British troops barricade riot-torn Londonderry

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP)--British troops, moving against Irish rioters for the first time since the days of the Black and Tans 50 years ago, restored uneasy peace Thursday to battle-scarred Londonderry. But violence raged on in Belfast, the capital, and elsewhere in Northern Ireland early

The troops were called in by the Northern Irish government after regular police, mainly Protestants, found it impossible to control 4,000 Roman Catholic rioters in Londonderry.

With a crisp warning, British army troops moved up to the barricades of Londonderry Thursday to halt rioting that raged out of control for three days. They came with shields and automatic rifles at the call of the government

'Rocks we will take, but at the first petrol bomb we fire," warned a sergeant, referring to bottled gasoline bombs used by rioters.

Shortly after the Prince of Wales Regiment rolled up to the Bogside, a Roman Catholic district, tempers cooled enough to let a fire truck go through the barricades to put out fires.

See Related Story, page 10 The British made no effort to enter the Bogside, where Catholics held out against a Protestant-dominated Northern Irish police force since Tuesday.

A senior British officer said the aim of the troops was to lower the tem-

Only a few hours earlier troops of the Irish Republic to the south moved up to the nearby border area. The southern Irish, predominantly Catholic, announced their mission was to support and supply five field hospitals set up near the border in County Donegal for wounded fleeing from the North.

But some Irish Republic troops carried weapons. They patrolled in Donegal just a mile from the Bogside where 4,000 Catholics, who say they are discriminated against in the North, were making their stand.

About 300 British soldiers rode into Londonderry minutes after Home Affairs Minister Robert Porter told an emergency session of Parliament in Belfast that police were exhausted and could no longer control the rioting.

A cheer went up from the crowds in Londonderry's battered center as the first troops arrived in an armored car. More followed in personnel carriers topped by steel grills to keep out rocks. Then two companies of the batallion and support troops arrived.

Many Catholics in the area have contended they would welcome military intervention, charging that the mainly Protestant police, once they break into the area, go on a rampage of destruction.

Smokescreen

Even before the arrival of troops a huge tower of black smoke welled up from William Street, where rioters had forced police back to within 100 yards of their own headquarters and set fire to a pile of tractor tires, making a smokescreen in the narrow street.

The immediate British stategy seemed to be to cordon the area and wait. Nearly two hours after taking position the troops had made no move to enter Bog-

Their stewards, men first appointed to control demonstrations when the Catholic civil rights campaign was confined to protest marches, shouted at younger and more hotheaded elements to keep

Some made a show of rushing the barricades, but this time the rocks and gasoline bombs were absent.

Through the Bogside crowd came Eddie McAteer, veteran leader of the Nationalist opposition party who until the last election represented the Bogside area in the Northern Ireland Parliament.

He talked with the major in charge of

for the fire engine to go into the Bogside if the army would ask the police to withdraw from their positions behind the army's barriers. The police, among them the tough all-Protestant "B Specials," whom the Catholics call gangsters, marched back to their barracks. The barbed wire was rolled back to let the fire truck through and McAteer and other leaders persuaded the Catholics to move back out of sight of

Until a few years ago, the city was a major submarine base and well accustomed to British servicemen. But the reaction among many townspeople was less enthusiastic than the cheer that went up outside the town hall. Londonderry, unlike Belfast, has a Roman Catholic majority, most of whom want a united Ireland divorced from the British crown. The Irish Republic, stunned by the violence in the North, demanded Wednesday night that Britain ask for United Nations peace forces to intervene.

AUSSC gives trustees list of four candidates

The search and selection committee presented the board of trustees Thursday night with a list of four candidates for MSU's next president.

The All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC) finished narrowing Blacks, labor Committee (AUSSC) finished narrowing down its choices at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday with "no recriminations, no flare-ups, Dale Hathaway, AUSSC chairman, said.

Hathaway said all four candidates were 'strong choices with no patterns.'

What I mean is, there were no instances of students against faculty, or faculty against students in the process," he said.

Hathaway declined to say whether or not any of the four candidates were unanimous choices of the 12-man committee, but did say that the candidates needed at least three-fourths of the committee members' vote.

He added that if the board chooses anyone from the committee's list, MSU's next president will have "widespread support from all segments of the University community.

An unidentified member of the committee said Thursday that neither Durward B. Varner, Oakland University Chancellor, nor Acting President Adams were on the list of four.

Collins to stand trial for Ann Arbor murder

ANN ARBOR (UPI) - John Norman Collins was ordered Thursday to stand trial on a charge of first degree murder of an Eastern Michigan University (EMU) coed-latest female victim of seven sex killings in this twin university area over two years.

The trail was scheduled tentatively for Sept. 5 in the Washtenaw County Circuit Court here.

Nine prosecution witnesses testified for four hours, before District Judge Edward Deake bound the handsome 22year-old EMU senior over for trial in the death of Karen Sue Beineman, 18, a freshman at the same school.

There is probable cause to believe the defendant, John Collins, committed this crime," Deake said. "Therefore, I'm binding the defendant over to circuit court for further proceedings.

Deake denied a defense motion by Collins' court-appointed attorney. Richard Ryan, to dismiss the case "on the grounds there is insufficient evidence to bind him over for trial.

When Deake handed down his ruling. Collins' brown-haired mother Lorreta. burst into tears. Members of her family, sitting with her in the front row of the small courtroom, crowded with 60 newsmen and spectators, helped the woman to sit down again.

Throughout the proceedings, Mrs. Collins had sat next to Collins' brother, Larry, with her arm around his shoulders. Collins himself showed virtually no emotion throughout his preliminary examination, sitting mostly bolt upright in his chair and occasionally looking toward his mother. Washtenaw County Prosecutor William Delhey argued in summing up that there was sufficient reason to bind Collins over for trial. In Michigan, a pre-trial examination is held to determine whether a crime has cution has enough evidence for a defendant Delhey said Miss Beineman had been seen in an Ypsilanti shop, "Wigs by Joan," about noon on Wednesday, July 23--the day she disappeared. Witnesses had testified Collins, driving a shiny been committee and whether the prose-motorcycle, was with her, Delhey said. The wig shop owner, Mrs. Diana Joan Goshe, pointed out Collins from the witness stand as the man on the motor-

But Defense Attorney Richard Ryan quickly established on cross examination that Mrs. Goshe needs glasses to see at a distance and wasn't wearing them that day. The wig shop operator said she had picked Collins out of a lineup of five earlier after looking at "oh, heavens, thousands" of pictures shown to her by

The next we hear of Miss Beineman is on July 26, when her nude, mutilated body, beaten beyond recognition, was found in a wooded gully on the outskirts of Ann Arbor," Delhey said.

Shortly before she disappeared, Miss Beineman's roommate said she had eaten watermelon for lunch, Delhey said. Dr. Robert Hendrix, University of Michigan pathologist who performed the autopsy on the 96-pound girl and the other six previous victims, said he found watermelon seeds in Miss Beineman's stomach, according to Delhey.

So within approximately two hours after driving off on a motorcycle, she is dead," Delhey said.

Since Collins was the only person seen with her from the time she left the wig ship, shortly after eating lunch, until the time the autopsy established she had died. Delhey maintained there was sufficient cause to believe Collins had killed Miss Beineman.

Collins shook his head again and again when one witness pointed him out as the voung man with whom Miss Beineman was last seen alive on a motorcycle.

Students' desperate requests note lack of college loan funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - Officials from President Nixon on down are receiving thousands of desperate letters and telephone calls from students and their parents who say college may be cut this fall because loan funds have dried up.

"If we don't get a loan, David will not be able to re-enter school this fall. a Minneapolis mother wrote.

"I'm writing this letter out of desperation for my son," said a Franklin Lakes. N.J. woman.

'My son is trying very hard to graduate, but without financial help, he cannot register for any more semesters."

As We Go to Press

President Nixon urged the nation's lending institutions Thursday to keep funds flowing to needy college students whose educations otherwise will be imperiled

"With the start of the school year rapidly approaching, I strongly urge the lenders to proceed with the loans to avoid further indecision and delay," he

I am an American Negro male who is trying to obtain an education, but due to financial difficulties. I have had a tedious time doing this," a Valdosta, Ga., youth

The problem is a prime interest rate of 812 per cent that may deny loans to upwards of 220,000 students this fall, say officials in the Office of Education's Guaranteed Loan Division.

The original goal this year was $794 million in loans to 920,000 students.

Congress recessed Wednesday for three weeks without taking final action on legislation that would raise from 7 to 10 per cent the amount of student loan interest the government will guarantee.

Many banks, credit unions and savings and loan associations say they can't afford further 7 per cent loans to college students. The money can earn more interest elsewhere, they say.

The Nixon Administration is reportedly preparing a public statement urging banks to continue making the government-backed student loans. It will say that Congress will almost certainly pass the necessary legislation early in September with a retroactive provision to Aug.

Dinis to file request for Kopechne autopsy

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP)--Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis said Thursday he would appear today in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and ask a court to order exhumation and an autopsy of the body of Mary Jo Kopechne, who died in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's D-Mass., car accident.

Dinis said he wants the autopsy so that the report of a complete examination of the body can be made part of the record in the inquest he has ordered into the accident. He said he would present his petition at Wilkes-Barre and arrange a date for a formal hearing.

Pity for space monkey prompts convicts' suit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -- Court officials said Thursday a suit by a group of convicts to keep the United States from sending any more monkeys into orbit may never get off the

The suit, brought in U.S. District Court by six inmates at North Carolina's Central Prison in Raleigh, contends there's a great deal of similarity between confining a man to a cell and a monkey to a cramped spacecraft.

The inmates submitted the suit "in behalf of the now deceased space monkey named Bonny and all other monkeys." Bonny was sent into orbit last month, became ill and died after returning to earth

Miss Kopechne's mother said the girl's parents were seeking a Pennsylvania lawyer to block exhumation of her daughter's body.

In Pennsylvania, President Judge Bernard C. Brominski of Luzerne County Court of Common Pleas said Dinis or a deputy must file a petition for an autopsy and a hearing on the petition could be held in about 10 days.

Dinis said state police Lt. Det. George Killen, assigned to his office, and two other detectives are doing investigative work on Martha's Vineyard for the inquest. It opens Sept. 3 at Edgartown on the island off Cape Cod. Chappaquiddick adjoins Martha's Vineyard.

Asked again if Kennedy would be called to testify at the inquest. Dinis said: "I have no comment on that at this time.

"I said earlier that I had no plans at that time to call him," Dinis said, adding that he stood by that statement. He said that developments in the case would determine whether Kennedy is called.

Dinis says the inquest is "to determine whether or not there is any reason sufficient to believe that the sudden death of Mary Jo Kopechne may have resulted from the act or negligence of a person or persons other than the de-

The Kopechnes say they would welcome an inquest but will go to court if necessary to block an autopsy. In Berkelev Heights, N.J., Mrs. Joseph Kopechne, mother of Mary Jo, said: "We haven't settled anything yet with an attorney, but we are still determined to prevent an autopsy.

"Mr. Dinis has not given us any definite reason for wanting an autopsy," Mrs. Kopechne said, "We can't understand litical issue. He is only hurting us."

Mrs. Kopechne said that last week she contacted an aide in Dinis's office and asked him to request the district attorney to abandon his plans for an autopsy

In another development, the Manchester, N.H., Union Leader reported that 17 telephone calls were charged to Kennedy's credit card in the hours immediately following the accident, when Kennedy has said he was in shock

A spokesman for the New England Telephone Co. said in Boston that because of legal restrictions he could neither confirm nor deny the report. He said use of the credit card the calls himself.

The Boston Globe, meanwhile, quoted Kennedy as saying he is privately at peace with himself.

"I can live with myself," the newspaper quoted Kennedy as telling Matthew V. Storin, one of its Washington corres-

"I feel the tragedy of the girls death. That's on my mind.

That's what I will always have to live with," Kennedy said.

'But, what I don't have to live with are the whispers and innuendoes and falsehoods, because they have no basis in fact."

The Prague government called on the army and militia Thursday to safeguard law and order in Czechoslovakia's cities next week, the first anniversary of the Soviet-led invasion.

The federal government was joined by the Czech and Slovak states in issuing a statement criticizing leaflets "aimed at provoking illegal acts in the coming days." The statement also said the internal political situation was grave in the Eastern European na-

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir warned the Arab nations Thursday that Israel would win again if there was another Mideast war.

"But we don't want wars even if we win." Mrs. Meir told a political meeting in a Tel Aviv suburb.

At the Paris peace talks, the United States and South Vietnam denounced Thursday the upsurge of fighting in South Vietnam and expressed concern over indications that North Vietnam may be seeking military victory rather than a negotiated settlement.

But despite the Allies' charges, the 30th full-scale weekly session of the Vietnam peace talks produced no hint of a breakthrough in the long deadlock.

As the diplomats meet in Paris, U.S. officials in Saigon see an eventual declining pattern in the war, barring future heavy intervention by North Vietnam.

The officials base their view on the fact that captured Communist command documents no longer speak of an offensive as they did during the bitter fighting of 1968.

National News

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Thursday President Nixon's $4-billion-a-year welfare plan would subsidize cheap labor for the nation's worst employers and force the poor to train for jobs that don't exist.

"The AFL-CIO vigorously opposes the use of federal funds to subsidize the employers of cheap labor," he said. "Decent wages are the obligation of the employer, not the taxpaver."

The Nixon Administration, having failed in its efforts to start strategic arms talks with Russia by mid-August, now reportedly faces a further Soviet delay of several weeks or more.

Information reaching the United States from the Soviet Union indicates policy makers in Moscow are still working on the bargaining lines they will take in the prospective two-nation conference.

Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy, confirming objections which had only been hinted at before, said Thursday the House's massive tax reform bill may cut too deeply into government income.

Kennedy said in Washington that the reform bill cuts federal income to such a point that domestic programs must be cut back and inflationary pressures are increased.

A Philadelphia judge recommended Thursday that teen age gang members who commit crimes be publicly whipped.

President Judge Vincent A. Carroll of the Court of Common Please made the suggestion as city law officials launched a drive against gang violence. "We should bring back the days of the whipping post," the judge said. "That's what these gang members need.

"They should be humiliated right on the public streets, with whippings, in front of the eyes of the people they've been terrorizing," he said.

War resisters find island refuge

HONOLULU (AP)--Twelve young men who say they ran away from military service because they oppose the Vietnam war have made a home in the sanctuary of a little church near the University of Hawaii. The military shows no sign

The 12 took refuge after the board of the Church of the Crossroads issued a statement: "Our sanctuary is committed to a nonviolent form of resistance . . . The church is providing moral support to men who, for conscience sake, must resist what they believe to be the immoral activities of their own

The church is affiliated with the United Church of Christ. Its congregation of about 300 includes faculty members and students from the university.

The sanctuary is one of a cluster of blue-roofed, palmshaded buildings that include a social hall, meeting rooms and a ceramics workshop that once was a coffee house.

The church has had no minister since last year and is run by the board, headed by the Rev. Mitsuo Aoki, a professor of religion at the University. Aoki says that while the church would not officially perform illegal acts, individuals may engage in acts of civil disobedience.

The 12 have issued a statement that claiming sanctuary is an act of "deep involvement against all the injustice inherent in the American military system.

Military commanders have urged the men to turn themselves in. But Army Spec. 4 Daniel Overstreed, 21, of Garden City, told a newsman Thursday that he and his 11 companions plan to stay."

North Ireland torn with useless strife

The absurdity of the divisions that men create between themselves and their fellows has reached yet another high point. Protestants and Catholics battle and burn in the streets of the cities of Northern Ireland. The Irish Republic has called for United Nations troops to quell the violence in the neighbor nation.

In our opinion, the situation that has been allowed to smolder to explosion in Ulster is unforgivable. Prejudice is prejudice and does not come in greater and lesser grades. We feel, however, that the air of the ironic and the ridiculous is increased when men of the same nation, the same color and, in the broader sense, the same religion kill over sectarianism and a war that was fought centuries ago.

Rioting is not defensible, but the blame for its eruption does lie more properly on the shoulders of Northern Ireland's Protestant majority. As is the case with some minority groups in the United States, decades of discrimination in housing, jobs and governmental representation have taken their toll on Ulster's Catholics. When enough people are crowded together long enough in a ghetto, spontaneous combustion is bound to occur.

Worse, the Protestant leaders of the government are apparently not willing to budge. We severely question the competence of the leaders of Londonderry who allowed the holding of a parade that commemorated a Protestant victory over the Catholics. Tradition notwithstanding, strikes us as criminally irresponsible to have held such a show when tempers were so near the kindling point.

Further, we are highly critical of the national government in London for not taking some sort of action to mediate this conflict long before now. Even the British version of our States' Rights doctrine is unforgiveable when the national government allows an intolerable condition to continue, lest they should call down the displeasure of the ruling elite.

We are also dubious of the Irish Republic's motives in meddling in this business. On the one hand, we are aware that Eire has a Catholic majority and, thereby, may be truly compassionate for the downtrodden in Ulster. On the other hand, we also know that, since independence, the Irish Republic has not been happy about the partition of "their" island. They have been known to cast covetous eyes on Northern Ireland in the past. The tragedy would be doubly compounded were Ulster's internal strife to become an international problem.

It is our opinion that the time has most surely come for the people of Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom to lay aside their imagined differences and fairly settle this terrible conflict. If this is not done, perhaps within days, the problem may well become insoluble.

Slum kids teach ghetto

City College of San Francisco is conducting one of the more unique and enlightened schools in this country. The classroom is the San Francisco ghetto. The students are junior college teachers from big cities across the U.S.

After a morning of traditional lecturing, students spend the rest of the day learning what ghetto life is all about. Here the instructors are ghetto youths ranging in age from 14 to 25. Each of the junior college teachers accompanies one of them through a typical day in a slum neighborhood.

From all indications so far, the program is a complete success. Its planners are hoping to set up a similar program next year, utilizing college administrators and mass media executives as the students.

Only through such efforts will any type of real understanding take place between slum residents and the rest ghetto have a very limited and imperfect concept of their subject. This only leads to further misunderstanding and mis-

We feel that programs like the one conducted in San Francisco this summer are a step toward comprehending and solving one of the major problems of our culture.

Soviets covet sinking prize

By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP Special Correspondent

Sinkiang has all the fuel necessary for a big conflagration. The military clash there Wednesday will be widely regarded as a dangerous sympton of events to come. Sinking is so sensitive an area--with Chinese nuclear weapons installations--that military hostilities there overshadow skirmishes elsewhere along the 4,500-mile border between the Soviet Union and China.

The boiling hostility between the two giants of the East is based on much more than differences over Marxist-Leninist ideology. The differences go deep: economic, political, military and territorial. They trace to old complaints. Dead camaraderie

When Communist China came into being in 1949. Peking and Moscow exchanged florid vows of "unbreakable friendship." But the treaty of friendship and mutual assistance that Mao Tse-tung and Joseph Stalin signed in 1950 has been dead for years.

Separation of Sinkiang from Red China may well be one of the aims of Soviet policy.

What the Chinese call the Sinkiang-Uighur autonomous region, as big as Italy, France, Germany and Britain all together, is of extreme importance geographically, politically, militarily and economically to the Peking Regime. It

It has a 1,500-mile border with the Soviet Union. Russians have eyed this area hungrily for centuries, and in the 1930s it almost became a Soviet satellite in the style of the Mongolian People's Republic. World War II stopped that development.

But the Chinese, both Nationalist and Communist, have always suspected Soviet intentions.

Soviet paternalism

The Russians never formally surrendered their claims in Sinkiang. In 1948, Stalin offered to mediate between Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang and the surgi Communists--a development which would have halted, or at least delayed, the revolution--in return for the renewal of Soviet concessions in Sinkiang.

As long ago as 1954 the Russians complained about Chinese claims to Soviet territories, even while the Russians were working with the Chinese in Sinkiang in joint exploitation companies.

ing incidents along the border. Soviet-Chinese relations worsened in 1964 when the Chinese laid claim to vast areas of Soviet-held territory--close to a million square miles. Meanwhile, trouble was brewing elsewhere along the frontiers, notably in the area of Manchuria. The nervousness increased in October 1964 when China produced at Lop Nor the first of a series of nuclear explosions that would lead her to H-bomb and missile capability.

In 1966, Soviet Communist chief Leonid Brezhnev, Premier Alexei Kosygin, and Soviet rocket generals visited the border areas and called for vigilance. By this time Chinese propaganda was picturing the Soviet Union as the No. 1

Throughout 1967 there were minor border skirmishes, mostly in the Far East. Peking sent thousands of demobilized soldiers as "workers" to those areas, with orders to keep "hoe in one hand and rifle in the other.

Propagandic flood

The Russians, meanwhile, were pumping a flood of propaganda into Sinkiang and other border areas.

Early this year there were Soviet-Chinese clashes in the area of the disputed Ussuri River boundary in the Far East. The Chinese, calling the Russians "social imperialists," accused them of expansionist aims in Chinese territory "new czars in the truest sense of the term," as People's Daily put it.

And in Moscow, Wang Ming made a sudden reappearance. Wang, whose real name is Chen Saho-vu, had been Stalin's choice, against Mao Tse-tung to lead the Chinese Communists in the 1930s. Mao bested Wang, who eventually fled with other "Muscovite" Chinese to the Soviet Union.

Wang began writing about the "grave crimes" of Mao against the world Communist movement, began accusing Mao of running a rigid military dictatorship based on terror, of destroying the Chinese party and of oppressing "national minorities," a pointed reference to Sin-

BARNEY WHITE

Then things started to get really bad. There had always been a subliminal mental dichotomy even in scuzzie days, between "hips" and "straights." But all of a sudden people wouldn't even talk to anybody who was wearing a white shirt and tie. And I'd say: "Hey, that cat's only doing his own thing." But people couldn't dig it anymore--the man was "straight" and "establishment" and, thereby, was some sort of alien.

Then the gentle people started to hate. First, they hated the pigs and I'd say: "Hey, man, maybe there are a lot of bad cops (I never did dig the word "pig"--I figured that if I didn't want to be bad-mouthed, then I ought not badmouth anybody else), but there's bound to be some good ones. I mean, you just can't group hundreds of individuals into a single stereotype. Remember when we used to get up-tight about citizens stereotyping us?" But they didn't.

The hate spread and people started to get "radicalized" and I saw our, my, revolution for free men with free minds

It was the Revolution, man. It was the era of mindless, paranoid, simplistic theories like class struggle. When you can't figure out where you're at and you don't want to, then it's easy to believe in black and white, us verses them.

This is where we are today, and I'm grieved and a little sick. No longer do you try to free your head, instead you spout the party line. The emphasis is no longer on the person-it's on the group. the class, the struggle.

We don't live anymore. We hate. We don't accept all men as brothers unless they join with the "cause." We don't allow people to express their minds-we shout down speakers that we don't want to hear. We don't read Zen and write poems and paint pictures any more--we read Marx and write radical rags and make class struggle posters. We aren't gentle any more-we hit, we we burn and we even want to kill. We lost our revolution, and society won. The souls that we tried to free, our own, have sunk back to the same polluted depths from which they arose. Only the outward trappings are different.

Ex-Spartan greats meet tonight

By JEFF ELLIOTT

State News Sports Editor Two of Michigan State's greatest defensive players will renew acquaintance's tonight as their respective professional football teams clash in Houston's famed Astrodome.

George Webster, Houston's All-league linebacker, and Baltimore's big defensive end, Bubba Smith, will both be out to lead their team to victory in one of several top exhibition football games this weekend.

Other outstanding games pit the New York Jets in a grudge match against the New York Giants, the O.J. Simpson-'led Buffalo Bills against our Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys-San Francisco 49ers clash out on the west coast. The Colts-Oilers game will match two undefeated clubs against each other, Baltimore holding wins over San Diego and Oakland while Houson topped Buffalo 24-7 in their pre-season opener two weeks ago. Both teams have top flight defenses, Houston led by Webster and all-league cornerback Miller Farr, while the Baltimore charge is led by Smith and middle linebacker Dennis Gaubatz.

Both defenses are tough and yield yardage very grudgingly. The only noticeable difference in the two is that Houston's talented squad is young, many of them third-year pros from and fine 1967 rookie crop (including Webster), while Baltimore's defense, with the exception of Smith and two others is an experienced crew.

Smith and Webster were mainstays on coach Duffy Daugherty's squads from 1964-66. Smith, 6 feet 7, 295 poinds rarely had plays run on his side of the field. His awesome charge after the quarterback often required two and sometimes George Webster after the quarterback often require three offensive linemen to hold him back.

Spearheaded by the famous cries of "Kill-Bubba-Kill." Smith often caused opposing quarterbacks to wish they could scramble with the likes of New York's Fran Tarkington. Smith, who hails from Beaumont, Texas, was a two-time All-American and was twice named to the All-Big Ten first team. He capped off his senior year by being named UPI's "Lineman of the Year," and was the Colt's first round Webster' performance and laurels are just as noteworthy as Smith's. The 6 feet 4, 215 pound roverback was captain of the Spartans his senior year in leading the Green and White to an undefeated season and a Rose Bowl berth.

The Anderson, S. Carolina native, was feared by opposing backs and linemen because of his size and agility. Many a time he would be in the opposing teams' backfield one play and back defending on a pass the next.

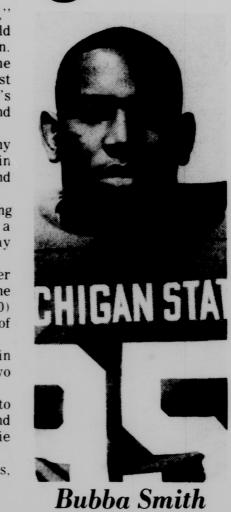

Daugherty called him "the best football player I've ever coached." Webster had the distinction of being only the second MSU football player ever to have his jersey (90) retired. The only other jersey to be retired was that of All-American tackle Don Coleman (78) in 1951.

Webster was named rookie of the year in the AFL in 1967 and has been an all-AFL pick each of his first two seasons with the Oilers.

He will have his hands full tonight however trying to contain Baltimore's hard running fullback Tom Matte and helping defend against the Colts, two fine receivers Willie Richardson and John Mackey.

Smith will be up aginst one of the AFL's top tackles, 265 pound Glen Ray Hines.

A sellout crowd of 45,000 is expected in the Astrodome

It was the second time in recent weeks that the group tried to conduct a mass inside the Pentagon only to be arrested.

On the previous occasion, the group used a chapel-like setting on the concourse, equipped with an altar and an organ, where services are often held during the noon hour.

This time, however, Pentagon officials had stripped the chapel of its few furnishings, roped it off and put up "Keep Out"

Maddock said those arrested would be taken before a judge in nearby Alexandria, Va., to be charged.

Iraq still receiving manna, says local Egyptian pastor

CAIRO (AP)--Anyone who calls on the pastor of Our Lady of Fatima church in suburban Heliopolis these days is likely to get a bite of manna, the "bread of heaven" which the Bible says nourished the Hebrews across the Sinai desert on their exodus from Egypt to the Promised

The pastor, the Rt. Rev. Ephren Bede, has a steady supply of manna which he generously distributes to members of the parish and other friends and guests. Monsignor Bede is the local vicar for the parish of the Chaldean rite of the Catholic church.

Of Iraqi origin, Msgr. Bede gets an occasional box of manna from his family back in southern Iraq, a region known historically as Chaldea. This is the region reputed to be the birthplace of Abraham and the original home of the Jews.

As received from Iraq, manna dough is off-white in color, has the consistency of homemade fudge and tastes somewhat like when invited to lunch in homes or at official gatherings where he offers a taste to other guests. He delights in telling about Msgr. Bede claims that an inexplicable natural phenomenon continually supplies some regions of Iraq with this biblical bread. He asserts that soft, snow-like flakes descend on the desert during droughts. The monsignor says that manna flakes have fallen on regions of Iraq since the beginning of time. People who live nearby go to the desert in groups to gather it at dawn. Many have come to know, by tradition or family lore, how to conserve it.

Families bake it according to various recipes handed down from their ancestors.

"In Iraq," the monsignor relates "people regard the existence of manna in different ways. Some villagers believe it to be a gift from God, and they are all the more delighted in the early autumn and spring seasons when manna is known to come down.

'Middle class people usually take a more sophisticated attitude by just acknowledging it as a natural fact. Religious people Mrs. Stoecker said that she and the ecclesiastical group, on had received a letter from her the other hand, jealously keep silent and refuse to commit themselves.
