Senate committee OKs bar on future funds for Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved overwhelmingly Monday legislation barring funds for all future U.S. military action in Cambodia — on the ground, the sea and in the air.

senator called "a loophole big enough to drive the whole Pentagon through."

The actions came as Senate Democratic leaders scheduled a month of debate on a series of foreign policy measures, most of them centered on the President's constitutional power to deploy U.S. combat forces overseas.

The Cambodia amendment was sponsored by Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky.

It would forbid specifically the use of funds to retain U.S. forces in Cambodia, the supporting in any way the presence of U.S. advisers in Cambodia, and the conducting of any air combat activity in support of Cambodian forces.

It also would forbid the spending of funds to provide military instruction to Cambodian troops "or to provide persons to engage in any combat activity in support of Cambodian forces."

The amendment would not bar the use of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, unless they were directly supported by U.S. funds.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., meanwhile told the Senate there are now 21 co-sponsors for an amendment to set a cutoff on financial support of U.S. operations in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, except for what is needed to withdraw U.S. forces.

It is to be offered to a military procurement authorization bill, expected to be taken up by the Senate in about a month.

McGovern said 10 additional senators had told him they would vote for the amendment, making a total of 31. Thus, he said, almost one-third of the 100 senators now appear ready to vote for it.

While the committee was debating action about 30 South Vietnamese navy vessels docked at the capital of Cambodia. South Vietnamese sources reported that six U.S. Navy advisors went along to Phnom Penh with the vessels.

The flotilla was on an announced mission to unload supplies and bring thousands of Vietnamese back to their homeland.

Other units of the flotilla which left South Vietnam on Saturday remained down river, where South Vietnamese and U.S.-trained Cambodian forces secured the strategic ferry landing at Neak Luong on Highway 1.

In the group of vessels that reached Phnom Penh were five LSTs — landing ship tanks — and these were expected to bring back some of the 200,000 Vietnamese living in the capital.

A White House spokesman said there is no change in President Nixon's policy that American personnel would not go beyond 21.7 miles into Cambodia "and there have been no U.S. personnel beyond that." The spokesman made that statement in response to a question about the report that advisers were in Phnom Penh.

At the Pentagon in Washington, a spokesman interpreted the flotilla's mission as a relief operation rather than a military exercise after the vessels passed the limit set for combat activity.

He said that if the South Vietnamese expedition runs into enemy attack on the way back from Phnom Penh, he assumes the South Vietnamese forces would act to save the situation.

Policy modifications face Academic Council

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

Recommended policies on campus disturbances, proposed revisions to the Academic Freedom Report and amendments to the Faculty Bylaws will be discussed today by the Academic Council.

The meeting will be held at 3:15 p.m. in the Auditorium. According to A. L. Thurman, chairman of the University Student Affairs Committee, (USAC) a report on policies and procedures concerning campus demonstrations was requested by the board of Trustees almost two years ago.

The first document, presented to the Academic Council last November, was criticized by campus blacks who complained that no blacks were involved in its consideration.

ASMSU was then charged with making certain blacks more involved with the document, Thurman said. There was one deletion made when ASMSU returned the report to Thurman's committee. They wished to have excluded the section that said, although protests and demonstrations are recognized as part of growth and change, violence and destruction would not be condoned, agreements would not be made under duress, and amnesty could not be guaranteed.

The report will go to the Academic Council today with USAC, in favor of the above conditions and ASMSU against them.

The council will also discuss revisions proposed to articles 2, 5, 6 and 7 of the Academic Freedom Report; Thurman said these changes are designed to bring the document into line with the McKee Report adopted April 7.

Article 6 is a complete revision of the relationship between the University and student publications.

After extensive hearings on the subject, and after a study of other Big Ten and private Universities' approaches to campus publications, it was the consensus of an ad hoc committee that MSU should disengage itself from sponsoring, or being responsible for, the content or financial stability of any student publication.

It was the feeling of the subcommittee that student publications under direct university control are anachronistic and pressure from the University community would be sufficient to insure responsible and competitive journalism.

Approved by both USAC and ASMSU, the changes are designed to pave the way toward incorporation of the State News, Thurman said.

Article Five, if adopted as revised, would require regulations governing student conduct to be considered in two categories: MSU General Student Regulations and MSU Student Group Regulations.

General regulations would be those established in order to secure the safety of members of the University community, maintain order and insure successful operation of the University.

Student group regulations would be those established to govern student conduct with student groups, specifically, living unit student groups and registered student organizations.

Article Two concerns the policies determining the academic rights and responsibilities of students and faculty, and Article Seven sets the procedure by which the document may be amended.

Recommended amendments to the Faculty Bylaws to make them consistent with Academic Council action of student participation in academic government will also be discussed.

President Wharton is scheduled to make remarks at the end of the meeting.

On May 26, the Academic Council is scheduled to discuss ROTC.

Strikers, officials stalemated

Approximately 200 people jammed the Board of Trustees Room in the Administration Bldg. Tuesday afternoon for a meeting of the minds about the strike going on within the University and the strikers demands.

The meeting was called by President

Wharton in an attempt to have the issues discussed by various groups within the University structure. Although Wharton had intended to have only representatives from each student organization, the strike steering committee, the faculty-graduate assistant strike committee, anti-strikers and the Administration, the crowd was allowed to stay.

Throughout the three and half hour session, Wharton reasserted the University's previous position on the strike and the demands.

With the strikers still pressing for their demands, the meeting was a standoff. But, the meeting was the first session between representatives of the steering committee and the administration. Another meeting is planned today from noon to 2 p.m. between the same representatives.

Although nothing definite was resolved, a wide range of issues including the concept of the University and academic freedom were discussed. Wharton pointed out that the channels within the University were viable, but the strikers continuously disagreed with him.

The meeting followed a strike rally of about 3,000 people in front of Beaumont Tower.

Controversy broke out throughout the meeting concerning the strikers' demands. Wharton emphasized during the meeting that he had called it for discussion purposes rather than as a negotiating session.

Strike representatives questioned Wharton continuously about his plans concerning their issues.

The president announced that a commission was being formed to discuss open admissions and other issues. But, he pointed out that the commission was planned long before the strike came. The commission will report its findings after a year of study.

Wharton said that many students weren't familiar with the background of many of the issues. He added that there is no point in jumping into things before they have been researched.

The meeting was disrupted from time to time with emotional outbursts from the crowd and with several soundings of building fire alarms.

At the rally which preceded the march to the Administration Bldg., about 3,000 students and faculty heard the strike steering committee position statement on the strike presented by Pat Martin, Lubbock, Texas, freshman.

"Rather than calling this phenomenon a strike it could be recognized as a massive awakening to the issues long present,"

IN SENATE

Abortion vote due today

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The Senate faces a critical vote on an abortion reform this week, probably today, in an effort to overturn Wednesday's defeat of the measure.

Proponents of the reform legislation that would allow an abortion during the first 90 days of pregnancy, needs to pick up three votes to send the bill to the House.

Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe, R - Dearborn, said she has been talking to senators since last week's 17-19 rejection of the bill in order to gain more support.

She also said she would support an amendment requiring the written consent of the husband, when he is available, to get enough votes for the bill.

"We've been checking since Wednesday with doctors and hospitals, and almost without exception, they support this amendment," Mrs. Beebe said. "This is a good amendment and there is no reason why it can't work."

She said she is "much more optimistic" about passage of the bill than she was during last week's vote.

Two senators did not vote on the issue last week: Sen. Harold Hungerford, R - Lansing and Sen. Robert Huber, R - Troy.

In a vote last year, however, Hungerford voted for a less liberal bill and Huber voted against it.

Three senators changed their votes from last year, two swinging their votes for the bill, one going against it.

Sen. Stanley Rozycycki, D - Detroit, went against the bill last week while Sen. George Kuhn, R - Birmingham, and Sen. John Toeppe, R - Cadillac, changed their previous "no" votes to "yes" votes.

And of five senators who were absent from last year's 16-17 vote, only one voted for the bill this year.

Polly Gibson, Senate candidate from the 24th district, also urged passage of a similar abortion bill Monday as "important and constructive legislation for our citizens." She said the abortion measure should be reconsidered by the Senate and urged the House of Representatives to consider HB No. 3364, a bill she called carefully researched and thoroughly studied.

Speaking before the members of the Edward W. Sparrow Hospital Guild today, Mrs. Gibson said this bill recognizes that abortion is a real concern to people with religious convictions, but it would allow those who do not share their views to make their own decisions. She termed this "a right of individual judgment."

"It is only reasonable that there will continue to be abortions," Mrs. Gibson said. "But under the pending revision it will no longer be a violation of the law, done often under unsanitary conditions, by untrained people and frequently endangering a woman's life."

Mrs. Gibson feels that our elected officials should have the courage to vote to bring law into concert with reality. Further, she said, a revision of the law would make the right of individual judgment available to all women.

Election postponed

Elections for 11 positions on the Off-Campus Council of ASMSU have been postponed until May 20.

Petitions will be available until Friday and must be turned in to 334 or 323 Student Services Bldg. Fifty signatures are required.

Reuther death seats Mazey as UAW's temporary leader

From Our Wire Services

DETROIT — Emil Mazey, one of five men likely to succeed Walter P. Reuther as president of the United Auto Workers (UAW), took over as acting president Monday.

Reuther, 62; his wife May, 59; their bodyguard; a Philadelphia architect; and the pilot and co-pilot were killed Saturday night when their chartered executive jet plummeted into a wooded area near Pellston, at the northern tip of Lower Michigan.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Friday.

Only when the funeral is over will the remaining 25 members of the UAW's International Executive Board (IEB) meet to select a successor to Reuther.

A date for the board meeting has not yet been set.

But when the board meets, members probably will choose one of five men — Mazey, secretary-treasurer — or Donald Basler, Pat Greathouse, Leonard Woodcock or Ken Bannan — each a union vice president in charge of Chrysler, American Motors, General Motors and Ford departments respectively.

Under the UAW constitution, Mazey, 57, the union's number 2 man, took over as acting president when Reuther died. He filled that post once in 1948 while Reuther recovered from a potential assassin's shotgun blast which left his right arm partially paralyzed.

But Mazey is considered more at home with the union's finances than with arduous, tension-packed bargaining.

Mazey's career in organized labor began when he was 20. He participated in a 1933 strike against Briggs Manufacturing Co. of Detroit, where he made automobile seat cushions.

Like Reuther in his early years, Mazey was labeled "a radical" and "rabble rouser" by his critics. A veteran of those days said, "Wherever there was a picket line you'd usually find Emil."

After helping organize Briggs, where he later became local union president, Mazey moved on to organizing at Gulf Refining and Rotary Steel Electric in Detroit. Then he went to Ford where Reuther also was working.

Mazey became a central figure in an internal upheaval within the UAW which resulted in the overthrow of Homer Martin as president in 1939, its withdrawal from the American Federation of Labor and affiliation with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

TO GOVERNORS

Nixon outlines policy on Cambodian attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon briefed the nation's governors Monday on the Cambodian military venture and opened up the possibility he may put on a teletone beamed at campus unrest.

Prior to the final breakup of the closed meeting, newsmen heard a report that it generated a bit of heat between Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Democratic Gov. Frank Licht of Rhode Island over the issue of student disorders.

However, Licht told newsmen later that he had no clash with anyone at the session. He said he relayed to Nixon the views of some Rhode Island college presidents and students and "I indicated to him that we ought to have some means of communication with the students."

Licht said Agnew did not respond to his statement. And in the end Nixon got a standing ovation for his efforts to bring the governors up to date on both the military and domestic problems even if his listeners were not unanimously for his policies.

Nixon said at the outset he would discuss the economy as well as Vietnam and Cambodia but Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis, D - Maine, said he never got around to the economy.

The concentration was on Cambodia and student opposition and disorders which, in part at least, spring from the presidential policies and actions on Indochina.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers talked to the governors about the diplomatic situation and Gen. John Vogt, executive secretary of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, covered the military operations in Cambodia.

A lengthy question and answer session followed.

Gov. John A. Love, R - Colo., chairman of the National Conference of Governors, told reporters afterward it was a very useful meeting, hopeful for the President as well as for the governors.

It was Gov. John M. Dempsey, D-Conn., chairman of the Organization of Democratic Governors, who mentioned to newsmen that a teletone was discussed as a means of establishing better communications with students.

Later on, White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters that the governors discussed the possibility of setting up formal structures for communicating with students. And he recalled that Nixon had used these hours-long TV programs several times during his presidential campaign to answer questions from panels or inquiries coming in by telephone.

And Ziegler indicated Nixon would be willing to do this again, if it could be

Committee adopts grade policy

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer
Nearly 200 striking faculty and graduate assistants met Sunday evening to adopt a set of recommendations for grading striking students.

The members of the Faculty - Graduate Assistant Strike Committee voted to accept and promote these five recommendations:
- To handle grading according to the World War II solution.

When a student was drafted during a term, his grade for the course was based on what he had done up to that point. A striking student, therefore, would be given a grade for the course based on his work up to the time he joined the strike.

- To give students take-home exams. Non-strikers could do an optional paper in addition, if they wanted to, by arrangement with the instructor.
- To give striking students passing grades, on the reasoning that the educational value of the strike - being forced to think about the issues and to examine their own state of knowledge in relation to them - is worth, at the least, a 2.0.

- To grade students on a credit - no credit basis, if the Academic Council can be persuaded to authorize use of credit - no credit grades for this term, even if the student didn't originally register for this type of grade.
- To allow striking students to withdraw from a course they are enrolled in and receive an N grade.

The striking faculty and graduate assistants also are preparing a document to answer President Wharton's statement released late Sunday afternoon which again urged striking faculty to return to "business as usual."

The committee asserted that the president in his statement has tried to separate the faculty "from our deepest sensibilities, our own definition of professional standards and, most important, from establishing a humane relationship with our students."

The committee reiterated its concern that the rights of each member of the University community be respected fully, whether or not he supports the strike.

"We will endeavor to realize, as an outgrowth of the strike, a new student - faculty Bill of Rights and a more embracing definition of Academic Freedom."

"The immediate situation provides the opportunity to work toward that goal; to establish faculty - student relationships that will enhance learning and self-expression, not stifle the authentic impulses that many of us have already noted in this student body."

FOR CHANGES

Channels' efficiency questioned

By KATHY MORAN
State News Staff Writer

The channels for initiating changes in the status of the ROTC program are open but have not been utilized, according to President Wharton.

Some students and faculty members argue to the contrary. Following the normal procedure, an individual student or faculty member or a group desiring a curriculum change like this can present a proposal to ASMSU or go directly to the Faculty Steering Committee, Walter Johnson, professor of labor and industrial relations, said recently.

A proposal submitted to ASMSU would be considered by the Student Board, and then referred to the steering committee. After discussion in the steering committee, the proposal can be placed on the agenda of the Academic Council. A council agenda item may be tabled, voted on or referred to committee by the council.

Demands to abolish ROTC or make changes in its present status would be referred to the Educational Policies Committee or the Educational Curriculum Committee, Johnson said.

The committee would submit a report back to the Academic Council, which would then take action on or veto the report.

If the proposal is passed, it would be referred to the All-University Senate and then to the board of trustees. The Senate acts as an information body with its only authority being to refer the proposal back to the council. In some cases, the Academic Council can refer a proposal directly to the president and the trustees, thus avoiding the Academic Senate. "The ultimate decision rests with the board of trustees," Johnson said.

He cited the case about 11 years ago when the faculty overwhelmingly voted to make ROTC optional, instead of compulsory. The board of trustees voted it down and the change in its status did not come until 1962 after the military had recommended the change in status, Johnson said.

In that case, it took three years for the proposal to pass through the channels.

A six-month procedure to change the status of the Military Education Advisory Committee ended in failure for a group of faculty members this year.

Last week, Robert Repas, professor of labor and industrial relations, wrote a letter to President Wharton complaining that a group of faculty members had followed the channels and had gotten nowhere.

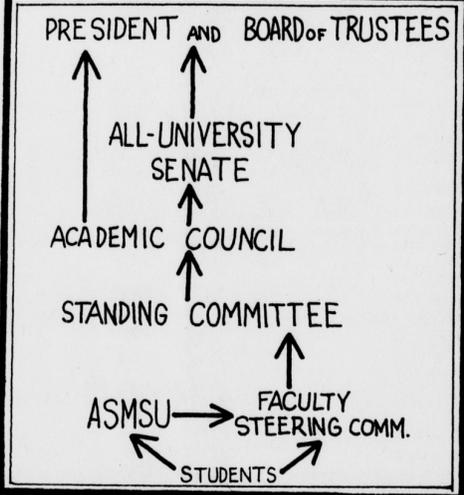

Repas said the process began in early November when the faculty members requested the creation of a faculty standing committee on ROTC "so that the faculty could obtain basic information concerning the operations of that department."

"The Military Education Advisory Committee could more properly be called the 'Military Concealment Committee' because they systematically concealed information from the University," Repas alleged.

He cited the fact that the University contributes $93,000 per year to the ROTC programs in the form of secretaries' salaries, free lodging and lighting. Repas said this information was concealed from the University until April 13, when it was revealed at the Academic Council.

"No one is aware of the fact that the ROTC Revitalization Act specifically states that the secretaries of the Air Force and Army have the final say on the proposal for a committee to review the ROTC program was defeated in the Academic Council and no reason was given to the sponsors, according to Repas.

"I am more than a little irked by the way the faculty machinery handled our request," Repas said in his letter to Wharton. "None of us were invited to appear either before the Education Policies Committee or before the Steering Committee itself when it made a decision on our proposal."

HALT OPERATIONS

Big 4 to honor Reuther

DETROIT (AP) - Auto plants throughout the nation will stop operations Friday when United Auto Workers and others stand in three minutes of silence in memory of Walter P. Reuther, a labor leader who dedicated his life to battling for what he envisioned as economic and social justice.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors announced that all their plants will shut down for three minutes at 10 a.m. local time in tribute to Reuther.

Reuther, 62; his wife, May, 59, and four other persons died in a Saturday night airplane crash near Pellston.

Funeral services for the Ruethers will be held at 10 a.m. Friday in Detroit's 21,026-capacity Ford Auditorium.

Gov. William Milliken proclaimed Friday "Walter Reuther Day" in Michigan, and described him as a leader who "fought courageously and successfully not only for better wages and benefits for his members, but also for a better contract with life for all citizens."

U-C protester sets self afire, succumbs

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) - College senior George Winne Jr., a retired Navy captain's son who was being called to military service, died Monday after pouring kerosene over himself and setting it afire as a protest against war.

"He was just too sensitive," said his mother.

Friends said the 23-year-old Winne, majoring in ancient history at the University of California campus here, became withdrawn and brooding after his draft notice came a few weeks ago.

"In the name of God, end the war," said the cardboard sign he carried Sunday afternoon in front of the campus center.
"Why don't you get out of here," said a demonstrator.
Winne had completed degree requirements in March and was to graduate next month.

Six American soldiers are under restrictions pending an investigation of their refusal to make a combat assault into Cambodia, a spokesman for the U.S. 4th Infantry Division said Monday.

The spokesman said two separate incidents occurred at fire support base Meredith on May 7 and 8. The investigation will determine if the case will be dismissed or go to a court martial.

The Cambodian government has quietly launched a campaign to rid the country of its minority Vietnamese citizens.

The government is simply planning to ship possibly 100,000 Vietnamese to South Vietnam. Hundreds of Vietnamese were executed in last month's campaign to round up suspected Viet Cong.

Police and army troops have been systematically rounding up Vietnamese since April 30.

West German envoy Egon Bahr was reported showing quite a bit of optimism Monday about his coming round of talks in Moscow with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Bahr is scheduled to have his 11th meeting with Gromyko Tuesday to pick up where they left off March in preliminary discussions of a mutual non-aggression pact.

Addonizio awaits a June 2 trial on federal extortion and income tax evasion charges, while his opponents use to justify accusations of official corruption in the Addonizio administration.

Kenneth Gibson, a black city engineer, appears to be the strongest challenger. His nomination by an unofficial convention of blacks and Puerto Ricans, which excluded whites, has brought charges of racism against him.

A third candidate, Anthony Imperiale, has support from Addonizio's traditional Italian - American community base, although Imperiale has slipped in the most recent polls.

George Richardson, assistant leader of the State Assembly's Democratic minority; John Caufield, formerly fire director who broke with Addonizio, and State Sen. Alexander Matturri are the other candidates for mayor.

He was ordered by Circuit Judge Roman Snow Monday to spend no less than 20 years in jail and no more than 21. Judge Snow said the sentence is mandatory and he hoped Bruinsma would be given consideration for parole and time off for good behavior if he conducts himself properly.

He was convicted in December by a jury and denied a new trial.

Bruinsma was described by police as a fugitive from California where he is charged with drug possession.

'U' cheer head charges racism

PAULINE HESS

Pauline Hess, director of MSU cheerleaders, Monday charged Don Coleman, asst. director in the Dean of Students Office; Celeste Moy, Detroit sophomore and member of the cheerleading squad; and an investigative task force of the Black Liberation Front (BLF) with "racism, discrimination and harassment."

Miss Hess has been on self-imposed leave of absence with full pay since February, after being accused of discriminatory practices against black cheerleaders.

In a press conference at the Jack Tar Hotel Miss Hess said she has been "vindicated" and that she will return to her position as cheerleading director.

She said that evidence to support her charges was displayed in a memorandum written to her by Coleman, in a newspaper article, "Cheer Director Accused of Racism," and at the Feb. 5 meeting in which she said she was harassed by members of the BLF investigative task force.

Miss Hess said she plans to file official claims of discrimination, according to the Brookover

Report, with President Wharton and "other responsible University officials."

She said she has remained silent, for the three months since the charges were made against her under the advice of her attorneys, Zolton Ferency and Charles Willingham. She said she was advised to remain silent until "due process" could be enacted.

"As an 18-year faithful and successful member of this University staff and community, I am utterly appalled that this University administration, namely President Wharton and Vice President Breslin, have not taken agreed upon action in my behalf and have been willing to remain mute while I continue to suffer."

She said "their maladministration is, in my estimation, inexcusable and will, if continued, cause many more persons like myself to sustain extensive, irreparable damage." Miss Hess said charges of racism and discrimination, about her published and uttered at University meetings, were "unfair, ridiculous and false." She charged that her professional and personal reputations have been seriously damaged as a result of these charges and accusations.

Marge Smith (asst. cheerleader director) and I firmly disrespect the decision of the MSU administration in requesting that both black cheerleaders during last year's four weeks of tryouts make the squad, regardless of ability," she said. "This matter must be resolved, or chaos will always exist within cheerleader squads."

Miss Moy and Lynn Weaver, Flint junior, are the two black students on the squad. Miss Hess said Miss Weaver was qualified to be on the squad but that Miss Moy was not.

SENATE VOTES

Blackmun OK expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge Harry A. Blackmun's nomination to the Supreme Court was brought up in the Senate Monday and appeared headed for an easy ride to confirmation. In sharp contrast to the tense and quarrelsome atmosphere that marked consideration of President Nixon's two earlier nominations — both of which were voted down — Blackmun's name brought only relaxed words of praise.

The Senate agreed, because of the number of absentee members, to hold off the vote until 2:30 o'clock today.

Both Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said they knew of no opposition to the 61-year-old Rochester, Minn., judge.

Blackmun, a member of the 8th U.S. Court of Appeals for nearly 11 years, was nominated for the year-old court vacancy on April 15.

Sen. Philip A. Hart of Michigan, a leader of the Senate's Democratic liberals, said that "in this nomination the President has indeed chosen from among the very best."

A conservative Southern Democrat, Sen. John L. McClellan of Arkansas, said he is in general agreement with the philosophy of most of Blackmun's opinions.

ROTC rallier sentenced

A student arrested at the anti-ROTC demonstration on May 1 was sentenced in East Lansing Municipal Court Monday.

John B. Pence, Tecumseh freshman, pleaded guilty to charges of indecent and obscene language and of creating a disturbance. For each of the two counts Pence was fined $100 and $10 for costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail or 30 days upon failure to pay fine and costs.

Pence was returned to Ingham County Jail following his appearance in court.

Many campuses reopen following week of protests

Many colleges and universities in the nation reopened for classes Monday after a week of antiwar protests. But special programs, official closings and student strikes kept other schools academically curtailed or shutdown.

Most of the country's campuses were reported calm, although skirmishes with police were reported at some schools. Many of the schools which reopened did not return to campus routines but scheduled special classes and programs about the Indochina war and the killing of four students at Ohio's Kent State University. Some administrators left it up to students and faculty whether to attend classes.

A student strike information center set up at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., said Monday that it counted 157 colleges and universities in the country with student strikes. Students at other colleges were planning to vote on strike proposals, the center said.

No estimate was available on the number of the nation's 1,500 colleges and universities which reopened Monday.

There were some moves by students against demonstrations and student strikes.

Students, faculty and administrators at St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., sent a letter to President Nixon decrying campus disorders and student strikes.

"We cannot subscribe to irrational and violent methods of dissent since they imply abandonment of the fundamental principles for which a college should stand," the letter said.

English Dept. maps student strike policy

The policy committee of the Dept. of English and Alan M. Hollingsworth, department chairman, have announced the following policy on class attendance and strike participation:

"Students who had at least a 2.0 (3.0 for graduate students) average in a given course on Wednesday, May 6, and who are on strike and who do no further work in the term should the strike last that long will receive a uniform grade of 2.0 (3.0 for graduate students) in the course."

The statement said that if the strike ends before the term is over, striking students will be expected to return to class. A 2.0 grade will be entered for all worked missed because of the student's participation in the strike.

Any faculty member of the Dept. of English who chooses not to hold regular classes should "continue to participate in an education process with his students," the policy states.

"He is obligated to confer with and to try to satisfy the requests of students who are not in sympathy with his decision. He must provide ways by which a student who wishes to complete original requirements of the course may do so," the policy continues.

The department is working for a University credit - no credit option for students participating in the strike, Fred E. Carlisle, director of the department's undergraduate program, said Monday.

Praising Walter Reuther, who valued mankind

A national figure dies. Everyone, even his enemies, spring to offer him praise. Walter Philip Reuther is one of few who deserve that praise.

Reuther, as president of United Auto Workers (UAW) for 24 years, brought to collective bargaining the idea that money isn't everything. He contended that a worker's economic needs were inseparable from his political needs and consequently developed the UAW into one of the strongest political groups in the nation. The UAW political action programs were usually well-funded and well-organized in areas where the union was strong.

Reuther was deeply immersed in the current issues of the day that affect youth as well as workers. Just two days before his airplane crash, he sent a strongly worded letter to President Nixon expressing concern over the Cambodian invasion:

"You pledged to bring America together, yet by your action, you have dangerously alienated millions of young Americans."

Being issue orientated rather than party orientated, Reuther was against militarism and the anti-ballistic missile system and staunchly opposed to communism.

However, it was at the bargaining table that Reuther was the most dynamic. General Motors President Charles E. Wilson once said to him: "I'd like to get in a poker game with you when the stakes weren't a billion dollars."

When Reuther joined the UAW in 1935, the auto worker had to raise his hand to go to the restroom and was paid 48 cents an hour.

Now, auto workers earn an average $4.03 an hour and have supplemental unemployment benefits, severance pay, life insurance, health insurance and 46 minutes a day of "paid relief time."

Reuther's tactics ranged from behind-the-scenes political organizing to the "Battle of the Overpass," in 1937 when Reuther and other UAW members passed out handbills to organize workers on Ford's Detroit plant. They were standing on the overpass between the plant and the parking lot when "goons" rushed him, bounced him down the overpass steps and left him bleeding.

In the frustrating years that followed, the UAW initiated the sit-down as an instrument in modern economic activism. Although the Supreme Court later ruled that sit-downs were illegal, similar pacifist protests have been successfully used by groups - including students - for a variety of issues and crises.

The executive board of the UAW issued a statement Sunday on their president's untimely death:

"He was deeply and constantly committed to the cause of social and economic justice throughout the world. He measured goodness and righteousness only in terms of human beings and their dreams for a better world, and we measure him by his unselfish devotion to the cause of people."

The description accurately describes the man and his effect upon his times.

We must not abandon strike

Sunday I was placed in the unenviable position of being the editorial editor of this newspaper and disagreeing with an editorial that the rest of the editorial board sincerely believed should run.

The editorial called for an end to the strike. The main thrust of the editorial was that the point had been made, and nothing further could be gained by staying away from class.

If we were only talking about this university, then perhaps that position would be the only reasonable conclusion. I think, though, that now is the time when the strike must be massing support, not abandoning the support already gained.

The editorial board believes that if the University is closed, the flow of knowledge would be needlessly impeded. This assumes, however, that all those students who strike will go into hibernation until the strike is over. It is not the strike's intent, as I see it, to stop education but rather to divert discussion to the immediate issues at hand. Trite as it sounds, I suppose that involves priorities. Maybe it means realizing that in the situation we now find ourselves, discussing the religious symbolism in the "Old Man and the Sea" is less important than discussing what caused this nation, in the form of Nixon, to become involved in Indochina.

But further, it means saying to this nation, as students all across this country, that we have marched, we have sat in, we have petitioned, we have written letters and nothing has worked. It means saying that this University, and all others, refuse to cooperate until something is done.

Granted, it's not logical. It's a gut-level response to which concrete ends cannot be attributed. But it has brought results. Consider Hickle's letter and the resignation of Nixon's advisor on youth. It has caused Nixon to at least meet with youth and college administrators.

That doesn't mean that the nation's course will change. What it does mean,

POINT OF VIEW

Black faculty proposes 'liberation' workshops

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following point of view is the position paper developed at the black faculty teach-in of May 8 and 9.

We, the black faculty and students of MSU participating in the black faculty teach-in of May 8 and 9, hereby firmly reassert that our cause as members of the black community is a PROTRACTED STRUGGLE involving nationalism and interlocking oppression and exploitation between domestic and international policies as they relate to military, economic, legal, educational and political resources and opportunities. To shut down the University without a specific program does not meet the needs of the black community. This plan was conceived without sounding out the black community. It came about primarily because of the tragic events at Kent State where four white students were killed by National Guardsmen. Although we are in sympathy with the protestors, the nature of our protracted struggle and constant oppression demands that we view and respond to it in the light of our political objectives as an oppressed community. A strike is one response to the current evils, but it is not enough.

We urge the University to channel its considerable resources to deal with the current crises and the continuous struggle of black people in a constructive manner.

From this perspective we acknowledge that a strike at MSU could have positive ramifications if normal classroom activities were suspended in favor of: 1. Constructive "liberation" workshops with the aim of finding alternative solutions to the intermittent and continuous struggles. These workshops would operate in lieu of normal classes and would operate within every unit of the University. Faculty, students and administrators should be actively involved. Required participation in workshops should result in securing credits that are equivalent to the courses enrolled in at the time of the disruption. A pass-fail grade is recommended. 2. If the University should shut down, the black community intends to maintain the educational process through workshops in homes and buildings designated as the "liberation zone." 3. If the University remains open, the black community considers it essential for our protracted struggle that these workshops be instituted during other than classroom hours. 4. Suggested workshops for black faculty and students a. Survival and Commitment at MSU (individual and group socio-economic problems, i.e. financial aid, academic difficulties, self-determination and motivation, supportive services.) b. Politics and the Law (black political power, community control, administration of justice.) c. Community Action (coordination of campus and community efforts to build and maintain the black community, i.e. assisting day centers, welfare mothers educational project, etc.) d. U.S. Foreign Policy (role of the University, the federal government, private enterprise in internal affairs of third world countries, particularly Africa.) e. Domestic Policy and government programs (study of poverty, racial conflict, education and relationship to campus and community.) f. Cultural Workshop (role of artists, writers, poets and others within the black community.) g. Research Workshops (designation of priority research, coordination of all workshops; writing proposals.)

These liberation workshops should be organized immediately. All efforts should be directed toward advancing concrete programs of action. The issues raised in the working paper as well as additional ones provide the bases of discussion and analysis.

We perceive this proposal as a thrust toward a different and more relevant level of commitment. This is an action-oriented project and reflects a new black activism with the tactics and strategies for obtaining meaningful and profound social change. We urge the entire University community to consider such an alternative.

We further resolve that whereas the United States has continually taken the position of racist, imperialist aggressor, as witnessed by her blatant tactics of political intervention, suppression, counter-revolution and economic exploitation of various third world peoples, we declare the recent invasion of Cambodia as a more blatant indication of a systematic process of genocide and ever more vicious attacks upon the darker peoples of the third world. We find ourselves in fundamental solidarity with the oppressed peoples of the world waging heroic struggles of national liberation.

As a result of the analogous oppression of blacks in America; as a result of physical and political assassinations of such black leaders as Fred Hampton, Mark Clark, Malcolm X, and Martin Luther King; as a result of such repressive measures as the "No-Knock" and McCarran acts, and as a result of American blacks being used as cannon fodder for such imperialist wars as may be fought (colonized against black colonized), we furthermore condemn the United States for any act in whatever form which serves to thwart the just aspirations of such peoples.

OUR READERS' MIND

Youth must reshape our society

To the Editor:

The events of the past week are not events in isolation. For months the youth of America have attempted to focus national concern on the reshaping of public policy. In the accelerated pace of social change it is the students closest to the dynamics of change who sense the plight of the human race and social values. On these issues university personnel, in whatever role, must respond. Educational institutions have always been charged with the transfer of knowledge from one generation to another. They are now charged with the preservation of a generation of youth. Not only are we faced with the physical loss of this generation, but we are faced with their alienation and loss as potential future leaders. This is a matter of conscience. It is also a matter of survival.

America is without leadership. Both political parties have failed to provide men of action who are responsive to the pleas for peace and the search for social justice. More significantly, neither party has as yet provided us with the leadership and momentum to shape meaningful alternatives for our society.

When I left Washington last Nov. 15, I had felt that my own definitions of purpose had been refocused. It was in a special way a private experience and a rebirth. I felt, too, that it might already be too late for my own generation to sense the direction of society fast enough in order to provide leadership. Perhaps this was premature for I sensed also that the forces behind the moratorium would be regenerated on the campuses throughout the nation, at the grass roots of the educational process of which I remain a part. It is here that the youth must reshape our society. It is here that leadership has roots.

I have supported the immediate strike. It has been essential in drawing the attention of the nation to our cause. It has allowed the recruitment of thousands to the labor and dedication of our efforts. But to continue a complete strike is to "curtail education." Rather than to retool our efforts elsewhere we ought to plant them more firmly. As a group we have a greater chance to be heard. We should reorganize our commitments on campus so as to remain involved in the sustained effort of recruitment and persuasion. As your editorial in Monday's State News indicates, we must remain open to deal with the issues, in the process of which we must expand the dimensions of our educational efforts.

I support keeping our classes functioning, using these to sharpen our thoughts in depth. I support the encouragement of flexible approaches to learning so that work delayed by the events of these several weeks may be met by a variety of alternatives. I support the adjustment in educational priorities, but not their suspension. I urge a long phased, sustained, organized effort to involve all students in the political process. This University should join the several which have already scheduled a two-week open-period in the fall to give students time to be directly involved in the pre-election work in support of the issues and candidates.

We are all engaged in the process of education. This is a joint effort among all students and faculty on campus. We must extend this effort to the community at large. We must remain open to do this. We must all restructure our commitments as educators to allow for it.

associate professor,

Faculty strike?

To the Editor:

Why faculty should not go on strike (1) It would be immoral to deprive students of instruction that they have paid for; therefore if the University closed down, students would have to be refunded. (2) Teaching is part of what the faculty is paid to do. Consequently striking instructors would have to forfeit their pay. (3) We will hurt our students, educationally, vocationally, and professionally, if there is a complete shutdown for any length of time. (4) A strike of faculty would probably hurt the University and the faculty as well, reducing still further public support and funds. (5) Finally, as to the achievement of the main objective of the strike, the strike may be counterproductive by hardening the administration's policy and possibly alienating many potential opponents of Nixon's Cambodian policy.

BLFI STATEMENT

New structure established

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following statement was released by Black Liberation Front International (BLFI).

During the past few weeks the black student community has been involved in a significant democratic experiment brought about by the widespread dissatisfaction which existed concerning the organizational structure of the Black Liberation Front International. It was the opinion of many black students that the structure had succumbed to the temptations of turning into a rigid bureaucracy without well-defined and effective means of continuous inter-relationship with the many members of the black student community.

As a consequence of these opinions, a series of mass meetings, as well as dorm meetings and off-campus meetings were held, after being publicized in the press and through leaflets. The results of all this activity was the drawing up of a constitution and the holding of elections for a newly formed representative council and an executive council.

Briefly, the representative council consists of delegates elected from all dorms and from off-campus. Being the most sensitive to the will of its constituents, this body elected a new executive council to serve as the voice of the black student community. The members of the new executive board are George Fleming, Tony Martin, LaMar Thomas, Bill Powers and Stan McClinton. It should be noted that the peoples' newly elected organization continues to support the Office of Black Affairs and will continue to promote a harmonious relationship.

We hope to profit from the past experiences, mistakes and successes of our predecessors we will continue in our efforts to give organizational legitimacy to the just needs and aspirations of the black student community.

Mobe deters D.C. violence

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

News Background

Violence played a small role in last weekend's demonstrations in Washington, D.C. A large share of the credit for the prevailing peace must go to the marshals of the New Mobe.

Non-violence was what the marshals were hoping for, but they did not really expect it.

"The feeling I've gotten from a lot of people is that they're tired of non-violence, and they're bringing guns," the Washington Evening Star quoted one marshal as saying.

"Things look bad," one marshal, a young minister from Washington's Catholic University, said late Friday night. "For example, when the Army convoys went by, there were a lot of kids yelling things such as 'Pigs!' at them. The whole mood seems hostile."

Several thousand demonstrators worked as marshals. Volunteers could become marshals simply by asking a group leader for an identifying green armband.

The marshals had a simple strategy: let those determined to force a confrontation go their own way and let the police handle them. Try to dissuade other people from joining the confrontation-seekers. Steer spectators away from scenes of violence. And talk, talk, talk to calm people down.

When the ellipse rally broke up at 3 p.m. and militant demonstrators took to the streets, Mobe marshals linked hands to form lines across streets which led to scenes of confrontation. They would not physically keep demonstrators from passing by, but the marshals gave them warnings.

When demonstrators at one of the bus barricades around the White House deflated bus tires and began to rock the buses, marshals — as well as other demonstrators — climbed to the bus tops and tried to calm those below. On several occasions, the tactic diffused potentially troubled situations before police would have had to move in with tear gas.

Eventually, there was some scattered violence late Saturday and early Sunday. Police used tear gas, and some demonstrators were caught, such as those who were sleeping at the Washington Monument when some demonstrators reportedly tried to break into the monument's basement. But the cooling efforts of the New Mobe marshals kept major violence from erupting during the day.

Priests deplore violence in resolution to Schweigert

Resolution opposing the use of violence to obtain peace by the Senate of Priests of the Diocese of Lansing, Michigan, was presented by 50 Catholic priests to Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Schweigert Monday afternoon at the Capitol.

The presentation was made following a "Mass for Peace" at St. Mary's Cathedral. After the service about 200 people walked several blocks from the church to the Capitol.

The priests were members of the Senate of Priests of the Diocese of Lansing. The resolution was unanimously approved by the priests at a May 5 meeting to publicly express their concern over the recent increase of violence in the United States, the Middle East and Indochina.

Military power and technology do not suffice even with the strongest resolves to restore order and accomplish peace, the resolution said.

"To sit idly by and see what we hold fundamental to our Christian beliefs gradually being eliminated from our country does not seem to be consistent with our Christian commitment," the Rev. John J. Shinnors of Lansing's St. Theresa parish, said.

The Senate of Priests of the Diocese of Lansing represents 250,000 Catholics in 15 southern Michigan counties.

Nixon ignores public: Ferency

By JEFF HUNT
State News Staff Writer

Nixon's decision to invade Cambodia "unwittingly" drew attention to the Indochina war, Zolton Ferency, Democratic candidate for governor, said Saturday at the annual meeting of the Michigan Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Ferency, speaking before an audience of about 200, said Nixon tried to divert the concentration of the American people off the war and onto such issues as domestic environmental problems and his Vietnamization program.

"But President Nixon's unilateral decision to invade neutral Cambodia with military force has once again focused attention on the war in Vietnam," Ferency said.

"The complacency created by the 'Vietnamization' policy has vanished overnight," he added.

Ferency said Nixon is "ignoring" the American people just as former President Johnson disregarded antiwar protests. But Nixon may find that he has little support among governors, senators and representatives after the November elections, he said.

Referring to the power of the "elective process" in influencing legislators to take an antiwar stance, Ferency said:

"We will either move those who have political power or we will remove them."

demonstrations and peace marches will draw attention to problems such as the Vietnam war, but they cannot effectively force those in power to change their positions. Only through the elective process will "meaningful" change occur, Ferency said.

"I'm not worrying about the radicals or revolutionaries," he said. "They are going to be governed whether they like it or not."

Racial struggle, poverty and environmental pollution will continue unless the war ends, Ferency said. Not enough resources exist to wage both the Vietnam war and solve our domestic problems.

"Soon any drain commissioner will not have enough money to fix the sewers if the war doesn't end," he commented.

A "reordering of priorities" must come about, he said, to end military waste and the "needless" expense of the space program.

"Neil Armstrong can walk on the moon, but he can't swim in Lake Erie," Ferency said.

If Americans "really listened to Nixon's speeches, they would become even more concerned about the war, he said.

Ferency urged his audience to become more active in politics and take a position on the war. "If only the President can make a decision, then God bless us!" he said.

Guardsman opposes action against campus disrupters

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

An MSU student, who is also a member of the Michigan National Guard, is asking Guardsmen across the state not to support or participate in "brutal and inhumane" acts.

Charles C. Harper, San Diego, Calif., graduate student, is circulating petitions among his fellow Guardsmen condemning the actions of the Ohio National Guard at Kent State University last week. The petitions also contain a refusal to participate in further actions like Kent State.

"I am protesting on a moral basis," Harper said. "I am merely doing what my conscience tells me."

Harper said that if ordered onto a college campus, he would go without carrying ammunition.

intend to support or participate in similar actions."

The petition refers to the Nuremberg Trials in Germany which "established that soldiers are, even in times of war, deemed legally and morally responsible for their own actions."

Based on that principle, the petition states, a soldier must refuse to participate in "excessively brutal or inhumane" acts, if necessary, to the extent of the insubordination.

Harper said his commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Clarence Schnipke, advised him that if he attempted to incite other guardsmen to insubordinate actions could be brought against him.

"I really don't think they (take action)," Harper said. "I'm an optimist."

Schnipke would not comment on Harper or the petition.

Silk-screen method aids in strike symbol creation

By ANN HODGE
State News Staff Writer

A clenched fist and the word "strike" have been silk-screened in red paint on a baby blanket, towels, sheets and more than 3,000 tee-shirts since the strike started May 5.

About 10 students have alternately manned a silk-screen apparatus at a table on the third floor of the Student Services Bldg. day and night.

One coed said the idea originated "spontaneously" when someone suggested she stencil the strikers' symbol on a silk-screen.

The operation began in her off-campus home last Tuesday night but moved to Student Services Wednesday when the demand stepped up.

She said she doesn't even know the names of the students who volunteered to work on the project.

"After a 24-hour stretch, a silk-screener would drop on the floor and we'd ask 'does anyone want to learn a fascinating new skill,'" she said.

No charge is made for the service, but donations of 10 or 25 cents have been paid for the 10 or 20 gallons of paint that have been used.

The coed said the group bought out the supply of red paint in a Grand River store last week.

"It's a nice cooperative effort," she said. "People have to wait in long lines and then walk around for 25 minutes while the paint dries," she said.

Some male students wanted the symbol silk-screened on their chests, but she said it is technically impossible.

CANCELS PROGRAM

E. L. bank drops Al Capp

By JIM SHELDON
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing State Bank, 100 W. Grand River Ave., has canceled its sponsorship of the Al Capp radio program, due to protests from the Man and Nature Bookstore and other depositors. E.A. Trautz, executive vice president of the bank said Monday.

Last week the bookstore threatened to remove its funds from the bank and was "prepared to take that step" if the program continued, Elizabeth Linhart, East Lansing junior and secretary of the Man and Nature Bookstore, said.

She added that although Al Capp has a "right to free speech," the bookstore objected to the managers "using the bank as a political platform."

The radio program in question featured comments of Al ("Li'l Abner") Capp, who has recently taken a conservative stand concerning American universities and students.

"We have withdrawn our sponsorship," Trautz said. "The purpose of advertising is to generate accounts - not to lose accounts. Our purpose is not to offend people, no matter what their political persuasion."

Trautz said the bank called the radio station Friday morning and canceled sponsorship because the "original purpose of the program was not to make a controversy." He said this action is "very definite."

"That's good," Mrs. Linhart responded. "If you object to something, you should be able to change it."

Man and Nature did not remove its funds, Mrs. Linhart said. But Trautz remarked that other people who protested the program closed their accounts. He said he does not expect the people to reopen accounts.

The radio program was broadcast Monday through Saturday, 6:50, 7:20 and 7:50 a.m.

'Hot' Irish batsmen here today

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

When Notre Dame takes the field today at John Kobs Field for the 3:30 p.m. contest, the MSU baseball team will be up against one of the hottest teams in the Midwest. Though the Irish show only a 12-11 record, the South Bend team has taken 11 of their last 12 contests. Early in the year, Notre Dame lost nine of their first 10 road games, which explains their mediocre record. Just one week ago, the Irish downed the Spartans in a 9-8 slugfest, scoring the winning run in the 10th inning. Rob Clancy was declared the loser, evening his record against the Irish to 1-1. Ron Pruitt and Rob Ellis delivered home runs in the game for the Spartans. Pruitt accounted for five RBIs in the game.

In addition to having the Irish on the Spartan home diamond for the first time this season, Coach Danny Litwhiler also will have his No. 2 hurler, senior southpaw Rich Kreuger, on the hill. Kreuger drew the starting assignment in the second game against Indiana last Saturday, but lasted only three innings in addition to facing two batters in the fourth. Though he gave up four runs on six hits, he did not suffer the loss. The see-saw batting fiasco allowed Kreuger to slip out without any damage done to his record, as the winning run was scored in the fifth inning off Larry Ike.

The Spartans had the opportunity to sweep the doubleheader from the Hoosiers, but stranding men on base proved to be MSU's downfall in the nightcap.

"We left 12 men on base," Asst. Coach Frank Pellerin said. "You just can't do that if you expect to win ball games."

Notre Dame will work lefthander Mickey Karkut on the mound against Kreuger. Karkut has a record of 2-4, including a win over Detroit and a loss to Western Michigan, the two teams' only mutual opponents. Karkut has an ERA of 3.18 as compared to Kreuger's 2.79.

The Irish will line-up with a carbon copy of last week's starting nine. The team's home run leader, Rich Lucke (3) will be in center; RBI pacemaker Bill Orga (18) will be at first; leading hitter Joe Keenan (.333) will be catching; and Chuck Haran, who is on a five-game hitting streak, will be in left. The remainder of the line-up is undistinguished at the plate, with averages ranging from .234 to .256.

The Spartans will go with the team that won the first game of the doubleheader Saturday for them. Gary Boyce, Shaun Howitt and Pruitt will be in the outfield, with John Dace, Ellis, Steve Cerez and Rick Vary in the infield. Phil Rashead will be the catcher.

The Spartans will play a doubleheader at Albion tomorrow.

CARL OLSON

Cry if you like; 'S' golfers great

Reflecting back on last weekend's Spartan Invitational, I recall the moans of a very few of the opposition, who had expressed disapproval towards MSU's entering two teams in the 36-hole golf tournament. The net result was that both Spartan units harvested all the loot and most of the smiles.

If I assessed the situation in Machiavellian terms, the end justifying the means, I couldn't agree more with the lamenting minority. But that would infer that MSU golf Coach Bruce Fossum was out to get everyone, which definitely wasn't the case.

"Why do they (MSU) have to enter two teams," a member of an opposing team remonstrated.

"Why?" a teammate muttered while eyeing the scoreboard. "If we only had 12 golfers who could play that well, we could win this tournament and plenty more," another said.

"Time to put my two cents forth," I thought.

"Look at it this way partner," I said. "If MSU had entered all 12 golfers to get the best five scores, now then I could agree with you, but they entered two teams and who's to say how they're going to finish."

For the record, if the Spartans had eluded to the avenue of entering all 12 for the best five the results would have resembled this: The Spartans would have had a Friday total of 371 and with Saturday added in, a tourney tabulation of 751. That's 22 strokes better than the nearest competition.

"When a college team is that deep in talent you can't deny them the right to compete with two teams," I continued, "besides it's better than battling a block unit attack." So I have to take the position that it was fair for MSU to enter two teams.

As for the majority of opposing teams, coaches and the more than 300 spectators who found their way out to Forest Akers, they could only stare in disbelief at the team and individual standings.

Untracking just a bit. Those spectators were just marvelous. Their lore of the golf game was stupendous when you consider that most link crowds are roving mobs often showing no consideration for the competitors. But these galleries had their stuff together and showed every courtesy to the golfers.

The galleries were complimentary too, muttering such things as "will you look at that, MSU not only is in first place but has second also," or "I wish our team had just three or four of those MSU golfers," and "this is really a finer tournament than I had imagined it to be."

Although 50 per cent of the tourney entries weren't everyday foes of the others, all the teams had the potential to win. On the whole, an 18-hole card of between 75 and 80 was a good round, considering the wind-blown greens of Akers which made it extremely hard for the players to hold their shots on the putting surfaces.

Not me, nor do I think most of the coaches, competitors or spectators think that MSU's entering two teams was unfair. True, the Spartans (all 12 of them) had the home course advantage. But a good golf team plays to its capabilities and must have the desire to win and the proper mental attitude to adjust to any golf course.

A prime example was Central Michigan's Dick Horgan who fired a 68, three-under par, in the first day of play. Horgan adjusted to the course and played it well. Bad luck and possibly pressure caught up with him Saturday as he finished second to MSU's Ron English, after a sudden-death playoff.

Perhaps the old cliché "it's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game," fits best for this situation or just a simple "better luck next year for those competitors who were dissatisfied this year." My hat, however, goes off to those associated with this year's Spartan Invitational for having a fine tournament.

MORE EXPECTED

40 pros to attend G-W game

By JEFF ELLIOTT
Executive Sports Writer

A total of 40 professional football players have agreed to attend Saturday's Green and White Football Game in Spartan Stadium with proceeds again going to the Dr. Martin Luther King Spartan Aid Fund.

Gene Washington, former Spartan All-America end and currently asst. director in the Placement Bureau, is again in charge of bringing the professional athletes to the game. Last year with co-chairman Clint Jones, Washington helped get such top stars as Bob Hayes, George Webster and Earl Morris, as well as a dozen former MSU players, to attend.

Despite rather overcast weather in the morning, the game was a success as nearly $8,000 was raised for the scholarship fund which goes to any needy students attending MSU, regardless of race or religion.

Washington said that the set-up for this year's game will be similar to the format followed last year.

"Game time is set for 2 p.m., but the professional players will be here at 11:00 a.m. to meet with the fans and sign

IM pool opens on Wednesday autographs," he said. "All of the pros are again taking care of their own expenses in getting here. It's kind of their way of contributing to the game."

"These men are taking time to attend such an event because they're concerned with students in college and want to help out any way they can," Washington added. "We're hoping for an even better turnout than last year's crowd (approximately 5,200), especially if we have good weather."

Tickets for the game are currently on sale at the athletic ticket office and Paramount News Centers in Lansing and East Lansing. Adult tickets are $2 while students and under pay $1.

Again this year, the avid sports fan can purchase a seat in MSU's coveted press box for $5. This will guarantee the fan of a dry and cool place as well as a perfect view of the game.

Among the stars who have agreed to appear Saturday are All-Pro's Paul Krause and Lem Barney; Minnesota's Joe Kapp, Wally Hilgenberg, Earsell Mackbee and Jones; and Detroit's Mel Farr, Jerry Rush, Greg Barton and Wayne Walker.

Former Spartans who will be here are Jerry Rush ('62-'64), Bubba Smith ('64-'66), Jesse Phillips ('65-'67), Dwight Lee ('65-'67) and seven members of last year's Spartan teams who have signed on with professional clubs: Ken Little, Buffalo Bills; Don Highsmith, Oakland Raiders; Craig Wycinsky, Cleveland Browns; Ron Saul, Houston Oilers; Rich Saul, Los Angeles Rams; Frank Foreman, Green Bay Packers; and Don Law, Pittsburgh Steelers.

Washington said the list is not complete at this time and he is hopeful several more "big" names will attend.

MSU Head Coach Duffy Daugherty is getting his adrenalin worked up about the upcoming game. At his press luncheon Monday, Daugherty said that as far as he could remember, this is the first time he has ever pitted the first team offense against the first team defense in the spring wind-up game.

"We're doing it for a psychological reason," he said. "Last year I think we built up a false sense of security with the big win. The players thought they were really that good when the fact is we were up against a rather weak opposition. This year if we run up an 82-0 score, we'll know what it means - get a new defense."

Garrett, Beard picked in draft

NEW YORK (UPI) - Dick Garrett of Los Angeles and Butch Beard of Atlanta, two of the better young guards in the National Basketball Assn., were among 33 players selected Monday in the league's expansion stocking draft.

Garrett, was picked by the Buffalo Braves. Other Buffalo choices included: Ray Scott, Baltimore forward; Bill Hosket and Don May, New York forwards; Bailey Howell, Boston Forward; Fred Crawford, Milwaukee forward; George Wilson, Philadelphia center-forward; Em Bryant, Boston guard; Paul Long, Detroit guard; and Mike Lynn, Los Angeles forward.

Portland chose Larry Siegfried; LeRoy Ellis, Baltimore center-forward; Stan McKenzie and Jerry Chambers, Phoenix guards; Dale Schleuter, San Francisco center; Rick Adelman, San

Martin said.
"Business as usual has been getting more and more unusual, yet we sat back quietly and said nothing as we watched the dream of America become a nightmare... the question that faces us now is whether or not we will or can allow business to continue as usual within our communities, while we still have the opportunity to do so. That is why we strike now, before it is too late."

In answer to those who question the benefit of a strike, the statement said the strike is to "demonstrate our outrage at this society... striking is a peaceful way to withhold goods and services from those in power: We are the goods and the instructors are withholding their services.

"When we talk about shutting the University down, we are not saying that the National Guard should come in here and send us home, but that classes should not be conducted in the traditional way and that we should be spending our time working for those changes which we see as necessary for that achievement of a society we wish to live in."

At the rally Norman Pollack, professor of history, read the preamble to the statement to be issued by the faculty - graduate assistant strike committee.

The Street Corner Society, a peace-oriented theatrical group, performed several skits and songs both spoofing the war and dealing seriously with it.

Picketing of the classroom buildings continued Monday but with limited success.

Pickets were fewer in number and students attending classes were much increased over last week.

Organizations supporting the strike have planned various activities for the week.

The School of Social Work is sponsoring an all-night vigil from 8 p.m. tonight to 8 a.m. Wednesday in 101, 102 and 103 Holmes Hall.

Tables for sending cards and letters to congressmen are being set up along Grand River Avenue. Anyone interested in working at a table may call 351-1302.

Parade permits for marches to the Capitol have been obtained for Wednesday and Thursday. The Strike Steering Committee is making no statement yet about a march on Wednesday; however, a march of students from MSU, Eastern, Western and Central Michigan universities and Michigan Technical Institute is planned for Thursday afternoon.

Students interested in issuing pamphlets on the march may pick them up in 11 Snyder Hall. Those interested in being march marshals may call 353-1948.

worked out so he could communicate with students.

Dempsey called the meeting with the President and the administration team "most constructive and informative." And he said one important thing was that "the President gave us an opportunity to be heard. He listened to us... and we in Connecticut are very pleased that in the days ahead some communication will be established between students, their faculties and the President himself."

Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Governors' Association, said Nixon made it clear at the outset he was not asking the governors to either agree or disagree with him.

Outside the White House, Gov. Curtis commended Nixon for talking of restraint and the cooling of rhetoric.

"The vice president," he said, "made a short statement of what has become known as the Agnew line. He said we could never establish contact with students until we clear the rascals and the radicals out."

"I think his statements on how to cure the country's ills, contribute as much to the ills as it lessens them," Curtis went on to say, adding there has got to be much more conciliation, that he is trying to do all he can, but it must come also from the national administration.

Denver college campers weather eviction attempt

DEVNER (AP) - "Woodstock Nation," a war protest shantytown of plastic, paper, plywood, canvas and packing crates, was torn down and hauled away from the University of Denver campus Monday during a six-hour confrontation between police and about 1,000 young people.

When police withdrew, groups shouting "Build! Build! Build!" started putting together again the ragtag village, named for a rock festival in New York last summer.

By early afternoon the campus again was dotted by several tents and lean-tos.

Police Chief George Seaton had said he would return his men to the campus if the village were rebuilt, but by late afternoon no uniformed officers could be seen.

Chancellor Maurice Mitchell told newsmen Monday afternoon the "doggy bag, didy-wash, squatters' camp - call it anything you like" will not be tolerated.

He indicated he had not yet decided on the next course of action.

"We can ask the courts to enforce an injunction, but who will do it if the city and county can't? We can go to the National Guard, but in the light of recent events, that's a decision of no small magnitude," he said.

Mitchell said there have been a number of threats on the lives of university administrators and faculty. He said evidence of weapons was found in the camp. The chancellor said the rights of outsiders to students in the protests may be 10-1. He also said he knew of outside financial contributions to the encampment and praised police for showing "great restraint."

There was no violence during the confrontation that began just after dawn. No injuries requiring medical attention were reported.

Seaton said he had information that 80 per cent of the youths responsible for Woodstock Nation were not students, but were professional agitators, professional revolutionaries from other places.

Twenty-eight persons were arrested in the morning confrontation.

Sixteen identified themselves as students and two others said they were faculty members. Police said most of the arrests

Debate slated at AAUP meet

James B. McKee, professor of sociology, and Charles C. Killingsworth, professor of labor and industrial relations, will debate student participation in academic government at the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 38-39 Union.

Other items on the AAUP agenda will include nominations for the 1970-71 officers and council members and a proposal to increase local dues.

The meeting is open to faculty and graduate students.

Environment lecture slated

Leonard M. Stuttman, environmentalist and lecturer, will speak on "The Environment, People and Your New Attitudes" at 8 p.m. Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church, 211 N. Chestnut St., Lansing.

The Stuttman speech is co-sponsored by the Council on Adoptable Children and Planned Parenthood.
