Molotov cocktail causes $1,700 fire at Olds Hall

By PAUL HANSON
State News Staff Writer

A misguided attempt at pigeon killing or poorly aimed attack on the School of Criminal Justice resulted in a $1,700 fire Wednesday morning in Olds Hall when a Molotov cocktail was thrown through a ground floor window.

The damaged room is used as a pigeon teaching lab for Psychology 311 and 312, Animal Learning. Olds Hall is shared by the Psychology Dept. and the School of Criminal Justice. The heads of the two departments have speculated on the motive of the attack, but no definite reason has been established. Lawrence O'Kelly, chairman of the Psychology Dept., said he supposed the bottle could have been thrown for any of three reasons.

It could have been a chance accident, he said, or the action of a disgruntled psychology student or a misguided attack on the Criminal Justice School.

"We have no reason to believe that the pigeon lab was the target," he said. "It's a pretty innocent place."

Arthur Brandstatter, director of the Criminal Justice School, said he did not know about the fire until he got to his office that morning.

"I smelled smoke," he said, "and my secretary told me about the fire."

He said he did not believe the missile was aimed at his department.

"It would be pretty hard to throw something up to the fifth floor and break a window," he said.

There is some speculation among university personnel that the attack, if it were directed at the former School of Police Administration, was in connection with a student-sponsored conference on law enforcement being held on campus today and Friday.

Brandstatter said he did not think there was a connection, because "this is a student organized affair, and they're having some pretty liberal people here."

The fire was discovered and extinguished by graduate students and maintenance workers shortly after it started at 12:30 a.m.

Local police and the state fire marshal are currently investigating the incident, but they have no leads.

Richard Bernitt, director of the MSU Dept. of Public Safety, has released to the press only that damage was minimal, and that fragments of the bottle were recovered.

Policy change combats discrimination of sexes

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

President Wharton announced Wednesday a change in the University's residency policy for married women to eliminate discrimination on the basis of sex.

Wharton also announced plans for an "affirmative action program" to combat sex discrimination. The program will be directed by the Equal Opportunity Programs (EOP) office.

Beginning spring term, wives of out-of-state students will be eligible for enrollment at the lower in-state tuition level after six months of residency.

The decision on women's residency coming from the Out-of-State Fees Committee calls for elimination of Section II-C of the University's regulations.

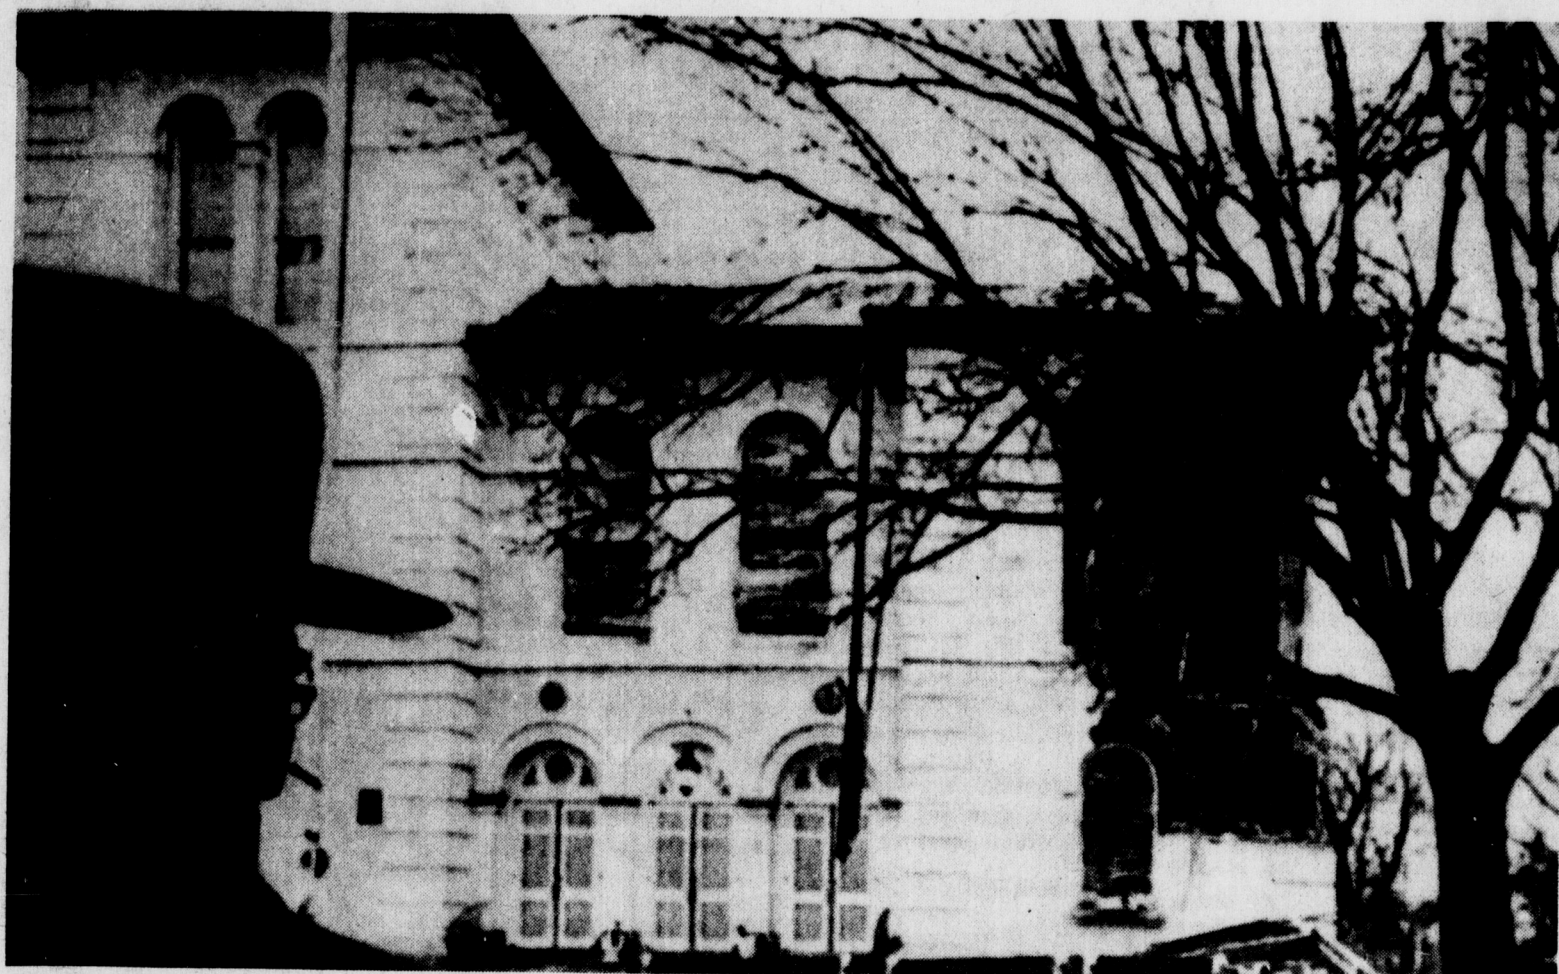

Section II-C requires that the residence of a married woman be the same as her husband's, except when a Michigan resident marries a non-resident and continues her enrollment on a continuous basis.

"By eliminating Section II-C, we will have created a much fairer, more equitable policy for married women on campus," Wharton said.

With the new change, if a husband is admitted as an out-of-state student, his wife can be admitted as an in-state student after residing in Michigan for six months and being considered as having met the Michigan six-months residency requirement. The wife must be at least 21.

Police suspect white woman in Maryland courthouse blast

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP) — Police said Wednesday they were seeking a white woman in connection with an explosion at a courthouse where militant black H. Rap Brown once was scheduled to stand trial.

Meanwhile, the second victim of an explosion that destroyed a car at Bel Air 24 hours before the courthouse blast was tentatively identified as William Herman Payne, a former associate of Brown.

Another Brown friend, Ralph Featherstone, 31, had been identified earlier as the other man killed in the car Monday night.

Dr. Warner U. Spitz, Maryland chief deputy medical examiner, said the identification of Payne was made through FBI records from a fingerprint on part of a hand found in the debris of the car.

A birth certificate verification, bank account card and Navy certificate of service bearing Payne's name was found in the wreckage. He was born in Covington, Ky., Dec. 28, 1943. His mother is living in Cincinnati.

However, Spitz indicated there was a discrepancy in the identification.

"The identification is as good as any," said Spitz, "but it does not match the dental records of the Navy personnel records in St. Louis."

"I feel certain that we have to trust the FBI records, but we still will continue to conduct tests."

Payne, 26, Brown and Featherstone had worked together on the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Immediately after announcing in Cambridge that the woman was being sought, Smith flew across Chesapeake Bay to Bel Air, where Brown's trial on charges of arson and inciting to riot was shifted.

Brown did not show up for the trial Tuesday and his whereabouts have been a mystery since. His presence at the trial Tuesday had not been required. The trial was postponed until next Monday.

State police emphasized that they have no one in custody.

Earlier reports attributed to an aide of Gov. Marvin Mandel that a woman had been taken into custody were erroneous.

Smith also said police believe the woman being sought did not live in Cambridge, where a 30-foot side of the courthouse was blown out Tuesday night.

Brown was indicted in Cambridge in 1967 after a July night when 16 buildings were leveled in the black section. Damage was estimated at $300,000.

Brown had earlier addressed a black gathering.

He was charged with arson and inciting others to commit arson and to riot. Transfer of his trial 70 miles across the bay was contested up to the Supreme Court and upheld.

William M. Kunstler, Brown's lawyer, said he will seek dismissal of the case when court reconvenes Monday in Bel Air.

"It is absolutely and dangerously ridiculous to continue trials like this," he said. "They are bound to provoke people, white or black."

He said he felt that "a pattern has developed and there may be more and more incidents," if the trial resumes.

Unruly students cause disturbance at WMU

KALAMAZOO (UPI) — Police were called onto the campus of Western Michigan University Wednesday afternoon when unruly students, demanding action on a new student body constitution, blocked a street running through the campus.

Snowballs and pieces of asphalt were thrown by several students crouched behind a school bus as police moved in to disperse a group of more than 150 students blocking West Michigan Ave. At least 15 persons were taken into custody, but police would not say if they would be charged.

Tear gas was used by police to clear the student union. After the arrests, police moved off the campus while a smaller group of students continued to mill around and block traffic on the thoroughfare.

The demonstration was called to protest an alleged lack of action on the part of the school administration to implement a new student body constitution which would permit students more control over their activities.

Dr. James Miller, president of the 18,000-student body school, used a bullhorn in an attempt to get the demonstrators to disperse. He warned the demonstrators they were blocking the entrances to Sangren Hall, the student center and the school's administration building.

Miller told the students that peaceful protests would be allowed, but warned police would be called to the campus of demonstrators became unruly.

Paul Greffeth, vice president for student affairs, said the new constitution drawn up by the students last month "abrogated the authority of the president, the faculty Senate and the administration."

Petitioning

Petitioning closes Friday for district representative candidates in the ASMSU ring election. All petitions must be turned to ASMSU by 5 p.m. Each candidate must have at least 75 signatures have his name placed on the ballot.

Vote-at-18 plan survives tabling attempt in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leader Mike Mansfield's proposal to lower the voting age to 18 survived a key test in the Senate late Wednesday after opponents sharply challenged its constitutionality.

By a vote of 62 to 21 the Senate defeated a motion of Sen. Russell B. Long, La., to table and thus kill the Montana senator's amendment to a bill to extend the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The big margin by which the tabling motion was rejected indicated that the amendment will be adopted when it can be brought to a vote. It would extend the franchise to an estimated 10 million to 11 million young people.

Opponents of Mansfield's proposal uniformly endorsed the vote for 18-year-olds but argued that it could not be constitutionally brought about by congressional action.

The opposition contends only a constitutional amendment or action by states could legally change the voting age, now generally 21.

Long suddenly moved to table after a vote on the amendment was delayed by a series of amendments offered by Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala.

At the start of today's session Mansfield accepted a modification proposed by Sen. Marlow W. Cook, R-Ky., so that the amendment, if adopted, would not apply to any election prior to Jan. 1, 1971.

Cook said the purpose was to allow time for court tests of the constitutionality of the measure and avoid challenges to the validity of any elections held this year.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said in supporting Mansfield's amendment that he feared ratification of a constitutional amendment lowering the voting age would take too long.

Student questions brother's death in Laos

By KEN KRELL
Editorial Editor

An MSU student charged Wednesday that her brother, an Air Force major, was killed in hostile action in Laos in 1962.

Shirley Krull, Owosso senior, expressed doubts about the Pentagon's version of the death of Major Milton Donald Britton. She had questioned the nature of his work in Laos.

Britton, an advisor to the Laotian Air Force, was reportedly killed when the Air Force plane in which he was a passenger hit a stump near an airfield at Xien Dat, Laos, according to Pentagon reports.

The sister contends that a Colonel, sent by the Air Force with the body, expressed doubts that the plane hit a stump. He charged that the plane was likely destroyed by either enemy ground fire, or by a bomb planted on the plane.

The major was stationed in Vientiane, Laos, as a member of the Military Advisory Group to the Laotian Air Force.

The plane he was aboard also contained an Army Sergeant, Barney Kaatz, a pilot and a co-pilot, all of whom were also killed. Air America is a private airline engaged in supplying the anti-communist Meo tribesmen in remote areas.

The government claims they carry only rice and other relief supplies, but Pathet Lao forces have charged that they are also dropping weapons. The Air America organization is also reportedly financed by the CIA and staffed by American Air Force pilots.

"The government tried hard to cover the incident up when they brought him home. They'll be even less happy to talk about it now," the sister said.

A letter sent by the major to his wife prior to his death instructed her not to open the casket if he was ever killed in Laos and returned in a closed coffin. As a consequence, positive identification of the body was never made by the family.

Before being sent to Laos, Major Britton trained Air Force pilots in Baltimore, Maryland, Nellis Air Force Base, Las Vegas and in Canada for the Canadian Air Force.

"We thought he was doing the same job in Laos, but he never could say what he was doing," Mrs. Krull said. "He had full security clearance. What he couldn't tell us (about his activities) was as important as what he could."

Mrs. Krull charged the Air Force with shrouding the facts in official statements and reports in an attempt to cover the fact that he may have died from ground fire.

"Don (Major Britton) was a jet gunnery instructor. He taught aces. I had ridden with him when he landed in stump ridden fields. Besides, we knew from letters he sent us that a lot of other aircraft were landing at the same field," Mrs. Krull said.

The major was not receiving combat pay, nor did his wife receive compensation for a serviceman killed in action. The widow, Margaret Britton, tried unsuccessfully to receive the educational benefits for their son to which a survivor of a serviceman killed in action is entitled.

The Air Force would not allow Mrs. Britton to be in Laos when her husband was stationed there, so she moved to Bangkok to be closer to him.

The widow said, however, that she "would not say anything to discredit either her late husband or any other servicemen. She attributed his death to the Air Force reports — that he was killed when the Air America transport plane hit a stump during a take-off near Xien Dat, Laos."

"I have no doubt that this is exactly what happened. I am unaware of any coverup or anything," Mrs. Britton said.

Britton's sister, however, believes otherwise.

"The officer at the time of his death had an official statement. He would not expand on it or explain the statement. I could not talk to him about my brother's job or how he died," Mrs. Krull said.

"In 1962 my brother wasn't killed in military combat according to the Air Force. All I kept hearing was 'this is the official Air Force information on this,' but they wouldn't say if he was blown to bits, struck down or what."

Mrs. Krull waited until now to discuss the matter because "there had never been such definite statements to contend before now." She was referring to recent statements on Laos by the government.

Sen. Fulbright hits AID-CIA collusion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright said Wednesday he thinks it is obvious a relationship exists in Laos between the Agency for International Development and the Central Intelligence Agency.

"If it is true it is only another sign warning that we are in over our heads," Fulbright said.

AID official, Robert H. Nooter, agreed to supply the Senate Foreign Relations Committee with a memorandum on any such relationship, after stating "Our guidance on these matters does preclude us from affirming or denying" in public reports that AID serves as a front for the CIA in Laos.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., defended President Nixon's handling of the situation in Laos and Vietnam.

Bellmon noted Muskie's call for renewed efforts for negotiations including a firm U.S. withdrawal plan linked to "an informal arrangement regarding the withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces." The Oklahoman then said, "This is just a prefabricated excuse to cut and run out on our commitments and on our allies."

Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, said President Nixon's statement on Laos last Friday "represents a massive effort by officials of the defense establishment of the United States to deceive the American people."

The question of the relationship between AID and the CIA was raised by Fulbright at a hearing on Nooter's nomination to be assistant AID administrator for Vietnam. He has been deputy assistant administrator for the rest of

Cambodians hit N. Viet embassies

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Young protesters attacked the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese embassies in Phnom Penh Wednesday, burning official cars and throwing papers from the windows. Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the chief of state, said in a telegram from Paris that he felt "deep sadness" over the incidents. The prince, who had been planning a tour of Communist countries, said he would immediately return home.

In the telegram, addressed to his mother, Sihanouk said: "I am sure that this grave event was sought and organized by individuals aiming to irrevocably destroy Cambodia's friendship with the Socialist bloc and throw our country into the arms of a capitalist imperialist power."

Southeast Asia, including Laos. Asked then about AID's relations with Air America and Continental Air Services, which have been described as CIA fronts, Nooter said the two lines perform various services for AID including transportation of rice to Laotian refugees.

"These individuals attach greater importance to their personal and clan interests than to the future of the fatherland and to that of the people. My absence was used for these designs."

CONSERVATIVE PATH

Burger trying to guide court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The evidence piles up weekly that Warren E. Burger intends to take the Supreme Court down a different path.

The chief justice has not been successful so far. He does not command a majority.

But he keeps trying. And he may succeed some day soon — particularly if he gains G. Harold Carswell to help him.

Burger already was known as a law- and - order judge and as a critic of "judicial nitpicking" when President Nixon put him on the bench last year.

He has done nothing to damage that reputation in five months as Earl Warren's successor.

In three legal areas — obscenity, apportionment and picketing — he is building a nucleus for retrenchment from the Warren years.

And in all important respects he has been cautious and conservative — exactly what Nixon and Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell had hoped.

In the handful of important criminal cases decided by the court so far Burger has consistently taken the hard line. Typical was his dissent last month as the court disapproved federal agents' breaking into a locked storeroom on Long Island to see if a caterer was refilling liquor bottles.

"Inspection authorization would be meaningless," Burger wrote, "if the agents could not open lockers, cabinets, closets, and storerooms and indeed pry open cases of liquor to see the contents."

To Burger this obviously makes good common sense, an attribute which he feels judges do not exercise as often as they should.

It also is in tune with the administration's legislative desire to acquire for police greater powers to conduct searches.

When the opportunity has opened to drop a case from the docket on technical grounds Burger has taken it. He would rather delay until a later day a ruling that could alter the shape of the law.

In speeches, meanwhile, the chief justice habitually laments the burden that appeals put on the courts. He has described most of them as without merit and suggested a convicted prisoner should be entitled to no more than one prompt full hearing.

His pleas for reform have been restricted primarily to a need to bring prisons and the administration of courts up to date.

In dealing with school desegregation, Burger has emphasized caution and a need to understand the problems school boards face.

Warren's court rarely paused to dwell on a specific school situation. And when it did, its overwhelming concern was with vindicating the rights of black children to attend integrated schools.

Burger never has suggested these rights don't emanate from the 14th Amendment, where the Warren court found they had been overlooked by prior high courts for almost a century.

But Burger is trying to persuade the justices to slow down to listen to what white school officials are saying — and to be more specific while ordering them to integrate.

"We ought to resolve some of the basic problems," he wrote Monday, "including whether, as a constitutional matter, any particular racial balance must be achieved in the schools."

Also, he said, the court should decide the questions of bussing and zoning. And he said the court has spoken somewhat cryptically about integration until now.

So far, only a single justice, Potter Stewart, has shared his inclination to go slowly and to defer more to the judgment of federal judges in the South on the varying problems of particular districts. Presumably Carswell, if confirmed, will agree.

On obscenity, Burger has joined with Justice John M. Harlan in favoring wider latitude for local officials to suppress material they find too racy.

On apportionment, the chief

Students attack pollution, litter

University of Michigan students demolished a 1959 Ford with sledge hammers and their bare hands Wednesday in a symbolic protest against pollution.

The car smashing was part of a teach-in at the University of Michigan about air pollution, water pollution and litter in general.

After the students finished smashing the car, about 200 of them — lugging plastic bags filled with empty soft drink and beer cans — marched about a mile to the local Coca-Cola plant.

There they dumped thousands of cans into a huge circle, banged them around and protested to the bottling plant employees about the use of nonreturnable cans. After finishing their protest, the youths cleaned up the discarded cans.

at the same time, a committee from the group sponsoring the teach-in sent an open letter to university officials demanding a ban upon nonreturnable bottles in vending machines at the university.

The kick-off rally for U-M's five-day environmental teach-in was held Wednesday on the Ann Arbor campus with speakers including Gov. Milliken, U-M President Robbin Fleming, Wisconsin Sen. Gaylord Nelson and entertainer Arthur Godfrey.

Entertainment at the rally was provided by the Chicago cast of "Hair" and folk singer Gordon Lightfoot.

A number of environmental workshops will be held in Ann Arbor today. There will be a rally at noon on the Diag at which Sen. Phillip Hart will speak.

This evening there will be an environmental town meeting at Pioneer High School, near campus. Speakers will be actor Eddie Albert, Ralph MacMillan, head of the Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources, and C. Johnson, head of the Consumer Protection Dept. of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. Later there will be a panel discussion by local politicians including Ann Arbor Mayor Robert Harris and U.S. Representative Marvin Eskin.

There will be another panel discussion at 7:30 p.m. at Pioneer High School featuring Walter Reuther, president of the UAW, Ted Doan, president of the Dow Chemical Co., and Rene Dubois, a renowned microbiologist.

Ralph Nader will speak at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at U-M's Hill Auditorium and a panel on "Man's Future and the Struggle for Survival" will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the auditorium.

Closing remarks for the teach-in will be made by Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.

Hordes of mice roam Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A great plague of mice is moving through northwestern Victoria State, with millions more of the rodents stretching 300 miles north to Dubbo, in New South Wales.

Ouyen, 288 miles northwest of Melbourne, is "alive" with mice. Patients in hospitals are being protected by cans placed around the legs of their beds.

"They are ordinary field mice but there are millions of them," Constable Bob Bradley of the Ouyen police, said.

Nobody has explained how the plague came about, but it has been a good crop season, and there is wheat and wheat stubble in the fields.

Bradley reported: "You can drive at more than 20 miles an hour because if you brake you'd skid and turn over, there are that many mice on the road."

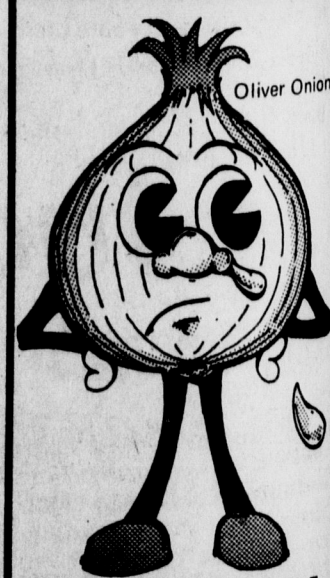

At Hopetown, Constable Ian German said farmers have trapped 300 to 400 mice a night.

Police at Sealake said the mice were a moving carpet in some areas, eating grapes and gardeners, and on the roads they were even eating dead mice.

There is hope that the plague will subside as the weather becomes cooler.

Heavy fighting along the Cambodian border north of Saigon sputtered out Wednesday with an enemy mortar attack on a U.S. fire support base. The U.S. Command said about 30 mortar shells struck Fire Base Flasher, four miles from the Cambodian border. U.S. casualties were reported light. The same base came under a barrage of 175 shells Monday but most hit outside the perimeter and caused light casualties with none killed. The U.S. Command, in a belated report said five Americans were killed Monday when a twin-engine U.S. Army CH47 helicopter crashed from unknown causes. It was the third such crash in three days.

Four gunmen hijacked a Colombian airliner with 78 persons aboard Wednesday, but the plane was forced to return because of mechanical trouble after leaving for Cuba. The four threatened to blow up the plane if anyone tried to interfere after it landed at Barranquilla Airport. The plane, a Boeing 727, was hijacked on a flight from Bogota to Barranquilla. It carried 71 passengers and a crew of seven.

National News

Declaring "we are headed straight for a recession," Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, suggested Wednesday that guidelines might be established for both wages and prices. The 1968 Democratic vice presidential nominee emphasized, however he was not recommending wage-price controls. He told a convention of skilled tradesmen from the United Auto Workers that guidelines could be developed by the Nixon administration in specific terms through consultation and agreement with the affected parties. Muskie repeatedly criticized inflation control measures of the Nixon administration in a speech on Republican Economics.

Police raided Wednesday a house fortified with sandbags believed to be the headquarters of a Black Panther party group. The police confiscated guns and ammunition and arrested seven. Three of the arrested were teen-age girls. Fifteen policemen, FBI and treasury agents went with a search warrant to the house. They encountered no opposition when they entered. Inside they confiscated a loaded 30-caliber gun and 150 rounds of ammunition.

A freight train with 13 carloads of bombs destined for Vietnam derailed near Aurora, Neb. Wednesday, scattering 750-pound bombs along the tracks. Schools in Aurora were dismissed, and residents of a 35-square-block area were advised to remain in their homes at their own discretion. The Army said the bombs were not armed or fused but they could be detonated by sparks. A total of 33 cars of the 108-car Burlington Northern freight left the tracks, scattering bombs for about 300 feet and wreckage for nearly 1,000 feet.

The Pentagon has gradually stripped nearly 1,000 jet interceptor planes from U.S. air defense and Air Force leaders fear the Soviets may strengthen their bomber threat as a result. The extent of the cutback over the past several years was spelled out by top Air Force officials in reports to Congress. Secretary of the Air Force Robert Seamans said the number of regular Air Force and Air National Guard planes assigned to air defense has dropped from 1,525 in 1962 to 577 at the end of 1969 without compensating qualitative improvements in defense which remain. In addition to slashing the number of jet fighters and ground based radar, the Pentagon over the years has substantially cut back the number of Nike-Hercules anti-aircraft missile batteries.

Michigan News

The Michigan House reaffirmed its stand on a $1.2 billion school aid bill Wednesday and sent the proposal back to the senate.

The lower chamber turned down a move by the bill's opponents to reconsider the vote by which the mammoth aid bill passed the house last week on a 57-50 vote.

The action came when the house defeated a move by Republican leader Robert Waldron, R-Grosse Pointe, to reconsider last week's vote. The vote rejected the consideration vote.

The bill now goes to the senate, where it will probably be rejected and sent into a joint senate-house conference committee to iron out differences between the two versions.

ASMSU OKs legal aid proposal

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU Student Board approved policy guidelines for the administration of its Legal Aid Fund Tuesday night in its last scheduled meeting of the term.

The policy guidelines stemmed from a motion last week to approve funds for the legal defense of Ralph Bartels, MSU student who was arrested on charges growing out of Feb. 19's disturbances on Grand River. No mention of Bartels was made Tuesday, however.

The policy reads "Whereas ASMSU should concern itself with legal issues which may have implications for large numbers of students, monies of the Legal Aid Fund may be donated or loaned to any MSU student involved in a precedent setting case. Furthermore, since original trials can have implications for large numbers of students even before any verdict has been appealed, funds may be used in such initial cases upon a majority vote of the board."

Rod Watts, senior member-at-large, proposed a new student government tax which would centralize the collection of hall dues. Dues would be collected by the registrar during fall term registration.

Under Watts' proposal, all such dues would be equalized at $8. Of this amount, $4 for each student living in the hall would be returned to the individual hall councils, 25 cents per student would be given to Men's Hall Association (HA) and Women's Inter-residence Council (WIC) for each student represented within those organizations, and $3.75 per student would go to ASMSU.

Each off-campus student would pay $3.75 at the beginning of fall term registration.

At present, ASMSU receives 50 cents a term, or roughly $1.50 per year (slightly more due to fees paid during summer term) from each student. The new tax thus represents an increase of nearly $2.25 per student per average three-term year.

This tax proposal is still only in the discussion stage. If the board does approve it, with or without modifications, it will probably not do so until a referendum on the tax can be combined with the spring elections April 15. Since the constitution specifies that referenda be held within 10 days of board action, a vote on the proposal will probably be taken at the board's meeting April 7. One modification of the proposal could be the inclusion of Off-Campus Council dues in the amount paid by off-campus students.

Chairman Bill Rustem asked that students contact board members about the matter in the time before that meeting.

Since MHA and WIC are comprised of the presidents of the hall councils, which will be most affected by the new tax proposal, they may not be truly representative of student feeling on this matter, MHA president Doug Laycock said.

Scott Campbell and Jeff Jacobson of the newspaper, Trash, radical successor to The Paper, asked the board for $250 to pay for two issues of their paper. They said that Trash has a viewpoint held by many students, and which is not represented in the State News. They pointed out that they did not want to support the capitalistic establishment by running advertising, and so needed other sources of funds.

Board members noted that if a precedent were set with Trash, ASMSU would also have to fund newspapers for other student groups, and that there were insufficient funds for such an undertaking.

Vice Chairman Chuck Mostov said that a government-sponsored newspaper would violate freedom of the press.

"Whether we actually 'sponsor' you or not," he said, "if we give you money somebody, somewhere, is sure to think we're sponsoring you and are responsible for your editorial content."

The board voted not to give funds to Trash.

The next regularly scheduled meeting of the Student Board, will be Tuesday, March 31, at 7 p.m. in the board room, which is located on the third floor, Student Services Bldg.

President Wharton and other MSU officials will appear today before the state Senate Appropriations Committee, headed by Sen. Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, to discuss the University's budget requests for the 1970-71 school year.

Wharton is scheduled to speak on the general finances of the University, and Executive Vice President Jack Breslin will explain the budget requests. Also scheduled to speak at the hearing are Provost John E. Cantlon and his assistants John Dietrich and Herman L. King, who will report on the academic program.

Robert L. Green, director of the Center for Urban Affairs (CUA) is to explain the CUA program.

Explaining the new Environmental Quality Center to the committee will be Robert C. Ball, director of the Institute of Water Research.

Speculating on the results of the hearing, Elliott G. Ballard, presidential assistant, said he expected a "paring down" on the University's budget request by the committee.

"You would have to ignore the track record to believe the senators will be ready to discuss the specifics of our request when the governor has already pared $10 million from the request we submitted to him," Ballard said.

In his budget message, Milliken recommended a $61.2 million appropriation for the East Lansing campus. MSU requested $71.1 million.

Ballard said he expected the University would receive an appropriation "closer to the governor's recommendation" than to the University's request.

Legislators introduce tax bill into Michigan Senate

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Two legislators who pushed a record $1.2 billion school aid bill through the House this week introduced a tax proposal Wednesday to finance the measure.

The substitute for Senate bill 1084, the bill Gov. Milliken proposed with his educational reform package, calls for a 35 per cent personal income tax boost and an optional income tax in local school districts.

The Milliken plan, repealing $65 million in property exemptions, was passed by the Senate Nov. 13.

The substitute proposed by House Speaker William Ryan, D-Detroit, and Rep. Roy Spencer, R-Attica, would raise personal income taxes from 2.6 per cent to 3.5 per cent, corporate taxes would go from 5.6 to 7.7 per cent and taxes on financial institutions would go from 7 to 9.5 per cent.

Combined with the Senatepassed measure, an additional $177 million could be brought into the general fund next year.

The drive by the so-called "urban-rural coalition" spearheaded by Spencer and Ryan is an attempt to decrease education's dependence on property taxes and turn it over to income taxes.

Is there a Paulist in the crowd?

Believe it or not, a campus protest group is not an unlikely place to find a Paulist.

Why? Because Paulists are the mediators of our time... standing between God and man... understanding, helping, loving... trying to bring together the extremes of the world we live in and the Church.

Wherever he is... as a college chaplain, working in a ghetto or helping in a parish... the Paulist is serving.

If you're interested in finding out more about the Paulist priestly spirit, write for our illustrated brochure and a copy of our Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

Legislature off the track on Australian bet study

Australia is actually a very nice place this time of the year. It's summer down under and the beaches around Sydney are supposed to be among the best in the world. This fact has obviously not been lost on members of the Michigan Legislature.

Some time ago it was suggested that the state's ailing monetary system could be put a great deal righter by the legalization of off-track betting -- that is, legalized bookmaking. This premise is probably quite sound, however, the legislature -- and rightly so -- decided investigation of the idea was necessary before a consideration could be made on how this system might apply to Michigan.

This, we feel, is rather suspect. In the first place: Why ten? Does the state of Michigan need that many to go? Secondly, why necessarily legislators? Would it not be a better idea for the Michigan State government to retain a professional investigative service to survey the scene and make reports? Thirdly, why send anyone to Australia at all? It seems quite probable that the Australian government must have reams of data on hand that it would be willing to send to Lansing.

From here things proceeded rapidly downhill. It was decided that since Australia was one country that had successfully implemented off-track betting someone should go there and check the whole thing out. Somewhere along the line, though, it wound up being ten someones who should go, and in as much as the legislature thought the whole thing up, it was agreed that those someones should be legislators.

After much uproar House Speaker William Ryan stated this week that he has not decided whether he will approve the trip after all because, and we quote, "The question to be considered is whether benefits can be obtained without taking the trip." This is a most legitimate question, but why was it not asked before the joint houses of the legislature authorized the venture?

Representative George Montgomery, D-Detroit, who is very gung - ho over the trip has written a letter to the Australian government explaining why the trip has been delayed and stating that he expects to make it as soon as the furor "blows over". We feel that this is a very naive attitude for a member of the legislature to take. The public outcry over this blatant a junket is not likely to die down for a very long time.

Haircuts for the jailed: 'turning-on' our elders?

It's about time students and the populace at - large took Jerry Rubin's opinion that hair and dope are on trial more seriously. The latest proof involves the scalping treatment given to eight students recently arrested for demonstrating in Ann Arbor.

A sheriff and two deputies decided to give the students arrested extremely short haircuts -- most, if not all of them, look bald after their locks were shorn. The eight have just filed suit in U.S. District Court for $200,000 in damages for what they believe to be an unconstitutional use of authority.

This act by "law enforcers" is by no means an isolated case. Just two weeks ago, the Chicago seven were given haircuts and shaves as they remained in jail while their lawyers were attempting to free them temporarily on bail. Following these excessive trimmings, the Cook County sheriff proclaimed to a Republican gathering that Republicans can get things done. (Perhaps, the good sheriff is merely confirming our speculation that Republicans are only proficient at trimmings -- unable to cut through to the heart of the matter.)

This indiscriminate use of authority is appalling due to its stemming from a simple streak of vindictiveness. In both cases (and in probably numerous others across the country) the haircuts were executed for personal and political reasons rather than for hygienic purposes.

Clearly, in the haircuts given the Chicago seven, there was no plausible reason why the action had to be taken at that time when there was a good chance the defendants would shortly leave jail on bail.

The inescapable conclusion is that these self - appointed "barbers" are cutting young peoples' hair through a combination of revenge, enjoyment and sadism.

It is obvious that long hair is to be, so to speak, the "whipping boy" for those who self - righteously feel youths with long hair are degenerate. While it might be preferable for those who operate jails to have short - haired residents, jailers have no Constitutional right to set - up haircut standards by whim.

If cutting hair of the young to within one inch of the scalp is the only way for some in the "older generation" to get their kicks, that is saying a lot about the perverse standards and values set by our elders.

The great coming together

Say, what ever happened to the War? If you'll remember (think hard) this nation (indivisible, under God and Thieu) has been involved in a Great War (not THE great war, not even Korea, but still a war) for quite a while (who can remember when it all started anyway?) that factionalized the country, radicalized the youth, brought millions in defense contracts, and created a patriotic issue for the flag wavers.

Recently however, (could it perhaps have been building since Nixon came into office, despite the moratoriums) the anti-war effort has been replaced as the central problem of youth (along with race, and after all, as Nixon has shown, even non-integration can be popular among liberals) by a certain frenzy over the condition of our aid, water, land migratory foul, bald eagles, throw - away bottles, and litter (the great Mrs. Nixon campaign, right behind volunteerism.)

Add this great frenzy over ecology to Nixon's highly - successful public relations campaign to do exactly what we have been doing -- called Vietnamization, and SHABAM -- congratulations Nixon -- no more dissent among youth. No more "bring us together" campaigns will be needed because Nixon, through his careful scheming, has managed to re - direct that dissent and disgust to a perfectly safe value -- something inane referred to as the "quality of life", a banner that includes everything from cleaning litter off the beaches to forming car pools to cut down auto pollution, to Big Brotherism and impersonality in computerism, to bubble gum under desks.

And who could oppose such a marvelous cause? What could be more important than the quality of life? EVERYBODY wants a nice, clean environment. So what if there has been a notable lack of blacks in the Ecology Craze. So what if to the poor the "quality of life" means finding the next meal, getting the rats out of the walls -- survival? There are enough people besides the poor and the blacks to mount one hell of a successful campaign. Never since the government pushed war bonds during THE great war have so many -- students, businessmen, politicians, musicians, grandmothers, Weathermen, John Birchers and Irish cops -- talked so much and done so little.

And with an issue like "the quality of life" who needs to do anything -- talking about it is honorable enough. Besides, the "quality of life" is such a vague concept anyway (who knows what "Earth Day" is all about?) that nobody could be opposed, no matter how big a schmuck they are. So the politicians can talk, Nixon can propose do - nothing programs, the students can march, the businessmen can pledge to watch their trash, and ecology becomes cohesiveness get going on the ecology problem.

My home - bred theory is that a lot of people would like nothing better than to go on talking without ever acting. If Nixon manages to re - direct the anti - war movement, as it seems he is doing, it may be because the "quality of life" rhetoric blurs the connection between pollution, and the war. This country is at a stalemate in dealing with its social, economic, and physical ills until that damned war is over. There is no money to deal with domestic issues, and no one is willing to totally commit this country to domestic solutions until that Asian headache is under way.

And in the meantime we not only kill the environment, we kill people (they're human too, remember?) in Vietnam, Laos, Appalachia and Detroit.

But the bandwagon jumping continues, now with the Campus Christians squawking

So what if the war drags on, the poor get poorer, the blacks grow more frustrated. Everyone else is having a grand time planning an April teach - in on Ecology to which everyone from Spiro Agnew to Tom Hayden is invited.

POINT OF VIEW

American military aid to Israel

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second part of a Point of View by Yusef Khadra in behalf of the Arab Student Organization at MSU. It is a response to an article by Benjamin Beit-Hallahmi (SN Feb. 20).

After the June war the U.S. imposed an embargo on the sale of arms to the Middle East belligerent countries. Yet this embargo was lifted on October 25, 1967, according to Robert McCloskey to "permit the scheduled delivery of two squadrons (48) of A-4F skyhawk attack bombers to Israel and military equipment". And on Dec. 27, 1968, Mr. McCloskey announced that "the U.S. and Israel have reached agreement on the sale of 50 Phantom F-4 fighters." The same fighters that were used 2 weeks ago in bombing a factory in Egypt which resulted in killing 70 civilians. This is only one evidence that American "war materials" are used in Israeli raids into Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. And to refresh Mr. Beit-Hallahmi's memory I would like to remind him of two more incidents. The first is the use of the American Patton tanks in the Israeli attack on the village of Sammu' on Nov. 13, 1966 in which 17 civilians were killed and for which Israel was strongly condemned. The second is the battle of Al-Karamah on March 21, 1968, in which dozens of Israeli tanks and Skyhawk fighters were used for 12 hours -- the result of which was the end of the myth of Israel's technical superiority.

Before the end of this month we will witness the sale of another 24 Phantom F-4 fighters to Israel. I hope that these few incidents will make things clearer to Mr. Beit-Hallahmi, and make him see that American pro-peace policy in the M.E. is false. Events have shown that the U.S. is mainly interested in acting such that the security and integrity of the state of Israel only is maintained.

The U.S. Government wants the Arabs to believe that the U.S. policy towards the Arab states and Israel is one of impartiality. The Arabs would welcome this. But when they see themselves threatened by Israeli forces, and when they see the Israelis enjoying, not only political, moral, military and financial support, but also the advantage of U.S. pressure on other nations for secret military aid to Israel, it is difficult to sustain faith in the good intentions of the U.S.

This double-standard policy can only lead to greater estrangement between the Arabs and the U.S. and cause grave dangers in the Middle East -- a situation which must be deplored by all those who are anxious to see an improvement in Arab-American relations and the easing of tensions in a strategic oil - rich region of the globe.

I think that the above is enough coverage for American military aid to Israel.

By the way Mr. Beit-Hallahmi, slavery was outlawed in Saudi Arabia 15 years ago. But as I said earlier, support could take other forms too. Talking about financial aid, I would like to say that this aid takes two forms.

1. Aid offered to Israel directly by the U.S. government and its affiliated organizations.

2. Indirect aid.
a. From American Zionist organizations and sale of bonds and donations.

b. Aid from other governments and institutions under the pressure of the U.S. Government.

Under direct aid, according to "A Detailed Review of United States Economic Assistance to Mideast and North African Countries 1945 - 1967" Israel received a total of $2.2 billion in the form of economic assistance from the U.S.

Institutional Funds, according to Harry Ellis, private American Jewry has contributed at least $60 million a year thru the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) and another $50 million a year through purchase of bonds. In crisis years these private contributions have soared higher. The funds that were raised by the UJA in the U.S. between 1946 and 1963 totalled $1.5 billion -- all of which is tax exempt. Four bond issues have been floated in the U.S. since 1951. By 1967 the total amount exceeded $1.2 billion.

Indirect Aid: West German Reparations to Israel

American aid to Israel is not confined to the U.S. itself. In 1950 the U.S. Government has exerted pressure on West Germany to share in the responsibility of maintaining the existence of the state of Israel. Under this section, Israel received since 1951 till 1967 about $1 billion from Germany.

If Mr. Beit-Hallahmi adds these figures, he would find that Israel in less than 20 years received about $1 billion, from the U.S. or about $2500 per capita, -- which is the highest rate in the world, while if we look at any Arab state we see that none of them received even 2% of what Israel receives -- either in the form of military or economic aid. At the same time the point that Mr. Beit-Hallahmi makes concerning selling the arms to Israel at full price is highly questionable and illogical.

There is no doubt in my mind that Israeli boldness is attributed to American war material and American moral and financial support. This could be seen by reading a few of the many statements issued by Moshe Dayan. For me Israeli "boldness" is one of aggression and expansion based on occupying other peoples' lands. And I really wonder, Dear Ben, who should not forget Biafra: the Arabs or the Israelis?

OUR READERS' MIND

Ecological 'smoke' definite reality

To the Editor:

I would agree with the editors that the pollution (and may I infer population) crisis "smokescreen" threatens to detract public attention from the issue of our imperialistic war. Nevertheless, the "smoke" is quite real -- not sly conjured up by world scientists in cahoots with a U.S. reactionary conspiracy. That the ecology - population issue is apparent in this country, let alone a "swelling groundswell", is an exaggeration of the truth. Environmental controls have only ephemeral significance without simultaneous population control, yet Congress ignored all but five of fourteen population bills introduced in 1969. That the editors are unable to perceive the reality of the "smoke" (at least not until 2000 A.D.) is characteristic of idealistic blindness and the American "cowboy" faith in the extent of vital resources. By the year 2000 mankind will have forgotten the mercy of social and political warfare as it struggles for life against the crueler natural processes it has imposed upon itself.

Few are attempting to de - emphasize the immorality and irrationality of our ideological imperialism. The ecological crusade is, more accurately, an attempt to educate a greater morality and sanity than that which devotes itself to idealistic formulas. The morality desired is for a primary value of life, the sanity sought is a realization that without life (and even without quality life) there can be nothing of any value.

Takes issue with Lerner

To the Editor:

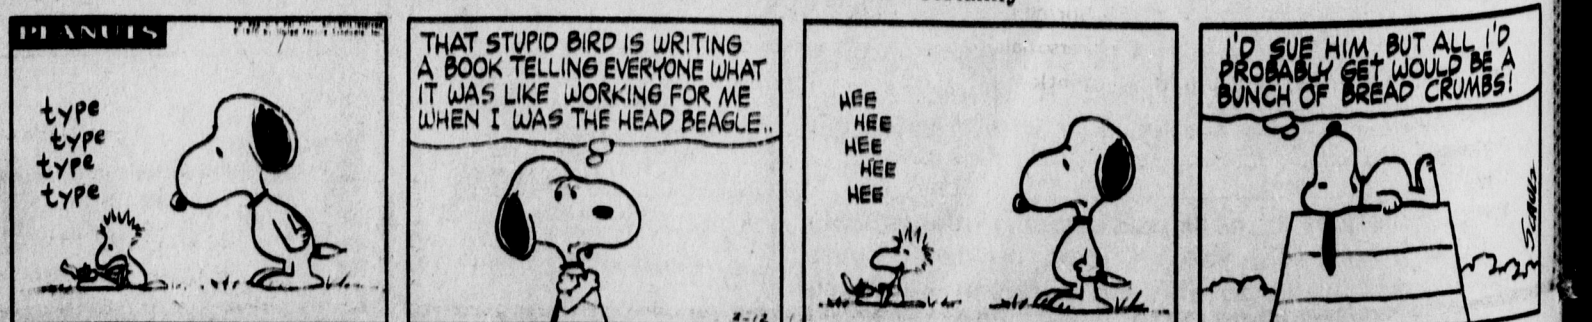

I read Larry Lerner's column (SN, Friday, March 8) with great interest. It seemed symptomatic of many recently expressed fears by some liberal - minded people that the present interest in ecology and environmental quality might steal some of the wind out of the sails of the anti - war movement. Let me assure Mr. Lerner that most "environmentalists" are not merely jumping on a bandwagon pulled by the president and his fellow politicians. Most of us are not impressed in the least with the token attempts by the administration to salvage our environment.

As Mr. Lerner so graciously alluded, the whole ecology movement is certainly closely related to other reform movements in this country. The same establishment responsible for our follies in Southeast Asia are also responsible for the continuing degradation of our environment, which threatens the future of the whole human race.

I am quite confident that most MSU students are capable of handling one more issue of concern, without losing sight of the others. This Mr. Lerner seems to doubt. I would suggest that if he could lend his editorial pen to this "extra" issue, he may find himself greatly rewarded in the near future.

Indians ask amends for 300 years of abuse

By CAROL CORRIERE
State News Staff Writer

Indians, long considered the last but vanished Americans, have suddenly reappeared in the national spotlight to protest and seek amends for their more than 300 years of abuse by whites.

Since the first contacts, whites have always wanted something from the Indians, Charles Cleland, associate professor of anthropology, said.

"The fate of the Indians has depended on what white people wanted from them," he said.

Everyone who came wanted something — missionaries wanted converts, traders wanted furs, military men wanted warriors and diplomats wanted subjects.

The Indian either co-operated, became dependent and lost his traditions or else did not

First in a series

co-operate and was killed or forced off his land, Cleland said. "They lost either way," he added.

Michigan's Indians first came into contact with whites in 1650 and within a few decades two-thirds of them had died of diseases the whites had brought with them.

Those who were left drifted together to form villages composed of members of a variety of tribes that were similar to refugee camps of displaced persons, Cleland said.

As early as 1700 the native cultures began to break up as Indians became more and more dependent on the whites, their iron tools and their manufactured goods.

Shortly after 1800 the Michigan Indians lost most of their land (they had owned the whole state) and were concentrated into several small communities that became today's reservations, he said.

The federal government was under no obligation to them then nor was the state. It was not until 1924 that they were granted citizenship.

"No real attempt was made to provide things (like education) for the Indians that other residents expected to receive as a matter of course," Cleland said. Yet, he added, in those days the Indians were probably better off than they are now.

"Through the 1800s into the early 1900s, Indians were much more affluent than they are today because they could find employment in the timber and commercial fishing industries," he said.

Since then the rural economy has declined and Indians have shared the economic problems of other Americans in these areas — but without the educational and social advantages the others have.

"It has been a downhill proposition since then," Cleland said.

The belief that Indians can be used and shoved around still exists today in areas where they hold lands with any kind of value or resources, he said.

For instance, Indians do not own the reservation lands they live on, the government does.

When the Army Corps of Engineers wanted to build a dam in Pennsylvania that would back up water onto some reservation lands where Indians were living, the Indians were the only ones who protested, he said.

The dam was built and the Indians moved, another example of whites pushing them around and using them, he added.

"A sensible policy now to take is to let the Indians decide what they want to be and to interfere with their way of life as little as we can," Cleland said.

The Indians will face a big problem in making this decision for they live in a variety of situations today, on reservations, in rural areas and in cities.

In their contacts with white society they have the advantages of a strong cultural heritage and the land base of the reservation, Cleland said.

On the other hand, he added, they are few in number and have little political power.

White Americans should feel guilty about what they have done to the Indians and should be willing to give them help, he said, but they should not try to shove the American way of life down the Indians' throats.

"I don't think that now, after 300 years of deprivation, white Americans can tell red Americans what they're to be," Cleland said.

New community sets up electronics repair shop

By KATHY MORAN
State News Staff Writer

A radio, TV and stereo repair shop is being set up by the New Community in 326 Student Services Bldg. in an effort to combat the high prices of electronics service in Lansing and East Lansing.

The service will test tubes, give free advice and replace tubes for three to four per cent over the wholesale price plus tax. The labor charge will vary according to the circumstances but in general it will be approximately 50 per cent off local rates, according to Thomas Hartman, former student and partial owner of the shop.

Hartman and Bob Waber, also a former student, set up their business about two weeks ago and have already received a number of customers. They hope to employ more people as business picks up.

They do not have overhead expenses because they are located in the Student Services Bldg., and can afford to charge only for parts and labor.

Presently they are not equipped to fix color TVs but hope to be able to soon.

Hartman and Waber also operate a Swap Shop where they will sell parts for customers at a five per cent discount for costs.

Company loans to blacks

By BARNEY C. YOUNG
State News Staff Writer

The president of TAW International Leasing Inc., a black-owned business, said Wednesday that his company provides capital for Africans who want to start money-making operations.

Thomas A. Wood, in an informal discussion with students in Wells Hall talked about TAW's involvement in Africa. He said Africa is a country wealthy in resources, but potential entrepreneurs need tools to transmute raw materials to usable products.

The problem confronting many potential businessmen is that they must have a 50 per cent down - payment in order to buy equipment for their business.

"TAW leases with no down payment," Wood said. "The only criterion we have is that the person be responsible, and invest in a money-making operation. In other words, we would lease a fishing boat, but not a yacht."

TAW has two offices in Africa Wood said. One in Nairobi, Kenya, and another in Abidjan, Ivory Coast.

Wood is a graduate of Columbia University, where he majoring in math, and the University of Michigan School of Engineering. Before forming TAW he said he worked in Detroit gun control systems, and there formed a computer programming company.

In 1965 he said he visited Africa at the request of a friend, noticed the unlimited opportunities there and formed TAW.

There is a possibility that TAW will open operations in the United States, Wood said. "We're sympathetic with black people in the United States who want to start a business without giving up ownership. Leasing is the way that this can be done." TAW is hesitant about opening operations in the United States because of the hold existing leasing companies in the United States have on the market.

Many students asked Wood about his position as a "black capitalist." He said he endorses private ownership of business because he feels that impersonal control means impersonal performance.

"In business we need a reward for success, and a penalty for failure," he said.

Wood said one year's operating expense is what he feels is needed for one to consider opening a business.

"I am hopeful that these moves will establish that MSU intends to pursue a positive policy on the elimination of discrimination in all areas," he noted.

ZOLLAR SAYS

Migrant rules lacking

By BETHANN ERARD

State Sen. Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, has charged that federal standards in migrant camp licensing could cause a serious problem for Michigan farmers.

Zollar, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, called the standards unrealistic in a statement issued this week.

The licenses, which permit farmers to bring in migrant workers, could mean that the farmer would not have the needed workers to harvest their crops, explained Zollar.

The Benton Harbor Republican has conferred with U.S. Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., on the problem, and has received the senator's pledge to investigate the issue with the Secretary of Labor.

Federal officials have licensed two migrant camps in Michigan for the 1970 season. Zollar said this amounts to only a small percentage of the number of camp licenses granted in 1969.

Sen. Griffin has been enlisted to determine whether the "real objective of the strict enforcement," as Zollar termed it, is to "eliminate the migrant worker."

"If the federal government must persist in enforcing these stringent standards," Zollar said, "Perhaps the federal government ought to provide some of the finances the growers will need in order to comply with the code."

An example of the stringent standards, Zollar said, is the seven-foot minimum ceiling in the cabins. Until this year a camp could get a license if the ceiling was within an inch of the limit, as long as the camps were not detrimental to the health of the worker.

With only four weeks until the asparagus crop is harvested, the lack of migrant camps could cause a "disaster," since the farmers have spent "millions," Zollar said, to cultivate this crop and will not have the migrants to harvest them.

Resources Day set on pollution

A program on environmental quality will be presented on Natural Resources Day, Thursday, March 26, during Farmers' Week at MSU.

Sponsored by the Dept. of Fisheries and Wildlife, Forestry, Resource Development, Park and Recreation Resources and the Institute of Water Research, the program will begin with a film report on "Your World in a Capsule."

Seven professors will deliver lectures throughout the day. The final event will be a discussion entitled "Is Sewage Your Cup of Tea?" presented by E-QUAL, the Graduate Student Environmental Quality Council.

Rembrandt art revolution survives 300 year test

By SUSAN DORMADY
State News Reviewer

You're a good man, Andy Warhol. But for all your brillo boxes and soup cans, your revolution in art has nothing over the one Rembrandt started in 1620. Some modern artists have the attitude that they're the only ones in the field. Let's see if they're still around in 300 years.

"REMBRANDT, after Three Hundred Years," is presently on display in the South Wing of the Detroit Institute of Arts. This mammoth showing marks the 300th anniversary of the Dutch painter's death. His 28 paintings and 48 drawings, loaned from 11 of the world's most famous galleries in 11 countries, will remain there until April 5.

Rembrandt van Rijn was indeed the great revolutionary of his time. In 1620, when he attended the University of Leyden, Dutch painting was classically provincial. The tough young university student set out to alter romantic Renaissance Art. After considerable social ostracism and restraint, he became to the 17th century art world what Warhol is to Camp.

To illustrate the master's tremendous influence on his era, the Institute features a bonus presentation of 136 creations by Rembrandt's most eminent students including Ferdinand Bol, Karel Fabritius and Aert de Gelder.

Admission to the exhibition is 50 cents for students with ID. The hours are: 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., Tuesday and Friday. 9:30-5:30 Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. Closed Monday.

Letters get runaround in mail

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer

A letter going from East Lansing to Olivet is processed through post offices in Lansing, Chicago and Kalamazoo before it finally gets to Olivet.

This masterpiece of rerouting is all part of the national mail slowdown that East Lansing Postmaster A. Ray Krider attributes to the death of trains and other land transportation.

"We used to be able to offer one-day service from East Lansing to Pennsylvania, all of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, if the letters were mailed by 5 p.m.," Krider said.

The post office no longer offers that kind of promise.

"There used to be four west-bound trains daily going through on the Grand Trunk lines a few years ago," Krider said. "Now there are two a day, and only one of them carries mail."

Airmail presents different problems. Weather conditions causing temporary plane delays just hold the mail up at the airport. However, if the plane is grounded for any extended time period, airmail is taken off the planes and rerouted over the disappearing land transportation.

"People just don't realize that along with the population boom came a mail boom — all those people kept getting more and more mail," Krider noted.

In East Lansing, the problem is complicated by the University community and its expansion. Krider estimated that over half of the incoming East Lansing mail goes to on-campus delivery points. Adding to that, the mail going to students living off-campus, he claimed total MSU-related mail amounting to two-thirds of incoming volume.

Krider set outgoing MSU mail at an even higher ratio of the total.

With the growth of MSU and the East Lansing community, the East Lansing post office found itself cramped in on Abbott Road. In 1966 it annexed its second building on East Grand River Avenue to temporarily house its delivery operation.

In two weeks both operations will move into the new post office building on Abbott Road, one mile north of its present outgoing operation.

Krider said the new building, with 29,000 square feet of space, will be "a third again as big" as both buildings currently in use.

The old Abbott Road building will still be used for a finance station.

One of the biggest problems facing the U.S. Post Office today, Krider said, is that as a government agency it cannot engage in experimental research to increase its efficiency.

advantage of increased technology," Krider said.

He estimates a national automatic mail-sorting system to be at least 10 years off.

Progress is beginning to come, however. Congress is beginning to see the merits of a corporate post office separate from politics, Krider said. He hopes to see the change in structure come within the next few years.

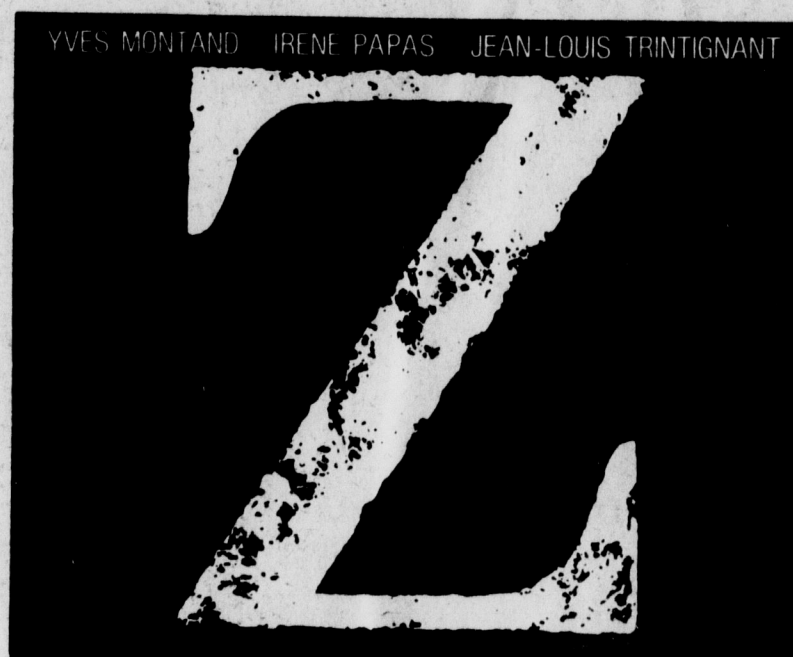

At first, Krider said he feels the post office would have to be supported by federal funds. Within a few years, however, he said he thinks it could increase its operational efficiency to be able to support itself.

Postal workers' union, originally opposed to the plan, are beginning to "come around" to the idea, he said. With a few concessions — like the right to strike for higher wages — the unions would support corporate post office.

Seniors open class petitions

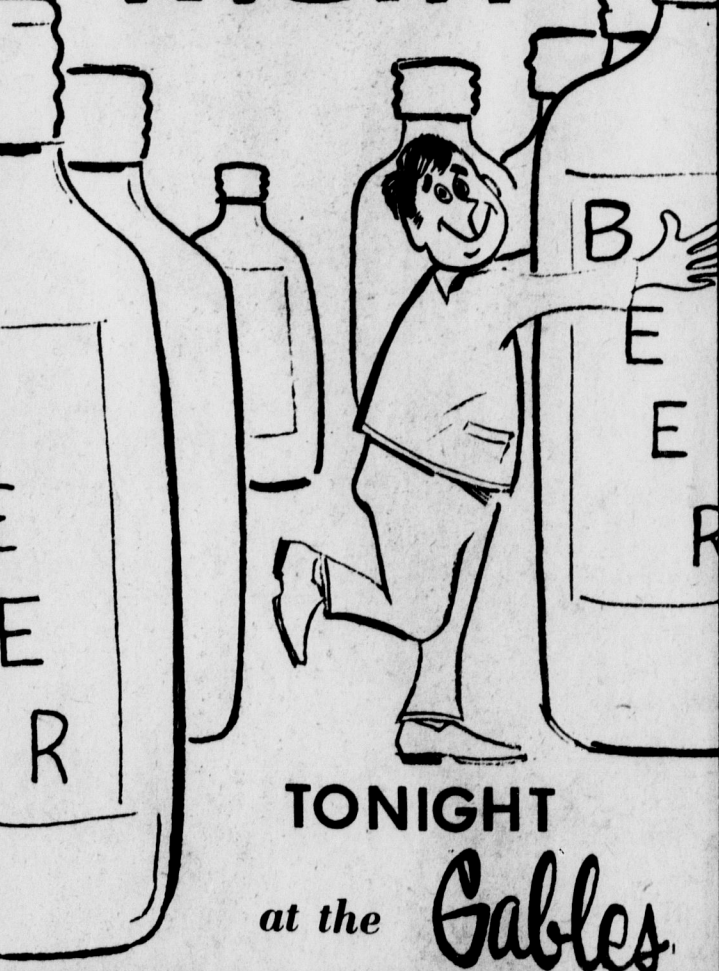

The Senior Class has announced that petitioning for senior class president and vice president of 1971 will be open April 1-3. Petitions may be obtained beginning March 30 in the ASMSU Business Office, third floor Student Services Bldg. Anyone who will be a senior next year is eligible to petition.

Battle for equal rights continues for women

By SHIRLEY JOHNSON
State News Staff Writer

Over 100 years ago the first group of coeds were admitted to Michigan Agricultural College as "special students."

The college admitted ten women for advanced study. They were not charged tuition, nor could they receive a degree. Since that time the status of women at MSU has changed drastically. With the advent of women's suffrage in 1920, women's rights organizations had their first breakthrough in destroying their second-class citizenship image.

Under the 19th amendment to the U.S. Constitution doors which had previously been closed to women shortly began to open.

In educational areas men began to realize that women had the ability to undergo the demands of higher education.

The first milestone in higher education was reached in 1837 when Oberlin College in Ohio enrolled four female freshmen. The college was the first to offer women the opportunity to earn a B.A. degree.

Today women are accepted on campuses which a few years ago were male dominated.

Women, long tired of the second-class citizenship label have formed a variety of women's groups in order to develop, pursue and bring to light opportunities for the advancement of women.

Today women are found in vocations which were previously considered masculine. A psycho-social revolution is taking place that has even changed the role of the women within the home.

However, discrepancies between the male and female still exist in the United States.

As late as 1966 three states barred women from jury duty because of "defects of sex." Six states still consider the father the guardian of minor children during marriage and four states do not allow women to sell their own land without the consent of their husbands.

Many institutions in the country discriminate against a woman because she is married. The Michigan Legislature passed a resolution in 1963 which states that the residency of a woman shall follow that of her husband.

MSU is currently trying to challenge the legality of the measure.

MSU Registrar Horace King said when the rule is interpreted a woman who is married to an out-of-state student cannot establish Michigan residency to qualify for in-state tuition.

A married woman may retain her in-state tuition status only if she continues her education at MSU on a full time basis.

Sen. Lorraine Beebe, R-Deerborn, recently sent a resolution to the senate asking for a study of women's employment statutes. The resolution is being studied by the Business Committee.

If the bill is reported out of committee, all laws concerning women's employment will be reviewed by a special committee. Hearings will be held to discover which employment areas discriminate against women.

Sen. Beebe said that she felt once the investigations were started, women would start to speak out on discriminatory practices.

She also noted that the current abortion laws are discriminatory to women because they do not allow a woman control of her body.

Rather, she said, they allow her control of her body only until she becomes pregnant, at which time her body is placed under state law.

The Intercollegiate Assn. of Women Students (IAWS) was organized to better inform women about their rights and opportunities.

MSU has published the fact-sheet for IAWS, "Feminine Focus," for several years. Another organization which is made to the Dept. of Labor in Washington, D. C.

WEAL stated that "each year millions of dollars in federal contracts are disbursed to universities and colleges. And each year, these same universities and colleges discriminate against women in a variety of ways."

WEAL found that the proportion of women faculty members in colleges and universities has decreased from one-third to one-fourth. At most of the Big Ten universities the percentage of women faculty members is approximately one-tenth.

Another organization which has a special division for discriminatory practices against women is the American Civil Liberties Union.

OFF-CAMPUS PROPOSAL

'U' housing issue favored

By DONNA WILBURN
State News Staff Writer

Staff and student opinions surprisingly have coincided with regard to the proposed policy compromise allowing juniors and seniors the privilege of living in off-campus unsupervised housing.

Delores Bender, asst. director to the dean of students, who handles requests for moving off campus, said as the policy stands it is unfair to juniors who are not 21 before the end of the school year.

"Some juniors are able to legally move off campus, while others must stay in a residence hall because they were born in September instead of May. The present policy is not fair," she said.

Mrs. Bender said she has no hostility towards the residence halls and they offer many benefits. However, she would like students to be able to live where they prefer.

"I would like to see a housing policy where the primary beneficiary is the student instead of a bonding company," Mrs. Bender stated.

Third in a series

Sue Hughes, secretary of the Student Affairs Committee, is also in favor of a policy that would allow juniors and seniors to live off campus. She also expressed concern for a more adequate housing policy.

"We need a policy that relates more to the students than to the financial situation of the University," Mrs. Hughes said. Norm Mayer, North Woodmere, N.Y., senior, president of Off-Campus Council, said no student should be forced to live anywhere.

"If it was possible, this off-campus proposal should apply to everyone," Mayer said.

He added that a new policy affecting juniors would have his support.

Groups representing the residence hall faction of the University population are overwhelmingly in favor of a liberal off-campus policy. No organization, however, has formulated an official proposal. Donna O'Donnohue, Harbert, sophomore, president of Women's Inter-Residence Council (WIC), said students deserve a choice in where to live, and also that in determining policy there should be no discrimination on the basis of sex.

"I think the policy should go farther than juniors and allow everyone the freedom to choose whether or not to live off campus," Miss O'Donnohue said.

Doug Laycock, Wood River, Ill., senior, Men's Hall Assn. (MHA) president, said students should not have to subsidize the University's financial errors.

"Students should not be forced to sacrifice civil liberties for an education," Laycock said. Laycock further stated that a straw poll taken by a floor president in Wilson Hall indicated no objections to a moral liberal off-campus policy.

Property owners file damage suit

KALAMAZOO (UPI)—Nine Lake Michigan shoreline property owners, charging construction at the Cook nuclear plant site at Bridgman is causing erosion of their property, Wednesday filed a one-million dollar damage suit against Indiana & Michigan Electric Co.

The suit was filed in U.S. district court here. It contends that a 250 foot by 500 foot cofferdam extending into the lake in extreme southwest lower Michigan has accelerated natural erosion processes and has already caused extensive damage.

The nine property owners have asked Judge W. Wallace Kent to enjoin I & M from continuing any work on the project and prevent them from engaging in any activity or construction which would cause continued erosion. One million dollars in damages is claimed and a final order has been requested which would require I & M to dismantle the projection on the nuclear site and restore the beach to its natural state.

Most of the damage done so far has been to beach and dunes along the shoreline, according to Alan Silverman, attorney for the property owners. However, continued erosion could undermine the foundations of beachfront homes, some of which cost more than $30,000, Silverman added.

"The projection at the nuclear site is only supposed to be temporary, but much of the beachfront property south of it could be washed away," Silverman said. "The water supply to the homes from wells also is endangered."

Unless immediate steps are taken by the power company to repair the substantial depletion that it has caused to the Lake Michigan shoreline, property owners are faced with massive destruction from spring storms, the suit contends. No date was set for a preliminary hearing.

Letters from Red China tell of war plans

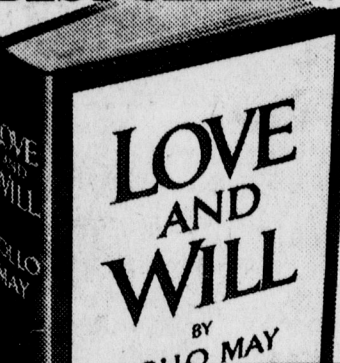

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Letters from Red China to relatives in Formosa tell of feverish preparation for war, the Nationalist Chinese official Central News Agency reported Tuesday.

Letters from the mainland reach Formosa after being resealed in a third country. They are opened and copied by Nationalist intelligence officers then sent on to the relatives.

No dates for the letters were given in excerpts published by Central News, but the agency said all were recent. They apparently referred to preparations for war with the Soviet Union.

An excerpt from a letter as given by the agency: "Amoy, a port in Fukien Province is busy with war preparations. The people have to dig air-raid shelters every day and must also stand watch."

Spartan cage future looks bright

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

While the won-loss record of this year's MSU basketball team will not send rival coaches in the Big Ten into a jealous rage, Gus Ganakas laid the groundwork for a solid future.

Only two part-time starters -- Jim Gibbons and Lloyd Ward -- will graduate, which means the inexperience that plagued the Spartans all year will be lessened somewhat in 1970-71.

Of course, the primary source of optimism in the future of MSU basketball is the return of super Ralph Simpson, the highest scoring player returning to the conference next year...and he will have that invaluable year's experience under his belt. Simpson was the only underclassman on the All-Big Ten team this year.

Along with Simpson will be Rudy Benjamin, much improved this season and certain to get better as a senior. Ralph and Rudy will be the highest scoring duo returning to the conference next winter, bringing with them about 45 points a game.

But the real key to how well the Spartans do next year could be 6-1 guard Gary Pryzbylo, who watched from the stands this season after an early winter foot operation. Pryzbylo and Simpson worked together smoothly as freshmen and could renew that backcourt combo next winter. During the past season Ganakas admitted that a healthy Pryzbylo might have been a starter for him.

Returning with these three will be Pat Miller, who developed into one of the teams most consistent players during the latter part of the year. Ganakas is toying the idea of moving Miller to guard next year because of the big men coming up from the freshman team.

Ron Gutkowski seems to be the leading candidate for a starting forward position, mainly because of his defense. Another player who must be reckoned with is Tim Bograkov, a two-year letterman at guard and a starter late this winter.

What the Spartans needed most all season -- and it came up in almost every conversation with Ganakas -- was a big front line to control the boards. And, as luck would have it, that is where Matt Aitch's freshman team is tall up front.

The key man in the spartan front court next year will likely be 6-8 center Bill Kilgore, one of the very best jumpers to ever come to MSU. A scholastic casualty this winter, Kilgore will probably get first crack at the center position, the weak link in the Spartan armor for several years. Ganakas is hoping he develops enough to handle the job.

Brian Breslin, the frosh's leading scorer this season, could move in at one of the forward positions, thus giving MSU the real threat of a driving forward -- someone who likes to go to the basket. Also in the picture is 6-8 Jeff VanderLende, who possesses a delicate shooting touch, and rugged Brad VanPelt, a punishing rebounder. Ganakas is particularly high on VanPelt as an asset on the boards next year.

Three freshmen guards -- 5-4 Gary Ganakas, son of the elder Ganakas and a good playmaker, defensive ace Damon Huffman and Larry Ike could help the team.

There has been some talk about the possibility of bringing in a junior college "big man" to help shore up the frontline rebounding, and Bob Nordmann, MSU's asst. coach and chief talent scout, spent last week looking at the top JC players around the country. But the findings, at present, are at best inconclusive, and at worst negative.

"I didn't see anyone that could really help us," he said. "Mainly, my faith was reaffirmed in our own players. We don't like someone to come in here who might now be able to help up because it just breaks up the family we have already built. I think our own kids can do the job."

There seems to be a solid base of talent from which to work, with Simpson unquestionably the starting point. But with all the players available next fall when practice opens, Ganakas will more than earn his keep just trying to name a starting lineup.

But while the MSU basketball scene is bright, unfortunately, so is the rest of the Big Ten after the last landslide recruiting year.

The league's top two teams, Iowa and Purdue, will in all likelihood be weakened by graduation. Iowa, unbeaten in the Big Ten this year, loses five of its first six men, and Purdue will only see Rick Mount on television from now on.

But watch out for the rest of the league.

On paper at this state, Minnesota looks to be the strongest team, with the league's best backcourt tandem -- Ollie Shannan and Eric Hill returning. But where the Gophers get a boost is from the freshman team, probably the finest in the Midwest. Jim Brewer, a 6-8 center who plays defense like Bill Russell, is a certain starter next year. Add to him 6-11 Scott Magnuson, 6-8 Corky Taylor from Detroit Mumford, and 6-1 guard Henry Goodes from Gary, Ind., who could bump Hill into the frontcourt, and it is easy to see why Minnesota coach Bill Fitch will be smiling.

Illinois, who loses only Mike Price and Randy Crews through graduation, gain two of the more highly touted freshmen in the conference in 6-6 forward Nick Weatherspoon (the best player in Ohio as a high school senior) and 6-8 Nick Conner, also from Ohio. Ganakas raved about the Illinois frosh after watching them whip a strong Marquette team last week.

Indiana, a team that has had trouble putting things together in recent years, get instant help from 6-7 George McInnis, who many felt was the finest high school player in the nation two years ago. McInnis and 6-8 Steve Downing -- a teammate of McInnis in Indianapolis -- were both ineligible this winter. Freshman Coach Tom Bolyard calls the two, "the best players at the school."

Michigan, even though it loses Rudy Tomjanovich, will be dangerous with super-scorer Henry Wilmore moving into the Wolverine backcourt.

Ohio State is also hit hard by graduation -- losing Dave Sorenson and Jody Finney -- but the Buck's will get Jim Clemons for another year, along with smooth 7-foot freshman Luke Witte and 6-2 shooter Alan Hornyak -- both top-flight freshmen.

Next year in the Big Ten could be one whole of a year...and Ganakas will go into it in much better shape than this past year. But so will several other coaches.

JEFF ELLIOTT

'S' spring sports
await training trips

While a portion of MSU students are taking advantage of the spring break and migrating to Florida or the Bahama Islands, four of the five spring sport teams will be preparing for the upcoming seasons with exhibition games against out-of-state universities.

The baseball club will make the longest trip and take part in the most games as they journey to Coral Gables, Florida for 13 games against some rugged competition, including three games against perennial power Miami and a pair of games against Notre Dame.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's club will be in Florida from March 22 until April 4 when they wind up the schedule with their second game with Colgate. The squad will return home April 5 and will open the regular season April 11 with a double header at Ball State. The Big Ten season gets under way two weeks later when the Spartans travel to last year's Big Ten champions, the Minnesota Gophers for a pair of games.

The future is bright for Litwhiler who enters his seventh season as head coach of MSU. Youth, depth, versatility and spirit appear to be characteristics of this year's squad. Only four seniors and six juniors will be on the 31 man squad which will contain 12 freshmen and nine sophomores. Several frosh are expected to help the Spartans in this, the first year of freshman competition. They are pitchers Larry Ike and Brad Van Pelt, catch Bailey Oliver and infielders Steve Cerez and Dirk Dieters.

The Spartan golf team will also head south for the break competing in two invitationals.

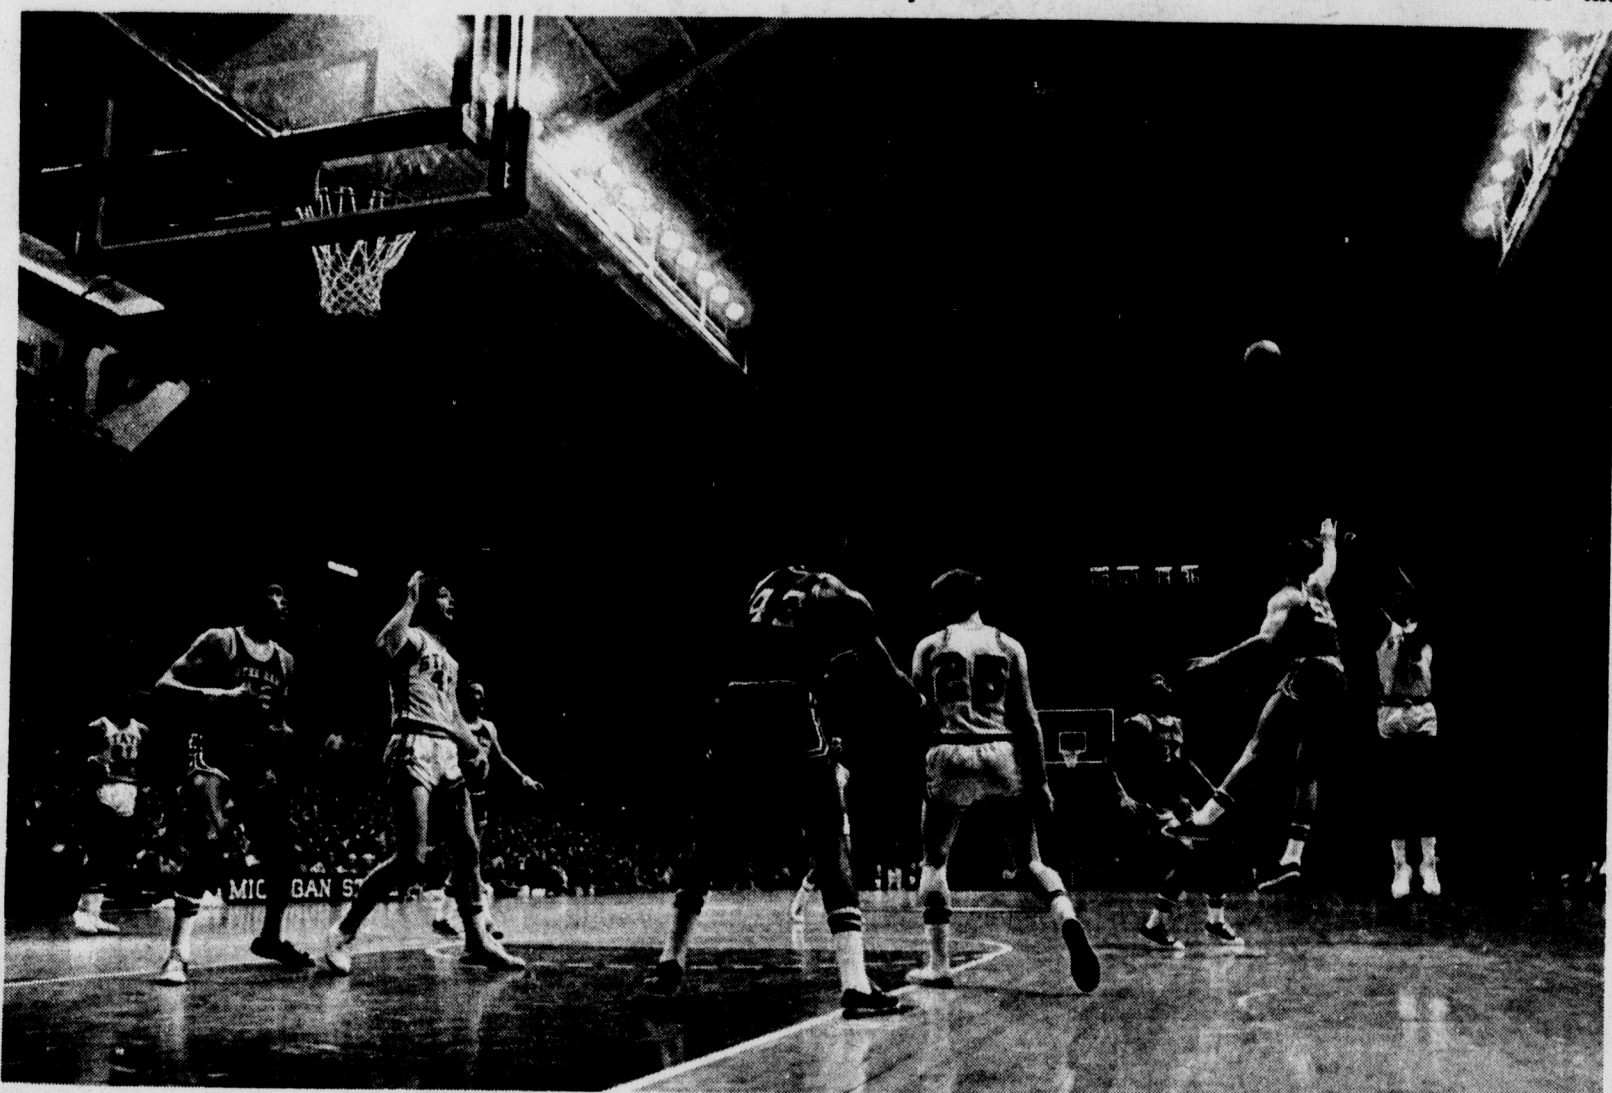

March 25-27, the squad will participate in the Red Fox Invitational Tourney at Tryon, North Carolina. Several of the Spartan golfers have been driving down to North Carolina on the weekends to practice for the tourney.

Heading the list of returnees from last year's Big Ten championship squad is senior captain Lynn Janson. Janson twice has been named All-American and All-Big Ten and is a former Michigan amateur champion. Also returning for Coach Bruce Fossum's squad will be Lee Edmundson, Graham Cooke, Rick Woulfe and Dennis Vass. Sophomores John Vandermeiden and Ron English along with freshman Tom Murphy, younger brother of last year's captain, Larry Murphy, are also expected to add depth and quality for a possible repeat of last year's performance.

The tennis picture appears bright but inexperienced. Only one senior and one junior will comprise the nine man squad which will take a 10 day, 7 game training season through the southwest part of the country from March 25 through April 3. The senior is Andy Vollweiler and the junior is Tom Gray, last year's conference runner-up at the no. 1 singles spot.

The lacrosse team under the guidance of head coach Turf Kauffman, will have a three game exhibition season before opening the regular season against Michigan on April 4. The squad, which is in their second season of competition as an official varsity sport, will meet Lafayette, Franklin and Marshall and Kenyon before returning home to meet the Wolverines.

The track squad is the only spring sport which will not undergo a spring training trip but they'll take advantage of the break for a rest. Most of the members of the indoor team which competed in the Big Ten Meet last Saturday will also perform for Head Coach Fran Dittich and assistants Jim Gibbard and Jim Bibbs.

Breslin continues tradition in competing for Spartans

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

When Brian Breslin donned the green and white of MSU early this winter, he was not the first in his family to do so.

His father, Jack, MSU's executive vice-president and secretary, played varsity football for the Spartans in 1944-45, acting as captain in his final year. Brian's brother Jay has been a member of the Spartan football team for the past two years and will end his playing career at Spartan Stadium this fall. But Brian, apparently trying to revolutionize the Breslin name, lays his athletic claim on the sport of basketball -- not football as his predecessors have.

Coming out of MSU's exclusive farm team, East Lansing High School, Brian successfully made the jump from high school to college ball. As a forward on the freshman squad, Breslin led the team in scoring with a 18.7 point average, was up near the top in the team's rebounding category, and joined Gary Ganakas in logging the most playing time on the frosh squad.

"Brian played beyond expectations as a freshman," varsity coach Gus Ganakas said. "He has improved since he's been up here. He is a very promising player, and will definitely be in the running for one of the forward posts next year."

Nicknamed "the Splinter", Brian proved to be the freshman team's most consistent offensive threat. He reached double figures in all 12 games, scoring twenty or more points in seven. Twice he scaled the thirty point plateau, once against Henry Ford and once against Illinois. His best scoring game was against Illinois when he dropped in 35 points, including a basket at the buzzer to give the frosh a narrow 88-86 win. Breslin ended the season by exploding offensively against Central Michigan and University of Detroit, accounting for 27 and 29 points, respectively.

On the boards, Breslin was almost equally tough, averaging 7.2 rebounds per contest. In the season finale against Detroit, he grabbed 16 rebounds -- crucial rebounds as the scoreboard would verify (frosh victory, 84-82). When the situation called for it, Breslin moved in with Jeff VanderLende and Jim Shereda to completely dominate the boards.

A fine defensive player, Breslin combines hustle with an uncanny ability to score in close in getting his court duties done. In the Illinois game, the 6-6, 175 pounder was pitted against the Illinois' former high school All-American, Nick Weatherspoon, in what was supposed to be a high flying offensive clash. The Illinois "superstar" was outscored by Breslin by 13 points, a credit to Breslin's defensive abilities.

"Brian's assets will fit in beautifully with the players we have now," Ganakas said in reviewing Breslin's play.

With good inside moves and fine driving abilities, Breslin will make his biggest jump next year, as he advances from freshman ball to varsity ball.

"Brian is a good, solid basketball player, and will be an immediate contribution to our team next year," Ganakas said. "If Brian Breslin continues to develop, he may find himself as a starting forward again next year."

Munn sees strengths, problems at MSU

EDITOR'S NOTE: State News Sports Writer Don Kopriva recently contacted various Big Ten athletic directors seeking their views on the financial and other problems plaguing their schools. Today he concludes his report as Biggie Munn talks about MSU's past, present and future in athletics.

Athletic Director at MSU for 16 years, Clarence "Bergie" Munn has watched the university grow in stature both academically and athletically, and he sees more growth in the future, but admits that there are problems.

Not the least of these, he says, is financial. His position as director of athletics and chief of the health, physical education and recreation program means that he must watch over some 700 HPER majors as well as hundreds of Spartan athletes.

And support for these physical education programs (both men and women) and all intra-murals comes from the Athletic Dept.,

both in terms of facilities and monies.

"Most people don't know it," Munn says, "but we support everything physical education does as well as intramurals. We even pay for the grounds crew who care for all our facilities."

Munn notes that his department has often given free use of facilities to MSU groups and organizations for pop concerts in Jensen, graduation in the stadium and the like.

But money is a problem and Munn says "in years to come, the administration will have to make up its mind if athletics is part of the educational process, if it is of value to the university and if it is worth the support of the university."

"I believe it is," Munn says, "and I think the students do too. Look, this year we've had over 58,000 people attend athletic contests on one weekend. That's really great."

"There's a value to the students here when they can participate in some way in all this," Munn says. "I don't think there's as much that can be offered in the way of good fun and relaxation as from athletics."

Munn reminisced for a minute and looked back on how MSU has grown since he came here 24 years ago as head football coach.

"The biggest thing that's ever happened to Michigan State was getting in the Big Ten," Munn says. "It meant going big league, big time, in every way, not only in athletics, but also with the deans and presidents and student organizations."

"We've had fantastic growth over the past 24 years from an

"The biggest thing that's ever happened to Michigan State was getting in the Big Ten. It meant going big league, big time, in every way, not only in athletics, but also with the deans and presidents and student organizations."

educational standpoint. We've seen new buildings and a stronger faculty. You don't hear anyone call this place a cow college anymore."

Munn thinks the change from Michigan State College to Michigan State University in 1955 augured great things for the future and just made the university change, as if overnight, into a big-time, big-thinking institution.

As for the '70s, Munn figures his department must have greater support from the university if it is to continue its high quality program unencumbered by a potentially tight money situation.

"We have had a great program, and I would like it to continue but I think the administration will force us to cut back in certain areas."

"I have no regrets about spending any money on anything where students are involved," Munn says. "That's why we're here."

But the realization must dawn, Munn says, that unless money is allocated for a successful program, MSU will cease to be "Big Ten all the way" and will become "a lesser light."

Munn foresees changes in the athletic grant-in-aid program, not in the number of tenders, but just in the amount. He said a coach will be given a certain amount of money to use on scholarships and after that, that will be it.

Munn says television has been most beneficial to the Big Ten and MSU. He calls it a "wonderful money maker" and adds that "we have a good amount in our TV fund."

But even with the income from television and a steady income from football helping the athletic scholarship fund, Munn still finds a sticky monetary situation.

"The Ralph Young Scholarship Fund is a great thing but this year we're being charged for out-of-state tuition for athletes for the first time and this has made it rough."

It has made things so rough, in fact, that MSU's athletic department outlay for tenders has increased some $100,000.

Munn is opposed to professional teams using college stadia on a regular basis. His rationale behind this is that taxpayers have paid for the university facilities through tax funds and that professional teams, seeking profit, should pay for their own facilities.

But Munn emphasizes the athletic department's willingness to serve all students in any way possible, saying "I'd like the students to try to remember that in whatever we do, we're trying to go for them."

AGAINST UNBEATEN GABLE

'S' wrestler Lowrance faces a 'Mission Impossible'

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

"Good afternoon, Mr. Lowrance. This is a picture of Dan Gable, Iowa State's superb wrestler, who has never lost in high school or college competition. Your mission should you choose to accept is to beat him in the NCAA Tourney and bring the 142-pound title back to MSU."

Several Spartan wrestlers are accorded chances of winning an individual title at the NCAA Tournament to be held March 26-28 at Northwestern, but while Keith Lowrance is possibly the best wrestler on the team his chances of picking up an individual crown seem a "Mission Impossible" with the incomparable Gable in the same weight class.

Lowrance was third behind Gable in last year's 137-pound competition and suffered his only loss of the season to Gable in the Midlands Tournament in December. The Big Ten's 142 champion should gain the NCAA Tourney's No. 2 seed at 142 and probably rates the best chance of anyone of knocking off the Cyclone ace.

In all, the Spartans have about five grapplers who rate some consideration for an individual crown.

"Greg Johnson, Tom Milkovich, Lowrance, Jack

Zindel and Vic Mittelberg all have got good records and have shots at getting into the finals," MSU Coach Grady Peninger said.

Of those five wrestlers, all of whom were champions at last week's Big Ten meet, perhaps frosh sensation Tom Milkovich would rate the top chance of winning an individual crown for MSU.

Milkovich, who has lost only to teammate Mike Ellis while winning 26 matches, has already met and beaten three of last season's NCAA place finishers at 130.

Fourth place finisher Reid Lamphere fell to Milkovich twice, including the Big Ten championship final, while fifth place finisher Mike Riley of Oklahoma State and sixth place returnee Marv Reiland of Northern Iowa were other Milkovich victims.

"Tom should definitely get the No. 1 seed for the tourney," Peninger said.

Zindel's toughest competition and the likely favorite at 190 is Oklahoma State's Geoff Baum. This pair met in the finals at the Midlands Tournament and Baum came out with a hard-earned 3-2 victory, saddling Zindel with his only loss of the year.

Zindel was sidelined with an injury when the Spartans and Cowboys met in a dual meet Jan. 24 in East Lansing. Baum whipped Zindel's replacement, Ben Lewis, by a 7-0 count as OSU took that narrow 17-16 victory.

At 118, Johnson will have to contend with several of the returning place winners from last year's 115 competition, including Ray Stapp of Oklahoma State, Terry Hall of Cal Poly and defending 115 champ John Miller of Oregon.

The toughest foes that Johnson has met this season have been Stapp (who beat Johnson) and Michigan's Jerry Hoddy (who lost to Johnson twice).

Mittelberg has done an excellent job replacing Jeff Smith at heavyweight for the Spartans. The Spartan junior has won 23 of his 25 matches on the year.

Attitude, not altitude key factor for Denver playoffs

By OLG OLSON
State News Sports Writer

The Denver Pioneers, who face off with MSU tonight in the opening round of the WCHA playoffs, have always had to counter the opposition's notion that the mile-high altitude gives the Pioneer's an advantage.

Tonight's playdown schedule also has WCHA champion Minnesota meeting Minnesota-Duluth at Duluth. The winners advance to Saturday's championship along with Friday night's victors between Wisconsin and Michigan at Denver and Michigan Tech and North Dakota at Duluth.

"There's absolutely no real truth in the altitude issue," Denver hockey coach Murray Armstrong said, "it can only affect MSU, Michigan and Wisconsin if they let it affect them."

"I won't argue with the fact that we have the home ice advantage," Armstrong said, "but the altitude factor is mostly mental."

"If a team wants to win, they play to win and don't worry about the altitude," he added. Armstrong went on to say that any of the eight teams can offer a strong challenge for the playoff title and an NCAA berth.

"In both playoffs (at Denver and Duluth)," Armstrong said, "there are eight good teams, any one of which could conceivably win the playoff titles."

"The top teams (Minnesota, Denver and Tech) have had luck and the breaks," he said, "and the tournaments offer only a one shot chance to start a whole new season."

The Pioneer's received a jolt last Saturday night when WCHA scoring champion George Morrison twisted his knee against Colorado College. But Armstrong said Wednesday that Morrison looked strong in a workout with the team Tuesday and appears to be in top form.

The Pioneer's senior winger captured his second straight scoring title, finishing with 37 points on 18 goals and 19 assists in 22 games. He is flanked by Tom Gilmore who made 10 goals and added 22 assists to nail down third place in the final scoring statistics.

"Really it's a hot goalie that will win for a team in these playoffs, though," Armstrong said when asked about his two-pronged offense. Denver has a real toughy in Ron Grahame. He played in all 22 of the Pioneer's games and was scored on 78 times, while credited with 592 saves.

Spartan coach Amo Bessone hasn't counted the Spartan ices out. "We've got as good a chance as Denver, Michigan or Wisconsin," Bessone said, "we're not looking at the pre-season record, we're looking at Denver and then the winner of the U-M and U-W game."

The Spartans have only one serious injury, and that's the loss of ace defenseman and captain Al Swanson. Swanson was hit in the eye with a stick during practice at Madison before last weekend's season finale against Wisconsin.

Bessone commented Wednesday morning before the Spartans left for Denver that he was pleased that Don Thompson, the leading scorer for the Spartans, had been named as the WCHA's outstanding sophomore. He hoped that it would give Don and the team a little added incentive against Denver.
