"There are hundreds of minor recommendations," Wilkinson said.

Soviets launch Soyuz 9; research role indicated

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union launched its first manned space shot in eight months late Monday night, sending aloft veteran cosmonaut commander Col. Andrian Nikolayev and rookie flight engineer Vitaly Sevastianov.

The launch of Soyuz 9 at 10:09 p.m., Moscow time, was televised nationwide an hour later. All radio stations and television channels blared martial music and announcers proclaimed it "another glorious step in space explorations methods of using the obtained data in the national economy."

The latter suggested Soyuz 9 might act as a kind of aerial prospector for mineral or oil deposits.

The Russians have not made a major space breakthrough since Alexei Lenov's pioneering space walk in March 1965. Before that they were clearly ahead of the United States with the first unmanned Sputnik in 1957, the first manned flight in 1961, the first woman in space and the first group space flight. Nikolayev, 40, participated in the first group space flight in 1962, piloting Vostok 3. He is married to the only woman cosmonaut, Valentina Nikolayeva -Tereshkova. The couple have a 6 - year old daughter.

Audit recommendations stir spending control controversy By JOHN BORGER

STATE

The University may need six to 12 months to complete its review of the state auditor general's report, Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said Monday.

Several recommendations in the report question whether the board of trustees or the legislature should control expenditures of the state appropriation.

The report, the first in the University's history, was released Thursday by the auditor general.

The review will be divided into four major areas: recommendations directly concerning the board of trustees and University policy, recommendations concerning the central administration, recommendations concerning the operation of the Office of Business and Finance and recommendations for various departments and operating units on campus.

"Individual recommendations which are found to have merit will be acted upon as soon as possible," Wilkinson said.

Most recommendations, however, must be worked out with the groups in question, he said, and may take more time.

"We're being asked to answer in two days what the auditor general's staff has had three years to compile," he said. "This is just not possible."

"The trustees will cooperate as best we can," Board Chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, said. "We're not going to make any snap judgments."

Wilkinson said parts of the 245-page report might be misunderstood by non accountants, who might not be able to distinguish between major and minor recommendations.

The basic premise of the report questions areas in which the University has used funds other than state appropriations as directed by the trustees, Wilkinson said.

The auditor general maintains these other funds should be used as directed by the legislature; the University maintains the trustees should direct the use of the other, funds, he said.

"Their general complaint is that if the University had not used money for these things, the money would be available for items which the legislature must now appropriate money for," Wilkinson said.

For example, he said the report questions

The loss of the moon race was a bitter pill for the Soviet Union. Russian prestige was further shaken when they tried to steal some glory from the American moon men of Apollo 11 by scooping up moon dust with an unmanned Sputnik. It crashed into the lunar surface and never returned home. Western scientists have been expecting the Soviet Union to try for a space spectacular in an attempt to recoup. But since the Soviet Union never announces its space projects unless they are completed successfully, the exact purpose of Soyuz 9 remains a mystery.

MSU senior found dead; suicide ruled

Ingham County Coroner Jack B. Holmes said Monday that a 22-year-old MSU student, found dead Saturday evening, had died from shock and hemorrhage resulting from self - inflicted wounds.

Dead is John E. Kirchhoff, Park Ridge, Ill., senior.

East Lansing police said they were called to Kirchhoff's apartment at 2111/2 E. Grand River Ave., about 6:30 p.m. Saturday after a tenant in the building entered Kirchhoff's apartment to use his telephone and discovered the body.

Holmes said Kirchhoff had been dead for approximately 72 hours before his body was found. No suicide note was found, Holmes said.

Holmes said suicide would be ruled as cause of death.

Bombing may continue past June 30

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) - The White House held the way open Monday for continued B52 bombing strikes into Cambodia beyond the June 30 deadline for conflict. pulling out U.S. troops.

This evident enlargement of the American role developed while President Nixon was winding up a western weekend Monday to return to Washington and brief the people on why he considers the course of the war in Indochina encouraging. He worked on the 15-minute address to the nation in the final hours of his stay at the Western White House.

The report will be televised at 9 p.m. EDT Wednesday, following by hours the first crucial Senate test on curbing the month-old Cambodian phase of the Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters that Nixon's pledge that all Americans will be out of Cambodia by June 30, along with logistical and air support, still stands. But he also told reporters that:

'We are reserving what actions the United States will take on air support following June 30. We have said any action would be in relation to the security of American forces in South Vietnam."

Ziegler made no attempt to deny that this left open the use of strategic B52 bombing missions over Cambodia beyond the end of June.

He repeatedly referred the press corps to Nixon's April 8 news conference in which the President said, in relation to the Cambodian operations, "I would expect that the South Vietnamese would come out at approximately the same time that we do because when we come out, our logistical support and air support will also come out with them."

This would apply to tactical air operations, but Ziegler noted that the White House has been saying that U.S. air support following June 20 "would relate to the security of U.S. forces in South Vietnam.'

This appeared to be another way of saying that if former sanctuaries and enemy forces in Cambodia ever threatened the American troops remaining in South Vietnam, B52 bomber strikes would be forthcoming.

Ziegler said it was pretty clear that the reference to the security of U.S. troops did not suggest tactical air support of South Vietnamese forces in Cambodia.

Nixon was drawing encouragement on the outlook in Cambodia and South Vietnam from a Sunday briefing by Gen. Creighton Abrams, U.S. Commander in Vietnam, and Adm. John S. McCain Jr., commander - in - chief, Pacific, at a 2¹/₂-hour session.

The word was that no decisions were reached at the meeting and that there had been no intention of trying to reach any.

Relating development to the population explosion, Hannah stressed that man must find a "rational and voluntary means to stabilize the human population at a level which the earth can support with dignity, and with an improving quality of life for people everywhere."

There is not an either / or choice between solving domestic problems and or

EDITORIALS U.S. competes in folly with $1 billion for SST

After an ill-fated challenge in the House last Wednesday, the supersonic transport (SST) remains alive. In fact, another $270 million was appropriated for the project to push the grand total spent on the project over $1 billion.

The SST was opposed by 15 conservation groups on the grounds that the plane would be an extreme environmental hazard. The SST would produce a sonic boom, which can cause some damage when flown over populated areas. Although the Federal Aviation Administration has promised that the plane will not be allowed to fly over populated areas, new airports would have to be built in uninhabited areas to make this promise valid. This would mean that all the air time one would save on an SST would be lost getting to and from the airport.

The number of people who would use the SST would probably be small. Not that many people go to Europe. One can only question what priority should be given to a project that will allow a few people to maybe save a few hours on trans -Atlantic flights.

The only reason the SST survived in the House was the fact that many congressmen felt the United States would lost prestige if it did not develop an SST like France and Russia. But must their folly become ours? If other nations are developing SST's that may never be used, must we do the same?

National prestige would be better served by scrapping the SST, by declaring the United States will not invest a billion dollars in a project, which if successful, would only benefit a few. Funding for mass transit systems for the cities would serve many more people. Our transportation priorities need re-evaluation.

DISSOLVE

To the Editor:

We have witnessed in the last few weeks various attempts to bring the subject of racism in America to the level of public consciousness. Such attempts are not new. The newness is in the focus. In the past we have assumed that racism was the same thing as the discrimination expressed by southern whites and exercised to a lesser degree by some northern whites. In this context it has been easy for white liberals to assume that they are not affected by it. We now understand that racism is the systematic incorporation of attitudes, myths, stereotypes and prejudices into all the institutions of society. This means that all people who have moved through these institutions are infected to some degree with the subtle props of racism. The most system, media, curriculum, power structure and MSU, and dorm activities. Although each focuses on an area, they will ultimately overlap, since they are directed toward basic changes in the University structure. Participants in each workshop will decide on the direction of the workshop.

We urge all interested members of the community to join us in an effort to discover and eliminate the racism which has distorted every corner of American Merriman is here presenting us with a false dilemma, just as those people who do state that we should either love America or leave it. Having "confidence" in GM which has consistently put profits ahead of pollution control and auto safety and which has combined with the petroleum industry to work against public transportation programs is ludicrous. According to Merriman our only alternative if we do not have confidence in GM is to sell our stock and leave GM to its own devices in these areas.

Strike aftermath: a time for thought

BARNEY WHITE

The strike is functionally over now and the time for questioning has arrived. What was accomplished, and what was lost?

Certainly we demonstrated that students have muscle enough to throw the world off its track if given a place to stand. All too often, however, it was equally demonstrated that our collective strength lacks sufficient mental guidance to render it a serious threat - save to be the kind of threat posed by a rogue elephant.

We proved that we could shut down the university - but we also illustrated that we could not keep it shut down. Had we struck for a week and then, at the peak of our success, gone back to classes we would have, at least, reaped a powerful symbolic weapon for use in future confrontations with the University establishment. As it stands, we gained only a slightly warm handful of ashes. If in the future we try to face down the administration with the threat that "we'll close it down again" they'll smile because they'll know we can't keep the lid on more than a week.

I wonder, too, how much ground the student movement lost with liberal, intellectual factions (I know it is ultimately uncool to have truck with such people if one is "really committed" to the "revolution," but the truth is that we need them.) due to the strike. The fact is this: in light of the goals of the protest - namely that the United States get out of Camboi and that Kent State University be avenue - the strike was ridiculous.

What possible good can come from what possible good can come to closing down the universities beyon allowing the student body a few days blow off steam? Absolutely none, T campus is the one place we have where b discussion and critical thinking (or similitude thereof) can take place free To close such an institution down to the war is, to coin a phrase, "cutting o your nose to spite your face."

Certainly, the strike gave our upin bewrinkled legislature near apoplexy -only because they were suddenly witho someone to pick on. (The Senate chamb could get pretty dull without people's part yell about). In the final analysis, thou the truth is that after the shock wore most of the legislature would he probably been tickled pink had "we shut down." It would have gotten all of "commie," "pinko," perverts out of the hair and, once we had all been drafted, mi room for some "good, clean American" if, indeed, there is such a thing.

We shouldn't make the mistake that of little play - revolution made any impress on Washington either. It is apparent th the Nixon administration had alree taken into consideration the fact that the campuses would erupt when they invat Cambodia. While they may have been ab off on estimating the magnitude of the spasm they, nevertheless, were correct assuming that it would pass - that the students of this nation, for the nth tin would react instead of act.

In sum, what we managed to do wast play into just about everybody's hand b our own. The University administration though shaken, knows now that the the of a permanent student strike most likely a paper tiger. The Merry Men down Lansing have enough law and order a campus unrest issues to power any numb of re-election campaigns. bugs spaced-out orb

Though it may sound like lunacy the bare fact is that there is life on the moon. Indeed, it seems that man in his cosmic wisdom has succeeded in planting bacteria on the spaced out orb.

Granted, this occurrence is microscopic in nature, but some some commentary would be germane. Certainly, when space agency microbiologist Frederick Mitchell discovered a colony of streptococcus mitis happily subsisting inside one of Surveyor 3's television cameras he had no idea of the true implications of the far - out find.

It seems inevitable that the Soviet Union will soon begin to bug the United States with the charge that we are a colonial power. Personally, we do not think that the matter is sufficient to generate such an ocean of storms. Perhaps it is the fact that German scientists are behind the American moon shot that will ultimately give the Soviets cause for alarm.

It is a tribute to American ingenuity that a life form - and a common life form at that - could subsist for 950 days without any terra, but at least a certain degree of firma. It is also a tribute to the indestructibility of the American television camera that it could shield the undersized plantation from the ultraviolent environment of the moon's surface.

We should not, however, become too heightened with our success. Our red - faced competitors have been known to rush in in the past and seize the field. It is just possible that Luna 2 which landed on the moon in 1959 may contain good communal bacteria and, thereby, it may be that the Soviets are, in actuality, the first humans to moon a bug.

Indelicate FBI head remnant of Capone era

A.B. (Happy) Chandler has occupied nearly every office there is to occupy in the State of Kentucky: two-time governor, U.S. Senator, formerly commissioner of baseball and now member of the board of trustees of the University of Kentucky. After a recent, rather heated trustee meeting at the university, Chandler grabbed student Mike Greenwell's hair with his left and hit him "right smack in the nose, in the schnozzola" with his right.

A long-time, close friend of former Gov. Chandler is J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Recently Hoover sent Chandler a letter congratulating him for his action and expressing a desire for such action to be taken by more people so that campus disruptions would cease.

Chandler claims that Greenwell grabbed his necktie, triggering his reaction, but reporters on the scene and Greenwell himself claim Chandler simply smacked Greenwell in the nose without provocation.

Such behavior for a trustee is unforgivable, but much more shocking is Hoover's praise for the incident.

It is ironic that the man who should be dedicated to the preservation of law and order should endorse a lawless action which has only produced disorder. Something is wrong when the head of the largest law enforcement agency in this country endorses violent reaction as a means to curtail campus violence.

This incident shows what many people there been saying for a long time - that J. Edgar Hoover should be replaced as head of the FBI. Law enforcement is a delicate process; Hoover is an indelicate administrator, a remnant from the days of Al Capone and Bonnie and Clyde.

obvious examples are found in our language and our religious symbols. From the time a white child learns to speak, he learns to associate the word "white" with purity, God, cleanliness, light, etc., and he associates "black" with darkness, evil, ugliness and the devil.

It is, therefore, essential that an attack on racism focus on individual re education, and change in the institutionalized racism of white society. Workshops which deal with these two aspects of the problem have begun on campus. The Education Workshop will spend at least the remainder of this term discussing racism, reading essential literature and planning a syllabus for a Critical University course to be offered this summer. In addition to this workshop, there are six action - oriented workshops. The Action Workshops will concentrate on specific issues and possible action programs within the University community. These include: open admissions and support services, University College and grading

Clearly this is not our only alternative. MSU has the alternative of retaining its stock and voting against GM. If it is indeed the case that GM can make no profit without polluting the environment, gainst sorely needed alternative modes of transportation, then automobiles in this country should not be produced under the profit system. The time to find out whether this is the case is now.

That Merriman does not see that such an alternative is a viable one for MSU is strange unless we take into consideration the observation of board of trustees member White that a number of trustees were "owned, lock, stock and barrel" and that all had been subjected to "an ummerciful amount of lobbying." If modern technology is to be used in the interest of all Americans and indeed all citizens of the world then it is incumbent upon us to smash the control of our political processes by those who control the means of production. If this cannot be done non - violently by electing officials who will not be controlled by GM, then it will have to be done violently.

There's more. We got a really good de on grades this term and an excellent cow for cutting classes. Above all, our much neglected radical fringe finally got a chan to lead their very own revolution just in the big boys out East. Also let's not for that a lot of us got neat strike t-shirts show our younger siblings when we home for the summer.

Did anything positive come of the strike? Possibly. For one thing, it is ju possible that we may have before us t beginnings of a new awakening of soci awareness and, hopefully, the corolla realization that we have a long way to before we truly have our thing together.

Re-evaluating the strike

"Twenty years from now," Charles Larrowe, professor of economics, prophesized three weeks ago, "people will look back on this strike as one of the best things that ever happened at this University."

DAVE SHORT

For all practical purposes, the strike - as a visible, united, and working movement within the University - has ended here. But the significance, the effects and the future indications of the strike have survived and will survive, as Larrowe indicated.

The success of the strike will be debated for a long time. As antistrikers emphasize, the University was not "shut down" and none of the strikers' demands were granted. Yet, the University was sufficiently affected by the strike.

The strike movement was the biggest event in the entire academic year and it may very well have been the most educational.

From President Wharton on down, most people within the University viewed the strike as an educational process. Whole departments within the campus community changed their class curriculums and grading systems to discuss the issues brought forth in the strike:

Many students, who have long viewed themselves as "forced" literary marshmallows and have looked upon the University as irrelevant to the problems of life and society, took a fresh step in reappraising the issues at hand.

And regardless of whether or not they favored the strike, most people within the University discussed it and its implications. There is no single, clear - cut answer to why the strike began. True, U.S. troop movements into Cambodia and the killings of four Kent State students brought forth the immediate nationwide strike reaction. But there were other major factors involved. Student resentment had been building for a long time. Many feel that repression within the University and within the entire country has been increasing.

arisen before from time to time. As a result, the fact that five of the strikers' eight demands here dealt with local issues did not surprise President Wharton.

"Cambodia and Kent State were the reasons for the strike," Wharton said last Friday. "But, the local issues were involved, too.'

"There is always a combination of both national and local issues involved. Yet, the students inevitably turn inward (look to local issues) as the temperature rises."

Education was a factor, too. As James Kunen said while talking about the 1967 Columbia strike in his book "The Strawberry Statement," "The meaning of the uprising is that one too many people has been educated and one too many wires has linked people's thoughts together, for power to breed power any more."

Although the original strike may have ended, it doesn't necessarily mean that another bigger and more effective movement will not form during the months ahead.

The germs of American life that fostered the strike still exist.

Despite Nixon's rhetoric, U.S. involvement in Cambodia could conceivably extend past the June 31 deadline. Furthermore, several college students were killed in the South following the Kent State affair. And, although he has shut up somewhat, Vice President Agnew hasn't completely stopped his verbal assaults on the young.

MSU strikers' local demands haven't and won't be met in the immediate future. Yet, as President Wharton himself recently said, "the issues and the concerns of the strike have not vanished."

Despite a campuswide student referendum, in which a clear majority voted for some type of change within the ROTC program, and the strikers' demand that academic accreditation and University funding be dropped, last week the Academic Council voted to retain ROTC here in its present status.

President Wharton has also indicated that the University will not speed up its present admissions program for minority groups and that the strikers' demand for abolition firearms from the campus police and t keep all law enforcement agencies of campus. Wharton contends that the campus police would quit if they were disarmed and that other outside la enforcement agencies would take over the duties.

But, the strikers disagree with Wharto over that demand. "You'd think it was lt 1880s and the Wild West here. The camp police haven't used their guns in 20 years Rick Kibbey, strike steering committe chairman commented. "I'm certain that is possible to recruit 30 or 40 guys patrol this campus without guns."

The climate for trouble still exists her Whether or not it comes, is a question of time.

"We're in a race against time," as Kibbe put it. "The situation looks bad but it looking better."

"But, even if the administration doesn resolve the problems now, we'll be bac again. And if they think they problems now, wait until next time."

Pruitt was also one of the team's five batters to hit over .300 on the season and finished in a tie for second place in home runs (6) with Shaun

Howitt. Though no official records were kept, Battle Creek native Howitt must have set some sort of record in extra base hits per capita of hits. Of his 18 hits, Howitt had six home runs, two doubles and two triples.

Senior hurler Phil Fulton was not about to be outdone by the MSU batters, however.

Fulton posted his best season in three years of varsity competition. In gaining eight wins, the Alma right hander earned for himself the number three notch on the most wins per season sheet. Freshman Larry Ike, who also listed eight pitching wins, joins Fulton in Other Spartan finishes included fourths in cross country, fencing and gymnastics, a sixth - place tie in basketball and a ninth place in football.

It was the Spartan's ineptitude in football, a sport for which the school was once renowned, that was the biggest factor in MSU's loss of the title. Michigan's historic upset of Ohio State on the seaon's final weekend pulled them into a first place tie and $9\frac{1}{2}$ points, while the Spartans finished ninth and gained but two points.

Stewart silent on Sawchuck

BARRIE, ONT. (UPI) - New York Ranger forward Ron Stewart remained unavailable for comment Monday on the death of teammate Terry Sawchuk.

Sawchuk was reportedly injured accidentally by Stewart April 29, but it was only three weeks later that the case was made public.

There was no one in Stewart's Queen Street apartment Monday. A neighbor said she saw the husky NHL veteran leave the apartment about mid - morning.

This led to speculation that Stewart had departed for New York where a police investigation has begun into Sawchuk's death. The Rangers have acquired a lawyer for Stewart.

Sensitivity training offers exercise in trust for group

By SHIRLEY JOHNSON State News Staff Writer

An exercise in trust was the way one participant described the recent sensitivity group experience in which she was involved.

Although these groups are known by several names, ranging from encounter groups, developmental groups or t-groups (t means laboratory training,) basically sensitivity groups are considered an experience in self - learning.

The benefits of group learning vary with each individual. Each person brings his own conceptions and personal expectations for success of the sensitivity training process into the group.

Sensitivity groups are held for a variety of reasons. Of 64 groups held on campus fall and winter term: 20 groups were used for therapy sessions under the guidance of the Counseling encounter groups are Center; 14 were groups to enhance learning situations or to train students to lead members." developmental groups; 10 groups were used for further with the group, the members communication skills were asked to stand in a small development; and 19 were circle. groups to increase individual self - understanding.

scheduled to open June 11, incorporates four theatres in one location with one box office, one lobby, one concession stand and one set of restrooms.

Admission to any one movie will be $1.25, according to George D. Kieffer, director of advertising and publicity for the developer of the multiple theater concept, American Multi - Cinema, Inc. (AMCI).

Films shown will be new but before. That is why the price of admission is somewhat lower than for first - run films, Kieffer explained.

Films will be changed weekly in at least one of the theaters. A film drawing large audiences will be shown in more than one of the auditoriums.
