Radicals battle police in streets of Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie ordered 2,000 members of the National Guard to active duty in Chicago Thursday after street battles occurred the night before between police and some 300 young radicals.

Ogilvie said in Springfield that Brig. Gen. Richard T. Dunn, who has been in Chicago for two days, recommended that the Army-affiliated guard be activated as a result of the fighting that took place on the Near North Side.

The governor said he talked with Mayor Richard J. Daley about the plans of the radicals Tuesday and Gen. Dunn was asked to observe the situation.

A spokesman for Ogilvie said Dunn's recommendation was based on the violence Wednesday night and the fear that more disorders might occur Thursday night.

Daley praised police for their restraint during Wednesday's hit-and-run skirmishes with young persons who stormed out of Lincoln Park following a bonfire and rally.

One SDS group, the Weatherman, sponsored the Lincoln Park rally for 400 persons which ended in two hours of street skirmishes between police and club-carrying, helmeted youths. There were 65 persons arrested and 34 persons, including 21 policemen, injured.

The Weatherman's rival for control of SDS and recruitment of many unaligned young radicals, is Revolutionary Youth Movement II, which sponsored a demonstration Thursday at the U.S. courthouse where eight political activists are being tried on charges of crossing state lines in a conspiracy to incite riots.

Twelve women, including Bernardine Dohrn, 27, former inter-organizational secretary of SDS, were arrested Thursday after they rushed police during a demonstration near the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

Police said about 60 women marched six abreast at Balbo Drive and Michigan Avenue and refused police orders to disperse. Officials said the women, many of whom wore helmets and carried clubs and chains, planned to march to an induction center.

Those arrested were charged with aggravated battery, mob action and resisting arrest. The others were permitted to continue the march. Seven policemen were slightly injured.

Leaders of both SDS wings predicted 5,000 to 15,000 young persons would attend the demonstrations planned through Saturday in Chicago.

Mayor Richard J. Daley said at a news conference that Wednesday night's window-smashing and "guerrilla tactics" were "an outrage against the community."

He said he would not hesitate to request National Guard troops to help quell rioting if necessary, but he said he has no plans to do so at present.

The mayor praised the police who he said, "manifested the highest dedication to duty and professional conduct when in the face of great personal danger they preserved and protected the rights of our citizens."

Open house

The "Wolverine" will be holding an open house at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 13, in 27 Student Services Bldg. Refreshments will be served.

Anyone interested in working on the yearbook is welcome to attend. Photographers, writers, typists and other workers are needed. For more information, call 355-8263.

A pouncing point

At a news conference in the Federal Bldg. in Chicago Thursday, Yippie leader Jerry Rubin makes a point by pounding on the desk. He appeared at the conference with the six other defendants who are standing behind him, charged with conspiracy to incite mob action at the Democratic National Convention. AP Wirephoto

MILLIKEN'S MESSAGE

Tax change needed to back school reform

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken gave his long-awaited message on educational reform to the legislature Thursday and proposed a five cent increase in the cigarette tax to help finance the program.

Speaking to a joint session of the Michigan lawmakers, Milliken also urged elimination of property tax credits on the state income tax that is due in 1971.

He said the cigarette tax would yield an additional $18 million in the current fiscal year if it becomes effective January 1, and $45 million next year.

The elimination of property tax credits would put an additional $116 million in the state coffers, Milliken said.

He told the legislature, in his 35-minute address, that the various state aid programs would cost $183 million.

In his 14-page message, Milliken devoted a scant paragraph to the controversial question of aid to non-public schools. He recommended $25 million to support 5,800 lay teachers.

As previously announced, the governor proposed a constitutional amendment that would establish a state-wide property tax and suggested that it be set at 16-mills, 8-mills less than the present 24-mill state average.

He said it would mean a reduction of $300 to $400 million in revenues from property taxes and would provide relief for 93 per cent of the property taxpayers.

Milliken also introduced a local option proposal that would allow the individual school districts to levy up to 3-mills on a local vote for additional "enrichment programs."

The state's chief executive argued that removing the principal responsibility of taxation from the local boards would enable them to give more of their attention to educational programs.

"I believe deeply in effective local control over the quality of education," Milliken said. "This control can only be achieved when the local districts are free to concentrate on educational attainment of its pupils, undistracted by impending financial crises beyond their power to control or impede."

If the property tax amendment passes, Milliken said substantial new revenue would have to come from other sources, probably relying most on income tax increases. He indicated there would be no specific new proposals until after the referendum.

If only income taxes were used to make up the slack, he said, personal income tax would increase by 1.5 per cent, from 2.6 to 4.1 per cent. Corporate and financial institutions income taxes would rise by 2.1 per cent and 4 per cent respectively.

"In financing better education, however, we must do much more than look for new sources of revenue," Milliken added. "We must close tax loopholes that provide unfair advantages."

"We must constantly examine and re-examine all state spending to eliminate waste and duplication wherever it occurs."

The governor also tried to alleviate legislative apprehension on raising taxes with an election year coming up.

"I am absolutely convinced that the people of Michigan are willing to pay more (please turn to page 15)

Black fraternity leaves IFC

By JEANNE SADDLER
State News Staff Writer

A black fraternity, Alpha Phi Alpha, announced its withdrawal from the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) Thursday. In its statement, the fraternity urged all other black Greeks to withdraw from IFC and the Panhellenic Council.

"We were involved in a group that is dysfunctional to our interests and that includes fraternities in its membership whose policies and practices are overtly racist," stated Alpha Phi Alpha President, Charles Dillard, Detroit junior.

Dillard also announced plans for a black Greek organization which would be structured through the office of the ASMSU vice president for black affairs, Stan McClinton. He explained that the new organization would serve the same general purpose as IFC, but in a more relevant context.

"Black Greeks do not want to be isolated in a purely social-academic environment," Dillard said. "We want to work in the community to improve the plight of black people, and the IFC was dysfunctional to this goal."

Ted Dziak, president of IFC, and Steve Douse, vice president in charge of development, said that the break was not unexpected.

"We had discussed establishing a black seat on the council," Dziak said, "and tried three times, that I know of, to contact all of the presidents of the black fraternities and get them here together."

The IFC did meet with representatives of two black fraternities, Alpha Phi Alpha and Phi Beta Sigma, last year, according to Dziak. He said that they discussed several possibilities for black participation, including establishing a seat on the council and beginning a black IFC.

"We very frankly admit," Douse explained, "that it is hard for us to understand some of their problems. Our main problem is that we are not too relevant to their needs, but it was almost impossible to do much more until they took part in the organization."

Dziak agreed, saying that IFC wanted to do all it could to help the black fraternities establish an organization, and that its facilities would be available to them.

"Perhaps this is the best way to establish communication," he commented.

The officers said that they had met with the IFC at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind., where two inter-fraternity councils had been established. Dziak said that the members of both groups felt that they communicated much more with this system and often planned activities together.

At the University of Wisconsin, Dziak said that they had met a black student who sat on the executive board of the IFC and represented the black fraternities.

"He said that it was difficult at first and that it took a person who could really coordinate black and white activities," Dziak explained, "but he felt that it worked out fine in the end."

FOR 'U' EMPLOYEES

Annual TB test advised

By LARRY MOLNAR
State News Staff Writer

MSU does not require student cafeteria employees who handle food to have annual tuberculosis tests — a practice contrary to the advice of both the Michigan State Dept. of Health and the Ingham County Health Dept. Both "strongly advise" that cafeteria employees who handle food be given annual T.B. tests.

After a student receives his pre-enrollment physical and is registered at MSU, he can work part-time for any number of years as a cafeteria employee and never be retested.

Gary Edwards, of the State Health

Dept., said the basic law concerning T.B. testing requires annual examinations for all persons who, by nature of their occupations, could constitute a health menace by infectious T.B. The law specifically requires school personnel in schools up to the 12th grade to have annual T.B. tests.

"Although the law does not actually require that persons in higher educational institutions be tested, the law strongly recommends that they also undergo annual checkups," Edwards said. "It is a very, very good practice to follow for all food handlers, even though the law does not specifically require it," he said.

Arthur Alm, of the County Health Dept., also maintained that annual T.B. tests are necessary.

"The County Health Dept. feels that it is highly advisable to have at least an annual check-up. Because T.B. is a contagious disease and can be transmitted through food, persons who handle food as a part of their job should be tested regularly for this disease," he said. "Because in most cases there is not any state law specifically requiring all employees to have this test, we put as much pressure on employers as we can to have such employees checked."

Hart to speak at Capitol moratorium rally

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., will be principal speaker at the Vietnam moratorium to be held here Oct. 15.

The senator, Acting President Adams and U.S. Rep. Donald W. Riegle Jr., R-Mich., will speak between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the Auditorium, following workshops beginning at 9 a.m. in Fairchild Theater.

"The purpose of the moratorium is to maximize public pressure to end the war by encouraging a broad cross section of Americans to work against the war," according to Gunther Pfaff, a member of the steering committee.

Pfaff noted that the entire Greater Lansing Community, as well as the MSU student body and faculty, is expected to participate in the moratorium.

"The Vietnam war is of concern to the whole community," he said. "We need everyone's help to make this a wide coalition for peace."

Support for the nationwide moratorium is mounting steadily, as U.S. congressmen and Michigan legislators call for observance of the protest.

Plans to keep the U.S. House of Representatives in session all night on Oct. 14 as a symbol of protest against the war were disclosed Thursday by a group of members.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., spokesman for the group, said enough speakers have been lined up to talk through the night about the need to end the war.

"I think it would be a dramatic symbol to have the House lights burning all night," Rosenthal said at a news conference. The spectator galleries would also be kept open.

"I think that this is going to be the largest citizen participation of its kind in the history of the country," he said.

Companion resolutions calling for adjournment of the Michigan legislature Oct. 15 were introduced Thursday by Sen. Sander M. Levin, D-Berkley, and Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, and were referred to committee for further study.

"The resolutions were introduced because we feel that the meetings being organized by concerned citizens on Moratorium Day represent an important effort to increase the national dialog on the policies of the Federal government in Vietnam," Vaughn and Levin said, "to involve more Americans in the debate on this critical issue and to register public sentiment for all leaders to hear and consider."

"All of these aims," they continued, "are in the best American tradition and a vital function of the democratic process."

In calling for official expression of the anti-war sentiment in Michigan, Vaughn emphasized that "it is the duty of the legislature to protest against a war which is as damaging to the interest of the state as it is frustrating to the Federal government."

He asked the public to join with the legislature in a demonstration that "Michigan is ready to take the lead among the states in the effort to redirect our nation's energies to the solution of crippling social and economic problems at home so that peace can come not only to Vietnam but to our own neighborhoods."

Plans are also being formulated in Milwaukee, Chicago and Providence, R.I., according to coordinators from these cities. A Washington coordinator reported that about 15 federal employee groups are planning some type of activity in conjunction with the moratorium.

An article in the Washington Post said that national coordinators for the moratorium claim more than 500 student body presidents and newspaper editors on some 400 campuses have endorsed the proposed suspension of classes Wednesday.

Northern Michigan University students say they will go on a day-long fast and turn in money saved on meals to a fund to aid displaced persons in Vietnam. The group heading the demonstration at Northern is issuing black armbands to be worn by students and others participating in, or sympathetic to, the nation-wide antiwar movement.

The Archdiocese of Detroit declared next Wednesday as a day of prayer and fasting for the 1.5 million Catholics under its jurisdiction, urging them to assess the problems of war and peace, particularly in Vietnam.

A statement concerning the moratorium made by President Nixon in a recent press conference has caused much discontent among national coordinators. The President said he will not be affected by any kind of campus activity in opposition to the war; however, David Hawk, a national coordinator, expressed the value of the student protest.

"The Administration seems to be under the impression that students are against the war simply because they or their friends are about to be drafted," Hawk said. "Students oppose the war because Americans and Vietnamese are dying needlessly and because the war is a disaster for America."

At MSU, the moratorium has received endorsement from Acting President Adams and several other MSU faculty members.

House to hear student gripes

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Rep. Vincent J. Pettipren, D-Westland, is sincerely interested in the problems university students face each day.

Chairman of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities, Pettipren has drafted 18 bills benefiting college students in his five years as a legislator.

"The basic problem between the youth of today and my generation is that they're talking, but we're not listening," the representative said.

"Youth today are more aware of the rights of man," he explained. "They look at the Constitution, which says all men are equal, but see inconsistencies in the real world."

We're denying the right of expression to our younger citizens by not listening to what they have to say, he added.

In an effort to find out what young people are really thinking, Pettipren and several other legislators plan to set up a grievance committee that will visit Michigan universities and hear student complaints.

"Our opinion is that we can't let the students know we're interested unless we go to them. When you have a problem, you must go to that problem to solve it."

Pettipren also pointed out the failure of Michigan universities to provide courses when the laborers of the community can attend, universities are, in effect, denying equality of education.

"We also need a board of regents for Michigan universities that will give equal representation to all schools, regardless of size or financial abilities," he said. "Now each university comes before the legislators, and the bills tend to favor the larger universities." ... Pettipren added his name to the growing list of supporters of Acting President Adams as

High Court grants hearing to NAACP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Thursday to decide whether public schools in Mississippi — and possibly throughout the South — must be integrated immediately.

The court will rule Oct. 23 on an appeal by the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund that demands immediate desegregation of 222 public schools in 33 Mississippi districts.

An announcement on the hearing was unexpected before Monday and lent an extra measure of urgency to the court's view of the dispute.

MSU's next president.

"Adams has his finger on the pulse of the student body," the representative said. "If someone from the outside were brought in now, it would take at least two years to orient him to where Adams is now."

"Adams has breached the gap and brought human contact between students and administration," he added.

Pettipren also voiced support for the Oct. 15 moratorium to be held on campus across the nation.

"We need to stop a movement and say to ourselves, 'What is this war all about?'" he said.

The 41-year-old representative was elected to the House in 1964, 1966 and 1968. Along with his work on behalf of colleges, he is vice chairman of the House Taxation Committee and a member of the State Affairs, and the Towns and Counties Communities.

Formerly a high school teacher and a professor at Eastern Michigan University, he is currently working on his doctorate degree in the socio-philosophical area. He received the Michigan Outstanding Teacher Award in 1961 and served as president of the Michigan Federation of Teachers from 1962-64.

"I became interested in politics when I helped several associates in their elections to the board of education," he said. "I thought, 'If I can get them elected, maybe I can get myself elected, too.'"

In his election as representative, Pettipren defeated an incumbent whom he had served 10 years. His support has grown steadily, and in the last election he carried every precinct in his district.

"I'm a full-time legislator now," he said. "I intend to keep on working in government as long as I can serve my electors."

We care

Rep. Vincent J. Pettipren, D-Westland, is one of several representatives who plan to visit Michigan colleges to talk with students. The legislators are concerned about the lack of parent-youth communication. Pettipren, a former professor at Eastern Michigan University, is familiar with student problems.

IN LANSING AREA

V. D. regarded as epidemic

By NORMAN SAARI
Managing Editor

Veneral disease (V.D.) in the Lansing area has reached epidemic stage, officials of the Ingham County Health Dept. reported this week.

The health department treated 940 cases of gonorrhea from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, nine cases more than it treated for the entire year of 1968. It treated up to 40 cases a week during September.

Also, figures reported for the Ingham County Health Dept. are nowhere near inclusive of all the cases that have been treated in this area.

No records are available for the number of patients treated by private physicians in the Lansing-East Lansing area, and Olin Health Center refuses to disclose the number of cases it has provided medication for.

Statistics released by the department do not indicate how many of the patients were college students, but doctors said this number was "increasing."

One clinical worker said the patients' breakdown by sex showed that six of every 10 treated were males.

The most common age group treated for gonorrhea is 20 to 24 years. Available medical records show this group has contacted about twice as many cases as the over age 25 group or the 15 to 19 years of age class.

Syphilis cases are most common in the age 25 years and over group. For the year 1968, 76 cases were reported to the health department in this age group, in comparison to 13 in the 20 to 24 years group, and five for the 15 to 19 year group.

Dr. Maurice Reizen, director of the Ingham County Health Dept., attributes the increase in venereal disease to "growing lack of individual responsibility."

"The 20 to 24 age group represents the time of life when men and women are in full sexual powers," Dr. Reizen said. "The mobility these individuals have contributes to the likelihood of contracting the diseases."

"What we must constantly stress is that treatment is available for these diseases," Mrs. Irma Hill, public health educator said. "Private physicians including the Olin staff, are the primary sources for treatment."

"For medically indigent persons, it is the county's responsibility to take care of them," Mrs. Hill said. "This includes college students, even though they may not be residents of this county."

The reluctance of minors to seek treatment out of fear that their parents would find out prompted the Michigan Legislature to pass Bill 2080, which releases minors from the once-compulsory parental consent needed before treatment of gonorrhea or syphilis.

Even before passage of this bill in late August, Olin did not require parental knowledge before treatment.

Mrs. Hill said this legislation was one of five laws in the state statutes concerning venereal diseases. Other laws include both pre-marital and pre-natal blood tests, baby eye treatment to stop the gonorrhea germ and that persons being treated for one of the social diseases must name all his or her contacts.

Mrs. Hill said that anyone seeking treatment at the health department's social hygiene clinic need not make an appointment, but should stop by the offices, 808 Southland, Lansing, during the following hours: 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, Wednesday and Friday; 1 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. Tuesday; and 6 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Legislators express school reform doubts

Legislators expressed initial pessimism Thursday, following Gov. Milliken's educational reform address, that the proposals set forth would pass.

Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, said the governor would have trouble getting "several of the measures passed." He referred to legislative reluctance to raise taxes in an election year added, "taxes is only one" of the problem areas.

House Speaker William Ryan, D-Detroit, also said taxation would be a sore spot.

"He will have trouble with the level of taxation," Ryan said.

"By switching to a 16-mill rate, he has indicated a greater switch to income taxes."

Sen. Harry DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, said the increase in cigarette tax will actually produce less money than now because organized crime will smuggle cigarettes into the state. He also said that if a state stamp is applied to the cigarette packs to insure legality, it would cost the state more money.

Ryan was also very critical of the proposed superintendent of public instruction. "If I don't like what the state director is doing, I can't do anything," he said.

Soviet submarines are making regular cruises into the Indian Ocean, Navy sources say.

U.S. Navy strategists cite this in support of their thesis that the Soviets are widening their global operations and seeking to exert influence in an area that is virtually a naval vacuum.

Squadrons of Soviet surface warships made special port calls around the rim of the Indian Ocean last year, but Navy sources indicated the Russian submarine cruisers are on a more regular basis.

The United States maintains no fleet units in the Indian Ocean, and the British are giving up their traditional naval and military role in the whole region east of Suez.

A State Dept. spokesman reported Thursday the United States has been disappointed so far in its efforts to renew ambassadorial talks with Communist China.

Press officer Carl Bartch was asked at a news conference for information on published reports that there have been some kind of vague signals from Peking of a willingness to ease policy toward the United States.

Allied forces have withdrawn from the once-forbidden A Shau Valley, captured last May after the controversial battle for Hamburger Hill.

The last major elements of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division and the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division departed the bomb-pocked valley last month. Maj. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, the South Vietnamese commander, said in an interview Thursday.

"We found that because of the lack of enemy activity, there was no longer any need to stay there," Truong said. "The valley has been dried out of the enemy."

Czechoslovakia barred its citizens from private travel to the West Thursday in the most drastic tightening of frontier control since the 1968 Soviet invasion.

The cutoff went into effect at midnight Wednesday and caught hundreds of travelers at airports and frontier crossings and brought dismay to the Czechs and Slovaks.

Relatively free travel to the West started even before the ouster of Stalinist Antonin Novotny as president in 1968, and had been one of the last freedoms remaining after the Soviet invasion.

Airline and travel officials were informed early Thursday that all exit permits in private passports have been declared invalid, effective immediately.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Thursday the U.S. military command in Saigon has received new orders covering battlefield operations and placing highest priority on Vietnamization of the war.

Laird said policy is against public release of specific battlefield instructions, but he generally described the American tactical approach now as one of "protective reaction."

The defense chief told a news conference the U.S. command no longer is under presidential injunction to maintain maximum pressure on the enemy, a phrase often used by former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Common Plea Judge Bernard C. Brominski says he will disclose Friday morning his decision on a motion by Mary Jo Kopechne's parents to dismiss a Massachusetts petition for an autopsy on their daughter's body.

Awarding the Medal of Honor to four Vietnam heroes, President Nixon said Thursday he is "confident that the challenges of peace will uncover great heroism in America's younger people."

Nixon said that on an occasion like the one at which he honored four Army men, "we dedicate ourselves anew to bringing the peace, which we all want, so that men like this, who have this element of greatness within them, may become heroes meeting the challenge of peace."

It was Nixon's first public appearance at a Medal of Honor ceremony in four months.

Racial trouble flared at a junior high school near Kalamazoo Thursday, with one girl reported knocked out during a brief fracas in which nine assaults were reported. There were no arrests.

Officials at Hillsdale Junior High School in suburban Kalamazoo Township said the incident began when 50 to 60 black students began running through the halls.

Entire nation plans for moratorium

Next Wednesday's moratorium to protest the Vietnam war is growing into a nationwide affair that will involve persons of all ages, including politicians, businessmen and professional people, as well as the students who started it.

Plans for the moratorium—meaning suspension of normal activities—include rallies, speeches, marches and religious services from coast to coast, culminating in a 5 p.m.

candlelight procession around the White House.

Indications are that some form of activity connected with the moratorium will take place in every state.

Sponsors plan to have 45,000 marchers in the Washington procession. They will be led by the widow of the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Seventeen senators and 47 congressmen have expressed support so long as the moratorium is "peaceful, lawful and nonviolent." Some plan speeches against the war in the Senate and House. Congressional staff members plan a vigil on the Capitol steps.

Plans to keep the House in session all night on Oct. 14 as a symbol of protest against the war were disclosed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., who said enough speakers have been lined up to talk through the night. He said of the moratorium, "I think that is going to be the largest citizen participation of its kind in the history of this country."

Names of war dead will be read at hundreds of ceremonies including one in New York's Wall Street, where financial workers are scheduled to take part with Mayor John V. Lindsay and former Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric.

The executive board of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, representing 1,100 Reform rabbis, endorsed the moratorium. Its president condemned President Nixon's recent press conference statement that he would not be affected by protests.

Dozens of colleges have cancelled classes or announced that absences would not be penalized. But Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke of the 19-campus California State Colleges prohibited dismissal of classes and ordered disciplinary action against any professors who disobey.

The New York City school board will let teachers and pupils have the day off, but urged those who stay in school to hold discussions about Vietnam.

More than 100,000 people are expected at a rally in Boston, where the city council instructed the mayor to arrange appropriate observances.

Three New England governors endorsed the idea—Democrats Kenneth Curtis of Maine and Frank Light of Rhode Island and Republican Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts.

In Sacramento, Calif., students plan a 24-hour vigil outside the home of Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan. Gov. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma declined to appear at college rallies, but Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okl., the Democratic national chairman, accepted.

In Massachusetts, George S. McGovern, D-S.D., will rally on the Boston Common. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will speak at a World Affairs Council luncheon.

In West Virginia a candlelight march and rally in downtown Charleston will culminate with the names of the West Virginia war casualties being read. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., will speak at Marshall University.

The Rev. Frank Haig, president of Wheeling College, will offer mass for war dead. Bethany College plans a fast, and Fairmont College students will march to the courthouse for a rally.

COULD SPEED WITHDRAWALS

U. S. war deaths drop

SAIGON (AP)—American battlefield deaths in Vietnam last week dropped to 64—the lowest toll in nearly three years—and official sources said Thursday, if the downward trend continues President Nixon might be prompted to speed up troop withdrawals.

At the same time, it was disclosed that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces have pulled out of the once-forbidding A Shau Valley, seized last spring after a controversial battle for Hamburger Hill. Lack of enemy activity was given as the reason.

U.S. officials declined to speculate on whether the deepening battle lull foreshadowed a political break-through toward ending the war. Some military officers pointed to the weather. Heavy monsoon rains are hampering allied and enemy operations.

"The whole year's activities have generally been on a lower scale than last year," a top U.S. officer said, adding that bad weather, particularly during the summer, had cramped enemy supply and troop replacement efforts.

"There's no question that the cyclic nature of this is related to the weather," he said, and recalled a similar low level of enemy activity during October of last year.

Military sources cautioned, too, that they still expect the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to launch a winter-spring offensive about the beginning of November, as revealed in captured documents.

In addition to the 64 U.S. battle deaths last week—the lowest toll since the week ending Dec. 3, 1966, when 44 Americans died in action—South Vietnamese and enemy battle deaths dropped.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 209 government troops were killed in the week ending at midnight Saturday, the lowest toll since the week ending May 10, when 182 South Vietnamese fighting men were killed.

Allied headquarters reported

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong losses last week dropped to 1,899.

The latest reported U.S. casualty figures raised to 38,887 the number of Americans killed in action since Jan. 1, 1961, when U.S. personnel first became involved. Of this number, 2,844 were killed in the four months following President Nixon's announcement of the initial withdrawal of 25,000 U.S. troops from South Vietnam. He has since ordered another 35,000 out of the war zone by mid-December.

Unofficial figures show that 15,936 Americans have been killed since the United States and North Vietnam opened the Paris peace talks on May 13, 1968. A total of 8,830 U.S. troops have died since Dec. 7, when the talks were widened to include the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front and South Vietnam.

The 101st Airborne's 3rd Brigade, which had been deployed to screen the withdrawal of Marines from along the demilitarized zone. The 3rd Marine Division is leaving the war zone under Nixon's latest withdrawal order.

G.I. education bill plagued by subcommittee delays

By SHIRLEY JOHNSON
State News Staff Writer

Due to an excessive delay of a subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, the passage of the G.I. educational bill is not expected until early in 1970.

Congress could, however, make any increase in benefits retroactive to Sept. 1.

The House has already approved a 27 per cent increase in G.I. Bill education allowances. Under the house-passed bill, monthly allowances for single veterans would rise from $130 to $165; for married veterans from $155 to $195; and for veterans with two dependents, from $175 to $222.

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee is expected to come up with an even more generous allowance. According to Jim Morris, director of the Veterans Aid center at MSU, the rise in the neighborhood of $60 monthly.

The Senate's bill would reportedly make the benefits retroactive to Sept. 1. The House-passed proposal made the benefits effective upon enactment of the bill.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., chairman of the Labor Committee's subcommittee, began hearings on the legislation June 24. The subcommittee has been unable to come up with a rate increase to present to the full committee.

Even after the subcommittee proposed an increase, there is little chance of Senate action on the G.I. Bill allowance before late October.

If any differences occur between the Senate and House bills, they would have to be resolved in conference.

Even after passage of the measure, veterans in school would not receive any benefits until early next year.

The Senate subcommittee is also considering a proposal which is designed to increase participation of ghetto veterans in the G.I. programs.

Within this area, a fight could develop between the House and Senate and delay passage of the bill until well into the coming year.

House Veterans Committee chairman, Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex., said he's against making a "social and welfare" program out of the G.I. bill.

In several speeches recently Senate Labor Committee chairman, Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., has charged the Veterans Aid and the Defense Dept. with "deliberately holding down" G.I. Bill enrollment, observing that "They want to spend money on a war in Southeast Asia worse than they want to educate our young people."

Those Amazin Mets: on to the World Series

There is joy in Mudville!

The N.Y. Mets (affectionately known as the Amazins) have won the National League pennant and stopped the world.

The Mets, who were placed at 100-1 odds at being the champs in the Eastern division of the NL, were 9½ games behind Durocher's Cubs in August. Then, the lid blew off.

The Cubs crumpled and the marvelous Mets mounted an offense and defensive play that carried them to 100 victories and a final 8-game lead over Chicago.

You'd think that the bookies and Las Vegas would be impressed. No, the Amazins had to prove themselves once more. They took a three game sweep from the powerful Atlanta Braves the hard way.

For the last few years, the game of baseball has been frequently accused of providing boredom with intent to kill. But although the baseball season seems drawn out, the exciting action at the year's end more than makes up for occasional dull ballgames.

In the meantime, due to the success of the Mets and other teams, the daily sports pages have provided people with many happy moments. This fall it's the N.Y. Mets. Last year, at this time, the Detroit Tigers captured the spotlight. Two years ago, it was the new whiz kids from Fenway Park.

So now New York, like Boston two years ago, is in the throes of a potential tidal wave (as if it hasn't already hit) of raw emotion. Saturday, the World Series opens in Baltimore with the impossible possible.

But the Orioles have had trouble drawing the fans to the ballpark this year. Although there will be a SRO crowd on hand, nobody but nobody can rival the fans of the N.Y. Mets for exuberance, devotion and, above all, patience.

The Birds and the Amazins both have the momentum, but it wouldn't surprise anyone if the Mets got down to serious business and took four straight.

Win or lose, 1969 will go down as the year of the Mets!

An unusual coincidence or ploy by Thieu regime?

The CBS 11:00 news Wednesday night contained a feature on the defection of a Viet Cong unit. At any other time the story would have been just another war feature, but at this time and this stage of the war, the story becomes an incredible coincidence — or maybe not so incredible.

It seems a Viet Cong Captain, known only as Quyen, concluded that the grass was greener on the Vietnamese side of the hill, and eventually talked his men into joining his defection.

Quyen's reasons for defecting included: 1. Insufficient food in Viet Cong land. 2. Continuous American bombing had made life dangerous and detrimental to one's health. 3. As a result of Nixon's Vietnamization plan, the South had become such proficient fighters that it was obviously hopeless to try to stave off their victory any longer.

The moral of the story is that Vietnamization is certainly becoming a success. Add to that a call from Hugh Scott for a sixty day silence on criticism of the war, and the amazing feature becomes a very convenient play for pacifying American dissent at a time when criticism of Nixon's handling of the situation is mounting.

Um hmm. And tomorrow, ladies and gentlemen, before your very eyes you shall see an entire battalion come rolling out of the hills and into the fold of peace and tranquility under the protective arms of the South Vietnamese.

Quyen, who was commander of C-9 company, was interrogated by the Thang Binh district chief for two hours, in which time, he convinced the chief that his intentions were genuine. (According to the AP story, Quyen also disarmed 26 guerilla planted mines and booby traps and delivered letters that he had written personally to relatives of men who had served in his company — all as proof that he was for real.)

Next scene. Zoom in on Quyen returning with his 40 men, whom he had left in the hills until his security had been cleared. Now they too, according to CBS, were coming out of the jungle and into the arms of the South Vietnamese. The AP account stated that only 27 of Quyen's 40 men went the happy ways of the south, but the facts aren't important, only the moral.

Two days later, after an intensive security check (but how secure can you get in 48 hours) the former Viet Cong returned to the hills with a song in their heart and a determination in their eyes to "wipe out the remaining Viet Cong." (According to AP.)

We are not doubting the word of either CBS or the Associated Press who carried the accounts, but long tall tales are not above the tactics we have seen the South Vietnamese government use in the past to convince Americans that they're on the right side of the war and supporting the right regime.

Does it not seem incredible that, although the normal period of investigation for defectors sometimes takes as long as a year, Quyen was cleared in a mere two hours, and he and his men were back in the fields within two days fighting the soldiers they once considered their allies.

Let us just say that perhaps they devised this entire scheme and arranged the dramatics with which it was delivered to the mass medium as part of his continuing story of the Adventures of South Vietnamese, or "How We Convinced the Americans that Vietnamization Works."

OUR READERS' MIND

Americans must become involved

To the Editor:

In relation to the article "Bring the G.I.'s Home Now!" in the Sept. 30 issue of the State News, I have a few "differences of opinion."

First, let me say that I am not the historian or the statistician type of person that the author shows off himself in the first two paragraphs. But I will concede to the statistics of our casualties in Vietnam.

However, I do not believe that President Nixon resides in a white castle, remaining aloof of the national and international problems that face the United States today. I believe him to be a very busy person, making important decisions that concern and affect all of the American people. Radicalism alone won't bring about changes in America. It also does not speak for all of us. If we were to allow it, we would be like cattle being led to the slaughter house.

It will take all types of Americans to do something about our livelihood. The important thing is to set ourselves to become active in our government. The best way, I think, to let the government know that we, the people, still exist is by writing to our congressmen and senators and telling them so. Tell them what we think, and feel about the Vietnam War, about bringing the G.I.'s home, or anything else we're dissatisfied with. They will listen; that's one of their main reasons for being in Washington. They are our representatives. Times are changing and they seem to be interested in what young people have to say besides the voting public.

Lastly, if the radicals want to hold a rally on peace, as stated in the last paragraph, then I think they should finance the use of a stadium, hall or building equipped for such purposes. That is if they want to be looked upon by people as having some common sense. That could also be one way of getting more people to come to a rally. Another way would be consideration of education work and holding it on a weekend.

BLACK FRATERNITY

Withdraws from IFC

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the statement of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., announcing their formal withdrawal from the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC).

We, the men of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., are very concerned about the role and function of the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) on the MSU campus and its relation to our needs and aims.

We feel that the IFC has lost its functional purpose and is irrelevant to our needs and goals. It is an institution that harbors many Greek organizations whose policies and practices are overtly racist in nature, and such a situation is very detrimental to our interests. This can no longer be dealt with or tolerated.

As president of Gamma-Tau chapter, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, I, Charles Dillard, formally declare our withdrawal from the Inter-Fraternity Council, and our intention to establish a Black Greek fraternity organization which will be relevant to our needs and to our role in the black community.

In issuing this statement, I call upon all other black fraternities and sororities in IFC or Pan-Hellenic Council to follow suit and work in a new institution which will be more beneficial and relevant to our interests.

Charles Dillard, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., President

POINT OF VIEW

Tuition supports diploma factory

as collecting green stamps until one has filled up the book and then turning them in for an electric coffee pot.

The previous, outmoded tuition system was based on the idea that the student was seeking an education. It was assumed that if a student was taking a full time course load, he was getting an education and his education was not worth less or more than that of another student who happened to be taking more or fewer credits. Education was measured in such things as how much it developed the individual, how much it broadened his point of view and so on; and it was generally recognized that credit hours were an artificial convenience and were not to be taken as a true measure of the educational content of the course. But as the University became the modern megaversity, these quaint notions had to go, and so we have the new tuition system.

Unfortunately, aspects of the old philosophy still hang on. For example, one may still read in the Academic Freedom Report that the key to the University's function and to the student's purpose is the "learning process in all its aspects." But time steadily marches on, and no doubt at the next meeting of the MSU Board of Trustees, the Freedom Report will join the other relics on the scrap heap. The trustees have several times in the past shown an eagerness to accomplish this very deed.

However, it must be pointed out that the new tuition system did not arise out of any move on the part of the trustees to modernize their outlook. It was more of an accidental process. Actually, the system arose out of the board's interesting predilection for burning down the house to get rid of the rats, an activity in which they indulged no less than twice this past year.

Historians will recall last spring something called the "ability to pay" tuition plan. This had been instituted by the trustees despite some original argument and had been generally accepted. Then some legislators objected to the fact that scholarship recipients were put in the highest bracket. This was a legitimate complaint, since this classification was merely a gimmick of the University to get more money out of the state.

The obvious solution was to simply reclassify scholarship recipients. Instead, the trustees got together at one of their cozy breakfast meetings from which the public is excluded and decided that the entire "ability to pay" structure would have to be scrapped. This was done at the expense of the lower income students who benefited under the system.

Then the complaint arose among part-time students that a student taking, say, six credits had to pay the same as a person taking eight. Again, according to the philosophy of education, such a difference would not be of consequence to a full-time student, but part-time students present somewhat a different case. So the logical solution would have been to institute payment-per-credit for students taking below 12 credits and retain regular tuition for full-time students.

But again, the trustees passed over the obvious, and now we have the new, modern system whereby everyone pays for what he gets.

Frank Blackington, director of the Honors College, went to the core of the matter last spring in an article he wrote for the Honors College Bulletin. The role of the University in society, he said, is not to train people to fill certain positions; it is to certify publicly that such and such people are "qualified" for those positions.

In other words, what is important is not the training, but the diploma.

So let's get out there and accumulate those credits, gang, and remember not to waste time trying to learn anything. It gets in the way of the System, and, besides, the trustees probably wouldn't like it.

DAVID BASSETT

Shedding racism with polemics

Yes, I've recently been called a racist. And a nigger lover, a communist, a facist and a trouble-maker.

Yes, I'm of the opinion that black people are as good as white, that they should be treated as good as anyone else.

I'm aware that it is possible to attend school with black people, go to movies with black people and go to bed with black people while simultaneously harboring unconscious feelings of hate and distrust.

I'm aware that the most deleterious form of racism exists not in the club-clutching hand of a Southerner, but rather in the naive mind of a middle-class Northerner who thinks "niggers are as good as anyone."

Racism is a white problem. However, the concept that it is exclusively a white problem is a terribly incongruous fallacy.

Granted, such ancient American institutions as Johnson's band-aids and Barbie dolls possibly are blatantly overt manifestations of subconscious racist conceptions. However, American society, especially the black portion of it, has undergone a startling metamorphosis since the days of the Kerner Report.

Konks (processes) have been replaced by Afros. Zoot suits have yielded to dashikis. Sam Cooke crooned "Chain Gang" and James Brown screams "Say It Loud, I'm Black and I'm Proud."

Steppin Fetchit is forgotten and Ron Karenga eulogized. Booker T. Washington's books have been scrapped and Frantz Fanon's put on the shelves. Blacks still sweep floors and carry luggage, but James Brown owns two radio stations and a string of restaurants.

In short, Afro-Americans are attempting to disassociate themselves from white American culture and create (or recreate) their own. They are at last destroying the myth of white superiority which is embedded in the psyche of every American, black and white.

However, I have never encountered a satisfactory explanation of how this black pride differs from white.

What is the difference between a black man saying that what is black or of black origin is good, whereas anything white or of white origin is inherently bad; and a white saying that only what is white is good.

What is the difference between a white calling a black "nigger" or a black calling a white "honkey"? What difference does it make who is singing the good-bad race chant?

Absolutely none. What is involved in both cases is subjective condemnation solely on the basis of skin pigmentation. To say that racism is a white trait is to ignore the fact that racism is a mental effect of a social cause.

"Racism" is the "predication of decisions and policies on considerations of race." Stokely Carmichael, "Black Power," p. 3). It is no more an endemic white trait than it is black.

To ignore the existence of racism in the minds of American whites is to blaspheme rationality. However, to cease the attribution of racism at that point is an equally absurd sin.

It's a relatively easy task to search one's soul for hours and arrive at the conclusion that an individual is a racist. It isn't difficult to arrive at that conclusion after having heard a plethora of proud blacks and guilty white racists.

I'm a white American. Therefore, my mind is necessarily imbued with certain racist tendencies. O.K. But so what?

To say that one need not be aware of the operations of his mind and its effects on others is wrong; worthwhile change will only arrive after every individual has achieved self-realization.

To study and talk about the problem is not enough; action must accompany words. However, to prostrate oneself and enumerate the sins of the past would be a travesty of the human ability to reason objectively.

What must be done if America is ever to shed its racist cloak of ignorance is not to maximize irrelevant polemics, but rather to accept the fact that mankind is a brotherhood based on his common humanity regardless of skin pigmentation, nationality or religious belief.

Issues Perspective

By BETSY ROACH
State News Staff Writer

If you are not part of the solution... that's right, you are part of the problem.

Whose problem? The problems are those of school desegregation. It has them.

Ernie Boone, asst. director of the Model Cities Program, said that desegregation of Lansing schools is in progress and that the school board is on the time schedule which has been set.

"I do not see that desegregation is being blocked in the City of Lansing," Boone said.

But, talk to Mrs. Clinton Canady, member of the Lansing Board of Education, and she'll tell you some of the problems.

Mrs. Canady mentioned "the increasing resistance in black communities to what they feel is one-way desegregation."

She said some feel that the process should be two-way, so as not to strip communities of their schools.

She said there could be better preparation "on both ends of the deal" to help the receptivity of teachers, parents and students.

Mrs. Canady said there is a need for the evaluation of the progress of students sent into other areas. She said this would concern what tracks students are placed in if it will in college prep, special education classes or other categories.

Another problem Mrs. Canady discussed was racism and resistance to integration. She termed it "a national problem" which exists in the North and the South. She said that northern schools on the whole became segregated by design, not by law.

One way parents have used to avoid sending their children to integrated schools, she said, is the medical transfer saying attending the school could be detrimental to the child's emotional health.

"This is used by black parents now," she said.

Mrs. Canady said the object should not be "desegregation," but "integration" through participation in the school, both academically and in extracurricular activities. She said that a school which is not "integrated" reflects the attitude of the community instead of helping to change the community's attitude.

She said the only white students being bussed to a predominantly black school are some 30 children whose parents are members of the West Side Neighborhood Assn. She said these children are voluntarily being sent to Main Street School, which has an enrollment of 350-400.

Realtors, to some degree, control neighborhood and educational black-white ratios by what houses in what neighborhoods they show to whom.

Most Lansing realtors, however, say they do not "selectively show" homes to their clients.

"We show an awful lot of homes in West Lansing," Walter Neller, realtor, said. "We sell a lot to black people and a lot to white. Black are moving into the nice sections more and more."

When asked about realtors who might show a buyer a certain neighborhood depending on the buyer's race, Neller replied, "I'm sure no realtor has practiced that for five years. They're criticized, but there's no ground for that. Each realtor knows there's a law and lives by the law."

Realtor Urban Simon said, "I don't know of one realtor in the City of Lansing who practices discrimination in any way, shape or form. I suppose there are some who have some old-fashioned ideas. I don't know who they are. The die-hards die hard."

He said his firm has sold homes in the West Side "to more whites than to colored."

Urban said there have been times when he felt black buyers were trying to test him. "I don't blame them. They've been misused and abused enough."

He said that his staff is composed of independent contractors and he cannot keep track of all they do. Urban added with regard to selling according to race.

"If I catch the salesman who does it, his license will be taken off the wall. It's against the law and it's not Christian."

"I think many of the realtors discourage integration of communities," said Mrs. Walter Kron, president of the West Side Neighborhood Assn.

She said blacks can be shown the same five or six homes by several realty firms, or can be told the house can be bought for a certain price—which is much higher than it would be for a white buyer.

She added that she and her husband were not told of West Side; they found it by accident.

"I do think there are some realtors who bend over backwards to be fair," she said.

Mrs. Kron said some have a misplaced idea of "fair"—they "warn" whites when a neighborhood is not completely white.

She added that people cannot blame the realtors when many people ask for this information.

State voting age up for amendment

By MARGARET YAX

Voting should be lowered to 18 years of age in Michigan, according to opinions voiced at a public hearing on voting age reduction Wednesday night.

The public hearing, before the Michigan House of Representatives Committee on Revision and Amendments to the Constitution, concerned House Joint Resolution A, which would give 18-year-olds the vote.

Zolton Ferency, former Democratic candidate for governor said he hoped that the committee would be able to convince two thirds of both houses so this amendment could be on the ballot next November.

"The last time this proposal was on the ballot, most people ignored it," Ferency said. If the issue is voted on again in the 1970 election, it could easily become lost among proposed constitutional amendments to change the education system in the state, he said.

Both parties should conduct campaigns on this issue this time, he said.

Previous campaigns have indicated how effective youth can be when dedicated and aware he said. This would be a good opportunity for them to participate in political processes, Ferency said.

This would also be an opportunity for Michigan to have the foresight to extend the voting franchise in view of the rumor about direct voting, nationally he said.

Eighteen-year-olds are treated like adults in courts, the armed service and in matters of marriage and taxation, Mary Kay Wickens, East Lansing freshman, said, but noting that they are not given adult rights, such as voting.

Educational standards have risen and have given youths a better understanding of problems, she explained.

Voting is only part of the issue, another student said.

"If the voting age is lowered to 18 years, youth will also be able to hold office and participate in the political process," he said.

The 18-year-old vote "is the most important single issue of our generation," said state Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit and member of the committee.

MPA ASSESSES PRESS

By DENISE FORTNER
and DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writers

"After Kerner" . . . A New Look at the Press" was the topic for the Michigan Press Assoc. (MPA) seminar Tuesday.

The Kerner Commission issued its report on racism in the United States two years ago.

Of the press, it said: "We believe that the media have thus far failed to report adequately on the causes and consequences of civil disorders and the underlying problems of race relations."

The MPA set up the one-day session to bring together newsmen and their readers to reassess the performance of the press during race relations, as of 1969.

The morning session of the program was concerned with the views of men outside the newspaper profession toward the press.

Sen. Coleman A. Young, minority floor leader of the Michigan Senate, said that there is racist injustice in the newspaper world. Young cited Detroit, which has 45 per cent black and yet is served by a press that has "at best only 5 per cent."

The black community views the "press" as the white-man establishment press, Young said.

"The black attitude toward the press is quite cynical," Frank W. Render, senior research assoc., Policy Institute, Syracuse University Research Corp., said that the press had to give "some kind of preparations," to the black community.

Ben Holman, director of community relations services, U.S. Dept. of Justice, said the press needed to "learn how to satisfy the needs of the black minority without disturbing the minds of the white majority."

"The news media is becoming more sensitized but it needs to accelerate improvement."

"One way to understand would be to employ more blacks in the news media and let the public know what's really happening in this country," Holman said.

Newspapermen and editors from across the state met in the afternoon session for a panel discussion moderated by Frank Angelo, president of Michigan Press Assoc.

Phillip Power, editor of the Observer Newspapers in Livonia, said that his newspapers are concerned with race relations in suburbia.

"We've got to get out and talk to the people," he said. "It's important to them to understand the problems. You can't ignore the problem. You have to get out and cover it."

However, Power said, the people have to be informed and educated in a manner that won't offend them.

"You can't cram it down their throats because they'll just reject it," he said.

"Rather, you have to educate them so they'll understand the racial news in ways that relate to the people in the suburbs."

He added that it was the newspapers responsibility to let the community know why race relation news is relative to the people in the "lilly white suburbs."

Louis A. Cassels, senior editor of United Press International in Washington, D.C., said that the American press is not analyzing current racial problems.

"I foresee an ominous situation if this continues," he said.

He added that many whites in the North are convinced that they are being discriminated against.

"They are convinced that the black people are the agents of most of their troubles," he said. "When their rage builds up, we'll experience a new explosion, the beginning of a new racial war."

Austin Scott, special writer for the Associated Press in Washington, D.C., said that the black community of today deserves special writers, similar to other specialist reporters who cover politics or science.

"You need a reporter who knows the black community and who is interested in the black community, interested enough to want to write about it," he said.

Scott deplored the "one dimensional man" created by American newspapers, the one sided view of a person newspapers tend to give.

He asked that newspapers do more than "label" people with convenient terms.

Scott said that "manufactured leaders" of groups, especially the black, people will slowly fade into the background.

Duffy to show new faces in Buckeye clash

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

You would ordinarily have cause to doubt a coach's sanity when he decides to throw his untried sophomores in against the nation's top-ranked team.

But MSU Coach Duffy Daugherty is not standing pat. Several of his top sophomores will see action against the powerful Ohio State Buckeyes this Saturday in Columbus. Kickoff time is 12:30 p.m.

But the Spartan's starting lineup should remain intact—at least for a while.

Tommy Love, who ran at half back for a good portion of the Notre Dame game, has re-injured his knee, and Daugherty does not know for certain if he will be available for action.

Eric Allen, the speedy sophomore running back, will likely open at halfback in Love's place. Allen has been hobbled by leg injuries, but Daugherty said he will be in top shape for the Bucks. He carried the ball only three times last week.

New faces will appear on the defensive side of the ledger.

Defensive backs Brad McLee and Doug Barr, both sophomores with limited game experience, will see action this weekend.

"These two players should see plenty of action, especially after last Saturday," Daugherty said. "McLee played quite a bit against Notre Dame and tackled well."

Still another first year man, Gary VanElst, will log playing time Saturday. VanElst has been bounced back and forth between tight end and linebacker since last spring but with Jim Nicholson hurt, the 6 foot 5, 255-pounder will serve as backup man to regular Bruce Kulesza.

When asked if his team has looked good in practice sessions this week, Duffy shook his head and smiled:

"I've give up trying to figure these guys out. One week they

You can't stand pat when your team hasn't played as well as you hoped it would. We will make some changes."

Daugherty is hoping to get his running game and his passing game together in at one time. Bill Triplett hit only 9 of 25 passes a week ago but he was throwing the ball with more authority. He gained 178 yards in the air—a marked improvement.

Highsmith is the top MSU ground gainer with 250 yards in 53 carries, with Allen second with 196 yards in 48 tries. Teaming with them in the backfield will be fullback Kermit Smith. The powerful runner from Baytown, Texas, has lugged the ball 28 times for 125 yards.

Daugherty used the wide-open "triple set" offense last week against Notre Dame—a formation with two wide receivers and only two running backs. He said the Spartans will employ it this weekend from time to time.

In this set, end Gordie Bowdell comes in for a running back. Bowdell is the leading MSU receiver to date with six catches for 124 yards. He caught five against the Irish. Frank Foreman has also grabbed six tosses for 95 yards.

This contest with the Buckeyes could very well make or break the season for Daugherty's squad. A win over top-ranked Ohio State would put MSU in good position to challenge for the conference crown.

It would also ease the pain of last year's 25-20 loss in Columbus. MSU was 4-2, going into the game and had just come off the amazing win over Notre Dame.

The Spartans gave the ball away seven times and still came within inches of winning.

From there on it was down hill for MSU—they won only one other game. But the Buckeyes picked up steam and rolled to the Big Ten crown, a national championship and a Rose Bowl win over Southern Cal.

This is the 10th game in a series which began in 1912 but lapsed after that first game which MSU won, 35-0. The Spartan lead the overall series, 5-4, despite consecutive losses in 1967 (21-7) and 68.

Woody Hayes leads Daugherty, 4-2, in victories in the six games played with the two men as opposing coaches.

MIAMI HERE SAT.

'S' harriers risk win streak

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

The Redskins of Miami of Ohio invade MSU's Forest Akers cross-country course at 10 a.m. Saturday with the hope of remaining undefeated and extending an excellent win streak.

The Spartan's of Jim Gibbard, however, have their own idea of who should maintain the largest number of victories in a row.

MSU is 1-0 on the season and has won eight in a row going back to last year while Miami has won 37 of its last 38 meets and is 4-0 on the season.

Last year the Spartans, enroute to a 7-0 dual campaign and Big Ten title, squashed the Skins, 26-31, and ended the Miami streak.

Gibbard does not anticipate an easy time Saturday, although his team looked impressive in downing Indiana, 21-38, last weekend.

"Miami's got a good split on their five men and could give us a lot of trouble. To win, we'll have to break them on the fourth and fifth miles in the rugged section in the back," Gibbard said.

Miami Coach Stan Imhulse said that he has not been pleased with his squad's performance thus far, but he added that he didn't think his team was really pushed in its wins over Eastern Kentucky, Northwestern, Ohio and Ball State.

Top runner for the Spartans will likely continue to be junior Kim Hartman, who set a new course and varsity mark with his 24:52.5 effort against the Hoosiers.

MSU's second through fourth men should probably finish as last week when Ken Leonowicz, Dave Dieters and frosh Warren Krueger swept to a 3-4-5 finish.

Ralph Zoppa, Randy Kilpatrick and Chuck Starkey will likely battle for the fifth through seventh positions, while the sixth man against Indiana, frosh Pete Reiff, will probably sit out this meet with foot trouble.

Other Spartan entries include sophs Bryan Kent, Tom Silvia and Barney Young and freshman Mark Maxwell.

Big Ten Football Previews

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

All the other hopeful predictors throught the University of Michigan (U-M) would gallop to win No. 3 last Saturday, but my heart was with Missouri, so I won the dubious honor of picking the Big Ten in the first week of league action. So here goes.

Northwestern at Illinois: We'll call it Northwestern, simply because the Cats have played a little better against some of the nation's top teams than the Illini have against some not so tough squads. Also, with Steve Livas, former regular quarterback coming in for injured Bob Quinn, who was QB last week, the Illini offense (?) should be mushier than usual. Northwestern 18, Illinois 14.

Minnesota at Indiana: The Hoosierscorers have been derailed twice in a row wno, and the odds are it won't happen a third time. The Gophers give up a lot of points and still don't have a win. Indiana's one-time Whiz Kids know what conference action means, and they want Uncle John Pont to see roses. Indiana 34, Minnesota 27.

Purdue at Michigan: Purdue is No. 9 in the rankings now and could jump up a little more with Mike Phipps throwing like he did last week. The Wolves let Missouri break the game open last week and chances are Phipps and Co. can do the same Saturday, even in Ann Arbor. Should be a lot of scoring, but the Boilermakers should hold on for a 37-34 thriller.

MSU at Ohio State: If I wanted to be rash, I could call this the upset special and pick the Spartans. They've got the stuff but can't seem to get it all together in one game. Hopefully the pass defense will be operating at high power, because Duffy calls Ohio's Rex Kern the finest all-round QB the Spartans will face. The bookies say 19½, but I think the Spartans can make it closer than that. Duffy said the Spartans will be ready to play their best game. They better be. Woody Hayes would love to run up the score and if MSU gives him the chance, watch out. But let's say MSU is on the road back and call it OSU, 39-28.

Iowa at Wisconsin: This one ought to be a laugh. The Hawks are scoring and doing everything that a team should do while Wisconsin, really a better team than the games would indicate, just keeps on looking pathetic, getting beat and letting their non-win streak roll along. Iowa 41, Wisconsin 14.

Notre Dame vs. Army in New York: The Irish are still howling over last week's derailment of MSU and should go into this one overconfident. Army has a better than average team, but Joe Theismann ought to throw his arm out and help his team win by the 14 they're favored by. Notre Dame 30, Army 14.

Former 'S' soccer stars return to MSU Saturday

Several former MSU soccer stars return to their old stomping ground at MSU Saturday to help the Lansing International Soccer Club maintain its lead in the Western Michigan Soccer League.

The Internationals, undefeated this season in their first four outings, play their final league game against Kalamazoo tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the I.M. football field.

Among the players on the Lansing roster are such standouts from MSU's former soccer teams as Peter Hens, George James, Stan Stelmashenko, John McLane and Orhan Enustun. Hens, originally from Holland, was a two-time All-America back while at MSU and participated on the Spartans' NCAA championship team several years ago. He also played for the Chicago Lions' national championship team.

Janes, also an All-America at MSU, has played on the National Amateur Cup team, along with the Detroit Kickers and the Chicago Lions.

Also on the team is MSU journalism professor Stanley Smith, who played for Colgate University and Purdue, along with the Huntington Kickers of New York.

Among the other members of the Internationals are several graduate students at MSU and three local high school students, including Head Soccer Coach Gene Kenney's son, Mike Kenney.

The Lansing team has defeated Battle Creek (6-0), Grand Rapids (5-2), Muskegon (forfeit) and Tri-Cities United of Grand Haven (9-0) this season. The team, which may enter the National Amateur Cup tournament this year, begins a three-week tourney next week at home, battling Battle Creek.

ROCKETS 2-2 THUS FAR

Spartan booters tackle Toledo

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

Although 4-0-1 this season and riding along on an 11-game unbeaten streak, the MSU soccer team has been plagued by one particular problem this season, and tomorrow's game holds little hope of alleviating it.

The Spartans, who have shut out four of their five opponents by scores of 6-0, 8-0, 12-0 and 8-0, have met only one team capable of testing their defense.

Les Lucas

The booters, defending national co-champions, meet their sixth opponent—University of Toledo—in Ohio Saturday. Chances are that MSU's strong offense will prove too powerful for the Rockets, who are 2-2 this season, winning one game by forfeit. Their other win over Wright State in Dayton was by a slight 2-1 margin. Toledo's losses came at the hands of Notre Dame, 2-1, and Kent State, 2-1. In MSU's third game this year, the Spartans routed Kent State 12-0.

Coach Gene Kenney is still looking for a good game.

"We haven't had a good game yet this season," Kenney said. "We'll play a good quarter here and then a bad quarter there."

His major complaint is still the fact that, although the team's passing is good, when the ball comes within 20 yards of the goal, action halts.

"We're still taking bad shots," he comments. "We waste the ball because we're taking shots we shouldn't be taking. We're not clicking."

Starting goalie for MSU will be Les Lucas, Jamaica junior, who has allowed one goal this season. Lucas' performance against Air Force last week was hailed by Kenney as his best of the season. He stayed off numerous attacks from the Falcon's strong offense and allowed only one goal to keep MSU on the trail of the undefeated.

Leading the Spartans' offense, which has racked up 35 goals against five opponents and allowed one, are Ernie Tuchscherer and Trevor Harris. Tuchscherer, a 1967 All-American, has 10 goals and five assists. Harris, two-time All-American and last year's second leading scorer, has seven goals and two assists in three games.

Weaver: 'Mets a tough club'

BALTIMORE (UPI)—According to Baltimore Oriole manager Earl Weaver, the New York Mets are neither legend nor amazing.

"They're just a tough baseball club that bears down hard to beat their opponents," Weaver said Thursday during a 90-minute Oriole workout at Memorial Stadium.

"But we've played plenty of tough games," he continued. The Orioles, favored 8-5 to take the Series, are in no danger of becoming overconfident, Weaver said.

"They are not going to let 162 games go down the drain. They were up for the playoffs and they'll be up for the Series."

Mike Cuellar, who will start the opening game Saturday, appeared in 16 games against the Mets in four years as a member of the Houston Astros and never gave up a home run.

After he pitched some batting practice Thursday he was asked how he intended to pitch against the Mets.

"Very carefully," he replied. Back in New York—Tom Seaver was a little annoyed.

He heard Joe Namath had picked the Mets in six and his first thought was how come not in four?

So he made his way from the Mets' quarters over to where the Jets dress at Shea Stadium.

Seaver was kidding around, of course, but Namath wasn't when he tabbed the Mets to beat the Orioles in six games in the World Series.

Joe is no front-runner. He picked New York to beat Baltimore 10 months ago and still does.

Somebody wanted to know why "Pitching, mostly," said Namath, who was a pretty fair baseball player back in his native Beaver Falls, Pa.

"They've got the winning thing going for them. They're all coming through, the same way we did in the Super Bowl."

"But you don't think they'll have it easier than you did in the Super Bowl?"

"I can't say that."

"Why not?"

"I was playing in that one so I knew more about how we'd do."

"And you still say the Mets in six?"

"Sure," Namath laughed. "I may be wrong but I hope I'm not."

If he is right, that will make him 2-for-2 and maybe the Mayor of Baltimore will give him the keys to the city.

And then again, maybe not.

State News Sports Dept. picks Mets in World Series

Everybody is making predictions about the upcoming World Series, and the State News Sports Dept. is no exception. By a near unanimous vote of 6-1, the staff has picked an upset and put their favoritism and money on the underdogs - New York Mets. Below is an individual breakdown of each writer's feelings.

JEFF ELLIOTT - "You've come a long way baby, to get where you got today." What else could describe the New York Mets? A long way, but with one more goal ahead of them. The Mets have the momentum riding with them, winners of 12 of their last 13 games. The Orioles had to squeeze by the Twins in the first two games, which could give them an advantage in extra inning affairs.

However, I think the Mets' Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman are two of the best. Look for Koosman to possible match Mickey Lolich's feat of last year and win three games with Seaver adding one in the middle. Prediction: Mets, 4-2.

MIKE MANLEY - "The Mets have come along, slow but fast," Casey Stengel says.

Although O'Casey is still running laps around his mind, the Mets have stopped their confusing antics. Pitching usually tells the story in a short series and the New Yorkers have pitchers that won't quit. No one - even Denny McLain - is better than Tom Seaver. Add pitching to momentum, hustle, beautiful fans and a bundle of talent. They sure have changed from the old Mets I used to watch at the Big Shea. Youth does not scare easily. Strike another blow for the Now Generation. Mets in seven.

GARY WALKOWICZ - Logically and practically speaking, the Orioles should be a solid favorite with nearly as good pitching, better defense and a much more dependable offense, but the Mets have been leading a magically charmed life. It's hard to go against emotion and momentum, especially in a short series. The Orioles may be feeling the pressure after their overwhelming victory in the American League race tabbed them as one of baseball's all-time great teams, and now everyone expects them to win, while thoughts of Baltimore's recent non-successes against New York teams must disturb them at least a little. Tom Seaver is the best pitcher in baseball and Jerry Koosman isn't far behind, but they'll have to be at their very best, because the Met hitters won't blast the Oriole pitching the way they did the Braves. I'll take the Mets in six. After the Super Bowl and NBA playoffs, who can pick talent over emotion.

DON KOPRIVA - The Mets have got a great pitching staff, some clutch hitters, a fair defense, a lot of fans and the momentum. But Baltimore's Birds have got all this too, and maybe they are really a little bit better. They've both won the close and/or crucial games all year. But I can't see Seaver losing and if the Mets can pull out one other win, he'll pitch three games and win 'em all. Logic tells me to pick the Orioles, but I saw what the Mets did to my Cubs and methinks they'll zap the Birds too. New York in seven.

DAVE WEST - Although my sentiments are with the marvelous Mets, my common sense and better judgment have to go with Baltimore. With luck, this will be the kiss of death.

Defensively, the Orioles have had the best team in baseball for several years. Their weakness came from the pitching staff, and Baltimore's hurlers have been strong all season.

The prospects of baseball's version of the 1969 Super Bowl are dim. Baltimore in five.

JOHN VIGES - Anyone placing a $20 bet on the World Series would pick the Orioles. Anyone with five cents to spare would choose New York. Since I have only my journalistic integrity to lay on the line (this should say something) I have to go with the 'amazing' Mets. One factor that few have looked at is the indifference of the Oriole fans. If the Mets get any kind of fast start, Baltimore's own fans could ruin the Birds. Tom Seaver will definitely win one game and Koosman could win two. The Mets will have to scramble for another victory, but somehow they will steal it from Baltimore. New York in six.

PAM BOYCE - The Mets haven't come this far for nothing, and even the Baltimore Orioles aren't going to stop them now. New York fans won't allow it. Although in individual ability the Orioles may have it over New York, the Mets' consistent battling will eventually wear them down. Although Seaver has done a fine job in helping the Mets get where they are, Cleon Jones will be the National League champs' mainstay. Champagne will flow in New York after the sixth game.

Umpires chosen for world series

NEW YORK (UPI) - Hank Soar of the American League will umpire behind home plate in the first game of the World Series in Baltimore Saturday, it was announced Thursday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Five other umpires were named with Soar to work the Series. They are Larry Napp and Lou Dimuro of the AL, and Frank Secory, Shag Crawford and Lee Weyer of the National League.

Kuhn said the official scorers for the series will be Dick Young of the New York Daily News, president of the Baseball Writers Assn.; Joseph Durso of the New York Times; and Lou Hatter of the Baltimore Morning Sun.

'Midnight Cowboy' good bet for filmgoers

While MSU and the surrounding community is perhaps lacking in many forms of entertainment, no one can complain about the flicks offered by area theaters and on campus film groups.

OLD FILMS: "Midnight Cowboy." You'd better see this one if you haven't already because it's going to be up for all kinds of Academy Awards, and then the prices will really shoot up. Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight could well be fighting it out for the best actor award. At the Spartan Twin East.

"Ulysses." James Joyce comes to the screen in this outstanding film. Director Joseph Strick has done his best to do the author justice. Milo O'Shea, Barbara Jefford star. At the Spartan Twin West.

"Darling" and "The Saturday in 106B Wells. Admission is 50 cents, No ID required.

"El Cid." Samuel Bronston's spectacular stars Charlton Heston and Sophia Loren. Cine Series at 7 tonight and 2 and 7 p.m. Saturday in 108B Wells Hall. Shown with Flash Gordon, chapter 3. 50 cents admission. No ID required.

NEW FILMS: "Alice's Restaurant" stars Arlo Guthrie and Officer Obie in their original roles from the "Alice's Restaurant Massacre" with Guthrie's now-classic song of his adventures with garbage and the draft board. See it at the Campus Theatre.

"Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." Male sex-symbol Paul Newman stars with Robert Redford and Katherine Ross (of "Graduate" fame) in this off-beat Western. At the Michigan.

THEATRE: For $1 students can see the road-show company perform "I do! I Do!" Friday at the Auditorium. Phil Ford and Mimi Hines will star in the roles

FILM FESTIVAL

Eight shorts said indescribable

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

How do you describe a sunset? Do you say it has vivid colors? Or do you let adjectives tumble over each other? -- Beautiful... gorgeous... marvelous.

You can't adequately describe a sunset. You have to see it. And you can't describe the Free Campus Film Festival. You have to see it.

Eight award-winning film shorts were presented in Anthony Hall Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Tonight the film shorts will be aired over closed circuit television at 7 and 9 p.m. in 146 Giltner Hall, 102B Wells Hall and 114 Bessey Hall. Each film has received international acclaim from various film festivals throughout the world. They range in length from 7 to 15 minutes.

Among the shorts is "Why Man Creates," directed by Saul Bass, which won the 1968 Academy Award for the best short.

The films capture different views of today's world, ranging from the now-scene "Pop Show," in which a psychedelic drama comments graphically on society, to "Soldier," in which a man is one with nature until "materialism injects another reality."

"Pop Show" is a combination on the ZAP! POW! ZOOM! of Batman, the subtlety of an Ajax commercial, the irony of a bearded Uncle Sam and the desperate cry... "What ever happened to Chubby Checker"

"Pas de Deux" is a black and white illumination of the grace, beauty and movement of classical ballet through the use of multi-image patterns.

A "Yellow Submarine"-type of animated cartoon was the format used for the "Mask." A disillusioned man conceals his true self behind a smiling mask. "Happenings," another animated cartoon, tells of a man who is waiting for something to happen.

"Soldier" is a poignant portrayal of a soldier... a lonely beach... a seagull... a gun blast... and silence.

Perhaps the most thought-provoking film on the beginnings of man and why he strives for accomplishments is "Why Man Creates." Saul Bass presents enough food for thought in this film to last a hungry lifetime.

The program is sponsored by the Chrysler Corp., which is bringing the program to universities across the nation in an effort to find the concerns of students and is not entirely free of new cars done, however, in an artistic manner.

Grandmothers presents Chuck Berry

If you're not 21 years of age and life is a drag, Sunday night at Grandmothers may be the needed break in the under-21-monotony-syndrome.

Chuck Berry, the all-time granddaddy of rock 'n' roll, will be at Grandmother's at 8 p.m. Sunday. There's no age limit.

WVIC, Lansing radio station, is presenting Berry who has been producing hit songs since the early fifties. Berry's hits, like "Maybellene" and "Roll Over Beethoven," are the driving sounds that drifted over the Atlantic to lay the groundwork for the start of another music phenomenon. The Beatles' "Back in the USSR" is most certainly a reference to Berry's "Back in the USSR." Since those days, Berry has come back with a slower, more blues-oriented almost gutbucket music.

Berry will be accompanied by the Woolies. Admission is $2.50.

Christian Scientists deny sin, disease, death

By JANE TOPPS
State News Staff Writer

In 1866, a Massachusetts woman slipped on a patch of ice and injured herself so severely that it is said her friends despaired of her recovery. Upon reading the 16th chapter of Matthew, she declared herself immediately well and thereupon searched the scriptures for three years, eventually claiming to have received a revelation of the Science of Christianity, the rule and method by which Jesus healed the afflicted.

Thus Christian Science was, in the words of its adherents, "discovered" by Mary Baker Eddy.

In its denial of the reality of sin, disease and death, Christian Science turns to the first chapter of Genesis for support. Here is stated the teaching that God created man in His own image and that He pronounced man, along with everything He made, "very good." Therefore, reason Christian Scientists, it follows that sickness and sin appear only to the physical senses, and are merely misconceptions of man as he truly is: whole and perfect. While non-Scientists think mainly of the healing facet of the religion, the healing is incidental to true Christian Science practice. According to a Scientist, the healing of a disease by Science is to that faith as the demonstration of a mathematical proof is to the proof itself: the truth goes on whether it is demonstrated or not.

"The Bible is full of promises and commands that we fulfill these promises," according to Paul B. Decker, an asst. on the Committee on Publication for First Church of Christ, Scientist, East Lansing. "Christian Science is a scientific, logical means of putting these promises into practice in daily living as Christ Jesus taught us to."

A Christian Scientist suffering from a physical or mental sickness or a physical difficulty would apply the truth about God and man as he understands it from Christian Science. Because of the allness and perfection of God, and of man as His image and likeness, evil is not a reality to the Scientist. Rather, he believes perfect good is in everything.

"We're not a negative religion," Decker emphasizes. "It's not that we don't believe in medicine, but it's that we do believe in the power of God—and we do something about it through effective prayer. Healing in Christian Science is prayer effectively applied."

The Christian Science outlook on Jesus of Nazareth differs from that of other religions: A Scientist draws a distinction between Jesus and the Christ. Jesus was the human being, a son of God. His spiritual awareness of the truth of God was actually the Christ in him, that Christ being ever-present and available to every person today.

Mrs. Eddy defined "Jesus" as "the highest human corporeal concept of the divine idea," he rebuking and destroying error and bringing to light man's immortality. The "Christ" was defined by her as "the divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error."

In Jesus, Christian Scientists find an example to follow. As "the divinely anointed," he perceived the logical relationship between God and himself, and thus was enabled to live the life he did. He was, according to Mrs. Eddy, "the most Scientific man who ever trod the globe."

By stating that "man is saved through Christ," the Christian Scientist is professing belief that man can be saved from the ills of the flesh through the knowledge that the Christ presence is all-encompassing. Christian Scientists acknowledge a trinity of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, but view the Father as supreme and infinite God, the Son as Jesus Christ, and the Holy Ghost as what Jesus taught as Science and truth.

Since God is believed to be eternal life, and since spiritual man reflects God, spiritual man would consequently be eternal, although mortal man is not.

The Christian Science Church is devoid of all symbols and rituals, believing that inward spiritual grace can be made manifest without an outward sign, thereby omitting the material symbolism which is a part of many Protestant churches. The church defines baptism as a spiritual purification from all evil, a spiritual experience within an individual consciousness.

The nearest thing approaching a visible symbol in Christian Science is a trademark found stamped or printed upon Christian Science publications. The emblem consists of a cross encircled by a crown, and circumscribed by the phrases, "Heal the sick—raise the dead—cleanse the leper—cast out demons."

The government of the Christian Science Church was established by Mrs. Eddy in the Church Manual to maintain the church in perpetuity. The mother church in Boston is provided with five directors who handle the business of the church and insure that the manual is fulfilled and the church is kept abreast of the times. Branch churches are run according to the democratic method to prevent any individual from controlling the congregation. A first and second reader are elected from and by the membership for a limited period of time.

During the Sunday service, a lesson-sermon composed of correlative citations from the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are read. Mrs. Eddy chose 26 subjects for these lesson-sermons, but while the subjects are repeated twice a year, the passages chosen by a committee of the mother church to illustrate the topics are different each time.

Wednesday evening services include testimonials of healing and remarks on Christian Science.

Gathered together

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, East Lansing, held its dedication services Sunday. The church building has been in use for 16 years. However, in keeping with general Christian Science policy, a formal dedication was not arranged until all debts had been liquidated. State News photo by Don Gerstner

St. John's Parish offers free courses

St. John's Student Parish is offering four special courses during fall term. The courses are free and open to interested students.

Three of the courses have already held meetings, but students can still enter without difficulty, said a counselor at St. John's.

A course with the theme, "The World, Is It or Is It Not Overpopulated?" will run for three weeks beginning Oct. 21. The course is being taught by John P. McKinney, associate professor of psychology. It will focus on three major aspects of the population question: the psychological, the economic and the religious-moral. The course meets from 7 to 9 p.m. at St. John's East.

"Race, Rebellion and Response" is the title of a course taught by T. Harry McKinney, professor in Justin Morrill College. The five-week class, already in progress, meets from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursdays in the Cardinal Room of St. John's.

The course is centered on the Kerner Report, with particular emphasis on the report's recommendations pertaining to employment, ownership and welfare in black communities. A social action workshop will continue for five weeks from 9 to 10 p.m. Thursdays in the Cardinal Room.

Current social problems, including the quality of our work life, income distribution, political relations and community economic problems will be discussed in the workshop.

A fourth course, on scripture and revelation, meets for five weeks Tuesdays from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Spartan Room of St. John's. Joe Wehlen, a graduate asst. in mathematics, will lead the discussions.

The course is a brief survey of historical and present thinking on the relationship between revelation, scripture and tradition.

Methodists use drama format during services

"Christian Confrontation" is the theme of a series of meetings for the members of the University United Methodist Church, 1120 S. Harrison Road, starting Sunday.

An 18-member cast will present a Christian dialogue at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. worship services. The presentation will offer members of the church a challenge to participate in "Pow Wows for Purpose," the Rev. A.B. Burns said.

The dramatic presentation is titled "Rise UP, O Men of God-Where Is Everybody?" The cast represents a cross-section of the church, including youth, senior citizens, church officers, black members and foreign students.

The "Pow Wows" will be small group sessions beginning at 4 p.m. this Sunday and the two succeeding Sundays.

AT ASHER HOUSE

Students put religion first

By JANE TOPPS
State News Staff Writer

Every branch church of the Christian Science religion functions as a complete unit within itself. It consists primarily of services, lectures and reading rooms. But also provided for in the Church Manual is the Christian Science College Organization, a recognized element of the church itself.

All Christian Science activity on campus centers in the organization. The organization at MSU centers in Asher House, a Christian Science off-campus living unit.

"We want to present a true picture of Christian Science to the University," Ken Pratt, Birmingham senior and organization vice president, said.

"We've found that we're almost self-centered in serving our own members. 'Reaching out' will hopefully be a big part of our programs this year," Pratt said.

Testimonial meetings are held at 6:45 p.m. each Tuesday in Alumni Chapel. The meetings consist of readings by elected readers of passages from the King James Bible and from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of Christian Science. Through testimonies, the membership is invited to tell of and explain experiences of healing through the application of Christian Science.

In August, the organization participated in the biannual college meeting at the mother church in Boston. MSU's delegation constituted the second largest contingent of students present. The MSU organizations presented a paper drafted by its members relating the experience of the organization in racial problems.

Asher Student Foundation on Abbot Road, unlike the Christian Science Organization, is not operated by the church, but by a group of interested Christian Scientists. Asher House is currently occupied by 25 men and 29 women living in two private wings with shared dining room and recreational areas. Each wing has a living room, a library, a "quiet room" for prayer and meditation and a "study room" for academic work.

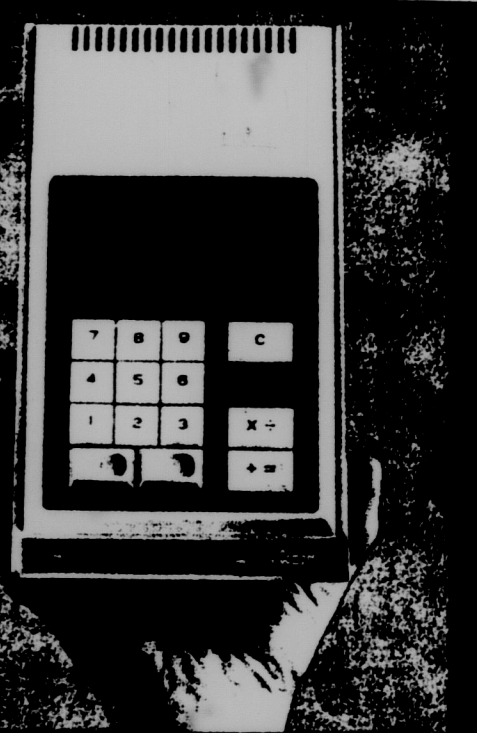

An estimated one-third of all MSU Christian Scientists live in Asher. To qualify as a resident, a Scientist must belong to the mother church, a branch church or to the organization. Inspirational meetings are held biweekly and center on a topic of interest to college students. The meetings are designed to encourage students to air their views and help each other in the daily application of Christian Science.

"We are not a living unit with Christian Science exposure. We are a Christian Science institution which is also a living unit," says Richard Balgenorth, Dearborn graduate student and president of Asher men.

Asher, a non-profit foundation receives financial support from Christian Science contributors nationwide. Its costs are comparable to those of campus dorms. Residents have a voice in the election of the Asher Student Foundation Board of Governors. The board of trustees delegates authority to the administrative director, who in turn delegates authority to the students. All are active Christian Scientists.

Mantovani's crying strings please only 'over 30' group

By BRUCE FISHER
State News Reviewer

Wednesday evening's Mantovani concert in the MSU Auditorium was undoubtedly delightful for a large majority of the mostly "over 30" audience in attendance; unfortunately, the inconsistencies presented by both music and musicians were disappointing.

There are those who will argue that Mantovani's music has a universal appeal to people of all ages, but I'm not so sure. The Mantovani sound, a subtle cross lying somewhere between Henry Mancini and Lawrence Welk, derives its "easy listening" style from stock orchestral "gimmicks" — bleeding strings, beguine tempos and percussion novelties.

I'm not saying that this style of music doesn't have its place; it's just that I find that all too many of the numbers have a familiar sameness about them which produces an overall mediocrity.

The orchestra opened with "Theme for Orchestra" and led into a notably disappointing arrangement of "Love Is Blue." About this point in the concert, I became aware of Mantovani's directing style, which, for me, left a little to be desired from a technical standpoint. This never seemed to affect the orchestra, however, who rarely observed the conductor's audience-oriented stage performance. Their noses were buried too deeply in their music to notice Mantovani's cues.

The copious string section was next featured in Krein's "Gypsy Carnival." The next two numbers relied upon the listener's memory and sentiment, as the orchestra performed a sweet rendering of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," followed by a jazzed-up "Trolley Song." Strings were everywhere.

The orchestra then came to two numbers which they clearly liked to perform, classics by Dvorak ("Slavonic Dance") and Smetana ("Dance of the Comedians"). The result was a notable improvement in quality.

Two TV themes (Mancini's "How Soon" from the defunct "Richard Boone Show," and the theme from "The Virginian") were then featured. "The Virginian" theme arrangement was the highlight of the evening, largely because of the bite of Mantovani's brass, too long concealed under a stifling blanket of strings. The first half of the program concluded with Julie Styne's "Three Coins in the Fountain" and Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours," the theme of which Allen Sherman with his "Hello, Muddah, Hello, Faddah" record of some seasons back.

In the second half of the performance, I listened patiently to "Luzembourg Polka," "Anniversary Waltz," "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang" (candidate for the '69 Oscar?), "Climb Every Mountain" and "If I Were A Rich Man," from "Fiddler on the Roof." Ho-hum.

But then, the same interesting thing which happened before happened again — two more classical numbers, this time by Johann Strauss, which the orchestra enjoyed playing. The first was a Mantovani-arranged "Schatz (Sweetheart) Waltz," which led into a favorite of mine, Strauss' "Perpetual Motion" — "Perpetum Mobile." Both numbers were performed with considerable energy.

The orchestra concluded with "Scottish Rhapsody," a light classical number by Binge. Critics are inclined to call this sort of thing "poignant," but for me it bordered on "mawkish." Two encores followed, and a half-hearted attempt at a standing ovation.

Arlo Guthrie's new album lacks spark of earlier disks

By RAY WALSH
State News Reviewer

Arlo Guthrie's "Running Down the Road" seems to lack much of the uniqueness that sparked his earlier efforts, and comes through as a disappointing album instead of a really good and fully enjoyable one.

His spirit and enthusiasm are toned down to a point where he becomes just another singer trying to make his way into the world of folk music.

Even this attempt has been bungled, it seems, for some of the album's songs have so much guitar accompaniment and acoustical instrumentation that they overshadow Guthrie's personal singing style.

The title song is the worst example of this—the co-producers Lenny Waronker and Van Dyke Parks have put Guthrie into a situation that even he can't sing himself out of. He's singing to the music instead of with it, and it's very obvious that progressive rock is just not his bag.

"Oklahoma Hills" was written by Guthrie's father, Woody, but all of the rest of the songs are Arlo's originals. The best of these is "Coming into Los Angeles," which opens side two with: "...Bringin' in a couple of keys/ Don't touch my bags if you please/ Mr. Customs Man."

Sounding much like Dylan in "Oh, In the Morning," Guthrie is backed up by himself on the piano in the slow and quiet song about loneliness.

Reprise records has pictured Guthrie on a Triumph motorcycle on the jacket of the album, but the photos just don't correspond with the songs inside: his freedom on the cycle is contrasted by the producer's limitations on his songs.

Arlo Guthrie has come a long way since "Alice's Restaurant," starting in a movie with the same name; but his latest album "Running Down the Road," only leaves hope that his next release will be one where he will be able to let himself go with his usual unrestrained enthusiasm.

Special election held by MHA for new officers

Doug Laycock, E. Lansing senior, was chosen president of Men's Halls Assoc. (MHA) in a special election held last night. Tom Ball, Adrian senior, was elected vice president.

The special election was a result of the resignations of MHA president Bob Loerke and Jim Hartvin, elected spring term. The other officers elected spring term will retain their offices.

"I see myself spokesman for a lobby," Laycock said. The new resident would like to see the committee take part in academic policies, such as tenure decisions.

Emphasis will be put on social involvement by the new officers. "Residents should be made more socially aware of problems they are involved with," Ball said.

MHA is currently working on an optional 24-hour open house proposal. The proposal is now before ASMSU.

Senate committee
OKs Haynsworth

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the nomination to the Supreme Court of Clement F.
Haynsworth Jr. Thursday, opening the way for a spirited struggle on the floor.

The vote, 10-6, climaxed a two-hour closed debate over Haynsworth's business dealings.

Charles McC. Mathias D-Md. withheld his vote on the grounds that information he asked for was not immediately available.

Mathias, who declined to disclose what information he sought said he will have his vote recorded later.

Before the committee took its vote on the nomination, it rejected, 14-3, a motion by Mathias to postpone action again.

The committee had postponed its vote twice before, last week and again Wednesday after Sen. Robert P. Griffin, the Republican whip from Michigan, publicly joined the opposition to Haynsworth.

Judiciary Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said it would be at least a week before minority and majority reports could be prepared, a formality necessary before floor debate can start.

Sen. Birch Bayh, the Indiana Democrat and Judiciary Committee member who has been leading the opposition to Haynsworth, said it may be two weeks before debate begins.

Despite the solid vote to report the nomination of Haynsworth, a judge on the 4th Court of Appeals for the past 12 years, prospects for confirmation remained highly uncertain with each side claiming the majority required to confirm or reject the nominee.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and a leading sponsor of Haynsworth, told newsmen he talked with the judge by phone
Thursday and found him disillusioned and frustrated.

And, Hollings added at a news conference, he would not rule out the possibility that Haynsworth would insist his name be withdrawn, despite his repeated declarations he would not do this. Hollings added he did not discuss withdrawal with Haynsworth Thursday.

Hollings said "circumstances have changed" since last week when the senator described as ridiculous a report that Haynsworth would withdraw. At that time, the senator said, he believed there were 56 solid votes for confirmation.

Now, he said, it looks much closer and confirmation by a single vote "would be quite a victory."

Hollings criticized administration handling of the nomination, saying that the long delay in a showdown is "unfair to the judge."

Voting in committee for Haynsworth were Sens. Eastland;
Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb.; Marlow W.
Cook, R-Ky.; John L. McClellan, D-Ark.; Sam J. Ervin Jr.,
D-N.C.; Thomas
