Duffy: 'Official's error cost us lowa game

By JEFF ELLIOTT

State News Sports Editor An "inexcusable" error by an official in Saturday's game with Iowa "cost us the ball game," MSU Head Coach Duffy Daugherty said Monday.

"I never was one to complain about officials' calls," Daugherty said at his weekly Monday luncheon, "but this call of an ineligible receiver downfield is simply inexcusable and unforgivable."

The play that is stirring up so much controversy occurred in the second quarter with the Spartans holding possession on the Iowa 38 yard line. Bill Triplett called a quarterback sweep around the right end, one of the Spartans' numerous play-actions patterns. The primary receiver was Steve Kough, who was to go down 10 yards, fake a block on the defensive halfback and angle to the sidelines. The play was executed to look like a run as tight end Frank Foreman blocked the end in and guard Don Baird pulled out to lead what looked like an end

The Spartan who was declared guilty of the infraction was left tackle Dave Van Elst. The official claimed that Van Elst went beyond the so called "three yard neutral zone," that an area lineman must stay within on a pass.

However, the rule pertaining to linemen downfield states that a player may fire out and hit a linebacker or a tackle and drive him as far down the field as he can, providing he stays in contact with him. As soon as he loses touch with the man, he must either drop to his knees or return to the line of scrimmage.

It was after viewing films of the controversial play that Daugherty made the

"The film clearly show that Van Elst hit his man at the line of scrimmage and drove him backwards for three or four yards before losing contact," Daugherty said. "Once he did, he immediately headed back toward the line of scrimmage."

Daugherty called it a perfectly executed play. He said there was no possible infraction of the rules that could be called. As it was, the Spartans lost the touchdown and were forced to go for a field goal two plays later which they missed.

"I can forgive an official that doesn't call a penalty," the popular Spartan coach said, "but to call something that isn't there is just inexcusable."

Duffy said the official had two comments on the play. Because the flag was not thrown until Kough was in the end zone, one of the Spartan coaches asked him why the call was late. The official replied, "It was stuck in my pocket and I couldn't get it out."

The unidentified official also gave this explanation of the play to the Spartan coaching staff. "I saw your left tackle, No. 74, leave at the snap of the ball and go straight downfield like it was a running films, is an obvious fallacy.

This, Duffy claimed after viewing the

"At the time of the incident, I had no reason to doubt the official's call because I didn't see Van Elst on the play. In fact, when they came off the field I gave him a pretty good chewing out. However, since then I have publicly apoligized to Dave in front of the team. If he did anything wrong, it's the coaching staff's fault because he blocked exactly as we told him to on that type of play."

Out in Iowa, however, they saw the play a different way.

Asst. Iowa coach Bud Tynes said they viewed the films and agreed with the official's call.

"It was very obvious that the Spartans' left tackle was downfield when he blocked our defensive tackle." When asked if it weren't legal to be downfield providing the offensive lineman stays in contact with the man, Tynes said, "I guess it's up to the official how he interprets the rule." Iowa Coach Ray Nagel also stated that the official was right in his call of the play.

"I saw the play develop," Nagel said, "and I saw their tackle downfield. The films clearly show that their No. 74 made contact with our tackle but then wandered downfield."

"Over the years I have kept quiet and protected the officials for what I thought were honest mistakes," Daugherty said. "But you'll never convince me that there should have been a penalty on that play

Congressman blocks action on voting bill

WASHINGTON (AP)--A Mississippi congressman has succeeded in stalling a bill to protect black voting rights in the South to the extent that Congress will be unable to complete action on it this year.

Using his power as chairman of the iouse Rules Committee, Democratic Rep William M. Colmer has spurned repeated requests by the leadership to clear the bill so the House can vote on it.

He now has promised to open hearings on the bill Nov. 18, so late there is no chance it could get through both the House and Senate before the session ends in December. However, House passage by then is likely.

The bill would extend the 1965 Voting Rights Act, under which 800,000 black voters have been registered, for five years. It was approved July 17 by the House Judiciary Committee.

President Nixon opposed the bill, but the administration is proposing a new voting law which would impose a nationwide ban on literacy tests and provide a uniform residency requirement for voting in presidential elections.

The present law by virtue of a formula based on past voting records is in effect only in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina, Virginia and parts of North Carolina.

Academic Council debates adding student participants

By DOLLY MAJOR State News Staff Writer

Only one motion was passed by the Academic Council Monday-that to

The council is currently reviewing the Massey Report, submitted by the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Participation in Academic Government. Much of the two-hour session was taken up by debate on the feasibility of student participation on the Academic Council, as proposed by Recommendation Four of the committee report.

The recommendation states that in addition to its dean and elected faculty representatives, each college shall be represented on the Academic Council by one voting student representative (one for each college) who is selected by students in accordance with procedures approved by the voting faculty of the college.

In addition, the committee recommended that the selection procedures should be developed by the College Advisory Council in cooperation with any existing college student organizations.

In all, this would designate 15 voting student members to the Academic Council, as opposed to the two student members sitting on the council now.

Faculty membership on the council is approximately 80 members.

Thomas Greer, professor of humanities, said that he saw no purpose in extending the student membership.

"I don't think it would make any crucial difference on this council."

C. C. Killingsworth, professor of labor and industrial relations, said that by granting voting privileges to 15 student representatives, the council would deplete its designated powers.

He said that such a policy would not be feasible if "the Academic Council is to continue as an organ of the faculty.

"The faculty would then be only one of the interests represented on the council, and this would fundamentally change the nature of the Academic Council," Killingsworth said.

He added that if this were done, the faculty, unlike any other group on campus, would be left without representation or a

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon announced Monday that 307 more military bases in the United States and abroad will be shut down or cut back for an eventual saving of about $609 million a year.

Details will be announced officially Wednesday morning.

McMillan explained that EOP had not developed any smooth working relationship with the admissions office, as yet, and said that they were still admitting who they wanted to admit. He cited one case where a black student who had acquired over 100 hours in a junior college was told to go back and accumulate more credits because of his average.

"It bothers me that MSU is patting itself on the back, when large numbers of black students are being shut out of this University," McMillan said.

The Black Liberation Front (BLF) served with McMillan's stand, saying that the University had not admitted students in keeping with its land-grant philosophy.

The executive council also charged that the University has begun a conditioning process so that when concerned black students and administrators begin to demand a restructuring of the admissions

Rosenthal believes that prices are being hiked by scalpers rather than by fans who bought tickets and now can't attend. He urges students to buy BS & T tickets for no more than the original price, making scalping a non-profit endeavor.

"The main idea is to get people not to buy scalper tickets," Rosenthal said, "because they raise the prices. The profit encourages scalpers to continue."

If scalpers can't sell at their own prices, he added, they may let tickets go for face value rather than take a loss on their speculation. This would also discourage future scalping.

Bill Campbell of Campbell's Suburban Shop said he sold very few large ticket blocks, but many blocks of eight and ten.

Campbell suspected that some people were buying for scalping after the word got around about how fast The Association sold out.

Marshall Music manager, Tom Westgate, was quite surprised by The Association and Blood, Sweat and Tears sell-outs.

He said that it seemed like buyers were getting tickets for their friends or fraternity brothers, because they came in with lists.

"It didn't look like they were snatching up tickets to sell later," Westgate noted. (please turn to page 9)

Medical exam need for students studied

By LARRY MOLNAR State News Staff Writer

MSU has not yet established a policy which requires annual medical examinations or TB tests for student cafeteria help as it has for full-time

Presently, regular employes of the University are required to undergo an annual medical check-up, including a chest X-ray, while student part-time employes are not examined at all.

Jack Breslin, executive vice president of MSU, said that the situation will be discussed to see what action can be taken.

"My initial reaction is that testing and examining all student employes would be a gigantic task to accomplish," he said. "I think that it is a good idea and, if practical and necessary, the policy should be changed to include students in the required medical examinations."

Emery G. Fostor, manager of Dormitories and Food Services, said that such a program would be an unnecessary expense.

"Because the incidence of TB in this age group is so small and testing provides no substantial protection, we feel that such a program would not be worthwhile," he said. He also felt that for this same reason periodical examinations would serve little purpose.

"The reason we require this for the older, full-time help is that this age group is more susceptible to diseases of this type."

Foster said that elsewhere in the county examinations are not required. "It wouldn't do us much good to require tests on our employes here at the University when a student can go to a restaurant across the street and eat in a place where there is no exam required," he said. "Unless this is a fairly universal program, it won't do any one institution much good to test its employes."

Dr. James S. Feurig, director of Olin Health Center, said that the health center has made recommendations on the policy.

"I think that the main problem is to work out the inconsistencies in the program. If full-time employes are going to be tested, it follows that student employes probably should be too," he

"At the present time, we are trying to work out some policy. What is needed is means by which the Personnel Dept. can notify us that a new student has been hired and that an examination is required," Feurig said.

Virginia Mallnan, recognized TB authority, said that she would support a policy requiring that all food handlers be given annual TB checkups, not only because they were food handlers but because it is advisable for everyone to undergo

EDITORIALS We love you Phillip; oh, yes we do-o-o!

State Rep. Phillip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, of Sharma fame, has struck another blow for correct action by arranging the firing of Mike O'Laughlin for the heinous crime of independent action.

The hapless O'Laughlin was sacked from his job as an asst. postmaster for having the -- in Pittenger's opinion -- incredibly bad taste to take part in the wholesale anarchy of the Oct. 15 war moratorium. So subversive was O'Laughlin's actions that he was actually seen by Pittenger standing in front of the Capitol in the company of such notorious agitators as Walter Adams and Mrs. Blanche Martin.

There were, of course, other reasons for O'Laughlin's dismissal. It seems that he had undergone a striking moral decay from the time when he was a House page -- indeed, he has grown a most un-American collection of hair on his face and has been reported to have been wearing "wild" costumes. Since the post office is a bastion and support of our great nation, Pittenger's action was undoubtedly motivated by an earnest desire to keep our mails pure. Pittenger defends his move on the grounds that O'Laughlin was inefficient "and because of conflict with classes." Of course, Postmaster Leland Galt, O'Laughlin's supervisor, did say that he was competent and "quick," but what does a lowly postmaster know as opposed to a state representative anyway? It is even possible that Galt is some kind of subversive himself, and no doubt super-Phil would get him bagged,

A second question is raised by this incident. The road to postmasterhood and page and all those other jobs is paved with political patronage. On this premise, House Sergeant-at-Arms Frank Selmer supports Pittenger's actions because, after all, the personnel officer has the right to change employes as often as he wants.

too, if he could.

O'Laughlin

Patronage is really a wonderful thing because it does so much to build the American ideal of self-reliance. If you want the job, you go around and be a good fellow and keep your nose clean, and if you get it together just right, then somebody will put in the good word for you. Having gained success by the sweat of your brow alone, you may feel secure in your position -provided you are a robot. People always wonder why there is so much inefficiency in bureaucracies, and now we may have an answer -- the imaginative individual, the man who is true to himself and who wants to take an active part in the events of the nation and the world, gets fired.

We thank you, Pittenger, for showing us the true and honest road to success. Thanks to your object lesson, we now know the real meaning of freedom and democracy and the Protestant ethic. The only thing we do not understand is how one makes the transition from a patronage employe who knows his place to that of an autocratic and self-righteous position like, say, a state representative?

Playing number games with the Massey Report

In a short time, the Academic Council will initiate discussion and ask for comments regarding the Massey Report's 14th recommendation. It is at this juncture where the real battle for adequate student representation will be fought.

The Massey Report suggested that a "Teaching Committee, to be composed of an equal number of faculty and students," be established within each department. This Teaching Committee would be able to "advise the department (school) on procedures for evaluating teaching, and on ways and means of improving both undergraduate and graduate teaching." In addition, the committee could evaluate and submit a report to the department on the teaching ability of any individual who is "being considered for appointment, retention, promotion or tenure." But, as noted, this committee can only "advise" the department and hence does not have the final departmental say on certain faculty and other educational employes. This job is given to the departmental advisory (nolicy or decision-making

The Massey Report recommends that the advisory committee "have an appropriate number of student members to provide for significant student representation." The choice of words allows for many interpretations and, perhaps, was a deliberate effort at tokenism.

It is fine to give students equal representation on the Teaching Committees, but the real power is wielded by the departmental advisory committees. These committees (and not the Teaching Committees) can bring the name of a tenured faculty member before the Faculty Tenure Committee. And being all-important bodies, they must have at least student representation to equal that of faculty members.

Hopefully, the Academic Council will realize that the Massey Report may not have considered essential aspects of academic government (such as equal student-faculty representation on departmental advisory committees). It is the council's responsibility to implement this plan.

HOLDEN HALL

Initiates Black culture room

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the text of a statement by the Committee for Racial Understanding, Holden Hall. It was written following last Tuesday's events in the Holden Hall cafeteria.

A great many false and inaccurate rumors have been circulated about the incident last Tuesday in Holden Hall cafeteria. We at Holden Hall feel that we are in the best position to resolve the pernicious state of ambiguity created by a lack of hard facts. Only the facts can cause the mass of unnecessary controversy to wither away.

The cause of the demonstration was not merely in Holden, it was, and is, campuswide. Racial tensions have built up to the explosive point. They provided tinder for the fight on Monday, and that fight Monday provided the spark which set off the powder keg of racial mistrust.

Well, what did happen last Tuesday in Holden? It was not a riot! It was a demonstration. The whites were too confused to riot, and the blacks used internal discipline to try to prevent violence. If this black restraint had not been present, had this not been just a demonstration, there would have been blood spilled and the news media would have gone wild listing statistics.

Then what was the purpose of the demonstration? It was not to starve the whites. The whites simply suffered the slight inconvenience of crossing the street to eat at Wilson. The purpose was not to close down the cafeteria. It was open the next day and has been open since. The purpose of the demonstration was, obviously, to DEMONSTRATE. The blacks wanted to let us know about racial discrimination on this campus. It is a sick fact that it took a dramatic takeover to shake the white students and the administration out of their lethargy.

Holden Hall has been shaken out of its lethargy. The supposed victims are now the first group on campus that has come out firmly in support of racial understanding, not backlash. We intend to take steps toward achieving racial understanding by initiating a black culture room in Holden. The existence of this room will give the white students a chance to learn about black culture. At the same time, students of both races will get a chance to know each other as individuals. To further this idea of understanding, we plan to have the black and white students build it together.

Some ideas have already surfaced as to what this room should contain: a library of black literature, recordings of black music, a general atmosphere of black culture, and most of all, real live people who want to get to know each other.

We strongly urge residence hall groups to follow this example, thus striving to open new lines of communication. And we would like to suggest that students don't stop with the idea of a black culture room. We feel that we must wake up to the fact that racial discrimination is continuing to exist in our midst; and we must work together to promote a consciousness of unity and responsibility among the members of our community, with the realization that coming together is a beginning, keeping together is progress and working together is success; for if we rest,

BARNEY WHITE Opiate: the religion of the masses

Religion is the opiate of the masses. Opiate is the religion of the masses. Mass is the opiate of religion.

Everybody in their own unique way is trying to get stoned so that they can avoid the act of living.

What do you do when you can't handle the straight life with its sundered contradictions and paradoxes? You become a hip, maybe, because the path less traveled contains purity and innocence and truth. Right? Wrong. At the end of the path lies the same old orge's cave. You bop down the street resplendent in love beads and poetry and--in mid-stride--you look down and realize that there is really nothing under your feet--just like when you were a straight cat.

Why? Because hippydom doesn't really have any positive groundings but, rather, is built on negatives. It is not constructed on blocks of truth so much as upon negations of normative society--it is the antithesis, the mirror image of middle-class America and, as such, shares in equal measure all its faults. If there is no ground underfoot in the greater world, then in the mirror fantasy land there is none either.

And you stand in awful suspension with your long hair blowing and sense, hanging above your head, the same cosmic question mark--where am I, and why am I? Perhaps, in a frenzy to escape the horrible quandary, you join the ghost ranks of the twice-alienated and in frustration partake of the opiates of hippydom-lost--hemp or the greater stoner, revolution. Dazed and made insensitive by your chosen intoxicant, you don't have to hassle with the everpresent maelstrom of Perhaps, on the other hand, having rejected the looking-glass world, you plunge back onto the "real" plane--not to find meaning so much as to take advantage of the legal social narcotics that exist there. You trim your beard and/or join Mensa and/or become Secretary of the International Club and/or Chief Justice of the Student Traffic Court and/or a State News phoney. You make yourself so busy that you don't have to look at life and living; you don't ever have to be alone with your mind and your doubts. And you slide into your job and niche in society and so live out your allotted years in the warm numbness of oblivion.

Yet, even so, every so often in the middle of the night you wake up and look down and realize that there is still nothing under your feet and you decide not to get up and get that drink of water after all.

The answer, if there is one, lies in rising above the finitude of social nitch and the quest for solidity of existance. You must become a transcendent man. You must remove yourself from the eddies and currents and backwaters of life and attempt to obtain an overview of the entire stream. You must become the common denominator, the universal solvent, the all-permeating ether.

You must escape limit and become functional in all places--smoking with the hippies and drinking with frats, writing poetry and working for the college presses, going to football games and marching for peace. You must get it all together and do whatever turns you on and, thereby, become clique and in-group free--for the walls that men construct only make the numbing cold of insecurity worse.

There is no underlying concrete of existance--reality lies in the stream and not the river bed. The meaning of life is contained in the active force of living--it is a self-contained entity. The energy is the thing, not the vehicle. In sum, there are two questions which may be asked about living: "why?" and "why not?"--and the former is irrelevent.

Bennett editorial misguided

Your editorial of Oct. 22 concerning Sen. Wallace Bennett's attempt to amend the Firearms Control Act of 1968 to eliminate the registration of purchases of .22 rimfire, rifle and shotgun ammunitions shows a shocking ignorance both of the history of this legislation and the issues involved. Such ignorance on the part of those who would attempt to influence the opinions of others is clearly unconscionable.

The original bill did not call for the registration of firearms; it was fairly similar to what finally became law last December. Attempts to amend this bill to require registration were decisely defeated in both houses of Congress. The requirement that ammunition purchasers meet age and certain other requirements was added almost as an afterthought in spite of Treasury Dept. warnings of its uselessness.

When the Treasury Dept. lawyers interpreted the act's ammunition provisions, they drew up the current purchase registration requirements. Many of the Congressmen who had supported the act claimed that the will of Congress had been violated since the ammunition registration requirements were de facto registration; many types of ammunition fit one type of firearm only, and a purchaser of such ammunition may be presumed to own such a firearm. As a result, Sen. Bennett and others introduced bills to amend the Firearms Control Act.

This bill was sent to the Senate Finance Committee rather than the Judiciary Committee, of which the Juvenile Delinquency Subcommittee is a part, for the same reasons that civil rights bills were kept out of the hands of Sen. Eastland's Judiciary Committee. The intent was to prevent Sen. Dodd from bottling up this legislation interminably.

It is highly doubtful that such legislation would either prevent crimes or aid in the solution of them. It is impossible to trace ammunition found at the scene of a crime to a purchaser, and false identification will enable a criminal to purchase ammunition just as easily as it will enable a person under 21 years of age to purchase alcoholic beverages. So much ammunition is sold each year, that it would be impossible to check dealers' records. For these and other reasons, the Treasury Dept. has admitted

These regulations are a burden to both dealers and ammunition purchasers. They at least quadruple the time a dealer must spend on a sale, and many sportsmen find them to be a nuisance.

The fear that registration of firearms may lead to the confiscation of all or most of them is reasonable. This has happened in a number of foreign countries, including some democratic ones. There is also the recent proposal by former President Johnson's commission on violence that roughly 90 per cent of the privately-owned handguns in the United States be confiscated. When fears are supported by evidence, they cannot be legitimately classified as paranoid.

Laws which do not accomplish the ends for which they were passed and which do burden citizens needlessly should be repealed. It is not the wisdom of Bennett's bill and the mentality of those who support it that should be severely questioned; it is the mentality and authors of this editorial that are suspect.

Fight male chauvinism

So the newest word discovered by SDS is chauvinism, specifically male chauvinism, which, according to the State News, refers to women being oppressed by their bras! The State News, as usual, deliberately distorted an SDS position. The State News printed an editorial on male chavinism used to discredit SDS and to distort a political position which was presented to them in a "Point of View," which they did not

Chauvinism, very simply, means excessive and unreasonable pride in one's own race, sex or group and disdain for other races, sex or groups. Male chauvinism places men in a superior position to women. SDS is not denying that there are differences between men and women, but many of the differences that are believed to exist are artificial. The SDS program against male chauvinism is not against the bra nor for sexual liberation, which does not lead to State senator, social change or freedom. Rather, SDS is against the false divisions perpetrated by the media, education and the moneyed class who controls these institutions.

All forms of the media and education portray women as frail, unthinking creatures who need the guidance of clear-headed men in order to do any meaningful or useful work at all. A woman who joins a seminar or group discussion must fight to have her ideas considered. During the early days of SDS, women would walk into the SDS office and be met with--"Can you type?" Can you do busy work while the men give you the ideas? She is the weaker sex, so her ideas are weaker. This attitude is evident throughout our society. Industrial bosses use the concept of woman as inferior in order to keep their wages low. Many participated in the SDS Work-In and, in one factory that employed us, women were hired at $1.60, black and third world men at $1.70 and white men at $1.80--all for the same job!

The priest was jailed Oct. 17 in Milwaukee on a finding by Judge F. Ryan Duffy Jr. that Father Groppi had violated his probation by participating in a demonstration in the Wisconsin Assembly Chamber last month.

The white priest had been sentenced to six months in jail in February 1968 for resisting arrest during a 1967 open housing march. The sentence was staved then and Father Groppi, after paying a $500 fine, was placed on probation for two

Surprising Kansas St. hits Top 10

NEW YORK (UPI)-Kansas State, which guaranteed its first .500 season in 15 years by upsetting Oklahoma Saturday, made a spectacular entrance into the elite of college football Monday.

The Widcats, now 5-1, walloped Oklahoma 59-21, the first they have beaten the Sooners in 35 years. The victory, ich gave Kansas State undisputed possession of first place in big eight, brought the Wildcats 33 points from the 35-member ited Press International Board of Coaches, good for the No. 10 king in the nation.

Ohio State, rolling relentlessly toward a second consecutive ational title, maintained its top ranking, receiving 34 first place tes and one second place ballot for 349 points.

Texas, which received the other first place vote, remained second with 306 points while Tennessee and Arkansas retained their No. 3 and No. 4 rankings.

Penn State moved into sixth place, followed by Louisiana State, Southern California, UCLA, Florida and Kansas State.

Georgia moved up to the No. 11 ranking, followed by Notre Dame, Wyoming, Missouri, Purdue, Stanford and Colorado and Oklahoma, tied for 17th and last.

Kansas State, which has not had a winning season since it compiled a 7-3 mark in 1954, has already equalled its victory total for the last four years combined. The Wildcats won four games last season, one the season before and were winless in 1965

"It was a two touchdown mistake," Duffy said. "Had we scored, our defense would have been pretty fired up and I think we would have taken a 10-3 lead at the half, instead of trailing by six points."

Daugherty also had comments on the 16-minute fourth quarter the two teams played Saturday.

"There is no excuse for this either," Duffy said, "because the official timekeeper keeps a separate stopwatch next to him throughout the game just in case something happens to the scoreboard clock. It's his duty to take a time out and correct the situation."

In an article in an Iowa paper Monday morning, someone asked the Iowa scorekeeper about the incident.

"Yes, the game was 61 minutes long," the unidentified timer said. "The error apparently came in the fourth quarter because my watch and the scoreboard coincided at the WEST end of the third quarter."

The Iowa timekeeper had a stopwatch which ran from 0 through 60 and stopped it at the normal times. However, to check closely to see if the two times coincided he would have had to subtract the remaining time left in the game from 60 and see if

Kansas State, with only a 17-14 loss to Penn State marring its record, is setting its sights on its first post-season competition in Ohio State posted its fifth consecutive "easy" victory by smashing Illinois, 41-0. The Buckeyes' lowest margin of victory thus far this season has been 27 points in a 41-14 triumph over Washington and a 34-7 win over Minnesota.

Texas blanked Rice 31-0 to boost its record to 5-0. Third-ranked Tennessee was idle. Arkansas humbled Wichita State 52-14 and Penn State trounced Ohio University, 42-3.

Louisiana State edged Auburn, ranked 18th last week, 21-20 for its sixth victory without a defeat, while Southern California beat Georgia Tech 29-18 and previously unbeaten UCLA was tied by Stanford 20-20. Florida boosted its record to 6-0 by beating Former Spartan player Orhan Enuston put the Internationals on top with a goal early in the first half, but the Eagles tied up the game several minutes later with a penalty shot. At halftime the score was 2-1, as George Brander scored for the Internationals seven minutes before the end of the second period.

Although the Eagles threatened several times in the second half, the Lansing Club recovered the offensive and Peter Openkelder put the team ahead. George Brander knocked in his second goal of the game with an assist from Osama Sheikh six minutes before the game San Francisco 3 1 .750 1/2

The Internationals' defense, sparked by former MSU star, Stan Stelmaschenko, held the Eagles' offense to 12 shots, compared to Lansing's 37. Tending goal for the Internationals was Adam

Spartans bleak after tough loss

Tom Kutschinski stood leaning against the dreary, white cement side of the Iowa Stadium, staring at the ground. He didn't change his position for at least 10 minutes. It took him that long to eat his apple.

Chances are he was mulling over in his mind the punt he dropped deep in MSU territory that set up an Iowa field goal--and not the brilliant punt return he made later to set up the Spartan's go-ahead touchdown.

That's the way it is when you lose a football game by one

Each player can only think of the one play he made or didn't make that could have been the difference between victory and

Down in the dingy, damp dungeon that Iowa calls a locker room, there was an eery silence. Someone asked Ron Curl about his fourth blocked punt of the season.

"Big deal," the huge Spartan tackle said in an unusuallly soft voice. "Every time I block a punt we lose."

Brad McLee hobbled painfully on a pair of crutches up the steps of the bus, helped by Bill Dawson. The young safety suffered a sprained ankle andhad to sit out the agonizing second

Following him onto the bus was defensive coach Henry Bullough, wanting to know why nobody had gotten any ice on Brad's ankle. I don't think he ever got any either because the bus Gordie Serr, the offensive line coach, slumped down in his seat on the team bus and stared straight ahead. I don't think he changed his expression until the bus pulled into the Cedar Rapids Airport some 25 minutes later.

His mind was undoubtedly riveted on one play. The one that ultimately made the difference, when Dave Van Elst was penalized for being down field too far on a pass play.

The game films seem to prove that Van Elst was the victim of a gross error in officiating, but at the time Serr could only wonder what happened.

In front of Serr, across the aisle, sat an unhappy andextremely disaappointed Duffy Daugherty, along with his backfield coach George Paterno.

All they could do was shake their heads and wonder. What if Highsmith had held his block a little longer." Or, "why did the defensive back react that way." They checked over the play-by-play sheets and counted each play.

But in the end all they could do was shake their heads and Third-string quarterback Dan Werner, who hasn't seen a minute of action all season, stared straight through the front window of the bus. Although he hasn't played, he felt the loss as much as anyone.

There there was Steve Kough, the flanker who came out of nowhere to become the Spartan's most reliable pass catcher. He scored once on a long pass play but had the other one--a 38-yarder called back because of the illegal receiver penalty.

Kough, a tough kid, at 5-foot 10, looked like he lost his best friend. When the plane headed in Lansing, Steve still wore the same pained expression.

Football is a team game. On the way to Iowa on Friday they were a happy, joking bunch of college guys. They were loose and if the're were any nerves at all, they didn't show.

But on the way back home it was different. They all tasted defeat together. Not only the players and coaches, but the managers, the newsmen and the other representatives from East

Now the pressure is really on the Spartans. They have to forget the two bungling plays by the officials, (the penalty and the 16-minute final quarter) and bounce back.

Since Indiana got beat by Winconsin it looks like just maybe--if you really stretch your imagination-- two losses might be a ticket to the Rose Bowl. It's a slim hope to hand your football fortunes on but it's still a hope.

This weekend it's homecoming here. The Spartan's have a golden opportunity to show everyone what they're really made

'Freaks,' 'Blue Angel'--oldies, but goodies

Beal Film Group presented two films Thursday night which, over the past 30 years, have become world-famous: "Freaks," directed by Tod Browning; and "The Blue Angel," directed by Josef von Sternberg, starring Marlene Dietrich and Emil Jannings.

In the pre-sound days, Tod Browning proved himself a master producer of horror films: his best two are "London after Midnight," a 1925 vampire flick; and a 1927 version of "Dracula," starring Bela Lugosi in an over-staged, but technically excellent production. Browning quickly adapted to the sound film and, in 1932, made his masterpiece, "Freaks."

Technically, "Freaks" is very reminiscent of its times: the performers are still hampered by

More importantly, he questions our judgements of retribution and "normalcy."

The film is in true thriller form, loaded with suspense, stormy nights and bad guys (and gals); and like any "horror" story worth its salt, it demands a strong stomach.

State News Reviewer

The Swedes have long been known for their liberal attitude toward sex -- an attitude which has caused up-turned noses in many parts of the world. When England and the Legion of Decency banned "The Doll," however, they did not do so because of risque scenes, but rather because of the implications of the subject matter.

It is not a new story -- a person gives love to a doll until it comes alive -- you can find this theme from "Pinnochio" to the classical ballet. But in this interpretation, it becomes so totally, frighteningly human as to become overwhelming. It could easily have been even better, but, unfortunately, Lars Forssell insists on. writing down to his audience, hammering subtleties which should be unexpressed into tedious dialogue.

The photography is the best part of the film. Using the simple black and white medium, Ake Dahlquist does not photograph, he paints. His long shots are beautifully composed, their stark reality softened by a soft focus. He plays his lights expertly on the contours of the human body, giving life to a statue and a statue
