Adams, legislators plead for peace

By BARBARA FARNESSE
State News Staff Writer

Pleas for peace in Vietnam and the "candidacy" of Acting President Adams brought the overflow Auditorium crowd repeatedly to its feet Wednesday as part of MSU's participation in the national moratorium on "business as usual."

The unexpected appearance of Gov. Milliken in the audience also prompted a standing ovation from the crowd of over 5,000.

"We are no longer alone," Adams said in introducing the governor. "Indeed, some of us may quit this movement because it's becoming too damned respectable."

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., and Rep. Donald W. Riegler, R-Mich., began their speeches with enthusiastic endorsements of Adams for MSU's presidency.

"Although we belong to different political parties, if I were on the presidential Search and Selection Committee, I'd vote for Walter Adams," Riegler said.

Adams joined Hart and Riegler in calling for the immediate "disengagement" of American troops from Vietnam.

"U.S. participation in the Vietnam war must be ended, and the time to end it is now," Adams said.

He described the war as "a national disaster fought for ephemeral ends and paid for with a depleted society."

"Discretion and wisdom, therefore militate toward immediate disengagement and the redirection of our efforts to national priorities which better serve the national interest," Adams said.

He said American lives are being wasted for principles which have no demonstrable relation to America's national security, while at the same time committing America to a "fatal land war in Asia."

Adams noted that even if the Communists took all of Southeast Asia, they would not have the resources to subsidize the development of this impoverished area.

"Just as the conquest of the area would be a Pyrrhic victory for the Chinese, so even a total U.S. victory would not contribute one iota to the security of our country or its geopolitical posture in the world," Adams said.

"Moreover, the cost of attempting such a victory would exact an intolerable price not only in casualties and treasure, but in terms of the violence it does to the fabric of American society, the quality of American life and the validity of the American dream," he continued.

Adams said we must make the inevitable choice of deciding whether to "indulge ourselves in the ideological luxuries of Vietnam" or to "put our own house in order."

Hart echoed the plea for "disengagement" when he called for an immediate stand-still cease-fire. He urged President Nixon to set a "certain date" for withdrawal of American troops.

"The insanity of the conflict," Hart said, "is highlighted by the fact that practically everyone now agrees that we should never have gotten involved in the first place."

"All of our reasons for staying in Vietnam have been generated by our intervention," he continued. "Our posture has been that of a gambler, made compulsive by growing debt, hopeful that the next roll of the dice will allow him to recover his losses, restore his pride and retain his dignity."

Hart questioned the dignity of supporting a South Vietnamese regime that imprisons the candidate who ran second in the nation's presidential election.

He said despite its tragedy, the war in Vietnam has brought people together and possibly stimulated more "intelligent" decisions on national security for the future.

Hart said the most impressive memorial the United States can erect for those who have died in Vietnam is "domestic peace and tranquility and a lasting peace."

Congressman Riegler announced his support for the moratorium but warned that it is essential that moratorium activities remain nonviolent and non-coercive.

"After all the agony and suffering of the last eight years, it's altogether appropriate that as a nation we pause to think how it is that the war happened, where we are today, how we can wind it up and what lessons are for the future," he said.

Moratorium observances display division over war

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

Hundreds of thousands of Americans debated, rallied, marched and prayed Wednesday in nationwide moratorium day observances that displayed the country's divisions over the Vietnam war.

Antiwar partisans wore buttons and black armbands and called the war immoral and futile. Supporters of America's Vietnam policy flew flags and turned on automobile headlights, and some called the moratorium treason. Even for the uncommitted it was hard to ignore.

Church bells tolled in New York City, signifying opposition to the war. Alabama's largest newspaper, the Birmingham News, emblazoned across its entire front page a red-white-and-blue American flag and a message from Gov. Albert Brewer declaring that "peace without honor and justice is no peace at all."

There was a flurry of violence in front of the White House when a group threatened to push its way into the grounds. Police made a number of arrests.

In Detroit, police moved between Moratorium Day demonstrators and a militant anti-Communist group.

College and university campuses were the center or starting point of most moratorium day activity. In many cases, classes were cancelled and attendance was down.

However, actual participants in moratorium day activities accounted for small percentages of student bodies at many institutions. At Texas Tech, 300 of 19,500 students demonstrated; at Oregon State, about 1,000 of 15,000 turned out to hear talks; at Temple University in Philadelphia, between 700 and 1,000 students out of a 34,000 enrollment attended a vigil.

State representatives support anti-war rally

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Representatives of Michigan government seconded the Vietnam peace motion Wednesday in a series of anti-war speeches at the Capitol.

"This promises to be the largest peace demonstration in the history of America," Sen. Coleman Young, D-Detroit, said before the crowd of over 8,000 peace-seekers. "It may prove to be the beginning of a radical and revolutionary change in the direction of our country."

"Youth of America, black and white, are taking part in a movement for peace that can, if it continues beyond today, revolutionize the nation," he explained.

Peace and freedom are inseparable, the senator said. "There can be no peace in Vietnam unless the Vietnamese are free, and no peace in America unless the blacks are free."

"When the percentage of black enrollment at MSU is equal to the black casualty rate in Vietnam, then we will be getting somewhere," he concluded.

Amidst peace symbols and chants, James Harrison, chairman of the Ingham County Democratic party, adamantly expressed his and the nation's "outrage at the senseless loss of resources in Vietnam."

"This moratorium is based on protest against the waste and killing in Vietnam," Harrison said. A wave of applause followed when he said:

"It's up to the youth of America to turn Nixon completely around in ending this war, just like they did in getting LBJ out of office."

"The cast has changed, but the script is the same," he continued. "Nixon sounds just like LBJ, and Melvin Laird sounds just like Dean Rusk."

Harrison outlined what he feels is the only honorable action the U.S. can take in ending the Vietnam war.

"The U.S. should publicly admit the war was a mistake from the beginning and announce a permanent ceasefire today," he explained. "We must withdraw all troops by July 1970, and tell the Vietnamese that

Off-campus, the moratorium movement reached into churches, where special services were held; to Boston Common and to New York's Wall Street and the streets of Albuquerque, N.M., Detroit and other cities.

The moratorium reached even to the World Series at Shea Stadium in New York. About 200 youths stood outside the stadium distributing antiwar leaflets, but inside the flag flew at full staff. Mayor John V. Lindsay ordered city flags at half staff, provoking criticism from some corners. Representatives of three armed services in the honor guard for the flag raising at Shea had refused to go in the field unless the flag was hoisted to the top of the pole.

The biggest rallies reported during the day were in New York City, Boston, Philadelphia and Minneapolis.

In New York, a crowd estimated by newsmen at 10,000 gathered outside the United Nations. Most of those attending were young people, although it had been billed as a "businessmen's rally."

A crowd of 15,000 gathered at the Cambridge Common near Boston for a rally and planned a march to the Boston Common. Philadelphia Police Commissioner Frank L. Rizzo estimated 15,000 persons attended a rally at the city's John F. Kennedy Plaza. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin said an estimated 50,000 persons in the Philadelphia area observed the moratorium.

In capitals around the world, students staged orderly demonstrations supporting the moratorium. Many of the participants were Americans.

Originated by dissidents who want an immediate pullout from Vietnam, the moratorium movement was joined and tempered by more moderate war opponents.

Expressing the feelings of many opponents of the moratorium, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., declared that moratorium participants "are playing into the hands of the people whose business it is to kill American fighting men."

At Whittier College, where Nixon was graduated 35 years ago, Mrs. Harold Case, wife of the acting president, lit a "flame of life" torch before a crowd of 750 students and others. It is to burn at the school until war ends.

In Detroit, mounted police were called to unsnarl traffic and contain a crowd drawn to Kennedy Square by protests against the war, after several scuffles broke out and two windows were smashed.

The Detroit police force was placed on tactical alert. The mounted police herded the roaming youths back toward the square. Most of those demonstrating were under 25 although there were older persons scattered throughout, some carrying antiwar signs.

Many of those in the crowd at Detroit were black. One group of blacks led a march throughout the downtown area at about noon, creating a minor traffic jam.

DEFENDS MORATORIUM

Milliken denies political move

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken denied Wednesday that his support of the Vietnam moratorium was politically motivated.

Speaking at a news conference on the morning of the nationwide anti-war rally, Milliken said he has "supported the idea for a moratorium as a symbol of the nation's fervent desire for peace."

But, he added he did not want the moratorium to undermine the President's efforts to bring the war to an end.

"I think it is a genuine reflection of concern in this country for peace," he said.

And while saying the state was prepared to handle any violent action on the part of demonstrators, he said he did not expect trouble.

"I do not anticipate, from all the information I have, that the activities of today will result in violence," Milliken said.

The governor said he was "very pleased" with the selection of John Porter by the State Board of Education to become acting superintendent of public instruction.

He was chosen in secret session late Tuesday night by a unanimous 8-0 vote and became the first black man in the country to head a state department of education.

Earlier in the week, Porter had issued a statement saying he could not become a candidate for the position, which Ira Polley had held for nearly three years before being forced to resign last week.

Milliken confessed surprise at Porter's appointment, explaining that it "was my earlier understanding . . . that he was not interested."

But the governor expressed confidence in Porter and added, "It is an encouraging sign that a man of Porter's caliber accepted the position."

Milliken also commented on scorching criticism leveled at his educational reform package by House Majority Floor Leader Rep. George F. Montgomery, D-Detroit, who condemned the program as being "chicken."

Milliken said, nevertheless, he is optimistic about passage of his proposals, and praised Montgomery for his work in furthering education.

Riegle condemned the Gulf of Tonkin resolution as "an abuse of executive interpretation" and demanded that Congress amend the resolution so that it will expire on Dec. 31, 1970.

Riegle said Congress bears much of the responsibility for allowing the war to go on.

"We never seem to be able to bring ourselves to discuss straight-on the war in Vietnam. The congress has been so busy with other things that we haven't had time to consider our most staggering problem," he said.

Riegle said the war should make people realize that Americans are only a small minority of the world's population, and "there is no way for us to police the world on a man-to-man basis."

"The sooner we can destroy that belief, the better for us," he said.

Representatives

they are responsible for forming their own government once we are gone."

Sen. Basil Brown, D-Highland Park, also denounced the war as "futile and desperate. We talk about peace now," he said, "I say we should have had peace yesterday."

Rep. Thomas Guastello, D-Utica, one of the youngest members of the Michigan Legislature and a graduate of MSU, singled out apathy as our greatest enemy to stopping the war in Vietnam.

"Peace will come when we realize that America is just a small part of the world," he said, "and that the domestic needs of education and housing cannot be ignored for a meaningless war."

The three manned Soviet spaceships carried out navigational maneuvers in orbit Wednesday increasing speculation that their mission would not produce the anticipated construction of an orbiting space station.

Soviet sources had said that Soyuz 6, 7 and 8, with seven cosmonauts on board, would construct the first space platform, but reports on the troika flight by the official Soviet news agency Tass described only maneuvering and scientific experiments.

The North Vietnamese told two U.S. wives Wednesday that Hanoi would not release any American prisoners until the United States has withdrawn its troops from Vietnam and the war has ended.

This was reported by Mrs. Sue Shuman and Mrs. Martha Doss, two Virginia Beach, Va., women whose husbands have been held prisoner since March 1968.

National News

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) acknowledged Wednesday it is reviewing a proposed orbital test flight of a monkey with a transplanted heart.

The project is one of two submitted to NASA based on the work of Christian Barnard, the South African surgeon who pioneered in human heart transplants.

Pursuing a studied business as usual course, President Nixon concentrated Wednesday on Latin America and economic problems - taking no public notice of nationwide antiwar demonstrations.

Although the White House repeatedly went out of its way in pre-moratorium days to try to soften stop-the-war sentiment by claiming noticeable progress for Nixon policies, the Southeast Asian conflict played no part in Nixon's announced activities for the day.

Moratorium Day in the nation's capital bore a striking resemblance to any other business day as the scattered round of speeches, rallies and other displays of sentiment against the war in Vietnam did little to divert the government from business as usual.

The protesters saved their best for the day's end when thousands were expected to gather near the Washington Monument for a silent, candlelight procession past the White House, led by the widow of Martin Luther King Jr.

A presidential commission is investigating reports that hundreds of color television sets, most from one manufacturer, caught fire - even while not in operation.

Stewart M. Statler, staff counsel for President Nixon's National Commission on Product Safety, confirmed the probe, but refused to name the manufacturer whose sets caught fire most often.

Republican and Democratic leaders proposed Wednesday a congressional denunciation of what they called a Communist effort "to associate Americans who demonstrate for peace" with the cause of North Vietnam.

The Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, whose televised image in millions of American homes in the 1950's made him nationally known, has resigned as the head of the Rochester Roman Catholic Diocese.

Bishop Sheen told a news conference Wednesday he will return to New York City "not to retire, but to spend myself and be spent in any work with what the Lord sees fit to use me."

Michigan News

The State Board of Education postponed Wednesday accepting sex education guidelines for schools until it receives a legal opinion on the constitutionality of the sex education law.

Board Treasurer James F. O'Neil said the 1968 law could be unconstitutional because it permitted students to be excused from sex education classes with parental consent. He cited a U.S. Supreme Court ruling which he said struck down a law allowing children to be excused from classes where prayers were conducted because it constituted discrimination.

A 31-year-old Presbyterian minister, whose anti-war activities included turning in his draft card, has hopes of getting his draft board to reverse its decision ordering him to report for induction into the Army later this month.

Gary Ireland, who resigned recently from his post at St. John's Presbyterian Church on Detroit's near east side because he felt churches are not making a meaningful attack on the problems of American society, said he will report for induction if his appeal fails.

War protest echoes on battlefield

SAIGON (AP) — The nationwide antiwar demonstration in the United States caused a ripple but apparently no waves Wednesday among the half-million American troops whose presence in South Vietnam was at issue in the Moratorium Day protest.

The only battlefield protest reported was the wearing of black armbands by members of a platoon of U.S. infantrymen on patrol near Chu Lai, some 360 miles northeast of Saigon. There was no way of knowing immediately, however, if there were similar antiwar expressions by other G.I.s scattered throughout the country.

Associated Press photographer Charles Ryan said more than half of the 30 men in one American Division platoon wore the antiwar armbands and the platoon leader, 1st Lt. Jesse Rosen of New York City, told him:

"It's just my way of silently protesting. Personally, I think the demonstrating should go on until President Nixon gets the idea that every American should be pulled out of here now."

The acting commander of the American Division, Brig. Gen.

Howard H. Cooksey of Brentsville, Va., said Wednesday night that he "didn't know enough about the incident to discuss it at this time."

A group of 20 American civilians assembled at the U.S. Embassy to deliver a petition with 32 signatures calling for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam. Four demonstrators were received by Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, and a spokesman said Bunker agreed to transmit their one-paragraph petition to Nixon.

Most of the civilians, who were heckled by a man who called himself a "Hungarian freedom fighter," work for religious and social organizations in Saigon. A U.S. mission spokesman said he did not believe any of the protesting civilians were government employees.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of American forces in Vietnam, said he did not expect the antiwar moratorium to make any difference on the battlefield. "We've got our job to do here and that's what we're doing," he said.

He spoke briefly with newsmen at Tan Son Nhut airport where he was given a resolution passed by the Mississippi Legislature praising American troops in Vietnam for "the sacrifices they have made and are making in behalf of their country."

A statement issued by the office of President Nguyen Van Thieu said that the antiwar demonstrations "have the paradoxical effect of prolonging the war, instead of shortening it because a genuine and lasting peace cannot be secured simply by unilateral concessions."

Thieu said the "Communist aggressors should not be led into thinking that they have only to remain negative and wait for us to make concession after concession out of weariness."

UNIFORMED GUNMAN

Somalian president killed

NAIROBI Kenya (AP)—The president of Somalia, Abdirashid Ali Shermarke, was assassinated Wednesday by a gunman wearing a police uniform.

Authorities immediately arrested a policeman named Abulkadir Abdi, whom Radio Mogadishu later identified as the assassin.

The shooting occurred in Las Anod near the Ethiopian border in northern Somalia where the president had been inspecting drought-stricken regions. It was the day before his 50th birthday.

Radio Mogadishu later announced that a dusk-to-dawn curfew had been imposed in Mogadishu, the capital, and that security officers were patrolling the streets.

The president's body was returned to the capital.

According to the constitution, the president of the National Assembly, Somalia's parliament, assumes power upon the death of the president. Sheikh Mukhtar Mohamed heads the assembly.

Prime minister Mohammed Haji Ibrahim Egal was in California Tuesday and left by plane for Somalia when he heard of the assassination. He came to the United States to attend the U.N. General Assembly in New York and was on a private visit to the West Coast.

Shermarke became prime minister of Somalia, a Texas-sized country of 4.5 million people, when it became independent in 1960. He was defeated in 1964 then elected to a six-year term as president in 1967.

Shermarke's ruling Somalia Youth League party won a smashing election victory in March, taking all but one of the 123 parliamentary seats. Tribesmen in the country charged the election was rigged.

The president was involved in a bitter dispute over security with Police Gen. Mohammed Abshir during the elections. When he insisted that local district commissioners, rather than police, be responsible for law and order, the general resigned.

The National Assembly is elected every six years and chooses the president, who serves as chief of state.

As prime minister, Shermarke visited Washington, London, Moscow and Peking and led his nation on a neutral course, accepting aid from both Western and Communist nations.

New school head named by board

John W. Porter, former associate superintendent of the Michigan State Board of Education, accepted the position Wednesday as acting superintendent of public instruction.

Succeeding Ira Polley, who resigned as superintendent early last week, Porter said in a statement to the press:

"The State Board of Education has unanimously supported a nomination by Charles Morton that I be asked to assume the position of acting superintendent of public instruction."

"I was not an applicant for the position," he explained, "nor did I desire to be sought after for it. However, because of the unanimous board vote which indicates, I believe, the unified support essential to begin this very important task, I have agreed to serve in the capacity of acting superintendent. It is a challenge not easy to accept."

He said he would rely on his association with the board as associate superintendent to assist him in making the transfer to the new position.

"I am honored that the State Board has such confidence in my judgement," he said.

Rewrite the whitewash

Back in April of this year, members of the Chamber of Commerce, Human Relations Commission, City Planning Commission and three MSU organizations met to discuss the problems in landlord-tenant relations. The result of this meeting was the selection of a steering committee which has just issued its report.

In order to judge the success or failure of the steering committee's report, it is necessary to look at the objectives sought at the time of the committee's origin and the present situation.

The basic objective was to improve relations between landlord and tenant and, hence, four main topics were chosen for the committee's consideration. These were: security deposits, automobile towing practices, model lease provisions and grievance procedures.

While the first two items have great importance and ramifications for those unfortunately involved, they fundamentally involve the clarification, either in writing (in the case of security deposits) or in signs and symbols (towing policies being posted on premises).

The big issue that the steering committee was to grapple with was the arrangement for a model lease for realtors. This lease would be a uniform standard one available to all apartment tenants and was expected to become reality this fall. Originally, consent between the parties involved was to be the precipitating cause of the lease. But as time went on, it seemed obvious that a rent strike similar to the Ann Arbor strike at the University of Michigan would have to be the means to the end.

The expectation of a model lease this fall was so certain that former Off-Campus Council representative Leon Brenner stated categorically that a model lease would be instituted this fall "either negotiated or struck for." This is definitely the epitome of "famous last words."

What the steering committee discovered and finally recommended on these topics was highly disappointing.

A uniform design for towing practices, signs with rates and other additions was suggested as a more efficient and lucid design, to aid the prospective law-breaker, than the type presently in use. Various devices to make for a more cohesive and understandable arrangement on security deposits were proposed. The uniform standard lease, which loomed as the potential success of the entire project, never got off the ground "on the basis that it would be impractical."

Finally, the creation of a grievance committee to hear complaints and issue suggestions was advocated. However, the steering committee specifically stated that the grievance committee would have no binding power and "only the power to suggest."

One could look at the existence of the steering committee, its report and suggestions as being a precedent—a precedent which could lay the fabric for the lessening of tensions between tenant and landlord. At the same time, however, it is obvious that the expectation of a model lease was not realized. This failure augurs much for future mishaps simply because students' lack the concern and determination to seriously advance their own cause.

While it is hard to perceive of a grievance committee having the power to force individuals or groups to heed its advice, it is just as difficult to feel satisfied with a committee which will sift and suggest and probably wind up in the woodwork of a bureaucratic office.

Rent in the East Lansing area is exorbitantly high. Uncertainties in leases abound. While this doesn't seem to be the time to follow the lead of our fellow rent-striking students at U-M, this is not a moment for complacency.

The report by the steering committee strongly suggests the domination by the realtors over the other members. This is a tragedy in that most of the advantages in apartment living lie with the realtors.

In order to rewrite the whitewashed report, a radical, innovative approach must be taken—and taken quick before the realtors get a stronger grip on our checkbooks.

MSU-SDS innocent of vandalism

To the Editor:

We would like to agree with the letter by Daniel Nathan in his opinions that vandalism does not communicate political theory. It seems important to point out, however, that members of MSU-SDS were not involved in the paintings and consider them deplorable.

The painting was done by a group calling themselves Capitol City SDS. They are part of a group which walked out of the national convention in Chicago and started their own organization when they saw that they were out-voted. They have operated nationwide with the same strategy of meaningless vandalism and physical attacks on all persons refusing to support them.

However, we feel that this flows not from immaturity, but from their political theories, which say that whites benefit from racism; therefore, all whites are the enemy; men benefit from exploiting women, therefore all men are the enemy; and they are always correct, therefore everyone who disagrees with them is the enemy.

This constitutes a clear attack on the majority of people in this country. We believe that the majority are hurt by the war, racism, inflation, rising taxes and can be won to join together to militantly fight back.

TAYLOR STATEMENT

Being dealt with in contempt

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following statement was written by John F. A. Taylor, philosophy professor, and chairman of the ad hoc committee that wrote guidelines for the All-University Search and Selection Committee.

To the Editor:

I am too uninstructed in the art of politics to give advice to others on the making of a president. I am not, however, without an opinion on the making of a university. And I will confess to a kind of despair at the disarray of our community, which forbids us to make both.

It must be clear that in any society there are some matters which it is better to put permanently beyond political adventure, since to be divided on them is to have suspended the society itself. What the thoughtful and serious men describe as "due process" is such a matter. We may be divided into competing factions in all other connections; but in this one connection we cannot afford to be divided. Due process is not the weapon of a faction. It is, on the contrary, the rule which we mutually consent to honor in order that, in spite of all our contests, we may belong together in one house.

Therefore, it deserves to be called to the attention of the University that we are degrading the office of the president by the pattern of our attempts to fill it, and if we continue in our present pattern we shall have shortly a president but no University.

When, some months ago, the MSU Board of Trustees consented to the formation of the All-University Search and Selection Committee, its action represented for this University an unprecedented constitutional advance. In establishing the committee, the board undertook to make its selection from a list of candidates recommended by the committee. By the Constitution of the State of Michigan, the board of trustees is not, of course, bound by the faculty, or by the students, or by the alumni.

And it knows this. The board of trustees is bound not because we bind it, but because it binds itself. That was precisely the significance of the new advance. The board consented to be bound by the recommendations of a committee for the reason that it understood, clearly and explicitly, that no president it appoints can succeed in his office if he has not the support of the University—of the faculty, of the students and alumni—whose destinies he is to direct.

Therefore, we were asked to constitute a committee, so democratically conceived that no one could question its representativeness, so judiciously composed that its capacity to speak for the whole of the University was undoubted, so generously endowed with experience that it could be asked, in relation to the board, to act in our behalf. That was the conception of the committee. The committee was constituted. What is its present estate?

It is being dealt with in contempt. It is being asked not to deliberate on our nominations, but to respond to our unlicensed pressures. In short, it is being asked to do what the board of trustees is perfectly well equipped to do without its offices. And we, by making it superfluous, have in fact rejected our own advance.

I may speak with a certain claim to detachment and impartiality in this connection. I am neither for nor against any person. I am neither for nor against any list. I am satisfied that the opportunity of making nominations has been, in fact, perfectly open, that the All-University Search and Selection Committee has been as faultlessly democratic as we have known how to make it, that it has labored in unselfish loyalty since its work began.

The reason for our having such a committee has been, nevertheless, obscured. It was very simply this: that we wanted a carefully deliberated expression of the judgement of the whole University. Such an expression can, in fact, be had on one condition only, that we respect the due process which we ourselves have instituted, permitting informed, respected and serious colleagues to perform the tasks of the delegated intellect in our behalf.

And if we do not? Then let us be aware of what are the real costs: the exchange of our community for an illusion of community, a failure of democracy and (I greatly fear) a universal contempt for the position we have filled and for the University which has filled it.

Tuberculosis threat still not history

An interesting and potentially dangerous dichotomy exists in the MSU food services—half the employees are religiously given tuberculosis tests each year, while the other half never are. The problem emanates from a less than specific health law.

The State of Michigan statute regarding such things strongly recommends, but does not require, TB tests for food handlers. This being the case, the University is actually free not to test anyone—as is the norm with most other agencies in this area. MSU, however, does require medical check-ups for TB from its full-time employees and yet, in some unfathomable fit of illogic, does not require the same from its student and part-time help.

Tuberculosis, according to Dr. James Feurig, director of Olin Health Center, is nowhere near the dread scourge that it was years ago. In fact, with new breakthroughs in medical technique and medicines, the disease can probably be classed in the "rare" category. As a result, TB treatment institutions and agencies throughout the United States are closing their doors for lack of clientele—indeed, the last time a case passed through Olin was in the summer of 1966.

Dr. Feurig, however, goes on to point out that one of the reasons that the prevalence of tuberculosis is so low is because of a continuing effort to keep it so. No disease is ever completely defeated and all require constant looking after—the advent of penicillin, for example, made health officials decide a decade ago that venereal disease was history, and now it is back in near epidemic proportions.

In sum, what Dr. Feurig seems to be saying—and we concur—is that while TB may be near nonexistent in this day, it only takes one case working in the close proximity of the University community to bring about a staggering tragedy. The tuberculosis test is not complicated or overly time-consuming, and we can see no reason why the University should not require it of all its employees.

It is our opinion that the law regarding TB tests should be re-worked to require such tests for food handlers, rather than to suggest them. Short of this, however, we feel that the University should make its already existent policy concerning such tests for some employees inclusive of all segments of the work force.

We should praise Communism

To the Editor:

On Monday's editorial page, David Short begs us to go easy on communism, "everyman's scapegoat." Short ignored only one critical area in his otherwise splendid commentary; he didn't include all the praiseworthy features of the Communist movement. Yes, we should worship the communism of Stalin, who "liquidated" uncounted millions of Russians during the late 1930's and who squashed democracy in Eastern Europe after World War II. We should glorify the win people to their theories.

We believe that the majority of MSU-SDS feels that most people are our potential allies and can be won to support a militant fight against those who really benefit from exploiting the people. We condemn the anti-people actions of CCSDS and will continue to build a fighting campus movement in spite of them.

Diction lacking

To the Editor:

While your editorial page professes to take a liberal stand with regard to the Vietnam war, your news pages continually run wire service stories that, by their very diction, tend to support the administration position.

If it is true that the United States should not be in Vietnam, then why are the Viet Cong continually referred to as "the enemy," "enemy troops," etc. Whose enemy?

Also, why do you persist in printing Defense Dept. (actually it should be "War Dept.") figures of numbers of Viet Cong killed, when you know that those figures actually refer to the number of people killed, including women and children, who have no part in the war?

Finally, why do you use the term "military obligation" in articles concerning the Placement Bureau? Do you really think that in view of the current United States military situation, anyone has an obligation to serve in the military?

Each of these three cases is a case in which a significant value judgment is implicitly made by choice of words. The use of these loaded terms is a subtle form of thought control that the Dept. of Defense is skilled at using. I suppose these things are bound to creep into any writing, but it would improve the quality of State News reporting if you substituted neutral terms for the loaded administration terms "enemy," "Viet Cong killed" and "military obligation." This seems especially appropriate in view of your dovish editorial position.

Moratorium Day. A day to suspend "business as usual" in protest of the war in Vietnam. It was the largest anti-war demonstration this nation has ever seen, and it may become a crucial test of the reality of the democratic process. People of all ages participated in protest - the generation gap was bridged by the common plea for peace. Ethelyn Johnston, a 92-year-old Lansing resident, marched with the crowd half-way to the Capitol and insisted that she would have been able to walk the whole way. MSU students and faculty joined the rest of the nation in the anti-war demonstration. Acting President Adams, upper left, Rep. Donald W. Reigle, R-Mich., center, and Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., addressed their anti-war comments to a mass rally at the MSU Auditorium. Then college students, faculty, businessmen, housewives and students from area junior and senior high schools came together for the march on the Capitol and walked toward Lansing expressing sorrow for the war dead and hope for peace.

Arbitration law examined

The implications of the new compulsory arbitration law for municipal police and firemen were examined in a conference in Kellogg Center this week. The conference was sponsored by the School of Labor and Industrial Relations.

The law, which became effective Oct. 1, will be in effect for three years, after which it will be up for renewal. The law provides for arbitration as an "effective and binding procedure for the resolution of disputes." If a dispute has not been resolved within 30 days of its submission to mediation and fact-finding, the law states that it will be submitted for arbitration. In discussing the law, David Burgess, mayor of Grosse Pointe, pointed out some of its weaker points.

"The law is vague regarding the time periods involved," he said. "There can be a lag of as much as 127 days from the fact-finding until its submission to arbitration."

He said there is not a provision regarding intervention by any group or interested citizens, and it does not make it clear whether the dispute can or must be submitted to arbitration and whether it applies to simple disagreements.

A panel was set up to answer questions submitted to them from the audience. Panel members were: Burgess; Leo Walsh, member of the Michigan Labor Mediation Board; Harry Casselman, arbitrator and attorney; C. Richard Morton, comptroller from Kalamazoo County; and Jack Stieber, chairman and director of the School of Labor and Industrial Relations.

Regarding press coverage of labor disputes, Casselman said, though it is the prerogative of the arbitrators, he thought the "lid" should be kept on and the press excluded from the negotiations. Casselman also answered a question regarding the 30 day limit after which the dispute is submitted for arbitration.

"It is a hit and miss arrangement, at best. The case is assigned to a mediator and he contacts the party to see how far negotiations have progressed. Then he judges whether they are ready for mediation."

He said that 30 days is not enough time in some cases.

The law was recommended by the governor's commission because the police and firemen are at a disadvantage in bargaining with management because they do not have the option to strike.

ON AGING

Lonsdale lectures

A former MSU distinguished visiting professor, Dame Kathleen Lonsdale, presented her research on "Aging in Materials and Man" at the science colloquy here this week.

According to Dame Kathleen, the aging process is a result of reorganization in the body, wear and tear, and chemical change. None of these processes, however, can be considered the prime reason for aging in the human body. There is a dispute among scientists as to which is the most important factor, she said.

Currently a distinguished visiting professor at Ohio State University and retired professor from the University of London, Dame Kathleen has been on a lecture tour that has taken her to Michigan, California and Ohio. Soon to lecture in Washington, D.C., her topics, as she said, range "from diamonds to gallstones."

A woman scientist of many achievements, Dame Kathleen was honored in 1956 with the title Dame Commander, Order of the British Empire. She has been vice president of the Royal Society and president of the British Assn. for the Advancement of Science.

SRO crowd awaits Association show

Sold out is the word on The Association, the first of ASMSU's Popular Entertainment Series this season.

The last full house for this series heard Simon and Garfunkel fall term, 1967, but The Association's house will seat 3,000 more people. A new seating arrangement raised Jennison's capacity from 6,000 to over 9,000.

While pop entertainment has sustained heavy losses, it has held its own over the years, according to Steve Plichta, chairman of the committee. He attributes this latest success partly to the summer pop concerts which have revived interest in good concerts.

Plichta is optimistic for similar turnouts for Blood, Sweat and Tears and Dionne Warwick, scheduled to appear later this term. He added that ticket prices have been lowered and the pop entertainment committee will try to keep them down.

Mets not to be denied; win in 10th on error

NEW YORK (UPI) — A wild throw by relief pitcher Pete Richert in the 10th inning, after Ron Swoboda saved the game with a diving catch in the ninth, gave the New York Mets an exciting 2-1 victory Wednesday over the Baltimore Orioles and a 3-1 lead in the World Series.

Richert fielded J.C. Martin's fine bunt along the right side with runners on first and second and none out and made a bad throw to first that enabled pinch-runner Rod Gaspar to score from second base.

Gaspar ran for Jerry Grote, who got a double when left fielder Don Buford lost his fly ball in the sun, and Al Weis was intentionally walked to bring up Martin, who batted for winning pitcher Tom Seaver.

The Mets, who were 100-1 underdogs at the start of the series, now can win their first World Series at home Thursday when they send Jerry Koosman, who won the second game, against Dave McNally.

A crowd of 57,367 — the largest paid crowd ever to see a game at Shea Stadium — watched the contest.

Seaver regaining his form after two shaky starts, had a three-hit shutout going into the ninth inning. Seaver hadn't allowed a hit since the third when Oriole Manager Earl Weaver became the first manager in 34 years to get tossed out of a Series game.

Seaver was trying to protect a 1-0 lead on Don Clendenon's second inning homer, but Frank Robinson and Boog Powell singled with one out in the ninth.

Righthanded Brooks Robinson then hit an "opposite field" drive to right-center that looked like it could go through for a two-run double to put the Orioles ahead. But Swoboda, an erratic outfielder who often makes the difficult plays and boots the easy ones, ran to his right and made a diving catch for the second out of the inning.

Frank Robinson easily scored from third on the sacrifice fly to tie the game, 1-1, although the Mets protested in vain that Robinson had left third base before Swoboda caught the ball. Ellie Hendricks, who missed a homer by a few feet on a line drive down the left field line, then lined out the Swoboda to end the inning.

Both teams then had excellent chances as pinch-hitter Art Shamsky grounded out with two on and two out in the last of the ninth and Don Buford flied out and Paul Blair struck out with two on in the top of the 10th.

In the last of the 10th, Grote led off with a fly to short left field. But in the treacherous late-afternoon sun, it's difficult to pick up the ball and Buford first took a step back, and the ball fell in.

Met manager Gil Hodges let Al Weis bat and with first base open, he was walked on four pitches. Seaver was the next batter, but Hodges had decided that Seaver was losing his stuff and was coming out of the game regardless of whether he hit — and so he sent Martin, a lefthanded utility catcher to the plate.

Martin laid down the perfect bunt in the situation, about 15 to 20 feet from home plate along the grass on the right side. There was no chance for a play at third and it was obvious that Martin, a slow runner, had a chance to beat it out. Richert fielded the ball and fired to second baseman Dave Johnson, who was covering first.

But the bad throw hit Martin on the wrist and bounded away from Johnson and rolled to a stop between first and second. Since Johnson was covering first, there was no Oriole near the ball and Gaspar, who had annoyed the Orioles by predicting a Met sweep in four games before the Series, scored easily.

Booters meet Zips Friday, seek revenge for '68 upset

The Akron Zips bring a four-game winning streak with them Friday when they invade Spartan territory for MSU's biggest soccer game so far this season.

It will be a long time for the Spartans to forget the 4-1 beating they received in Akron last year. It broke a 33-game win streak and marked the first goals to be scored against MSU in the 1968 season, following seven consecutive shutouts.

Akron dropped its first two games this season, but bounced back to defeat its last four opponents. In their season opener, the Zips lost a 2-1 decision to Buffalo State (N.Y.) and then were defeated by Southern Illinois at Edwardsville, 3-1, in the Akron Invitational Soccer Tournament. The Zips then defeated Ohio University, 3-2, Bowling Green, 3-0, Wooster College, 3-1, and Kent State, 5-2.

Akron lost several key players at the beginning of the season due to injuries and ineligibility. Last year's goalie returned to Norway following his freshman year, leaving Akron with another freshman to take his place. Jerry Halay, from Toronto, Canada, will be tending goal against the Spartans Friday.

Young blood characterizes the Akron starting line-up since the Zips have several freshmen slated to start in their seventh game this season. Kjell Thorsrud of Norway, playing the right wing position, is the team's leading scorer with three goals and four assists. Another freshman, Gene Alfred of Nigeria, will be starting in a halfback spot.

Today is the last day for students to pick up their tickets for the MSU-Michigan game. The ticket office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Jenison.

Students are reminded they must have a validated I.D., along with their ticket to enter the MSU Stadium Saturday.

Students who do not have a ticket but want to watch the action can see it on closed circuit television Saturday at the Auditorium.

'S' girls beat 'M' in field hockey

Michigan has been defeated! The MSU women's field hockey crushed the Maize and Blue, 5-2, Wednesday at Ann Arbor. The second teams from each school played to a scoreless tie.

The Spartan women remained unbeaten when they traveled to Eastern Michigan Tuesday. They tied the Hurons, 2-2, and the second team won a close game, 1-0.

A member of the Michigan College Field Hockey Assn., the squad will play Adrian College at 4 today on Old College Field.

While Other Imports Struggle...

TOYOTA Doubles Its Sales Every Year!

Total Import Registrations* would actually show a significant decline for the first seven months of this year, if the Japanese cars were excluded.

Do you think there is a reason for this phenomenal success?

Do you attribute any significance to the fact that many TOYOTA drivers are veteran imported car enthusiasts who formerly owned several other imports?

Well, if you do, come in and see us. Drive a TOYOTA and see why TOYOTA is now 2nd in sales nationwide

*Do it during October - you may be a winner! 200,000 Top Value
Stamps along with other prizes will be given away at:*

4 WHEELS of Lansing Inc.

2200 S. Cedar St.

only minutes from the campus, go west on Mt. Hope then 2 blocks south on Cedar
