ABM wins on tie vote; amendments defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Supporters of the Nixon administration's Safeguard antiballistic missile defense system won an historic Senate showdown Wednesday by narrowly defeating two efforts to bar deployment and limit the program to research.

The voting climaxed months of controversy and five weeks of Senate debate in the most closely contested national security issue since the House extended the draft by a one-vote margin in 1941.

To many senators, the outcome had symbolic importance beyond the immediate issue of the ABM as a token of congressional efforts to put a rein on Pentagon spending that accounts for more than 40 per cent of the federal budget.

Public irked at privileges in tax system

WASHINGTON (AP)--Aroused taxpavers may destroy the U.S. system of self-addressed income taxes unless special privileges are erased from the revenue code, the House was told Wednesday as it opened an historic tax reform de-

Opponents of the income tax surcharge lost their bid to knock out of the measure a provision extending the levy at 5 per cent for the first six months of 1970.

A 265-145 vote on a procedural question blocked any opportunity for general amendments to the bill. Rep. Charles A. Vanik D-Ohio, unsuccessfully pleaded for a chance to offer an amendment deleting the surtax provision, which the Nixon administration has urgently advocated as an anti-inflation weapon.

The vote, nevertheless, demonstrated again the unpopularity of the surtax among Democrats. They voted 114-102 for the move to open up the bill for amendments, despite leadership warnings it might endanger the whole tax reform effort.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills. D-Ark. of the Ways and Means Committee, cited public reaction to testimony that 154 persons with incomes of $200,000 or more avoided income tax entirely. He continued:

FBI nabs Collins' companion

YPSILANTI. Mich: (UPI) -- Andrew Julian Manuel, the traveling companion of the accused slaver of the latest of seven female murder victims. Wednesday was arrested for questioning in connection with the string of Michigan

Manuel. 25, was apprehended by FBI agents in Phoenix, Ariz.. and will be returned to Michigan "as soon as the time is ripe," for questioning about the slavings, said U.S. Attv. Gen. John M. Mitchell.

Michigan authorities said they had not established any link between Manuel and any of the Michigan slavings.

The burly, tattooed Manuel lived in the same rooming house with John Norman Collins, the 22-year-old Eastern Michigan University (EMU) student who has been charged with the murder of Karen Sue Beineman.

Police said Manuel and Collins traveled to California together in June in a rented trailer. Michigan police, called to California to investigate similar slavings there, said "there is a strong inference" that Collins was connected with a 17-year-old girl strangled to death in Salinas, Calif., in late June.

Michigan police has issued a larceny warrant for Manuel for not returning the trailer he rented for the California

Apollo astronauts finish debriefing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)--The Apollo 11 astronauts completed their 10-day debriefing Wednesday, talking through a glass wall in the lunar receiving laboratory with 40 scientists.

As Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. talked for several hours of their moon landing, other scientists prepared to kill a group of mice in a search for possible damage from lunar dust circulating in their veins.

Although the debriefing phase of the astronauts' postflight duties had ended, they are scheduled to remain in quarantine until 1 a.m. Monday while doctors watch for signs of illness or lunar organisms.

But the release time could be up to four hours earlier than 1 a.m. to allow the moon explorers to go home "at a decent hour," a space agency official

Israeli jets struck inside Jordan Wednesday in reprisal for artillery and mortar attacks by Arab gunners, and each side gave a different version of what happened.

An Israeli spokesman said the jets attacked Arab military positions 10 miles inside Jordan, striking in waves for half an hour. He said 11 returned safely.

The Jordanians claimed the attack hit two villages, killing one soldier and wounding four others. They said ground fire chased off the Israelies after 45 minutes.

The Soviet Union launched Cosmos 291 Wednesday, continuing an unmanned spacecraft series intended to carry out some type of "space research."

The craft was put into an earth orbit with a high point of 356 miles and a low point of 95 miles.

The last launching in the Cosmos series was on July 22.

National News

A bill to boost payments to banks that make government guaranteed loans to students was rushed through the House Education and Labor Committee today, but House action will probably be delayed for several weeks.

The continuing controversy in the committee over legislation dealing with student disorders prevented an agreement to bring the bill up under emergency procedures next week.

College loan officials say as many as 200,000 students applying for loans for the coming academic year will be turned down because of lack of funds unless the incentive payments proposed by the bill are made to banks participating in the program.

Howard B. Levy, the Army doctor imprisoned for refusing to train medics to serve in Vietnam, left the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg. Pa., Wednesday with his parents and his attorney Levy was freed on $1,000 bond by an order of U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. He was ordered freed so that his conviction would still be subject to consideration by the court when it returns in October. Levv's sentence was to expire Aug. 14.

President Nixon proposed to Congress Wednesday federal job safety and health rules designed to cut the annual toll of some 14,000 deaths and two million disabling injuries of American workers

Nixon's bill would set up a National Occupational Safety and Health Board to work with the states in enforcing a broad range of health and safety regulations with a $10,000 civil penalty for violators.

Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr., one of the first men to orbit the moon, and America's first astronaut: Alan B. Shepard, were named Wednesday as the respective commanders of the Apollo 13 and 14 moon-landing missions scheduled for March and July of next year.

They will lead expeditions into the rugged lunar highlands of Fra Mauro and into the large crater Censorinus on the edge of the Sea of Tranquility.

Rookie astronauts were named to fill out the two crews.

A judge ordered the arrest Wednesday of four officials of a Gary. Ind., fireman's union whose strike led to scuffles as out-of-town firemen attempted to estinguish a $300,000 lumberyard blaze.

Mayor Richard G. Hatcher said firehoses were cut during the fire early Wednesday and he ordered detectives to hunt for signs of arson.

The HL 10, a wingless wedge being tested as a possible space shuttlecraft, flew faster than 1,000 miles an hour for the first time Wednesday.

'Rights' in jeopardy

If U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell has his way, we may no longer hear Joe Friday recite his immortal words: "You have the right to remain silent. If you waive this right . . . The Justice Dept. has already suggested that it will not hesitate to go to court with cases in which "a voluntary confession is obtained after less than a perfect warning or less than conclusive waiver . . . " This seems to be an ominous indication that the Nixon Administration is mounting an attack on the landmark Miranda case of 1966.

In that year, the United States Supreme Court ruled in "Miranda vs. Arizona" that a suspect in custody by the police must be appraised of his constitutional rights before questioning begins. Many liberal thinkers felt that "Miranda." together with the "Gideon" and "Escobedo" decisions, marked a high point in the protection of individual rights.

Unfortunately, these decisions of the Warren Court have come under increasing fire from right-wingers and law and order buffs. Charges have been made that these cases "handcuff" the police and allow criminals to go free. The underlying basis for this reasoning is the premise that society as a whole is more important than the individual.

Certainly, a great many "criminals" were released from prisons or granted new trials as a result of the Supreme Court's rulings. While this may have shocked the public's sensitivities at the time, it is important to remember that it was a singular occurence. Once these cases are cleared up there will be no further exodus from the jails.

Improved courses with higher credit

The announcement that "administrative pressure" has necessitated the reduction of political science courses from five to four credits represents what may be a growing trend toward lesser credit for more courses.

Not that we feel political science particularly deserved five credits, or that many other courses within the University are worthy of any credit. let alone the amount designated but a reevaluation of the method in which the credit is granted is long over-

Too often we have seen courses in which the credit awarded was in no way related to the amount of work done--either too little credit for the work load, or else the course was grossly overrated in relation to the class and homework

Presently, credit is determined by each individual department, subject to the approval of the course and curriculum committee. Consequently, little or no uniformity results, since there is no central University committee that coordinates course credit. This has resulted in such inequities as language study. which for four credits requires a tremendous amount of work as compared to other fourcredit courses.

Thus, the move to lower political science from five to four credits is of value, in the sense that it more closely approximates the work load as compared with other courses in other departments.

But it is unfortunate when one notes a trend toward lower credit, causing the student to take more courses. While the work load may drop from a five-credit to a three-credit course, so must the involvement of the student in the area, since he must take more courses to have a complete schedule. Consequently, the student has been "spread thin": several areas are delved into in one term, often as many as five, but the concentration in any one field is necessarily lessened

A more effective method of educating students might be greater concentration on each course, with less diversity in any one term. It is rather difficult to get involved in a threecredit literature course when a student has five courses in which he must be involved.

There may be virtue in exposing student to many diversified areas of study. but too easily that diversity can be spread so thin that involvement is impossible in any field. Thus the student is as confused after he has tested several areas as before.

What may be needed at this point is an all-University committee to coordinate course credit, and hopefully make an attempt at initiating more comprehensive courses with higher credit.

-- The Editors

The supposition that society is more important than the individual is easy to cling to until one becomes the individual in question. Forced confessions, lack of legal counsel and rush to judgment are characteristics of a police state--not the free democracy that the United States purports

The charge that the "Miranda" and the other decisions "handcuff" the police is somewhat indefensible. Certainly, it slows down arrest and conviction, but if a few extra days may keep an innocent man out of prison or the electric chair even once out of a hundred times, then it seems worth it.

Further, one fails to understand why the laws must be tailored to make up for the impatience and, often, incompetence of police forces. The police are not the Saviors of Society fearlessly striking down all corrupting elements. This sort of thinking reflects only the attitudes of the middle-class white who sits out in his safe suburb and watches too much of "The Untouchables." More properly, the law-enforcement agencies are the servants of the people and have the responsibility of helping to settle the disputes that arise within a society. They are not an entity unto themselves.

One major vehicle of attack of the anti-"Miranda" forces is the premise that the war against organized crime is hampered by the decision. It is hard to accept that they really believe the members of the Cosa Nostra, for example, do not know their constitutional rights by heart and have a battery of lawyers handy.--they always have before. The only people who really stand to lose by a reversal of these landmark decisions are the poor, the minorities, the inhabitants of the ghettos.

We feel that too many people have overlooked the fact that the Warren Court did not "invent" these apparently repugnant "rights." Rather, they have only asserted them in a workable form. We can only hope that the Burger Court will have enough backbone not to bow to the pressures of the paranoid and the overzeal-

In our opinion it is far more heinous to have an innocent man incarcerated than to have an occasional guilty one go free. Any society that is so up-tight about purging itself of "undesirable elements" that it does not have time to protect its own members is in sorry shape indeed.

NEWS ANALYSIS

Nixon's Asian trip baffling

EDITORS NOTE: In his trip across Asia, President Nixon repeatedly declared his intention to live up to all U.S. treaty obligations. Precisely what those obligations are, how they relate to prospects for war and peace and the possibility of more Vietnams, are questions examined in the following news analysis.

By JOHN HIGHTOWER AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP)--The United States has defense commitments to nine Asian countries, but they are vague and flexible enough that President Nixon can mold virtually any kind of Asian policy he wants.

In the wake of Nixon's Asian tour. administration officials say they are convinced he intends to reduce sharply the total U.S. military role in Asia--probably putting most reliance on air and sea forces--as rapidly as Vietnam developments

Nixon's Senate critics, notably Chairman J.W. Fulbright of the Foreign Relations Committee, say they are baffled as to his intentions because he has talked about avoiding any new Vietnams and vet reaffirmed U.S. treaty obligations plus some strongly worded assurances of his own in the case of Thailand.

In addition, Nixon has implied some commitments that are general enough to cover any Asian country in the event of nuclear threat or attack. Well-informed officials regard this as applying particularly to India, even though that traditionally neutral country has never had an alliance with the United States or the communist powers.

The network of U.S. alliances in Asia is largely an outgrowth of negotiation of the peace treaty with Japan in 1951 and the collapse of French power in Southeast Asia in 1954. The treaties thus came a few years after the North Atlantic Alliance between the United States and the Western European countries and are less binding than the NATO pact.

NATO and the earlier western hemisphere alliance, the 1947 Rio Treaty, both specify that an attack on any one of the member nations "shall be considered an attack against them all.

This wording in the NATO pact has always been understood to mean that if a hostile power attack an ally such as Britain, France or Turkey, the United States would consider itself at war and promptly take whatever action it considered necessary. "including the use of armed force." This is considered about as strong a commitment as one nation normally would make to defend another.

Asian pacts all follow a different principle. The basic Asian treaty, signed in 1954, is the SEATO agreement which states that each country recognizes that an armed aggression in Southeast Asia "would endanger its own peace and safety" and that each would meet "the common danger in accordance with its constitutional processes.

SEATO, apart from the United States. Britain and France, included New Zealand. Australia, the Philippines, Thailand and Pakistan. It also covered South Vietnam.

Laos and Cambodia with an offer of protection if they ask for it.

In the case of the SEATO treaty's volunteered protection for Laos and Cambodia, the coverage later was removed and the treaty actually was applied only to South Vietnam.

One of the arguments subsequently made about South Vietnam was that SEATO did not in fact require the United States to put in ground and air forces.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, his congressional critics contended, went beyond SEATO's provisions in moving into South Vietnam without a declaration of war by Congress. Johnson contended not only that SEATO provided a base for his policy but he also had advance approval in a 1964 resolution which covered possible use of force.

Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers have made it clear they want to reduce U.S. involvement in Asia and avoid any more Vietnams. Nixon told a news conference at Guam 10 days ago that the United States would keep its treaty commitments to Asian countries but was going to encourage them to take responsibility for their own security. He also said the United States would avoid a policy which might involve the nation in another conflict such as Vietnam. At another point he said the United States would have to be concerned with a threat posed by nuclear power.

But when Nixon arrived in Bangkok, Thailand, three days later he declared that the United States "will stand proudly with Thailand against those who might threaten it from abroad or from within." Congressional critics complained this broad assurance of defense assistance appeared to run contrary to Nixon's earl-

Some authorities see Thailand as a country where Nixon policy might be put to a severe test in the next few years because of domestic unrest and communist subversion in its northeastern area. It has a common border with embattled Laos, and it has permitted U.S. airbases to operate on its territory.

Dissent with Search Committee

Walt Chappell, the graduate representative. Mike Hudson, the black representative, and Sue Gebelein and Mike Geiszer, the undergraduate representatives. Or, if nothing else, this reflects a lack to the All-University Search and Selection for the next president of MSU wish to express their dissatisfaction with several aspects of the process. In essentially a student dissent, their statement reads

1. We reaffirm the fact that we will not be taken as tools of the several power seeking factions on this committee. We became part of this committee in an effort to select the best president for the university. We had hoped for a great deal of basic honesty and forthrightness from the faculty, alumni and administrative representatives. Although this has been partially realized, several members of the committee are now regressing in their relationship to the student representatives and engaging in dangerous political antics which are detrimental to the main purpose of the committee.

2. Of further concern to us is the issue of confidentiality. Though we disaagreed with the necessity of secrecy. thereby causing a great deal of furor earlier. in the committee's deliberations, we agreed to respect this ruling and the concerns of the other members. This respect was based on the argument that non-confidentiality might harm the positions of persons being considered for president. Evidently, although we, the student representatives, held to the spirit of these concerns. some members of the committee and board do not hold them to be as serious as they before expressed. It has come to our attention that a number of individuals within and outside of the academic community are quite well versed on the proceedings and on candidates which the committee is interviewing.

3. Several actions and reactions of specific individuals on the Board of Trustees have lead us to question the value of our work and participation in the process. There has also been an amount of dishonesty and backsliding on the Board's part. To be specific. several Trustees have stated that they may not select the new president from the list of three names that the Selection

And then there's her out of contextstatement on space exploration. She neglects to add that the Vice President added "by the end of this century" concerning his conviction that our next objective should be Mars. That is a reasonable statement.

Finally, she falls into the now common trap of equating the end of space exploration with solving our domestic problems. The argument goes that that would give us increased money to spend on poverty, housing, etc. Actually, the space budget accounts for comparatively little of the total Government budget. And as space will probably in the long run prove beneficial and is peacefuleven uniting--at least so far, it should be encouraged.

There are other places we can get money. For example, imagine if all the money spent to kill in Vietnam was spent at home on education, housing, etc. Space isn't an "either, or" matter. There is no reason why we can't solve our domestic problems and continue space exploration. And we will!

It was a very Goodyear for 'blimps' over Lansing

What measures 160 feet by 58 feet by 51 feet, resembles a pregnant bullet and can fly? Why Goodyear's blimp Columbia, on exhibit this week at Capital City Airport.

Sponsored by Motor Wheel Corp., the blimp flew Gov. Milliken last Wednesday to the Ingham County Free Fair in Mason. After offering flights to the public, Columbia will depart for Los Angeles Sunday morning.

Goodyear uses blimps for advertising promotion and public relations. The first blimp was buit for fun.

The initial lighter-than-air craft, a 35-foot paper balloon filled with hot air from a charcoal fire, rose over France in 1783.

Silk balloons of hydrogen soon followed the hot-air-paper-bag type. The first passengers were a duck, sheep and rooster. Benjamin Franklin witnessed the first manned flight in France in 1793.

With the development of gas-tight bags and valves, ballooning came into its own. Balloons were used for observation during the American Civil and Franco-Prussian wars, but still relied on wind and moored ropes for movement aloft.

By 1900, the airships had become enginepowered and were used by the military for World War I saw mass production of the craft; during the middle 1930's, their popularity peaked. In World War II, the airships were revived as aerial escorts for convoys.

As detection equipment became more sophisticated, airships declined in importance, until today only three Goodyear blimps are operated on a year-round basis.

The blimp got its name from an army commander who thumped the side of a lighterthan-air craft with his thumb. The sound he received was described as "blimp." From then on that's what they've been called.

Helium has gradually replaced hydrogen as a lift gas for safety reasons. Safety is the password at Goodyear blimp operations. The blimps are grounded in rain or winds exceeding 20 miles an hour. They have just passed the 40-year mark without a fatality

Central computer answers problem

By MARION NOWAK

State News Staff Writer The massive task of providing phone information to the demanding MSU public is being taken over in part by a computer. But unlike people-replacing machines, this one just makes the telephone operator's job easier. We're phasing into what might be a complete computer conversion." Frank B. Martin, director of Data Processing. said. "Although up to this point we've been operating strictly on a trial basis, the results have been pretty good. In fact, we're extending it.

The computer is the central Data Processing IBM unit in the Administration Bldg., which is now hooked by one terminal to the campus telephone information office and provides phone information to students through the operators.

So far, one of the eight campus operators has been experimenting with the new system and she says, "It's so much faster. I really like it.

In the past--and still now for most of the campus operators-phone information was kept in lists and books that were unwieldy to use and outdated in accuracy. Furthermore. "our file can get as large as 60,000 persons when at its peak." Martin said, and this is why experimentation with the new system was introduced last October The system has been operating so satisfactorily that it is being extended to two operating units.

Each unit is an IBM cathode ray television viewer with a typewriter-keyboard terminal below it to request information. When a person's phone is requested, the operator types in his last name and first initial.

In response, the television viewer flashes a short list of names and phone numbers, among which is the requested person's. Besides phone numbers, the viewer shows an individual's student number, home and campus address, or, if he is faculty-staff, official designation and home address.

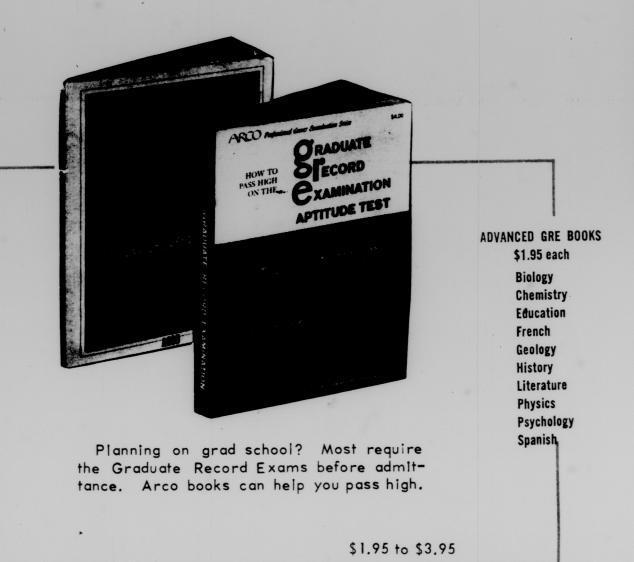

The whole process takes five to seven seconds. So when you think your operator is typing a letter to her boyfriend-never fear, she's just doing her job more efficiently than ever.

Firm officials say SDS factory work-in failed

By DENISE FORTNER State News Staff Writer

Plans by radical students to mobilize factory workers in a revolutionary worker-student alliance this summer have proved largely unsuccessful, according to area industry heads. 'Apparently the threat of a summer work-in never materialized," said a spokesman for the Michigan Manufacturing Assn. "We haven't heard of any problems with the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), either in Lansing or Detroit. It might be because we sent out leaflets alerting manufacturers to the possibility of a work-in this summer," he said.

The association sent out thousands of letters this spring warning business executives of the "work-ins" planned by SDS. Similar "work-in" programs had been attempted before on a smaller scale, but this time the campaign was planned in detail. A Work-in Organizers Manual, circulated among SDS chapters, told students how to get jobs and how to relate to workers.

It urged radicals to "break down the barriers that are keeping students isolated.' Instructions on employment recommended. "If you are white, select a plant where the majority are white. Manual goals included explaining campus policy, "breaking down elitist ideas in ourselves" about workers and getting across the "identity of interests of students and workers." The SDS drive brought an alarmed response from businessmen and chambers of commerce. They held brief meetings and sent out letters informing executives about the program and recommending screening procedures to keep activists off pav-

A student who wants to sell a textbook fills a card out novel hoax which indicates the name of the book, the price he's selling it for and the book's condition A student who wishes to purchase a used textbook pulls the cards in the file for his course. The cards have the names of students wishing to sell the book for that course.

This way the middle man is eliminated and the students can haggle it out between themselves," Alderson said.

The selection of science fiction paperbacks is one of the largest in town. The 900 books include 800 used books and 100 new books, all selling at a considerable reduction. Alderson said.

A check with major area employers, however, indicates that few activists were hired and no problems developed. A spokesman for the Detroit United Automobile Workers

(UAW) said there was no problem what so ever in Michigan with SDS members coming into UAW plants.

"Just between you and me," he said, "these kids are living in a dream world. I can't imagine some guy with 30 years seniority jeopardizing his job for some 20-year-old kid." An Oldsmobile spokesman claimed Oldsmobile had no know-

A spokesman for Motor Wheel Inc., in Ypsilanti stated there had been no evidence of an SDS work-in at that plant.

Union officials, including AFL-CIO President George Meany and UAW head Walter P. Reuther, who seldom agree on anything, have refused to panic or take the SDS invasion seriously. SDS members may be achieving their goals; if so, these are. accomplished so inconspicuously that major employers consider them ineffective. Activists who are not involved in organizing labor this summer have focused on community organization projects.

In Boston, 200 students are attending a nine-week "Movement School" to develop a "critique of American society" and plan future tactics. Members of the Peace and Freedom Party are canvassing door-to-door for rent control in Cambridge, where Harvard's expansion has contributed to a housing shortage. Stanford radicals are developing plans for a week-long series of demonstrations to be held at the International Industrial Conference at San Francisco in September. NEW YORK (AP)--An elaborate literary hoax was unveiled Wednesday with the disclosure that a briskly selling sex novel. "Naked Came the Stranger." actually was authored by 25 wags who set out deliberately to write a terrible

The idea was hatched three years ago by Mike McGrady. a columnist for the Long Island newspaper Newsday. He enlisted 24 co-authors in the scheme and invented a "Penelope Ashe" as the author.

Naked Came the Stranger. a novel about sex in suburbia. already has sold nearly 20,000 copies at $5.95 each since its publication Aug. 3

The book was written in three weeks during the summer of 1966. McGrady said. Throughout that time he peppered his excellence will be pencilled into oblivion" and an unremitting emphasis on sex.
