment of the problems which face all of our people in this country. The black students' problems are the black athletes' problems and the black athletes' problems are the black students' problems. We as black people share in this common fight against a society that will not allow black people to meaningfully participate in it.

We hope that our efforts will encourage our brothers throughout the nation to search their souls and to ask what might be done to insure a proper place for us in a new society.

The black athletes of Michigan State University

Coach Daugherty's statement

I would like to take issue with Joe Mitch's column in Tuesday's edition of the Michigan State News.

Joe was wrong when he stated the black athletes returned to practice because they feared the loss of their scholarships. I never stated that this was being considered. In fairness to our black athletes, it should be accurately pointed out that their conviction, highlighted by their request for equal opportunities in all phases of university life, is more important to them than their role in athletics. It is easy to understand the discrepancies in Joe Mitch's column. Facts usually become garbled when they are obtained by listening outside the door of a closed meeting room.

POINT OF VIEW

The 20th century

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following point of view was written by Charles P. Larowe, professor of economics and Benjamin H. Banta, asst. professor of natural science in conjunction with "Law Day," which is being observed today.

By CHARLES P. LAROWE and BENJAMIN H. BANTA

Today we reflect upon the meaning of law and order as we celebrate "Law Day." Most Americans, we believe, have a preference for resolving differences of opinion through the democratic process and the orderly procedures that go with it rather than leaving decisions up to Big Brother. No matter how benign, nor how wise, he may be.

The Bill of Rights protects the citizen against arbitrary treatment by the state, even when the state assures him that in imprisoning him, or banishing him, or whatever, it is doing so in his own interest as a citizen. For, the state adds, a society that insulates itself against divisive influences is a happier, more productive society. And down through the years procedures have been developed within our legal system to make these rights meaningful. It is this aspect of "Law Day" that prompts us to comment on the recent letter to the State News from Jack Kane of the Physics Dept. One of the authors faced a comparable situation last spring, and we sympathize with the agonizing experience Kane is going through.

We cannot agree with Kane, however, when he says that he has exhausted "all avenues of appeal."

There is no avenue of appeal for a non-tenured faculty member, unless you want to call going to your department head and dean for an explanation an avenue of appeal.

When a faculty member is told he is not being reappointed, a systematic appeal procedure should be available to him if he wants to use it.

If we in the University are unmoved by the denial of basic rights to our non-tenured colleagues, are we not hypocrites when we lecture the administration for denying rights to students, whether black or white?

Appeal procedures of the kind we suggest already exist at other colleges and universities. Why not at MSU? Is this not, after all, the 20th century?

OUR READERS' MINDS

Rights on the campus

To the Editor:

On several recent occasions the Black Students' Alliance has asked President Hannah and the Administration to admit large numbers of students (black students, white students, American Indian and Puerto Rican students) whose educational background is deficient and would not be admitted to MSU under current admission policies. We feel it is important to note that Mr. Barry Amis has stipulated that some special assistance programs of a tutorial nature be given to these students. The idea is beautiful not because it involves black students—not because it involves white students. It is beautiful because it involves helping people who want to help themselves, and we feel this is the simplest and truest expression of what has so often been termed the American dream.

Let us ask what is required to initiate such a program. Mr. Amis and the Black Students' Alliance tell us that they will help to get the students for such a program. Encourage them to come but do not disillusion them, they will be starting college at a disadvantage. Administrative cooperation is needed. President Hannah has powerful tools and a great university behind him—we sincerely urge him to use these resources to implement such a program.

But what of the student when he arrives at the multiversity? He will need help: not because he is an inferior person, not because he is stupid and not because he is lethargic. He will need help simply because he has not had much help in the past. We would like to help these students via some type of special tutorial service in the areas in which we are competent (Nat. Sci., Bio-Sci., Chem., etc.), and to call on graduate students in other departments to do the same. Massive, voluntary tutorial programs operated by the graduate students of this university are a reasonable and realizable possibility. A program of this nature is something concrete into which the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) could sink its newly formed teeth. What about it? Are we willing to forego Mission Impossible and one flick every other week. Unlike so many other suggested programs we don't want your money, but we need your interest and a small share of your time.

What of the facilities required for such a program? Can there be any logical objection to using unoccupied university classrooms and chalk in the evenings and on Saturdays? What of various non-academic groups and foundations associated with the university who have voiced support for the requests of the BSA? Would these groups also lend the use of their conference rooms and cafeterias?

We feel this university has the resources to be a true national leader in this type of program. But, such a program would require the support of everyone—faculty, administration, grads and undergrads. We have asked our departmental representative to the COGS to bring this matter before that body and urge action as soon as possible. We ask other students and faculty members who agree with us to express their opinions: to the State News, to ASMSU, to their roommates, to the administration. Do so with the conviction of righteousness, but with the reasonableness of just men.

Edmund Burke once said something to the effect of, "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is for honest men to do nothing." To the MSU Community and ourselves we address a simple question, "Are we honest men?"

Where is student opinion?

To the Editor:

It's too bad your editorial on the ASMSU grade forum didn't come about a month ago—before it was "too late."

It is regrettable that no forums have been held on the grading report since the Educational Policies Committee passed it. Yes, the Academic Council has approved all but one of the recommendations, but consideration of the report is far from over. When the package proposal is approved, it will be sent to the Academic Senate for consideration at its May meeting.

The Senate must accept or reject the package, as the State News pointed out, but individual recommendations may be discussed. If there is some objection—either student or faculty—to a part of the report, the package may be returned to the Academic Council for further consideration. This is what happened in 1964 to a report which included a recommendation for a C-plus grade.

It is not too late for student opinion to be expressed. The question is whether there is student opinion, and this is what the ASMSU forum is all about—to educate those who need it and to listen to those who have not yet been heard. Just such a forum last spring instigated the proposal for a credit-no credit grading system, which has now been approved by the Academic Council.

It is not the intention of this forum to delay the report. It is the concern of those who are working on the forum that the student involvement with the report, which was strong in the formative stages, be continued. And it hasn't.

The recommendation on a 10-point scale, which has also been approved by the Academic Council, was an EPC (faculty) idea, not a student idea. The student grading committee never discussed this, except on a philosophical basis, and the open hearing last spring showed more negative than positive reaction. This, more than any other part of the report, is certainly a faculty proposal. I would like to have some student reaction on it and hope the ASMSU forum next Monday night will bring some.

Chronicle of MSU racism

To the Editor:

Congratulations to William H. Pipes, ATL instructor, on being promoted to full professorship last week by the Board of Trustees.

Pipes came to MSU in 1957 from Wayne State University. He attended Tuskegee Institute where he earned his B.S. degree, Atlanta University where he got his M.A. in English, and the University of Michigan earning a Ph.D. in speech. Pipes has been a professor and administrator at several colleges: Fort Valley State College (Ga.); Langston University (Okla.); Southern University (La.); Alcorn College (Miss.); President 4 years; Philander Smith College (Ark.); Academic Dean 7 years; Wayne State University (Detroit); and Michigan State University since 1957 as assistant and later associate professor of American Thought and Language.

Pipes has written four books (Sin Amen, Brother!; The English Major; Is God Dead?; Death of an "Uncle Tom") and has published more than 30 articles.

When Pipes came to MSU he had published two books and more than 20 articles, he had been a college professor, academic dean, and president for twenty years; and yet Michigan State offered him no more than an assistant professorship! As Pipes relates in his book Death of an "Uncle Tom": "Department Head Bagwell reminded me that I was being honored (at any rank) as only the second Negro teacher hired by the school in its 103-year history." At the present time there are roughly a dozen Negro instructors teaching at MSU, a terribly low number! The threatened boycott by Negro athletes pointed out that there is a very small percentage of Negroes working in any capacity at Michigan State, not just teaching.

In my opinion, this illustrates that racial prejudice and white racism are wide spread on this campus. My only hope is that the actions of the Board in awarding Pipes his much deserved professorship and President Hannah's ad hoc committee on race relations are indicative of a changing attitude and a step toward ending discrimination at MSU.

To Pipes I again extend congratulations.

Batsmen win twice with walks, steals

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

MSU's baseball team won by walks in the first game and steals in the second game to sweep a doubleheader from Eastern Michigan 5-1 and 5-0 Tuesday at Old College Field.

The Spartans rode the six-hit pitching of Zana Easton and six first inning walks to victory in the first game and then used two stolen bases by Rich Harlow and Joe Gavel and subsequent Huron errors to take the nightcap.

Easton went all seven innings in the first game to record his fourth victory against two defeats. Besides limiting Eastern to four hits, he struck out six batters and walked only two.

The Huron's only run came in the last inning, when a triple by pinch hitter Terry Rothwell scored Don Frederick from first. Frederick had reached first when shortstop Terry Collins, who had singled, was forced out at second.

MSU scored three of its runs in the first inning despite only sending two batters to the plate officially.

Netters top Wayne

DETROIT—Despite starting with a two match handicap, the MSU tennis team romped to its sixth victory in seven starts with a 7-2 win over Wayne State Wednesday.

The Spartans' only two losses came as a result of forfeits due to the absence of Mickey Szilagyi and Orhan Enuston.

Enuston suddenly developed a pinched nerve in his arm today and was unable to make the trip. Szilagyi had prior commitments.

MSU's Chuck Brainard, Rich Monan, John Good, Steve Schaffer and Garry Meyers all swept to straight set wins in their singles matches.

Eastern starter Bill Giffin walked five men in the inning and reliever Jay Schwalm walked another. Tom Binkowski had the only MSU hit in the inning, a double to right field, but was out moments later trying to steal third.

Rich Miller accounted for the other two Spartan runs with a 375-foot home run to right field with third baseman Steve Garvey on base. It was Miller's second home run of the season.

In the second game, the four hit pitching of sophomore right-hander Phil Fulton and the base running of Harlow and Gavel sparked the Spartans.

Fulton went all the way to pick up his second victory without a loss. Fulton struck out seven Huron hitters while walking four.

MSU picked up four runs in the third inning starting when Dick Vary reached base by forcing Steve Rymal who had walked. Fulton then singled, Gavel walked, and Harlow singled to score both Vary and Fulton.

With Gavel on third base and Harlow on first, the Spartans worked a double steal and Harlow took third on a throwing error by the Huron second baseman.

MSU's leading hitter Harry Kendrick then singled Harlow home.

After successive singles by Gavel and Harlow in the fifth inning the Spartans worked the steal again with the same result but Harlow was stranded at third.

Fastball

MSU's baseball team swept a doubleheader from Eastern Michigan Tuesday at Old College Field to up its record to 17-7. The Spartans will have four Big Ten home games this weekend. Mel Behney, shown here pitching against Michigan, will be MSU's starting pitcher in the first game.

Derby Trial Stakes won by Proper Proof

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Proper Proof, the California Derby winner, charged between horses in the stretch at Churchill Downs Tuesday to win the $16,350 Derby Trial Stakes to enhance his stock for Saturday's running of the Kentucky Derby.

With Jockey Johnny Sellers in the saddle, Proper Proof started his big run on the turn into the stretch and fought to the front within the last 1/16th of a mile to beat Jig Time in the final prep race for the first of the Triple Crown classics.

Proper Proof, a $15,000 yearling buy, swung outside four horses to find racin room in the stretch. Jig Time and Verbatim were up front battling for the lead along with Big Bend.

When Big Bend tired in the struggle, he drifted in front of Proper Proof but continued to drift out, giving the winner a clear shot at the wire.

Sellers, who won the Kentucky Derby with Carry Back in 1961, gunned Proper Proof to the wire and the colt made it in a rousing finish. The victory was worth $10,627.

Lacrosse club whips Ball St. for initial win

The MSU lacrosse club won its first game of the season last weekend topping Ball State 16-7.

Steve Harrington had four goals and two assists. Tom Sbarra scored twice and Jerry Vey-

BEGINS HERE FRIDAY

Northern golf tournament may preview Big 10 meet

By GARY WALKOWICZ
State News Sports Writer

If history does indeed repeat itself then the winner of this weekend's Northern Intercollegiate Golf Tournament should win the Big Ten championship.

This year's tournament, which is being held on Friday and Saturday at MSU's Forest Akers Course, is the third annual. The winners the first two years have both gone on to win the Big Ten title.

In 1966 the event was held at Indiana and was won by Ohio State. The Buckeyes went on to win the conference crown.

Purdue took the league title after winning the Northern Tournament last year.

Regardless of who wins the team title, local golf fans will have an opportunity to see what MSU Coach Bruce Fossum calls "one of the best collegiate golf tournaments in the country."

The 72-hole tournament is sponsored by the Big Ten Golf Coaches Association and the field annually includes all the Big Ten teams plus several top non-conference foes. This year's field will total 13 teams. Notre Dame, Ohio University, and Miami (Fla.) join the Big Ten.

The consensus of opinion of several of the coaches is that four Big Ten schools, Indiana, Ohio State, Michigan and MSU should be battling for team honors.

Pool opens Friday

The Men's Intramural outdoor swimming pool has been filled, but will not be open for swimming until Friday.

The reason for the delay is that the chlorine content of the pool is not yet up to specifications or required standards.

No glass bottles will be allowed within the pool area. Students are asked to come prepared to swim as locker space is at a premium this term.

Indiana has made the best showing of these four teams in early season action. The Hoosiers have a dual meet mark of 8-0-1. Their coach, Robert Fitch, however, feels that "we haven't come together yet."

"Some of our boys are playing well," he said, "but overall we still have a long way to go."

Fitch has already chosen Jim Cheney, Steve Cisco, Ron Essenspreis, Dan May and Wayne McDonald as five of the six golfers that he will use in the tournament.

Cheney, Cisco and May were three of the top five individual finishers in the Indiana tournament earlier this year with Cheney taking medalist honors.

Ohio State Coach Rod Meyers is "real pleased" with the progress of his team.

"We started off slow on our spring trip but have been improving steadily from week-to-week," he said.

The Buckeyes were the winners at the meet at MSU last Saturday and OSU's Ralph Colla was the medalist.

"The boys enjoyed playing the Forest Akers Course and are confident that they can play it well again," Meyers said.

Michigan Coach Bert Katzenmeyer has seen the pendulum swing the other way for his team.

"I was very pleased with our performance at Miami on our spring trip but we haven't been playing well lately. Of course our boys have just come out of exams," Katzenmeyer said.

U-M lost to MSU in a dual meet a week ago at the Michigan course.

Katzenmeyer said that John Schroeder, Frank Groves, Rod Sumpter and Randy Erskine will be playing for the Wolverines plus two other players to be chosen in an intra-squad tournament.

The fight for the individual honors should be "a wide open fight," according to IU's Fitch.

Lynn Janson and Steve Benson of MSU, John Schroeder and Frank Groves of Michigan, Ralph Colla and Mike Good of Ohio State and Jim Cheney from Indiana seem to have the best shots at it," Fitch added.

Cycling Club sponsors 35-mile race Saturday

The MSU Cycling Club will sponsor a 35 mile cycling race Saturday starting at 1 p.m. on West Circle Drive.

Five MSU racers will be participating in the race, Paul Meirer, president of the cycling club said.

The other MSU racers are Fred Beckwith, a senior who is second in all-college racing and who was fourth in the 1966 National Championship;

Karl Pearson, a senior and a specialist in this type of racing, Mark Palmer and Russ Conner.

Beckwith, Pearson and Meirer have been training for the Olympics.

Other riders will be coming from as far east as Maryland and New York and as far west as St. Louis.

Bookstore shoplifting experienced firsthand

By JIM GRANELLI
State News Staff Writer

As I walked into a local bookstore Tuesday morning, I quickly realized that there were only about five customers in the place.

An early morning shower and sporadic drizzling freshened the atmosphere giving the entire surroundings an innocent appearance.

When I walked into the store, the sun was shining and the heat had dried much of the pavement—for the moment.

Hurrying down the aisle, I saw a marking pen I needed. Taking a quick look around and seeing nobody watching me, I grabbed the pen and shoved it in my coat pocket. I never lost a stride. A second pen fell to a lower shelf knocking something else over, but I was already well past the area.

As I turned the corner by a stack of notebooks, I realized that I could take better notes in an empty book. So I slid a notebook off the stack and kept walking.

In the paperback book section, I relaxed for a moment. With a marking pen in my pocket and a notebook down the sleeve of my jacket, I loosened my belt to fit a small paperback book in under the waistband of my slacks.

My right hand went to the top of the book stand to get any book I might come across. Meanwhile, as I leaned against the stand, I lifted the book I really wanted with my left hand and put it under my belt.

The book fit beautifully, but I didn't know if I could fit another book in because I had gained more weight than I thought I had. I decided to try anyway.

The second book I wanted was one of the larger Hemingway books. I found out later that the book I got wasn't the one I reached for.

Leaving the paperback section with four items hidden wasn't too hard, but the larger book slipped out of place creating a bulge under my jacket. I scurried back into the book section to rearrange the book.

I decided to go back to the scene of my first pickings. However, there was an employee straightening the shelves in that area. I decided to be brave. The thought of stealing something from under an employee's eyes fascinated me. She didn't see what I took.

Unfortunately, neither did I. But the store detective saw the jar of paint go into my pocket and he was right behind me as I walked out the door.

"Would you please come with me," he said as he quickly flashed his badge at me.

Not wanting to work up a sweat running, I obliged. Besides, it had started to rain again.

Back in the manager's office, the first thing I noticed was the view of the entire store. From a little hole in the top of the wall, one could see, with the aid of mirrors, in every little corner and down every aisle.

"Would you place the items on the table," he said.

That's clever, I thought, to ask for "the items" instead of "the pen and the book" or "the three items."

"Are you from the State News?" he asked as I put all five items on the table.

was nice to know I was immune from punishment for this particular crime. I didn't need a criminal record to go with my application for a job in the future.

East Lansing police receive about five letters each week from employers and 25 inquiries from the federal government. Each letter is seeking information about a former student's record. I want to make sure that five years from now, the East Lansing police never knew who I was.

Yet in this controlled situation, I couldn't really appreciate how a shoplifter acts; what he

In Lansing a somewhat lighter sentence is usually given. An assistant prosecutor in Ingham County said that, depending on the circumstance, the policy of the prosecutor is to go the misdemeanor route, that is, simple larceny.

"Hopefully they'll get a light fine and they'll never do it again," he said. "We doubt if the easy policy sets an example."

Harmon's stiff example in East Lansing has been in effect since the middle of winter term.

The prosecutor's office is concerned with the disparity between the East Lansing and Lansing judges.

But still there's the student who doesn't want his friends to leave without him and, since the lines are so long, he decides to take that roll of tape with him.

Agreeing to pay for the item after being caught does not usually lessen the management's will to prosecute.

A ride to the police station follows, where mug shots and fingerprints are taken. Arraignment is next in which guilt is admitted or a trial is set to determine guilt.

If guilt is proven, the sentence is meted out.

The prospect of going to jail didn't exactly intrigue me. Anyway, I was told that "jail food is worse than dorm food."

For others the process is not as quick or as simple. Sometimes they feel that they've been roughed up a bit or police have questioned them about their possible membership in a shoplifting ring.

Another student is tied up trying to prove that he was fully intending to pay for the pen he had put in his pocket.

"I intended to buy it but I didn't even realize it was there," he said. "I hadn't had very much sleep in three days and I had just gotten through with my third final." He awaits trial later this month.

Other students were just as specific in their views on why they stole something. Comments came in saying, "My friends would have kidded me if I didn't take it" or "I needed the pen and since I was already buying an overpriced book, I felt they wouldn't lose much money" or "I just thought I could get away with it."

These views are from students who for a moment found themselves alone in a bookstore and realized that they needed a particular item if they could get away with it. These people can be termed

With a slight sign of relief, I verified the fact. It was a good thing I had asked the manager for his permission to "steal."

If I hadn't asked beforehand, I probably would have ended up in court pleading guilty to a misdemeanor, simple larceny, and paying a $75 fine. Judge William Harmon of East Lansing has also been sentencing violators to a few days in jail. I was far enough behind in my school work to realize I didn't want a few days off.

And if I decided to play the "tough guy" role, I would have probably been charged with larceny from a building, a felony which could cost me up to $2,000 and/or four years in jail.

At any rate, I smiled as I walked out of the store. It impulsive shoplifters because they did not intend to steal something beforehand. They take a chance and regret it when they're caught.

Though I worked in a controlled situation, I still felt a sensation of adventure. I didn't want to be caught and I tried my best to escape with what I could.

After getting caught in the first store, I decided to be a little more discreet. I went to the religion section in the next two stores seeking Father Kavanaugh's "A Modern Priest Looks at his Outdated Church." I knew that the book had not appeared in paperback yet; but by asking for it, I seemed to remove any doubt that I was a thief from the minds of the employees.

I did get caught in my own trap later. Asking for a certain philosophy book needed in one of my classes, I tried several more stores (taking a few things from each store).

I thought that no one would have the book because I had tried to get it before to no avail. But alas! The final bookstore I hit had the book I asked for.

a book I had put under my jacket and said "Here's part of your ten per cent."

East Lansing bookstore managers had claimed last fall that they lose about 10 per cent of their gross sales to shoplifters. The National Assn. of College Stores, with nearly 2,000 members, estimates that the loss is between two and three per cent nationally. study class is being supervised that deals with theft control in business and industry. The class is an experiment in individual case studies in police enforcement conducted by Leon Weaver, professor of police administration.

"Several students are emphasizing shoplifting in their reports," Weaver said.

Through books suggested by Weaver, these students will, among other things, look into the shoplifter motivation and whether or not to prosecute.

Yet with all the concern over shoplifting in the stores, there still remains one other slight problem within the security range of the stores.

To what extent to detectives and employees protect the books and materials that the shoppers are required to leave in the bins?

'Go-Go Granny' for Paulsen date

A night on the town with one of the most controversial candidates ever to grace a presidential campaign is in the offing for the winner of Grandmother's "Go-Go Granny" contest tonight.

The contest, held at Grandmother's, 3411 E. Michigan, is open to all women 21 and older. Participants will be judged according to audience response.

The grand prize is a date with Pat Paulsen, who'll be appearing at Grandmother's Friday through Sunday.

The evening's activities have not been decided upon as of yet, but according to Paulsen's East Lansing campaign manager, Philip May, it will probably be determined by the extent of his campaign fund.

Phi Sigma Delta to conduct muscular dystrophy drive

Phi Sigma Delta fraternity will conduct their third annual muscular dystrophy drive from May 6 to May 24.

Fraternity representatives will be selling tags for 50 cents and giving tickets for a drawing to be held Friday night, May 24, at Water Carnival. Tickets will be sold in residence halls, Greek houses and classrooms.

The state poster child will be flown in for the drawing and will pick the winner. First prize is a motorcycle and second prize is a portable stereo. Other prizes are gift certificates from East Lansing merchants.

This year's goal is $4,000. Last year's drive raised $1,100, the third highest amount raised in the country. Fraternity representatives presented the check to Jerry Lewis on television last year.

Phi Sigma Delta chapters across the nation participate in the muscular dystrophy drive annually.

FOR UNDERGRADS

Psych research: unique adventure

A unique program will enable 15 MSU undergraduates to gain first hand experience with on-going research in psychology this summer.

The sophomores, juniors and seniors will participate in 13 research projects as part of the fifth psychology undergraduate research participation program sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Abram M. Barch, professor of psychology and director of the program, said the program is unique because participants are chosen on the basis of interest and competence rather than grade point average.

Each participant will be supervised by a faculty member and may be in contact with interested graduate students.

"We try to have direct interaction between the undergraduate and the professor," Barch said.

Though the program is restricted to MSU students there is no restriction to a major field. One participant, Carla Posnansky, St. Paul, Minn., sophomore, is an elementary education major. She will research Language Behavior in Children and Adults, Human Skills.

Other research areas range from color vision to neuro-psychology. Barch pointed out that one topic, Mathematical Models of Small Group Interaction, comes closer to applied mathematics.

Barch said that in addition to the research projects, students participate in a seminar in order to give breadth to their study.

The seminar will explore ethical problems encountered in research as well as ways to maximize the usefulness of a problem.

Each student has the opportunity to view and discuss other projects. "I'm certain," Barch said, "they get more from the informal communication."

The psychology undergraduate research participation program has enjoyed a good amount of success at MSU, according to Barch.

"It is clear," he said, "that the quality of the work of some undergraduates is equivalent to professional work." He added that a high percentage of the participants have gone on to graduate school or professional work.

South Viets sweep into A Shau Valley

SAIGON (AP)—South Vietnamese troops have swept into the southern part of A Shau Valley as U.S. air cavalrymen fight down from the north, tightening the squeeze on that North Vietnamese stronghold, U.S. officers reported Tuesday.

Slightly lifting security wraps on the operation that opened April 19, officers in Da Nang on the coast 50 miles east of the valley said the South Vietnamese ran into light resistance on entering Monday.

Troops of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division reported little opposition in the first three days of the operation, but security has prevented any report on their progress since.

The lack of resistance indicated that the main North Vietnamese force has not yet been encountered or that it pulled out into nearby Laos in the past few weeks of relentless bombing by the eight-engine B52s of the Strategic Air Command.

For weeks, the North Vietnamese were reported building up supplies and troops in the valley, possibly for an offensive against Hue, the old imperial capital or other cities in the far north.

The South Vietnamese troops sent into the valley are among the best in the government's army. They were a regiment of the 1st Infantry Division, which has been sharing duties with U.S. Marines and the air cavalrymen in the northern part of the country.

The U.S. Command said that in the first three days of the operation, 174 North Vietnamese troops were killed. U.S. losses in that period were listed as 19 killed and 135 wounded.

In Saigon, reports circulated again of a possible enemy attack or shelling of allied installations. They appeared to arise from the fact that Wednesday is May Day, an important Communist holiday. Generally, however, enemy action in South Vietnam has not come at predicted times.

U.S. military officials reported that latest intelligence advances indicate that North Vietnamese regulars now make up at least 70 per cent of the enemy's organized combat forces in South Vietnam.

The disclosure apparently was made in an effort to show the Hanoi regime is taking on an ever increasing role in the war from the Viet Cong. The spokesman asserted the Viet Cong is having trouble recruiting men in South Vietnam.

It also was learned that the Air Force's supersonic F4 jets did not fly bombing missions Tuesday from Thai bases for the fourth consecutive day.

This is the third time since they were introduced to the Vietnam war theater in March that the F4s have been taken out of action. The swing-wing bombers had resumed flying last Friday after being halted following the loss of a third F4 April 22.

Deadline today for poetry entries

Today is the final day for submitting entries in the creative writing contest sponsored by Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman scholastic honoraries. Samples of fiction and poetry may be dropped off at 325 Morrill Hall in competition for $100 first prizes, $50 second prizes, and $25 third prizes.

All students are eligible excluding the judges, who will be drawn from Collage and The Red Cedar Review as well as the faculty. Staffs of these magazines are also ineligible. All manuscripts will be considered for publication in the Red Cedar Review, and the winners will be published in Collage. Previous publication must be mentioned in offering manuscripts.

U.S. reports mass murder of S. Vietnamese citizens

SAIGON (AP)—Enemy troops executed more than 1,000 persons, burying some alive and shooting or beheading others, while they occupied Hue in February, the U.S. Embassy reported Tuesday.

Most of the victims were South Vietnamese, but they also included two French priests, three South Koreans and a Hong Kong Chinese who was a British subject, the embassy said.

There have been piecemeal reports of the slaughter of civilians while the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong occupied the old imperial capital during the Tet offensive, but this was the first time any officials gave an over-all picture.

An embassy spokesman said it took two months to compile the reports from allied sources and South Vietnamese police because officials wanted to be sure of accuracy.

One South Vietnamese political warfare officer estimated that fully half the victims were buried alive.

"Many had been shot, some beheaded," said the embassy report. "A number of bodies showed signs of mutilation. Most were found with hands bound behind their backs."

"Evidence also was discovered of victims having been clubbed unconscious prior to being buried alive."

One Buddhist monk told investigators that almost nightly from a field behind the pagoda he and other monks heard cries for mercy and shots.

In all, 19 mass graves were found in and around Hue, the embassy said. The largest grave, containing 201 bodies, was found near the imperial tombs.

"Victims included Father Urbain, 52, and Father Guy, 48, French priests from the nearby Benedictine mission at Thien An," the report said.

"Father Urbain was bound hand and foot and buried alive with 10 others. Father Guy was forced to kneel and shot through the head."

Another large grave was found at Gia Hoi high school. Almost 200 bodies were found there, and about half the victims apparently were buried alive, the embassy said.

In another grave were 77 bodies, including those of three South Koreans and a Hong Kong Chinese. Another grave contained the bodies of about 50 women.

Twenty bodies in a grave outside Hue were reported to be those of civilians seized by enemy troops from their refuge in the Redemptorist church at Hue Feb. 8 and taken on a death march.

"They were interred alive, with hands bound," the embassy said. "The victims included Tran Vien, one of five elected senators from Hue in the National Assembly."

'LIVE FOR LIFE'

Director falls short of former success

By JIM YOUSLING
State News Reviewer

Two years ago, director-photographer Claude Lelouch gave us the tremendously successful "A Man and a Woman." Although the story was improbable and sentimental to the point of stupidity, no one could resist being seduced by the beautiful photography, the infectious music, and the charm of its actors.

Now we have Lelouch's latest, "Live for Life" or "A Man and Two Women." All the familiar ingredients are present. Once again, the camera swoops and swishes, peers through tinted filters and distorted glass, and generally makes everything look like a very good Eastern Airlines commercial. Once again, we are treated to two hours of the beautiful people living beautifully poignant lives in beautiful places (Amsterdam, Paris, the Alps and the African Veldt). And once again, everything is infiltrated by the "dum-dum-dum-dum-dum" music of Francis Lai.

Nevertheless, "Live for Life" falls far short of its predecessor. The problem, perhaps, is that Monsieur Lelouch was told that "A Man and a Woman" was unintellectual. Feeling insulted, he decided that this time, by gum, he'd show 'em who's unintellectual. And so, forsaking the mindless simplicity of "A Man and a Woman," Lelouch proceeded to make a fool of himself.

What might have been the simple story of a wife-husband-mistress triangle becomes an allegory of man's inhumanity to man. The man (Yves Montand) is a producer of television documentaries. Thus we are treated to old newsreel footage of Nazi Germany, wartime Japan, South African civil disorder, and even two bits worth of shallow tut-tutting about Vietnam. And the solution for it all seems to lie in a mystic devotion to Art (Van Gogh's devotion in particular).

Aside from these token pretensions, however, the film (which remains only a love story, no matter how hard Lelouch tries) has one other flaw. Her name is Candice Bergen. During the filming, Lelouch kept the mistress (Miss Bergen) and the wife (Annie Girardot) completely ignorant of each other and of the film's outcome. Thus, they were forced to react "naturally" to the husband's lies and affections.

Miss Girardot's responses are admirable. With a minimum of dialogue and a maximum of facial expression, she makes the wife a believable, truly beautiful person. Miss Bergen, on the other hand, hardly responds at all, leaving her fashion-model beauty as her only asset. Thus, it becomes inconceivable that the husband should be unfaithful in the first place unless (1) the wife has bad traits that we never see, (2) the mistress possesses equally invisible good ones, or (3) the husband is incredibly insensitive. If we accept either of the first two choices, Lelouch is a cheat. If we accept the third, then the fact that the wife comes back to him at the end (after establishing a new life with no apparent regrets) becomes a Hollywood finish unworthy of even an old Joan Crawford weepie.

In any case, Lelouch has pasted all this junk together with a sense of poetry and rhythm that is often breathtaking. The African safari sequence, the exploding car, the love scene, and the "surprise" ending are sufficiently stunning to make us forgive a great many faults. Lelouch has a talent for squeezing beauty from banality. If he could be satisfied with doing only the photography for a more talented writer-director, the result might be a masterpiece instead of an exercise in pretty pictures.

JMC's trial 'telelecture': an experiment in projection

By AIMEE PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Is a disembodied voice over the phone effective in instructing a group of students when the lecturer cannot be present?

They don't know yet, but Justin Morrill College (JMC) students are going to find out when David Riesman, noted professor of sociology at Harvard University, gives them a "telelecture" May 20 in Erickson Kiva.

As part of the "Inquiry and Expression" course in JMC, Riesman will speak and answer student questions on the topic "Coming of Age," which is being discussed by the class of 250 freshmen this term. Since he cannot be here in person, Riesman will be able to speak "from his desk or in his home," according to D. Gordon Rohman, dean of JMC.

"The telelecture device using loudspeakers is not new to the campus," Rohman said, "but it has not been frequently used for undergraduate education."

Through use of the telelecture, Rohman said he hopes to "pull in as many interesting people as possible with a minimum of inconvenience to them and a minimum of expense to us."

"We should use technology to enrich the undergraduate program and make more human use of the machines at our disposal to serve us," he said.

To make his presence more real, Rohman explained that a student and one faculty member visited Riesman recently and asked him questions that they thought would be asked by JMC students during the lecture. The interview was taped and transcribed when they returned. Copies of it will be given to the students to study before the telelecture in May.

"This way, the students and Riesman will have something in common when he speaks to them. They will have read his lecture beforehand and the entire hour can be devoted to a question and answer period," Rohman said.

He also mentioned that a picture of Riesman might be projected on a screen to give the student more of an idea of the man speaking to them.

"Riesman will bring in the national perspective in the question of 'becoming involved' which the students are now discussing," Rohman said.

Johnson takes initial steps to approve 'paper gold'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson launched a drive Tuesday for a quick U.S. ratification of a plan for paper gold — the first basic change in international currency in more than two decades.

In a special message to Congress, Johnson said the United States, as a leader in the five years of negotiations which led to the plan, should be one of the first nations to ratify it.

He called the plan a landmark and a historic step and said failure to approve it "could turn the clock backward to the dark days of restrictive economic policies, narrow interests, empty ports and idle men."

If ratified by 65 nations with an 80 per cent weighted vote in the International Monetary Fund (IMF) the agreement will represent the first basic change in IMF operations since the Fund was established by the Bretton Woods conference of 1944.

The new money would take the form of a bookkeeping entry on government and IMF books and would be called officially a Special Drawing Right, or SDR in the Fund. Individual citizens would never see it.

It would be created when and as needed to supplement conventional world money, gold, dollars and British pounds, and the United States would receive one-fourth of any money created.

The administration looks for adoption of the plan by Congress this year.

"We believe this will be greeted well in Congress and have indications of that from both sides of the aisle," said White House aide Joseph Califano.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler is scheduled to appear Wednesday before the House Banking Committee to urge adoption of the plan.

Johnson coupled his request for the new money with a fresh appeal to Congress to approval of the 10 per cent tax surcharge which he called "the best investment America can make to keep the dollar strong."

Earlier, in a speech before the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Fowler said time is running out for Congress to approve the surcharge and the spending cuts outlined by Johnson in his budget message last January.

But Sen. William E. Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate House Economic Committee, called for vigorous spending cuts instead of a tax increase.

He suggested deep cuts in public works and the space program and said four of the six U.S. divisions in Europe should be returned home.

The new international money plan would set up only the machinery for cranking out SDRs or paper gold.

Professor appointed to King Foundation

A MSU professor emeritus has been appointed to the national advisory committee of the Martin Luther King Jr. Foundation.

Carl M. Horn, who retired in July, 1967 as professor of counseling, personnel services and educational psychology in the College of Education, will serve as a local representative of the foundation.

The advisory committee is headed by Ella Fitzgerald and Sammy Davis Jr. John McCabe, president of Michigan Blue Shield in Detroit, serves as chairman. Other members of the committee include: Dr. Ralph Bunche, Under Secretary of the United Nations; Norman Drachler, superintendent of Detroit Public Schools; Burt Lancaster, Ertha Kitt, Louis Monacel, assistant superintendent of Detroit Public Schools and Longworth M. Quinn, editor of the Michigan Chronicle in Detroit.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Foundation has as its initial goal the establishment of a National Center for Civic Action in Washington to serve as a channel of last resort for "grass-roots" participation in local, state and national government.

The foundation also hopes to establish a Martin Luther King Jr. Reading Room in Washington with collections of speeches, books and television and radio tapes of Dr. King. Such a project would work in cooperation with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Morehouse College.

According to Horn, the foundation plans to take an action approach to race relations and urban problems. Offices are to be located at Wayne State University and Howard University in Washington, D.C.

Horn has been a member of the MSU faculty since 1947. He was organizer and director of MSU's first continuing education program from 1948-1950.

Information agency program offers foreign affairs training

The U.S. Information Agency (USIA) last week announced a new long-range program to prepare applicants from minority communities for careers in the agency's foreign service.

The program, the Foreign Affairs Intern Program, will combine on-the-job training with graduate study at George Washington University's School of Public and International Affairs in Washington, D.C.

Through the program, holders of bachelors degrees can acquire, at no cost to themselves, a master's degree plus specialized academic and job training in the foreign service.

All academic costs will be covered by a Ford Foundation grant to Washington University.

Further information may be obtained by writing USIA's Recruitment and Source Development Division, 1176 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C.

POOR PEOPLE'S CAMPAIGN

Abernathy consults leaders

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representatives of the Poor People's Campaign calling on some of the most powerful men in government continued to get red carpet treatment Tuesday but their leader insisted: "We don't just want sympathy, we want action."

Taking stock on the campaign's second day, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy assured his followers that polite receptions and declarations of good intentions won't sway him. The plan is still to bring thousands of poor persons to Washington, he said, to camp here and apply mounting pressure to the governmental apparatus until the lot of America's poor improves dramatically. "They were concerned about our demonstrations," Abernathy said after a round of conferences. "We made it clear we intend to conduct nonviolent, peaceful demonstrations. We also made it very clear to them that we are leaders of a revolution that is taking place in this country today."

Wherever members of the platoon of civil rights leaders and representatives of the poor went to present their grievances they were welcomed and given a full hearing.

There was no backlash from those on the receiving end, mainly because there were no confrontations with those members of Congress who claim the plan to bring thousands to the city for a months-long campaign is blackmail.

Abernathy spent 90 minutes with Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield-D-Mont., and Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

"We had a very friendly and, I thought, very constructive meeting," Dirksen said.

"They explained their aims," Mansfield said, adding "There were no threats, no demands."

But not all of the high level officials called on were dealt with so gently. Some were treated to right-between-the-eyes language.

Explanations of the complexity of the legislative process or the difficulty of getting funds seldom got far.

"You've got the power," a young white woman said curtly to Robert C. Weaver, secretary of housing and urban development. "If you can't do the job, then get out."

"You tell 'em sister!" shouted another member of the group as others clapped in approval.

So sympathetic was the Senate Labor committee listening to his testimony in the morning that Abernathy said jokingly it seemed "stacked" in the campaign's favor.

"No, I don't think so, Doctor," said Sen. Joseph S. Clark, Jr.,

D-Pa., the chairman. "We're just trying to give you equal justice under law."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., suggested that Cabinet officers whose programs were criticized by the witnesses should be summoned to a private meeting of the subcommittee for an accounting.

But Clark raised the ante. "I don't see why we should call the secretary of agriculture into an executive session," he said. "I'd like to call him into public session—and the secretary of health, education and welfare and the surgeon general too."

Some of the spokesmen for the poor were openly suspicious of all the politeness. One wondered aloud if the senators were "playing with us."

Hoover clarifies FBI role: not national police power

WASHINGTON (AP)—Director J. Edgar Hoover said Tuesday the FBI neither possesses nor seeks national police power to act in controlling riots.

Hoover made the comment in the May issue of the FBI's "Law Enforcement Bulletin," a monthly publication distributed free to about 56,000 police officials and judges.

The long-time FBI chief explained that he felt it necessary to clarify the FBI's role in civil disorders because it is frequently misunderstood.

There are those, Hoover said who "insist that the FBI is obligated to step in and usurp the power of local law enforcement and police the areas where, in their opinion, a breakdown of law and order has occurred."

"The FBI has no lawful

Air Society's blood drive aims at goal of 2,002 pints

The "Red Baron" balloon flying over the Stadium will not be shot down until the Arnold Air Society's blood drive reaches its 2,002 pint goal. So far only 170 pints have been donated.

The drive is being held in Demonstration Hall. Blood can be given today from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., 2 to 8 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday.

Anyone in good health from 18 to 61 can give blood. Those under 21 must have their parents' written consent.

The residence hall precinct with the highest percentage of donors will win a pizza party given by Domino's.

Triangle won the Greek day award for fraternities. There was no award given to sororities because they did not have enough participation.

Those desiring a free ride to Demonstration Hall to give blood can call 5-2391. The gas is being supplied by Meijer Thrifty Acres Department Store.

Academic rights group formed as student outlet

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

MSU's newest student-faculty standing committee could represent another outlet for students who have gripes about academic policy.

The Standing Committee on Academic Rights and Responsibilities, established by the Academic Freedom Report, will have "access to issues which have policy overtones," according to John D. Wilson, ex-officio secretary of the committee and director of undergraduate education.

"We want to be much more accessible than a last resort group," Wilson said. "We want to hear gripes of students."

In a constant process of "defining itself" since its organization winter term, the committee now feels fairly well established and ready to serve students "once they discover who we are and where we are," he said.

Wilson said the committee might even go as far as to not only consider general complaints, but also those of individuals. But, Wilson stressed, the committee is "not interested in matters of student conduct."

Two representatives from the committee attended the ROTC-Thomas hearing and Wilson said he would be "very surprised" if the group did not shortly become involved with the University's policy of visitation, so that rights of students could be spelled out.

The committee, however, would not be acting in "an investigative way," Wilson said, such as the Student-Faculty judiciary does.

Skip Rudolph, judiciary chairman, recently addressed the committee and emphasized its role in (feeding up the process a student used to air a complaint, Wilson said.

Wilson said that Rudolph pointed out that appealing to the judiciary is a rather complicated process that takes time.

Rather than wait for this long process, a student might be served more quickly by presenting his case before the Standing Committee on Academic Rights and Responsibilities.

The new committee can "make recommendations to the Provost and to the Academic Council on matters relating to the academic rights and responsibilities of students," reads the freedom report's charge to the ten-member committee.

Vote for McCarthy?

200 jobs disposed of in HemisFair slack

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) —The backers of San Antonio's HemisFair lopped off 200

Foreign students to display crafts at annual festival

The International Club will present arts and crafts of the nations of the world Saturday at its 24th annual International Festival.

Booth displays will be exhibited in the basement of the Auditorium from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Students from more than 20 countries will exhibit their native handicrafts, clothing and accessories.

At the 2 and 8 p.m. stage shows the students will perform national dances and ceremonies.

The purpose of the festival is "to emphasize the fundamentals of international understanding and the basic similarities of the people around the world," according to Narindar Gill, India graduate student and club president.

There is no admission charge.

jobs Tuesday to take up the fiscal slack caused by sagging attendance figures and laid plans for a campaign to get the home folk out to the 92.6 acre world's fair.

James Gaines, chief executive officer, called HemisFair "lean and hungry."

The leaness came from the firing of 200 from the 2,200 person staff around for HemisFair's opening. The hunger is for more spectators, especially from San Antonio.

HemisFair opened April 6, the day after Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated. Attendance was less than expected opening weekend and has remained so all along.

A HemisFair projection of attendance was based on passing the million mark Tuesday. Attendance through Monday was 633,746.

"I don't think any of us are kidding ourselves," Gaines said. "Gate income has not been up to expectations."

HemisFair President Marshall Steves complained to the executive committee meeting that downtown San Antonio does not look like the heart of a city hosting a world's fair. He singled out a large department store just off the fairgrounds for praise of its fluttering display of HemisFair flags but said the rest of downtown "is just too little and too late."

"Something ought to be done," Steves said. "It looks like hell."

HemisFair's timing was dictated by an agreement with Mexico that the fair would end before the Oct. 12 opening of the Olympic games in Mexico. The opening of the fair seemed to be a large part of the attendance problem. Some officials complained that HemisFair opened too far ahead of the summer vacation season.

The weather has been less than good.

FACULTY FACTS

Physics professor author of textbook

Frank J. Blatt, professor of physics, is the author of a newly published textbook, "Physics of Electronic Conduction in Solids."

Richard C. Dubes, associate professor of electrical engineering, has written a new book, "The Theory of Applied Probability."

Walter Adams, professor of economics, has been elected to the national council of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

Adams is the first member of the MSU faculty to be elected to the council, which determines programs and policies for the AAUP professional organization and its 87,000 teachers in higher education.

A member of the MSU faculty since 1957, Adams served as president of the MSU AAUP chapter in 1965-1966.

The life and writing of Brand Whitlock, early twentieth century American statesman and man of letters, is the subject of a study published by David D. Anderson.

Anderson, professor of American Thought and Language, had written numerous literary and biographical studies.

Two MSU professors and a Miami (Ohio) University faculty member are writing a series of 60 books about "Famous Negro Americans," with a foreword by the late Dr. Martin Luther King.

The books are authored by Louis Romano, associate professor of administration and higher education at MSU, Robert L. Green, MSU associate professor of educational psychology, and Nicholas P. Georady, associate professor of curriculum at Miami.

Terry Triffet, professor of metallurgy, mechanics, and materials science, presented a paper on "The Spirit of Engineering" to a symposium on Technology and the Spirit of Man at the College of Engineering at the University of Iowa in Iowa City last Friday.

Gail C. Blomquist, associate professor of civil and sanitary engineering, has received a National Defense Executive Reserve Commission from the U.S. Department of Transportation.

As a reservist, Blomquist would be called upon during a national emergency to fill a top level transportation engineering position in the Michigan Division of the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Big Ten benefits for grads

MSU doctoral students have the resources of all Big Ten graduate schools and the University of Chicago to them through the Committee on Institutional Cooperation.

Through the committee the doctoral student can take highly specialized and technical courses which he needs and are offered at another institution which belongs to the Committee on Institutional Cooperation.

As an example, a MSU doctoral student who is seeking his doctorate in bio-statistics would find few doctoral level courses offered in this area at MSU.

But if a cooperating institution, which includes Big Ten schools and University of Chicago, offers a needed course in his area, the doctoral student can apply to take the course there.

The procedure for application to a course is, to obtain permission of the chairman of graduate student's committee, obtain the approval of the instructor giving the course at the host institution, and to obtain the approval of the graduate dean of the home institution.

The student would pay his fees at MSU and receive credits from MSU for taking the course.

The list of courses includes everything from accounting to endocrinology to home economics to zoology.

MSU sent 13 doctoral students to other institutions in 1966-67 and received one. Last year 117 students were involved.
