

Tigers sock it to Cards, 4-1

Lolich, Northrup combine to end 23-year drought

ST LOUIS (UPI) — Mickey Lolich out-pitched World Series "master" Bob Gibson and the Detroit Tigers broke through for three runs in the seventh inning Thursday to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 and win their first world baseball championship in 23 years.

Lolich, the rugged individualist who drives a motorcycle to the Tigers' home games, matched shutout pitching with Gibson, winner of seven World Series games including two in this classic, until the seventh when the Tigers got one of the big breaks of the Series.

The break came with two out and Norm Cash and Willie Horton on base as a result of singles. Jim Northrup walloped a long drive to centerfield which appeared catchable. But Curt Flood, one of the best centerfielders in the majors, stumbled as he turned to run for the ball and it sailed over his head for a two-run triple.

Bill Freehan followed with a double to left field scoring Northrup and giving Lolich and the Tigers a 3-0 lead over Gibson, who had pitched one hit ball through the first six innings.

That's all Lolich, working with just two days rest, needed to enable the Tigers to become the third team in Series history to win a seven-game Series after trailing 3-1 and make himself the eighth pitcher to win three games in one Series.

The Tigers, a come-from-behind team all season as they won 40 games after being tied or behind in the seventh inning, were held to one hit by Gibson over the first six innings.

But the Tigers erupted for seven hits in the final three innings to snap Gibson's seven-game winning streak in Series competition.

A traditional late-season standout who likes to pitch in cool weather, Lolich was brilliant as he held the Cards to just five hits on the mild afternoon in the mid-60s while the crowd of 54,692 at Busch Memorial Stadium pleaded in vain for the Cardinals to solve his deliveries. But the only player to do so was Mike Shannon, who hit a solo homer with two out in the ninth, after the Tigers already had won the game.

Lolich also stopped the Cards' running game. In the sixth inning, he gave up singles to speedsters Lou Brock, who tied a series record with 13 hits, and Curt Flood. But then he proceeded to pick both of them off base.

It was the first time the Cardinals, who've won 12 pennants and seven World Series, have lost the seventh game of a Series. It was also only the third world championship for the Tigers—the first two were in 1935 and 1945—in eight attempts.

Gibson, who struck out eight to boost his Series total to 35 to break the record of 31 he set in 1964, was breezing through the seventh when he retired Mickey Stanley and Al Kaline before Norm Cash singled on a 3-2 pitch for his 10th hit of the series.

Willie Horton then hit Gibson's next pitch for a single to left that sent Cash to second.

Northrup, who led the Tigers in RBIs this year with 90 and hit a grand slam in the sixth game Wednesday, then stepped up and rifled Gibson's first pitch to centerfield.

It was a good shot but seemed well within Flood's reach until he stumbled and almost fell while going to his left. By the time he recovered, the ball was over his head for a two-run triple.

Anyway, it was enough to beat Gibson although Freehan then doubled in Northrup with an insurance run and singles by Horton, Northrup and Don Wert produced another run in the eighth.

While a stumble cost the Cards, the Tigers, who were sloppy when they lost (Please turn to page 7)

Students demand voice

By MARK EICHER
State News Staff Writer

Students at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, are "up in the air" concerning an announcement made by University Board of Trustees Chairman Fred Johnson that no students will aid in the selection of Ohio University's next president.

Student body vice-President Rita Coriell said, "Our student body president recommended Tuesday that students participate in organized disruption of University activities."

Dave Stivison, student body president, gave a "State of the Student Body" speech following the Chairman's announcement that no students will be named to the five-man selection committee which is to help choose the University's next president.

The selection committee was named September 13 by Johnson to make recommendations to the Board of Trustees. Ohio law requires that the Trustees, not the selection committee, make the final selection of the new president.

The committee contains three (of the nine) Trustees, one alumnus, and a faculty representative.

Johnson said Monday that no students would be named to the selection committee "simply because it has been decided by the Board of Trustees" that the present selection committee structure is adequate.

Johnson said the absence of students on the committee is not due to lack of student responsibility.

The entire Board of Trustees decided on the structure of the selection committee, Johnson said. However, two members of the selection committee said last week the final decision concerning who should be represented on the committee rested with Johnson—not the entire Board of Trustees.

In addition Johnson named two advisory committees to submit names to the selection committee for consideration. However, the selection committee can reject any of the names submitted.

One of the special advisory committees will consist of 13 University alumni scattered across the country while the other committee will contain 15 representatives—seven faculty members, to administrators, two non-academic employees, a representative of the Athens community, and three students.

Johnson asked student body President Stivison to appoint the three student representatives, but Stivison refused.

Egypt blames U.S. for Mideast deadlock

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad accused the United Nations Thursday of standing in the way of Middle East peace by supplying political and material support to Israel—including weapons and planes.

In a major policy address before the 125-nation General Assembly, Riad bitterly accused Israel of undermining the peace efforts of U.N. envoy Gunnar V. Jarring and of defying U.N. resolutions.

He attacked Israel's latest peace plan as an instrument of surrender for the Arab countries. The way to peace, he said, is through implementation of the Security Council resolution of last Nov. 22 which calls for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Arab territory occupied since the June war last year.

It is the duty of the Security Council, he said, to see that this resolution is carried out and it is the council's obligation, as well, to guarantee any agreed settlement.

"We cannot imagine," he asserted, "that Israel could have been able to continue its policy of aggression and defiance of the United Nations and its resolutions had it not been receiving the political and material support of the United States."

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Weather was "a bit of a question mark," but three confident Apollo 7 astronauts Thursday were given a "go" to blast off Friday on an 11-day space flight that could steer America back on course to the moon.

Even as the countdown clock began for an 11 a.m. liftoff, however, project officials admitted there was "a distinct possibility" the flight by veteran astronaut Walter M. Schirra Jr. and his two space rookie copilots, Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham, will not go the full 11 days.

"We expect the possibility—and we think it's a distinct possibility—to shorten it, but we are planning for the full duration," said William C. Schneider, Apollo 7 mission director for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Our most important learning for this flight is to determine how the spacecraft lasts," added flight director Glynn Lunney in a news conference.

"Weather is a little bit of a question mark at the moment," as far as the launch is concerned, said Dr. Werner von Braun, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., which developed Saturn-Apollo rockets.

"The predictions are good, but there will be some shower activity in the morning. And should the shower situation indicate that the wind prior to launch may increase, it may become necessary for the crew to leave the spacecraft in which case we would scrub for 24 hours," he said.

The $145 million, 163-orbit mission will answer two questions:

Has the nation recovered from the Apollo 1 tragedy, which killed three astronauts and grounded all manned space flights for 20 months?

Can Apollo spaceships safely fly men to the moon?

If the mission goes the full 4½-million miles, Navy Capt. Schirra, Air Force Maj. Eisele and civilian astronaut Cunningham will have logged a combined total of 780 man hours in space, compared to only 534 man hours accumulated by all Soviet cosmonauts to date.

Success also could clear the way for the next astronaut team, Apollo 8, to fly 10 or bits around the moon at Christmas-time. The 363-foot-tall Saturn 5 super rocket for that mission, scheduled to blast off about Dec. 20, rolled to its launch pad Wednesday.

LBJ balks at new attempt to oust Warren

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson pulled back Thursday from any new effort to replace Earl Warren as chief justice of the United States.

It was left unclear, however, whether Johnson might make another attempt before his term expires Jan. 20.

Warren submitted a notice of retirement last June to take effect at the President's pleasure. Johnson nominated Associate Justice Abe Fortas to head the court. At the same time he submitted the name of Homer Thornberry, an old friend who is now a U.S. Court of Appeals judge in Texas, to fill the vacancy that would be created by Fortas's elevations.

The Fortas nomination was blocked in the Senate by a filibuster and Johnson withdrew it, at Fortas's request.

In a statement Thursday Johnson recalled that he has said "I do not believe that I can find a person who is better qualified to succeed Chief Justice Warren in the nation's highest judicial post than Mr. Justice Fortas."

"I deeply regret that the Senate filibuster prevented the Senate from voting on the nomination of Justice Fortas. Had the Senate been permitted to vote, I am confident that both Justice Fortas and Judge Thornberry would have been confirmed. Their qualifications are indisputable."

"In ordinary times I would feel it my duty now to send another name to the Senate for this high office. I shall not do so."

"These are not ordinary times. We are threatened by an emotionalism, partisanship and prejudice that compel us to use great care if we are to avoid injury to our constitutional system."

Socialist Party:
only alternativeBy PHYLLIS ZIMBLER
State News Staff Writer

The Socialist party offers the only real alternative to the present political system in the United States, Paul Boutelle, vice presidential candidate of the Socialist party, told approximately 150 MSU students at 105 Kedzie Wednesday night in a speech sponsored by the MSU chapter of the Young Socialist Alliance.

"There is no basic difference between McCarthy, Humphrey, Wallace, Nixon and Rockefeller," he said. "They all support a capitalist society with private means of ownership."

The socialist platform calls for immediate and unconditional withdrawal of troops in Vietnam and also calls for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops all over the world.

"But were not isolationists," Boutelle said. The Socialists do not feel that it is right to have American troops interfering with other people in the world for the interests of the United States.

"Our position is that the U.S. government is the enemy of people fighting for their freedom," he said.

The Socialist party supports the struggle of the workers in the United States who are trying to reap more fruits from their labor.

"There can be no revolutionary change in America without the working class," he said. The workers are not at a level of consciousness to revolt yet, he explained.

"We support freedom for oppressed people and we support the Black Panther movement," Boutelle, who was wearing a "Red Power" button in sympathy with an Indian movement in Vancouver, Canada, said.

"People sometimes forget that black people are workers. Black people can't become free without a struggle against the capitalist system," he said.

Boutelle said that the present problems in the United States are serious and that the Socialist party is conducting a serious campaign. Their party will be on ballots in 21 states and they are conducting a write-in campaign in some other states.

My chances?

Paul Boutelle, vice presidential candidate on the Socialist Workers Party, spoke Wednesday to a gathering in Kedge saying that the Socialist Party was the only hope for the United States.

DISCUSS POLITICS, REFORM

Big 10 conference fruitful

By DEBORAH FITCH
State News Staff Writer
EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second article by ASMSU reporter Deborah Fitch on the Big Ten Student Body Presidents Conference held last weekend in Madison, Wis.

After it was established that Big Ten schools had an active interest in each other, their presidents set about putting it to work.

They trimmed their discussions to three main areas of interest: academic reform, student conduct and political involvement.

Wisconsin President David Goldfarb said that his government is trying to build a student movement for academic reform: "a cadre of people who know what they're doing." He is working on the establishment of a student-faculty-administration committee to determine and compare academic goals and streamline communications.

At Northwestern, President Fran Shanahan said, they are working for a comprehensive pass-fail system and, with the free university, an extension of student government. They are also implementing a plan to seat students on faculty planning committees in order to have a say in curriculum planning.

Jim Graham, National Student Assn. (NSA) vice president for campus affairs, told the group that very few schools have been successful in implementing academic reform and that, in fact, some schools are not ready to experiment.

Art Costantino, NSA coordinator at MSU and coordinator of the conference, added that "there is an inherent inferiority complex at work when students deal with faculty. They have a different definition of education. If they can get over this inferiority thing, then they can find out what they want from education."

Mark Munsell of Purdue asked the group how the idea of educational reform would relate to the curriculums for the professions, such as engineering. He noted that the students in these professional fields were "well-trained, but not educated."

Wisconsin's Goldfarb answered. "A nuclear physicist has to learn about life, too. I feel that an instructor is a research person in the classroom, as a textbook is research material. His students should learn that he is a person, too."

The group agreed that the new emphasis on complete education instead of complete training would eventually result in a five-year-or-longer college program.

Goldfarb complained about the rigidity in most educational programs. "Education doesn't go from eight to five," he said, "nor does it have to be so highly structured."

He also said that establishing student seats on a host of faculty committees was not the answer. "We can't keep track of all the kids on faculty committees."

Northwestern's Shanahan presented another view of the student-faculty committee; that the stress does not necessarily have to be on implementing change; rather to "stir up" the faculty and elicit consciousness of the students' desires.

Graham and Goldfarb agreed that getting faculty members involved on committees and programs that the students are running, rather than the reverse, would be a new approach to an old problem.

Turning to the students at large, the presidents decided that freshmen orientation programs at their schools were far too "short and shallow," as MSU's Peter Ellsworth said.

Munsell's idea about supplementing the university's orientation program was to hold four sessions of about 20 students each to talk with upperclassmen about the university. There are so few interested people, he said, "that it is hard to organize the program."

Costantino said that from his experience as a dorm residence assistant, there is evidence that the freshmen are changing. "They are much more willing to challenge things around them. The draft has had a great effect on them."

Noting the great concern among the presidents for the plight of the freshmen, the conference passed a resolution which states that "it is essential that student governments run an initial freshman orientation and continuing orientation program beyond the university orientation that will help students to constructively challenge the university and work for academic reform."

From academic reform, the conference moved to the board area of student conduct, including discussion of campus and local police forces.

At Wisconsin, Goldfarb said, a student can be suspended in an emergency situation, but cannot be expelled pending a hearing. The Wisconsin faculty, he said, is fighting for more control in this area.

At Northwestern, where the campus police are active, the president has "blanket power to expel" on the grounds of "conduct unbecoming a student," a painfully hazy description of misconduct, the conference agreed. The same power, once existing at Wisconsin, was abolished, Goldfarb said.

On the question of campus police forces, Shanahan asked the unanswerable: Should campus police carry guns?

Garfinkel calls for local student support for HHH

A call for student support on the local level of the Humphrey-Muskie campaign was made by Herbert Garfinkel, dean of James Madison College, Wednesday evening in the Union.

Garfinkel spoke to a meeting of the Student Coalition for Humphrey-Muskie, which is hoping to generate student support for the Democratic ticket on campus.

The dean quoted Abraham

Lincoln's writings on precinct organization to support his main point that "organization can beat you." Garfinkel said that it is not often that work on the local level will be a great factor in an election such as the one coming up. But this year with Humphrey running behind we must do all that we can, he said.

Other Humphrey supporters also called for campaign assistance.

"We who want to elect Humphrey are a minority in Ingham County and in the country as a whole right now," Harvey Ross, co-chairman for the Ingham County campaign, said.

Bill Loadman, coordinator of youth for the Ingham County campaign, said that the organization is setting up one person in each complex to act as a disseminator of information. He said that the group's major emphasis would be on getting the students to support Humphrey.

A capsule summary of the day's events from our wire services.

"The man who stood at the school house door, defying the law, is now pretending to be the apostle of order."

International News

• North Vietnamese units that once threatened Saigon are on the verge of starvation after huge food caches were seized in allied sweeps, U.S. officers reported Thursday.

Adding to the enemy difficulties, North Vietnamese bases near the Cambodian border have been pounded by U.S. B52 high altitude bombers and enough weapons have been captured since Jan. 1 to equip four divisions, the U.S. Command reported.

• Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand said Thursday that achievement of peace in Vietnam should not end the concern of the United States and of New Zealand for the future of Southeast Asia.

He told a news conference: "Both of us will need to backstop the small countries of this area against the threat of aggression and to assist in their economic development."

National News

• Vice President Hubert Humphrey said Thursday that Richard M. Nixon's "secret letter to Wall Street" has dangerous implications for the majority of the financial industry and millions of shareholders.

• George C. Wallace Thursday announced his decision to send his third party running mate, retired Air Force Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, to Vietnam for a four day fact-finding mission.

Wallace made the announcement while campaigning in Indiana.

• Richard M. Nixon forecast Thursday while in Illinois that he "will win big" in the Nov. 5 presidential election, saying "the stakes are too high not to have a change in America this year."

• President Johnson, in his first avowedly partisan speech of the 1968 campaign, urged Americans Thursday night to vote for the Humphrey-Muskie Democratic ticket Nov. 5.

He said the result would be to carry forward a program of "triumphs of the people—triumphs of progress over the status quo."

Thieu denies coup despite rumors

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu went on radio and television Thursday night and denied reports of a thwarted coup against his one-year-old elected government. He blamed the reports on "rumors" spread by "Communists and their henchmen."

Thieu made no mention of the fact that high-level government sources and spokesmen, although not from his office, had told newsmen that there had been a coup attempt Tuesday night.

These sources said there had been arrests in connection with the coup and that more persons would be taken into custody. Thieu said there had been no arrests. Throughout Wednesday and Thursday in Saigon, official and newspaper comment from government officials on whether there had been a coup attempt was in direct contradiction. There did not appear to be any political affiliations among the persons arrested to explain the contradictions, however.

One official, a spokesman for the government press office, said at midmorning: "You can say there was an attempted coup but that it failed."

The same office said in mid-afternoon, quoting from a presidential communique, that the reports of a coup were "false rumors spread by the Communists and uninformed people."

Until the presidential statement, a high-level government official continued to talk with newsmen about an attempted coup. The official, not in Thieu's office, has knowledge of the highest levels of the government.

Many observers regarded the government's confusion as an indication of basic uneasiness at the highest levels.

Some actions by Thieu himself may have inadvertently contributed to the coup reports.

Earlier this week, he sent to all Vietnamese military commanders a cable that said there were reports of a possible coup. He ordered the commanders to put down all gatherings on their own initiative, without asking permission from Saigon.

Even within the government, apparently, Thieu's directives had caused consternations, and officials let out word about a coup attempt.

GOP kills free TV debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to remove the legal hurdles to free television-radio debates between the major presidential candidates collapsed Thursday in the face of a Republican sit-out that blocked Senate action.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., was unable to muster a quorum to take up the House-passed legislation and said under the circumstances he had no choice except to bow to the GOP opposition.

And even after that, with the Republican sit-out lifted, it took nearly two hours to muster a bare quorum of 51-17 Republicans and 34 Democrats. Most of the 49 other senators were out of town.

Mansfield then moved that action on the equal time bill be postponed indefinitely, thus killing it. The Senate turned to other legislation in a drive toward adjournment of this session of Congress.

The quick GOP victory in the Senate was in sharp contrast to action in the House, where passage came Wednesday after a historic lock-in that killed off a succession of delaying quorum calls by Republicans.

The surprise tactic in the Senate was sprung by Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois as soon as Mansfield called up the equal time legislation. Dirksen first raised the point of no quorum.

When such a point is raised, the Senate cannot do business unless a majority of the 100 senators answer the roll call.

Dirksen made sure there would be no quorum by posting a page boy outside the chamber to tell GOP senators not to respond to the quorum call. Bells are rung in the Capitol and its surrounding office buildings to summon senators when there is such a call.

Mark Trice, secretary of the Senate Republicans, commented: "We're against this bill. Now let the Democrats produce a quorum if they can."

There are 63 Democrats, enough for a quorum, but too few were in town to rescue the equal time bill.

Spartan Spirit tickets: 'legit' or scalping?

In a university of this size, certain rights of students go unnoticed. One such right is the right to buy tickets for away football games at their retail price, especially for the University of Michigan game.

It seems that Spartan Spirit, organizer of Block S, purchased 1000 tickets in the spring for the MSU-U-M football game. These tickets were sold for $8.50 and $10. The $8.50 price included the game ticket ($6) and a box lunch ($2.50); the $10 price included those two items and a round trip bus ride.

Is it reasonable for Spartan Spirit to force students, wishing to buy only tickets, to purchase them with a box lunch included? And even if it is, surely a box lunch is not a $2.50 proposition!

To make matters worse, after the 1000 tickets were sold an additional 400 were made available. Apparently U-M sent the 400 extra tickets here, and they were sold to Spartan Spirit. But why not simply at their normal retail price?

Only a few scattered tickets are available to students in the spring and fall at the regular retail price, and these are not sold by Spartan Spirit.

We realize that Spartan Spirit must accumulate certain funds over the year. But, at the same time, we feel it would help the spirit of Spartan fans more to provide tickets reasonably priced than to sell obligatory lunches on the side.

Bright day in Mudville: 'S' bomb the Bloooooooo

Detroit has come through at last—we can leave those bumper stickers on, thanks to the Tigers, and cash in on all those foolish bets now.

Professors no longer need compete with transistor radios; the rest of us can leave off dreaming up exotic reasons for missing classes (or bringing radios to lecture); and the Tigers can retire for the winter in glory. The Birds can go home and roost.

After a 23-year wait, it's a bright day in Mudville at last: cheer up, Mets fans, only 18 years to go! Next year a panel of chimpanzees will publish a revised edition of Encyclopedia Britannica.

Seriously, though, we congratulate the Tigers on their victory, and expect that next year's team will once again be a source of pride for Michigan baseball fans. Detroit can also be happy in the knowledge that it can make national headlines with positive accomplishment and not just slum warfare and labor problems.

Now that the Series is won, we hope that our readers will remember that the Spartan football squad faces its annual task of humiliating U-M this weekend and give them the support they need to do a thorough job of it and make the celebration in East Lansing this weekend a double one.

It's only one game instead of a Series, so do it to 'em good, Spartans -- beat U-M seven times as bad!

OUR READERS' MINDS

Yummy, yummy

To the Editor:

It seems absurd to me that the U-M vs. MSU game has not drawn more student interest than it has. Other than the fact that the clash between these two super-powers of the athletic world is a long standing tradition (this in itself should be the source of immeasurable spirit), Union Board also offers an irresistible and unique ticket sale. Through the consideration of Union Board, along with your ticket purchase a delectable box lunch is offered to the purchaser.

Since it would be an injustice for the student to do without this box lunch, they (Union Board and ingenious cohorts) with a motion originating in the bottoms of their kind hearts, offered both a ticket and a box lunch in one inseparable and exciting package. Yes, for the additional $2.50, truly a meager fee, which you will pay (as some of you lucky people have discovered) you will be the proud owner of...

- 1 MSU orange drink
- 1 MSU beef sandwich
- 1 MSU ham sandwich
- 1 MSU relish bag
- 1 MSU apple
- 1 MSU cookie (for dessert)

Imagine the ecstasy of sipping your MSU orange drink, while eating a MSU ham sandwich between 8 and 10 a.m. Saturday morning. Also while making the long trek to Ann Arbor, you can make full use of the MSU relish bag and nibble on a carrot or suck the pimento out of your delightful olive.

An offer as tremendous as this will probably never again be matched by a non-profit organization at this institution of higher learning.

Star Spangled Boner

To the Editor:

A great deal of controversy has arisen since Monday's World Series game when a different interpretation of the "Star Spangled Banner" was presented. This controversy centers around the indignation of many that "soul" does not belong in an almost sanctified national anthem. I do not claim to have "soul," but both this rendition and that by Aretha Franklin during the Democratic National Convention were in good taste.

The "Star Spangled Banner" cannot and should not be sanctified, for it historically is a poor choice for a national anthem for this great country. Being extremely difficult to sing except in a drunken state—the tune being originally part of a drinking song anyway—it can be criticized for another valid reason.

In the 1830s a botanist went to Washington, D.C., to lecture at a college. While there, he was placed under surveillance. The U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia broke into his room and found some anti-slavery literature in Reuben Crandall's trunk. He was arrested and charged with publishing a libel and inciting resurrection (sic). Although Crandall was acquitted of his "crime" and passed into obscurity, the U.S. attorney who attempted to prosecute him in defense of slavery was none other than the author of the lyrics of our sanctified National Anthem --Francis Scott Key.

Freakout

Tiger Stadium was treated Monday to a soul version of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Puerto Rican blues singer Jose Feliciano. A rumor has begun to spread around campus that the new spirit of innovation at sporting events will be evident at the MSU homecoming game, at which Maharishi Mahesh Yogi will deliver the invocation, followed by a rendition of "MSU Shadows" by the Cream.

The breed of besieged men

There is the story about the college president who dreamt that he was addressing a faculty meeting and woke up to find that he was. But the luxury of sleepwalking is now denied to faculty and presidents alike. The times are too dangerous for it and the students too exacting.

As it happens, Brandeis University (where I am starting my 20th year of teaching) has just inaugurated Morris B. Abrams as its new—and only second—president. Abram Sachar, who has been president since the university's founding, got it off to an impressive start with his now legendary energy and persuasiveness. The next 20 years belong, I trust, to a man who is likely to become one of the best of the breed of university presidents.

It has become a breed of besieged men in one of the most perilous vocations in America, ranking somewhere with the job of being President of the United States. Pity these other presidents who have to know almost as much, work almost as hard, are subjected to a comparable scurrility of abuse and, in addition, have to go out to beg from rich men or wheedle from state legislatures the money they have to administer.

In a decade the task has perhaps tripled in scope and complexity, while the vulnerability to attack has increased tenfold and the prestige has fallen. The stakes, however, are higher than ever. They are not merely to stay out of trouble and keep the university from getting riot or drug headlines. They are also to shape a new civic character in the Periclean sense, by ending the generational civil war and building a credible value structure.

For some notion of the perils that beset a university and its president, read the summary of the Cox Commission report on the April uprising at Columbia University. It puts the blame on a rigid, clumsy administration that allowed student disaffections to grow, on a small group of revolutionaries who managed to turn these gripes into symbols of revolt and on police who used too much force in confronting the rebels.

Columbia today has learned from these blunders, and the police probably have, too. The hard-core group of revolutionaries is still there and will doubtless be heard from again next spring. But acting president Andrew Cordier and his administrators have shown that a university leadership can be flexible, resourceful and strong, and are rebuilding the whole university constitutional structure.

A university president's constituency today is many-layered, like an elaborate cake. He must have the respect of his faculty and the trust of the students. He must keep the alumni from getting agitated and the trustees (and state legislators) reasonably happy. He must work actively with the surrounding community, including the slums' poor and their problems, and the press and police, and the American Legion posts, the Birchers and the black power groups. In the next few years his faculty must be ready to take over the guidance of decentralized ghetto school systems. And always there are the federal agencies, the guidelines and the research funds in Washington.

If it is any consolation, he is lucky he isn't holding down a parallel post in Paris, where all his functions would be part of a single centralized national system; or in Warsaw, where his university would really be run by the Central Committee of the Communist party, and where he would have to fire his Jewish professors; or in Mexico City, where he would be caught today in a bloody encounter which makes the April riots at Columbia or the Stanford riots of 1964 seem like good-natured brawls.

In the whole complex the students remain central. In Paris they made a brief alliance with the trade unions and almost overthrew the De Gaulle regime, but the people as a whole recoiled from them. In Latin America a nation's president must have the support of the army, the students and the workers—in that order—and cannot afford to lose more than one of the three. In America the hard-core student revolutionaries have badly misjudged the mood both of the trade unions and of the large majority of Negroes, and have made blunders which have led to widespread bitterness against them.

These are a university president's headaches and dangers. But by that fact he has become a central figure in the community and nation. Under a Nixon regime the American students and faculties will have little exciting leadership at the top. It will have to be furnished in every college community, and not Nixon but the college president will be the one.

DEBORAH FITCH

Seven-school love affair

It really does swing in Madison, Wis.

And Wisconsin students don't seem particularly distressed with the "Number One Party School" rating they got from Playboy.

But last weekend some of those students had more to think about than the MSU game, the Green Bay Packers and beer, beer, beer.

Oh, the beer was flowing, all right, but so were the ideas of the student body presidents from Indiana, U-M, MSU, Minnesota, Northwestern, Purdue and Wisconsin.

They got together at old P.S. (Party School) Number One for the Big Ten Student Body Presidents Conference.

At first, it must be told, they weren't quite sure why they were there.

Maybe they didn't think anything significant could possibly evolve from their meeting; apparently nobody else did, either. There was only one press representative; she wasn't particularly impressed.

The presidents didn't seem to know what to do with an organization that had no defined purpose and only one certain function: there would definitely be a party.

Luckily, however, it soon became obvious that a rather unusual group of students had been thrown together to salvage a heretofore uninteresting organization.

They managed to talk a little life into the conference—and carry home to their respective student governments an extra lift.

What happened? Nothing spectacular. They just started talking.

They kept it up for two days. At the meetings, at meals, at the party.

And all the way home.

Remember the old adage about two people falling in love if they have something in common? The Big Ten Student Body Presidents Conference—which started off as a rather motley crew of skeptics—blossomed into a full-fledged, seven-school love affair.

The seven have something in common, all right. A couple of somethings.

Three of them have experienced the frustrating experience of having their Board of Trustees pass a resolution on student suspensions.

All of them desperately want to initiate a vital brand of academic reform.

Some speak of making their student governments into corporations, divorced financially from the university. Others have already taken this step and reported on its effectiveness.

They all would like to give freshmen a chance to ask the questions they want to ask and would like to lead them around by the mind instead of by the nose.

There are some differences, of course. But then what love affair is perfect?

Some of them work closely with Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). To others, SDS is often a thorn in the side and more often a pain in the neck.

The point is that seven student leaders from regionally connected yet diverse universities found out that they had a startling amount of things to talk about: a chance to get some help, a chance to give it.

Maybe it was luck. Maybe it was the right combination of people that opened the lock on inter-school communications. Whatever it was, they've got hold of something.

And they don't intend to lose it.

Starvation relief

Local Biafra group thanks donators for $3,600 relief

Editor's note: The following is an expression of thanks from the East Lansing Chapter of the Biafra Association to all the individuals and organizations that contributed to the recent Biafran Fund Drive.

The Biafra Association wishes to express its profound gratitude to the men, women and children of Lansing, East Lansing, Okemos and Haslett for their generous contributions to the "Biafra Starvation Relief Campaign," Sept. 20-28, 1968. Donations, which were either spontaneous or vaguely solicited amounted to $3,600. The first consignment of protein concentrates are being shipped to New York by the firm of Randall Health Foods of Lansing.

The Association acknowledges gratefully the assistance and cooperation it received from church organizations, relief agencies and the men and women who worked tirelessly for two weeks with the Biafran Committee on Relief Programs. For want of space, it is difficult to mention individually the names of 22 American young men and women who took part in the street collection. Suffice it to say that the tremendous success the Association achieved in the fund-drive was the result both of the assistance received from the American co-collectors and the empathic response of the donors in the greater Lansing area and Meridian township zone.

Food shortage threatens, researchers slow to react

By TOM HAMP
Because of the increasing population, "we are faced with a food shortage, and have been woefully slow and timid in coming to grips with the problem," said the President of the Rockefeller Foundation, in a speech Wednesday night in Anthony Hall.

"The Conquest of Hunger," the first of three speeches by J. George Harrar of the University of Minnesota, was sponsored by the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources Graduate Faculty, as part of the Distinguished Lectures in Agriculture and Natural Resources for 1968.

"For the world to have enough food in the future," Harrar said, "it will be necessary for agriculture to close the gap between production and utilization of food stuffs."

It will be necessary for research teams to work parallel with each other to increase productivity of food stuffs, he added.

"Two factors partly responsible for the food shortage are the under production of agrarian lands and death control," Harrar said. New medicines, better diets and living conditions enable people to live longer, he said.

Conquering ill health around the world was the main goal of the foundation at its start in 1913. The foundation fought diseases such as malaria, yellow fever, venereal disease and tuberculosis.

Harrar feels that the possibilities of meeting this food shortage are good. He said we must "reverse the trend, and change the pattern of agriculture to resolve a change in food production."

"In Mexico 25 years ago," he said, "they had to import bread for subsistence." But with the help of the foundation, and other organizations,

Mexico is now able to produce up to more than four times the yield per acre than before.

Proper fertilization, water supply, insecticides, and pesticides are factors that have increased the yield per acre in Mexico, Harrar said.

But he warned, "communication is the weakest link in the process." He said that the problem of food shortage would probably "diminish if communication" between farmer and government, and between producer and consumer were better.

9 guilty of burning draft board records

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A jury found nine Catholics guilty Thursday of three charges in connection with the seizure and burning of draft board records.

The jury deliberated one hour and 20 minutes.

The jury was polled for each of the defendants and after the last verdict of guilty was pronounced, somebody in the audience stood up and said:

"Members of the jury you have just found Jesus Christ guilty." Several other prisoners in the court seconded the statement.

Chief U.S. District Judge Roszel C. Thomsen, ordered the room cleared.

The nine pacifists, two of them priests, were convicted of mutilating and destroying government records, hindering administration of the Selective Service Act and causing injury to government property. They had pleaded innocent.

'Blue Bomb' faces grididders at U-M

By GARY WALKOWICZ
State News Sports Editor

"Ban the Bomb" is the watchword and the key for MSU when they take on Michigan in their annual grid classic on Saturday.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. at Michigan Stadium in Ann Arbor.

"Our key, defensively, to beating Michigan is stopping their long scoring plays, especially by Ron Johnson and George Hoey," MSU coach Duffy Daugherty said.

"We can't hope to completely contain a great back like Johnson, but we're going to have to stop him from breaking loose for any long runs," Daugherty said.

MSU used this strategy successfully in last year's 34-0 ramp over the Wolverines. Johnson ran for 107 yards but was held by the Michigan goal line.

Johnson, who would be a bonafide Heisman Trophy candidate except for the presence of Leroy Keyes and O.J. Simpson, rolled up 374 yards rushing in the Wolverines first three games to lead Michigan in scoring with four touchdowns.

Hoey, a starting defensive back for the maize and blue, showed his 9.7 speed to Navy's Midshipmen last week when he raced 63 and 36 yards on punt returns to set up two U-M scores. Hoey's no slouch defending against passes either as evidenced by his two interceptions against Navy.

Michigan, averaging 23.3 points a game, does not depend on Johnson alone for their offense.

Garvie Crawford has rushed for 151 yards, when he's not blocking for Johnson.

Bump Elliot's boys also have a potent passing attack with Dennis Brown throwing to tight end Jim Mandich and split end Jerry Imsland. Brown has connected on 33 of 72 passes for 443 yards with Mandich latching onto 15 for 176 yards and Imsland catching 12 for 168 yards.

Michigan showed a good rushing defense in beating Duke and Navy but was vulnerable to the pass. MSU quarterback Bill Feraco may be throwing more than he has in MSU's opening three games.

"We're going to have to control the ball if we want to beat Michigan," Daugherty said. "Our boys are eagerly awaiting this contest and are fired up for it, but then so are the Wolverines."

Last week's Big Ten action came as a surprise.

No one was upset. Purdue, Ohio State and MSU remained among the unbeaten. Northwestern, Illinois and Wisconsin failed to win their first games and Minnesota notched their first win of the season.

In outside matches, the conference emerged a winner for the first time this fall with three wins countered by Iowa's 51-20 loss to Notre Dame.

With only two non-conference games scheduled this weekend, the conference race moves into full swing. The tempo of the conference chase could be shaped this week. The two pre-season favorites, Purdue and Ohio State, tangle in Columbus while two top outside picks, Michigan and MSU, continue their intra-state rivalry at Ann Arbor.

SATURDAY'S GAMES:
PURDUE (3-0) at OHIO STATE (2-0)—Wonderful Woody can stand on top of Mt. Everest in his shirt sleeves for this one and it won't do any good. The Boilermakers, by seven.

INDIANA (2-1) at IOWA (1-2)—The Hoosiers eked a narrow 21-17 win last year, can they do it again? Let's try an upset for the Hawkeyes, by three.

ILLINOIS (0-3) at MINNESOTA (1-2)—The Gophers are too strong for the Illini. Minnesota can take it away by seven.

NORTHWESTERN (0-3) at NOTRE DAME (2-1)—Miami, Southern Cal, Purdue and now the Irish. You know the Irish will try to out-score Purdue's effort. Notre Dame, by 20.

UTAH STATE (3-1) at WISCONSIN (0-3)—I don't know anything about Utah State, but I have seen the Badgers. The Aggies, by one.

MSU (3-0) at MICHIGAN (2-1)—Always unpredictable in some way, this one should go to the teams with the most breaks. The Spartans have a way of making their own so go with MSU, by 13.
LAST WEEK: 7-0
FOR THE YEAR: 15-2

Leafs make bid for retiring Hull

CHICAGO (UPI)—Hockey superstar Bobby Hull announced his retirement Thursday because the Chicago Black Hawks would not meet his price. The Toronto Maple Leafs promptly offered the Hawks $1 million for the "Golden Jet."

Stanford Smythe, Leafs' president, said in Toronto he would make "any kind of deal to get Hull," who reportedly was aiming to become the first $100,000-a-year player in hockey history.

Smythe said he would even offer the whole Leaf team to the Hawks, save for just enough players "to play with Hull," a superstar who has been setting goal-scoring records on a pair of aching legs.

MASCOT AT U-M GAME

Nothing will stop Sparty

Nothing will keep Sparty, MSU's mascot since 1960, away from the MSU-U-M game this Saturday. Just a year ago, before the MSU-U-M game the U-M chapter of Delta Sigma Phi took Sparty from the Sigma Phi Epsilon house. They painted him blue and maize and used him in their cheering section. At that time, a new Sparty head was made, weighing 50 pounds. "Sparty still lives. He'll definitely be at the game on Saturday," a spokesman for Sigma Phi Epsilon said. "Northwestern and Ohio State are other away games which Sparty will attend this year."

The Sig Eps have taken every precaution so that a repeat performance of last year's misfortune will not occur. Their house is the only fraternity on campus with a key system.

Also, Sparty is not always kept at the chapter house but is moved around and stored in other places too.

Sparty has been stolen only one other time. That was last spring when the Central Michigan University chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon used it in their Greek Week activities.

Barbarella absurdity foils comedy

Stanley Kubrick and writer Terry Southern joined forces to create a masterpiece of satire called "Dr. Strangelove."

Now, at the Campus Theatre, we have Mr. Kubrick's latest achievement, "2001," probably the most brilliant science-fiction film ever made.

At the same time, the Spartan Twin East offers Mr. Southern's new effort, "Barbarella," one of the silliest science-fiction films ever made.

Unfortunately, the films often beg for comparison. Both are futuristic, both computer-astronauts: both contain large amounts of psychedelic special effects. And wherever the two can be compared, "Barbarella" comes out on the bottom.

But what makes "Barbarella" shine is its constant absurdity. "Barbarella" is based on a French comic-strip for adults, and as a movie it has the same virtues and vices as any campy comic. It's hilarious, exciting and beautiful to look at, but ultimately pointless.

master of the lovely, stupid movie. Having worked almost entirely in color and wide-screen, with the aid of photographs, Vadim (grandson of the great impressionist), Vadim has always displayed an impeccable sense of beauty and a penchant for the glossy artificiality that most of us associate with Hollywood, not France.

But Vadim's real specialty is the presentation of beautiful women and beautiful men in lushly erotic situations, something which everyone has associated with France since Vadim's first film, "And God Created Woman," starring his first wife, Brigitte Bardot.

Well, Vadim has a new wife,

Jane Fonda, but his films are still imbued with a "Barbarella" presentation of sexual relations. Nevertheless, he presents it so gracefully that one quickly forgives him for its ultimate worthlessness.

For once, Vadim has a screenplay, rather than one of his usual tragic soap-opera

Wastebasket fire 'work of arsonist'

A wastebasket fire presumed to be the work of an arsonist caused an estimated damage of $150 to a West London dormitory room Wednesday evening.

The fire burned a briefcase, a towel and a section of the wall. East Lansing firemen found a severed electrical cord in the waste basket, which they said caused the fire.

Janet W. Lauritsen, Clawson freshman, one of the occupants of the room, had not locked the door when she left a short time earlier.

Motown recording star Stevie Wonder received the Outstanding Handicapped Employee Award Wednesday night during the Ability Counts Banquet co-sponsored by the Lansing Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and the Lansing Jaycees.

Harold Russell, chairman of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and featured speaker, presented the "Citation for Meritorious Service" to Stevie at the Lansing National Guard Armory before a crowd of nearly 400 people.

Stevie, born blind, attends the Lansing School for the Blind and plans to continue his education at the University of Southern California.

Often referred to as the "Prophet of Soul," he has mastered the piano, the organ, drums and the harmonica and at the age of 18 has had many hit records and is almost a millionaire.

When Stevie received the award, he thanked the audience by entertaining them with a song.

Other awards presented were Employer's Merit Awards to Gerber Products Company, Oldsmobile division of General Motors and Schultz, Snyder and Steele Lumber Co. for "outstanding efforts to provide the handicapped with useful employment." The Physicians Award went to Dr. Homer H. Stryker and the Distinguished Service Award to Jean Fordyce, 2100 Wood St., Lansing.

Special guests at the banquet were Robert O. Squires, banquet chairman, the Hon. John B. Swainson, Wayne County Circuit Court Judge; Lansing Mayor Max E. Murningham; East Lansing Mayor Gordon L. Thomas; State Rep. Phil O. Pittenger and Gordon Steinhauer, chairman of the Lansing Committee.

'Nature of mind' topic of lecture

Norman Malcom, authority on philosopher Ludwig Wittgenstein, will deliver a lecture entitled "Wittgenstein on the Nature of the Mind" at 8 p.m. tonight in Conrad Auditorium.

The lecture is one in the Isenberg Memorial Lecture Series which has the philosophy of Wittgenstein as its fall theme.

Malcom, whose published works deal largely with Wittgenstein's philosophy and philosophical method, met Wittgenstein while attending Cambridge University in 1938.

Also scheduled for the lecture series are Roger Albritton of Harvard University and Stephen Toulmin of Brandeis University.

Lectures are free to the public.

Campus Lutheran church to begin educational unit

University Lutheran Church has announced that construction of its proposed $300,000 educational unit will begin in the fall of 1969.

The new unit, to be built at 1016 Harrison Road, is the first step in a three stage building program. When completed, total investment in the project will approach $800,000.

Rev. George W. Gaiser, pastor of the church, explained the necessity for expansion.

Asher House to hold dinner

Both houses of the Asher Student Foundation will hold their annual Progress Dinner in Kellogg Center at 6:15 p.m. Saturday.

The purpose of the dinner is to inform Asher House contributors of the progress the organization has made in the past year for Christian Science. A former Resident Manager of Asher House, Paul Decker, will deliver the main address of the evening. Prior to the dinner there will be an open house from 2:30-4:30 p.m. for parents of Asher residents, followed by a reception from 5:45-6:15 p.m. to introduce the new Resident Manager, Marshall McNutt.

PEACE OF MIND?

Pill may delude psyche

By J. R. PALMS
State News Staff Writer

People, more than the pill, are the concern of clergymen who have a counseling ministry with MSU students.

Birth control pills, called by many ministers "a great discovery for peace of mind in family planning," were described also as possibly opening the way for social, spiritual and psychological problems when used by the unmarried woman.

Dayle M. Bethel, campus minister for the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, summed up the feelings expressed by most of the clergy interviewed when he said "every facet and area of life has to be explored carefully with responsible people before any statement can be made generalizing on the pill."

"We are not serious enough about sex and its implications," said Rev. Dacian Batt of St. John Student Parish. He explained that experimenting with sex cannot be thought of in the same way as enjoying a football game. He said "the responsibilities and implications of sex are deep."

Father Batt, who estimated that he counseled 14 people each week, said "people have to be led to the right instead of giving them all the tools they need to try something and then hope that they come to the right."

Rabbi Abraham Zemach, serving B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, said "students can't project to see how they are going to feel about things in the future." He explained that there had to be more than desire in a person's decision about sex.

Rev. Tom Stark, pastor of the University Reformed Church, said "the pill has a potential for deception." He explained that the unmarried woman's problems on how to handle sex are not answered by the pill. "A woman who thinks she can have the meaning that sex is supposed to have, may find exploitation instead," said Stark. With freedom from the fear

Rev. Kenneth Smith

Senior minister guest on Sunday

Rev. Kenneth B. Smith, of Chicago Illinois, will be guest minister at the Edgewood United Church on Sunday, October 13, during the 9:30 and 11:00 morning services.

Mr. Smith has served as Minister of Urban Affairs for the Community Renewal Society of Chicago. This agency attracted national attention because of its advanced methods of dealing with personal and social problems arising from urban life.

From 1965 to 1967 Mr. Smith served as Secretary of the Committee for Racial Justice.

Mr. Smith is presently the Senior Minister of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Chicago.

of pregnancy will women be more promiscuous? Not according to the studies he has made said Rev. Richard Jackson who serves on the staff of The United Ministries in Higher Education. "The availability of the pill does not increase promiscuity," he said.

But, Rev. David Voorhees, religious counselor at Martin Luther Chapel, thought the freedom from fear of pregnancy offered by the pill might cause sexual experimenting for psychological reasons. He explained that a single woman's longing to discover who she is as a person might cause her to experiment with sex only to discover deeper problems. "Is she going to get what she thinks she will get or only a deeper anxiety and frustration," asked Voorhees.

For the Roman Catholic, the Church's stand is spelled out in the Papal Encyclical on Birth Control. Father Batt said "the Catholic woman must make a faith response to this issue." He explained that there are women who have seriously thought through the teachings of the Church and have made a private subjective interpretation that is contrary to the Church's teaching on birth control. "If her decision is all right with Christ, it is all right with the Church," said Father Batt.

Are there ever times when the pill should be issued to unmarried women? Several clergymen said "Yes!" Rev. Jackson said "if a woman has both a moral and a psychological problem, pregnancy should not be a further complication before the psychological problem can be handled." Rev. Voorhees said "if the girl is psychologically disturbed, maybe she should have the pill to make up for her lack of inner controls." Clergy agreed that a doctor at Olin Health Center should have the same freedom as any other physician make a decision on the basis of his own medical evaluation. Only the doctor knows the woman's emotional condition and her physical ability to use a pill that is not 100 percent safe for all women, the clergymen said.

Priests unchanged on contraception

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Almost half the Roman Catholic diocesan priests in the United States disagree with Pope Paul's encyclical against artificial birth control, the National Catholic Reporter said today.

The Reporter, a national lay-edited weekly with offices in Kansas City, reported results of a survey in a copyrighted story appearing in its Oct. 9 issue.

The survey, the publication reports, shows the Pope's condemnation of artificial contraception had little effect in changing the minds of priests questioned.

Fifty-one per cent of the priests who responded to the poll said that before the encyclical they held artificial contraception is permissible in some circumstances. Forty-nine per cent reported after the encyclical they held the same view. One per cent said they were undecided.

The mail survey was sent out in late August to a random sample of about 3,750 diocesan priests, representing about 10 per cent of all diocesan priests in the nation.

WHERE QUALITY & SERVICE ARE SOLD FIRST

A USED CAR GUARANTEE It doesn't come with every car.

It's a 100 per cent guarantee. Not one of those "we-pay-half-you-pay-half" deals. And it comes only with used cars that pass the Volkswagen 16-point Safety and Performance Test. This is how it works. When we get a car as a trade-in, we give it the inspection. Check it out completely. If it passes, we tune up, tighten, repair or replace everything that needs tuning up, tightening, repairing or replacing. Then we guarantee it 100 per cent repair or replacement of all major mechanical parts for 30 days or 1000 miles. What kind of cars get our guarantee stickers? Chevys, Fords, Rambler VWs. (We get all kinds of trade-ins for new Volkswagens.) So, the next time somebody tries to sell you a used car that's just like new, ask about the guarantee. Then remember us. No, our used cars aren't just like new. No used car can be. But no used cars could be in better shape, either.

Apollo flight set

Also to be done were checks on the Apollo spacecraft, which would signal if anything was wrong, pumping 86,900 gallons of liquid oxygen and 64,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen into the rocket, and testing of spacecraft systems.

During the 11 days, the pilots plan to fire the main 21,000-pound-thrust spacecraft engine eight times to test its ability to steer a spacecraft to the moon and back. Apollo 7's mission, which will be triggered numerous times and engineering tests conducted on the spacecraft's guidance and navigation system, life-supporting environmental, control unit and spacecraft radiators that cool electrical components.

Apollo 7 will be the last space assignment for Schirra, who will become the first man to fly into orbit through space. He will be the first man to fly into orbit through space. He will be the first man to fly into orbit through space. He will be the first man to fly into orbit through space.

One of the main mission highlights is scheduled the second day, when Apollo 7 is to attempt a rendezvous from 83 miles away with the orbiting 62-foot-long upper stage of its Saturn 1B booster rocket.

The maneuver, simulating how an Apollo craft might rescue a moonlanding lunar module spacecraft in the wrong orbit around the moon, requires two burns of Apollo 7's main engine and will be an important test of the spacecraft's guidance and navigation equipment.

O-U controversy

The student representatives would only be a token," said student body vice-President Coriell. "They would be completely powerless."

Stivison said Monday that he was in favor of adding one additional faculty member and two students to the selection committee. He said that one of the faculty or student representatives should be black "to assure that the special interests of the black community at Ohio University are represented."

Miss Coriell said members of student government are now visiting dormitories on the Ohio University campus to gain support.

"We're trying to educate the campus and get support," she explained, "but we're getting that nice conservative backlash."

She said members of the student government hoped to have a university-wide referendum "within two weeks, something along the order of 'do you want to fight Johnson's action through organized disruption?'"

New program aids youths with tutoring

A special program, sponsored by the Lansing Juvenile and Probate Court and designed to assist young offenders to better their academic work, needs volunteers interested in working in the program.

For those interested in working with children from the city's juvenile home, there will be an orientation meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the Student Services Bldg. The first tutoring will begin on Oct. 16 with the tutor and pupil working at their mutual convenience.

Already, 20 Justin Morrill College students have been recruited to aid Ernest B. Shelley, a former MSU faculty member, in the tutorial and group counseling programs.

"Two high school trouble-makers learned to read with comprehension and began getting C's and B's after just a few tutorial sessions," Juvenile Court Judge James Kallman said.

The tutoring does not always reap such benefits, but the volunteers find it a continually fulfilling experience. Shelley may be contacted for further information at Turner 2-5717 or interested persons may call Mrs. Beth Lawrence at IV 5-1751.

Communication attempt

About 75 students gathered at Emmons Hall to question several popular campus officials this week, including Milton Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, and James Harrington, president of the American Association of University Professors. The meeting was organized by the Scholastics Committee of Emmons Hall.

Doss needs assistance

ASMSU's vice chairman Ray Doss is drowning.

In an ocean of notes from an ASMSU board meeting.

He says that he can't be a board member and a secretary as well, so he would like some "lovely young lady" who can type to take minutes at the meetings.

The job, which pays $1.65 an hour, requires attendance at the weekly ASMSU board meetings and taking minutes on the proceedings. It also involves typing the minutes and mimeographing them for distribution among the board members.

Doss said the board secretary would spend about ten hours per week on the job.

Any interested student should contact Doss in Rm. 332, Student Services Bldg., or call 355-8267.

CONTROVERSY CONTINUES

Nonnamaker backs ruling

by ED HUTCHINSON
State News Staff Writer

Critics of the controversial suspension resolution should "wear the other guy's moccasins for awhile" before condemning the Board of Trustees' action, Eldon R. Nonnamaker said Wednesday in an Emmons Hall discussion.

During a panel discussion, Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, said that if he were a trustee and read about Columbia and other student dissent, that he would react in the same manner as the trustees have in passing the resolution.

The resolution, which authorizes the president or his designees to suspend a student whose activity "constitutes an immediate threat to the normal and orderly operation of the University," has been under fire by various student and faculty groups ever since its adoption by the Board of Trustees became known.

In response to the claim that the resolution was an illegal amendment to the Academic Freedom Report, Milton B. Dickerson, vice-president for student affairs, said that the trustees had no intention of amending the Freedom Report for inclusion of the resolution.

It was the feeling of the trustees, Dickerson said, that the President has had the authorization to suspend students and that the resolution was an affirmation of authority they knew to exist.

Recalling that no student or faculty groups were consulted before adoption of the resolution, Tom Samet, junior-member-at-large, said that student faith in the use of channels has been undermined as a result of the Trustees' action.

The Academic Freedom Report, Samet said, will either live or die through the test of channels that the suspension must now pass.

James Harrington, vice-president of the American Association of University Professors, contested the alleged violation of due process in the resolution to an accused criminal who can be released on bail to resume his normal occupation after charges have been made.

A student suspended by the resolution, Harrington said, has no chance to return to his normal occupation, that of studying, because of the suspension.

College is a waste of time...

... unless you find a job that turns you on and makes good use of your education. Inland Steel wants only people who want to use everything they've learned in college—and strongly desire to grow personally and professionally.

Inland's future depends on the creativity and productivity of its people. If you want a really challenging opportunity to contribute—with the rewards and responsibilities that go with it—Inland wants to talk to you.

We need action-seeking graduates with degrees in most fields for management opportunities in sales... production... research... engineering... finance... administration... or you name it.

Think it over. If you have high aspirations and a good record, take time to find out about a career with us.

For information, see us on campus.
